2 Let Israel rejoice in ^chim that made him : let the children of Zion be joyful in their ^dKing.

3 ^eLet them praise his name ^fin the dance : let them sing praises unto him with the timbrel and harp.

4 For ^gthe LORD taketh pleasure in his people : ^hhe will beautify the meek with salvation.

^a Heb. Hallelujah. — ^b Ps. xxxiii. 3. Isa. xlii. 19. — ^c See Job xxxv. 10. Ps. c. 3. Isa. liv. 6. — ^d Zech. ix. 9. Matt. xxi. 5. — ^e Ps. lxxxi. 2. cl. 4. — ^f Or, with the pipe. — ^g Ps. xxxv. 27. — ^h Ps. cxlii. 18. —

This seems to be a song of triumph, after some glorious victory ; probably in the time of the Maccabees. It has been also understood as predicting the success of the gospel in the nations of the earth. It has no title in the Hebrew, nor in any of the Versions, and no author's name.

Verse 1. Sing unto the Lord a new song] That is, as we have often had occasion to remark, an excellent song, the best we can possibly pronounce.

Congregation of saints.] The Israelites, who were by profession and by injunction, a holy people.

Verse 2. In him that made him] Let them remember in their exultations to give all glory to the Lord ; for he is the Author of their being and their blessings. And let them know that he is their King also ; that they should submit to his authority, and be guided and regulated in their hearts and conduct by his laws.

Verse 3. Let them praise his name in the dance] Bemachol, with the pipe, or some kind of wind music, classed here with toph, the tabor or drum, and kinnor, the harp. I know no place in the Bible where machol and machalath mean dance of any kind ; they constantly signify some kind of pipe.

Verse 4. The Lord taketh pleasure in his people] The pleasure or good will of God is in his people : he loves them ardently, and will load them with his benefits, while they are humble and thankful ; for,

He will beautify] He will make fair, the meek, the lowly, the humble with salvation.

Verse 5. Let the saints be joyful in glory] Let them be gloriously joyful : seeing themselves so honoured and so successful, let them be joyful. God has put glory or honour upon them ; let them give him the thanks due to his name.

Sing aloud upon their beds.] While they are reclining on their couches. At their festal banquets, let them shout the praises of the Lord.

Verse 6. Let the high praises of God] Let them sing songs the most sublime, with the loudest noise consistent with harmony.

5 Let the saints be joyful in glory : let them sing aloud upon their beds.

6 Let the high praises of God be ^ain their mouth, and ^ba two-edged sword in their hand ;

7 To execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishments upon the people ;

8 To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron ;

9 ^cTo execute upon them the judgment written : ^dthis honour have all his saints. Praise ye the LORD.

^a Job xxxv. 10. — ^b Heb. in their throat. — ^c Heb. iv. 12. Rev. i. 16. — ^d Deut. vii. 1, 2. — ^e Ps. cxlviii. 14.

And a two-edged sword in their hand] Perhaps there is an allusion here to the manner in which the Jews were obliged to labour in rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem : Neh. iv. 17.

The two-edged sword, in Hebrew, is pipiyoth, "mouth mouths."

Verse 7. To execute vengeance upon the heathen] This may refer simply to their purpose of defending themselves to the uttermost, should their enemies attack them while building their wall : and they had every reason to believe that God would be with them ; and that, if their enemies did attack them, they should be able to inflict the severest punishment upon them.

Verse 8. To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron] That is, if these kings, governors of provinces, and chiefs among the people, had attacked them, God would have enabled them to defeat them, take their generals prisoners, and lead them in triumph to Jerusalem.

Verse 9. To execute upon them the judgment written] God repeatedly promises such victories to his faithful people ; and this is, properly speaking, the judgment written i.e., foretold.

This honour have all his saints.] They shall all be supported, defended, and saved by the Lord. Israel had this honour, and such victories over their enemies, while they continued faithful to their God.

I do not think that these last verses contain a promise that all the nations of the earth shall be brought under the dominion of the Church of Christ ; that all heathen and ungodly kings shall be put down, and pious men put in their places. I believe God never intended that his church should have the civil government of the world. The secular and spiritual government God will ever keep distinct ; and the church shall have no power but that of doing good ; and this only in proportion to its holiness, heavenly-mindedness, and piety to God. That the verses above may be understood in a spiritual sense, as applicable to the influence of the word of God preached, may be clearly seen.

PSALM CL.

A general exhortation to praise God, 1, 2. With the trumpet, psaltery, and harp, 3. With the timbrel and dance, stringed instruments and organs, 4. With the cymbals, 5. All living creatures are called upon to join in the exercise.

PRAISE ^aye the LORD. Praise God in his sanctuary : praise him in the firmament of his power.

2 ^bPraise him for his mighty acts : praise him according to his excellent ^cgreatness.

3 Praise him with the sound of the ^dtrumpet ; ^epraise him with the psaltery and harp.

^a Heb. Hallelujah. — ^b Ps. cxlv. 5, 6. — ^c Deut. iii. 24. — ^d Or, cornet. Ps. xcviii. 6. — ^e Ps. lxxxi. 2. cxlix. 3. — ^f Exod. xv. 20. — ^g Or, pipe,

This Psalm is without title and author in the Hebrew, and in all the ancient Versions. It is properly the full chorus of all voices and instruments in the temple, at the conclusion

4 Praise him ^awith the timbrel and ^bdance : praise him with ^cstringed instruments and organs.

5 Praise him upon the loud ^dcymbals : praise him upon the high sounding cymbals.

6 Let every thing that hath breath praise the LORD. Praise ye the LORD.

Ps. cxlix. 3. — ^a Ps. xxxiii. 2. cxli. 9. Isa. xxxviii. 20. — ^b Chron. xv. 16, 19, 28. xvi. 5. xxv. 1, 6.

of the grand Hallelujah, to which the five concluding psalms belong.

Verse 1. Praise God in his sanctuary] In many places we have the compound word haleluyah, praise ye Jehovah ; but this is the first place in which we find halelu-el, praise God, or the strong God.

In his sanctuary—in the temple ; in whatever place is dedicated to his service. Or, in his holiness—through his own holy influence in your hearts.

The firmament of his power.] Through the whole expanse, to the utmost limits of his power. Praise him whose power and goodness extend through all worlds ; and let the inhabitants of all those worlds share in the grand chorus, that it may be universal.

Verse 2. For his mighty acts] Whether manifested in creation, government, mercy, or justice.

His excellent greatness] Kerob gadlo, according to the multitude of his magnitude, or of his majesty.

Verse 3. The sound of the trumpet] Sophar, from its noble, cheering, and majestic sound ; for the original has this ideal meaning.

With the psaltery] The nabla, a hollow, stringed instrument ; perhaps like the guitar or the old symphony.

And harp.] Another stringed instrument, played on with the hands or fingers.

Verse 4. Praise him with the timbre] Drum, tabret, or tomtom, or tympanum of the ancients ; a skin stretched over a broad hoop ; perhaps something like the tambourine.

And dance] The pipe. It never means dance ; see the note on Ps. cxlix. 3.

Stringed instruments] This literally signifies strings put in order ; perhaps a triangular kind of hollow instrument on which the strings were regularly placed, growing shorter and shorter till they came to a point. This would give a variety of sounds, from a deep bass to a high treble.

Organs] Very like the syrinx or mouth organ ; Pan's pipe ; both of the ancients and moderns.

Verse 5. Loud cymbals] Two hollow plates of brass which, being struck together, produced a sharp clanging sound. This instrument is still in use. What the high sounding cymbals meant I know not ; unless those of a larger make, struck above the head, and consequently emitting a louder sound.

Verse 6. Let every thing that hath breath] Let all join together, and put forth all your strength and all your skill in sounding the praises of Jehovah ; and then let a universal burst with HALLELUJAH ! close the grand ceremony. It is evident that this psalm has no other meaning than merely the summoning up all the voices, and all the instruments, to complete the service in FULL CHORUS.

INTRODUCTION TO THE PROVERBS OF SOLOMON.

THERE has scarcely been any dispute concerning either the author or divine authority of this book, either in the Jewish or Christian church: all allow that it was written by Solomon; and the general belief is, that he wrote the book by divine inspiration.

It has, indeed, been supposed that Solomon collected the major part of these proverbs from those who had preceded him, whether Hebrews or heathens; but the latter opinion has been controverted, as derogating from the authority of the book. But this supposition has very little weight; for, whatever of truth is found in or among men, came originally from God; and if he employed an inspired man to collect those rays of light, and embody them for the use of his church, he had a right so to do, and to claim his own wheresoever found, and, by giving it a new authentication, to render it more useful in reference to the end for which it was originally communicated. I think it very likely that Solomon did not compose them all; but he collected every thing of this kind within his reach, and what was according to the spirit of truth, by which he was inspired, he condensed in this book; and as the Divine Spirit gave it, so the providence of God has preserved it, for the use of his church.

The term PROVERB, proverbium, compounded of pro, for, and verbum, a word, speech, or saying, leads us to an original meaning of the thing itself. It was an allegorical saying, where "more was meant than met the eye"—a short saying that stood for a whole discourse.

But the Hebrew meshalim, from māshal, to rule or govern, [or rather from mashal, to be like,] signifies a set or collection of weighty, wise, and therefore authoritative, sayings, whereby a man's whole conduct, civil and religious, is to be governed; sayings containing rules for the government of life.

Of the three thousand proverbs which Solomon spoke, we have only those contained in this book and in Ecclesiastes; and of the one thousand and five songs which he made, only the Canticles have been preserved: or, in other words, of all his numerous works in divinity, philosophy, morality, and natural history, only the three above-mentioned, bearing his name, have been admitted into the sacred canon.

There are many repetitions and some transpositions in the Book of Proverbs, from which it is very probable that they were not all made at the same time; that they are the work of different authors, and have been collected by various hands: but still the sum total is delivered to us by divine inspiration; and whoever might have been the original authors of distinct parts, the Divine Spirit has made them all its own by handing them to us in this form. Some attribute the collection, i. e., the formation of this collection, to Isaiah; others, to Hilkiah, and Shebna the scribe; and others, to Ezra.

That Solomon could have borrowed little from his predecessors is evident from this consideration, that all uninspired ethic writers, who are famous in history, lived after his times.

INTRODUCTION TO THE PROVERBS OF SOLOMON.

It is impossible for any description of persons to read the Book of Proverbs without profit. Kings and courtiers, as well as those engaged in trade, commerce, agriculture, and the humblest walks of life, may here read lessons of instruction for the regulation of their conduct in their respective circumstances. Fathers, mothers, wives, husbands, sons, daughters, masters, and servants, may here also learn their respective duties; and the most excellent rules are laid down, not only in reference to morality, but to civil policy and economy. Many motives are employed by the wise man to accomplish the end at which he aims; motives derived from honour, interest, love, fear, natural affection, and piety towards God. The principal object he has in view is to inspire a deep reverence for God, fear of his judgments, and an ardent love for wisdom and virtue. And as there is nothing so directly calculated to ruin young men, as bad company and irregular connexions, he labours to fortify his disciple with the most convincing reasons against all vices, and especially against indolence, dissipation, and the company of lewd women.

Maxims to regulate life in all the conditions already mentioned, and to prevent the evils already described, are laid down so copiously, clearly, impressively, and in such variety, that every man who wishes to be instructed may take what he chooses, and, among multitudes, those which he likes best.

THE PROVERBS.

CHAPTER I.

The design of the proverbs, 1-6. An exhortation to fear God, and believe his word, because of the benefit to be derived from it, 7-9; to avoid the company of wicked men, who involve themselves in wretchedness and ruin, 10-19. Wisdom, personified, cries in the streets, and complains of the contempt with which she is treated, 20-23. The dreadful punishment that awaits all those who refuse her counsels, 24-33.

THE ^aproverbs of Solomon the son of David, king of Israel;

2 To know wisdom and instruction; to perceive the words of understanding;

3 To ^breceive the instruction of wisdom, justice, and judgment, and ^cequity;

4 To give subtilty to the ^dsimple, to the young man knowledge and ^ediscretion.

5 ^fA wise man will hear, and will increase learning; and a man of understanding shall attain unto wise counsels:

6 To understand a proverb, and ^gthe interpretation; the words of the wise, and their ^hdark sayings.

^a 1 Kings iv. 32. Ch. x. 1. xxv. 1. Eccles. xii. 9.—^b Ch. ii. 1, 9.—^c Heb. equities.—^d Ch. ix. 4.—^e Or, advisement.—^f 1 Chron. xxvii. 14. Ch. ix. 9. Ch. xi. 30. xiii. 14, 20. xv. 2.—^g Or, an eloquent speech.—^h Ps. lxxviii. 2.—ⁱ Job xxviii. 28. Ps. cxl. 10. Ch. ix. 10.

Verse 1. The proverbs of Solomon] For the meaning of the word proverb, see the introduction. Solomon is the first of the sacred writers whose name stands at the head of his works.

Verse 2. To know wisdom] That is, this is the design of parabolical writing in general; and the particular aim of the present work.

Wisdom] Chochmah may mean here, and in every other part of this book, not only that divine science by which we are enabled to discover the best end, and pursue it by the most proper means; but also the whole of that heavenly teaching that shows us both ourselves and God, directs us into all truth, and forms the whole of true religion.

And instruction] Musar, the teaching that discovers all its parts; to understand, to comprehend the words or doctrines which should be comprehended, in order that we may become wise to salvation.

Verse 3. To receive the instruction] Haskel, the deliberately weighing of the points contained in the teaching, so as to find out their importance.

Equity] Mescharim, rectitude.

Verse 4. To give subtilty to the simple] There are two Hebrew words generally supposed to come from the same root, which in our common Version are rendered the simple, pethaim, or pethayim; the former comes from patha, to be rash, hasty; the latter, from pathah, to draw aside, seduce, entice. It is the first of these words which is used here, and may be applied to youth; the inconsiderate, the unwary, who, for want of knowledge and experience, act precipitately.

To the young man] Naar is frequently used to signify such as are in the state of adolescence, grown up boys; these,

7 ⁱThe fear of the LORD is ^jthe beginning of knowledge: but fools despise wisdom and instruction.

8 ^kMy son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother.

9 For ^lthey ^mshall be ⁿan ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck.

10 My son, if sinners entice thee, ^oconsent thou not.

11 If they say, Come with us, let us ^play wait for blood, let us lurk privily for the innocent without cause:

12 Let us swallow them up alive as the grave; and whole, ^qas those that go down into the pit:

Eccles. xii. 13.—ⁱ Or, the principal part.—^j Ch. iv. 1. vi. 20.—^k Ch. iii. 22.—^l Heb. an adding.—^m Gen. xxxix. 7, &c. Ps. i. 1. Eph. v. 11.—ⁿ Jer. v. 26.—^o Ps. xxviii. 1. cxliii. 7.

as being giddy and inexperienced, stand in especial need of lessons of wisdom and discretion.

Verse 5. A wise man will hear] I shall not only give such instructions as may be suitable to the youthful and inexperienced, but also to those who have much knowledge and understanding. So said St. Paul: We speak wisdom among them that are perfect.

Verse 6. Dark sayings] Enigmas or riddles, in which the Asiatics abounded. I believe parables, such as those delivered by our Lord, nearly express the meaning of the original.

Verse 7. The fear of the Lord] This signifies that religious reverence which every intelligent being owes to his Creator; and is often used to express the whole of religion. But what is religion? The love of God, and the love of man; the former producing all obedience to the divine will; the latter, every act of benevolence to one's fellows.

This fear or religious reverence is said to be the beginning of knowledge; the principle, the first moving influence, begotten in a tender conscience by the Spirit of God. No man can ever become truly wise, who does not begin with God, the fountain of knowledge; and he whose mind is influenced by the fear and love of God will learn more in a month than others will in a year.

Fools despise] Men of bad hearts, bad heads, and bad ways.

Verse 8. My son, hear] Father was the title of preceptor, and son, that of disciple or scholar, among the Jews. But here the reference appears to be to the children of a family; the father and the mother have the principal charge, in the first instance, of their children's instruction. But in vain do parents give good advice if their own conduct be not consistent.

13 We shall find all precious substance, we shall fill our houses with spoil:

14 Cast in thy lot among us; let us all have one purse:

15 My son, * walk not thou in the way with them; * refrain thy foot from their path:

16 * For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood.

17 Surely in vain the net is spread * in the sight of any bird.

18 And they lay wait for their own blood; they lurk privily for their own lives.

19 * So are the ways of every one that is greedy of gain; which taketh away the life of the owners thereof.

20 * Wisdom * crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets:

21 She crieth in the chief place of concourse, in the openings of the gates: in the city she uttereth her words, saying,

22 How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorners delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge?

23 Turn you at my reproof: behold, * I will pour out my spirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you.

24 * Because I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded;

25 But ye * have set at nought all my counsel; and would none of my reproof;

26 * I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh;

27 When * your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind, when distress and anguish cometh upon you.

28 * Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me:

29 For that they * hated knowledge, and did not * choose the fear of the Lord:

30 * They would none of my counsel: they despised all my reproof.

31 Therefore * shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices.

32 For the * turning away of the simple shall slay them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them.

33 But * whose hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, and * shall be quiet from fear of evil.

Verse 9. An ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains] That is, filial respect and obedience will be as ornamental to thee as crowns, diadems, and golden chains and pearls are to others.

Verse 10. If sinners entice thee, consent thou not.] WILL—not. God's eternal purpose with respect to man is, that his will shall be free; or rather, that the will, which is essentially FREE, shall never be forced nor be forceable by any power. Not even the devil himself can lead a man into sin till he consents.

Verse 11. If they say, Come with us] This is precisely the way in which the workers of iniquity form their partizans to the present day.

Verse 12. Let us swallow them up alive] Give them as hasty a death as if the earth were suddenly to swallow them up. This seems to refer to the destruction of a whole village.

Verse 14. Cast in thy lot] Be a sworn brother, and thou shalt have an equal share of all the spoil.

Verse 17. Surely in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird.] This is a proverb, of which the wise man here makes a particular use. The wicked are represented as lurking privily for the innocent. It is in this way alone that they can hope to destroy them and take their substance; for if their designs were known, proper precautions would be taken against them; for it would be vain to spread the net in the sight of those birds which men wish to ensnare.

Verse 18. They lay wait for their own blood] I believe it is the innocent who are spoken of here, for whose blood and lives these lay wait and lurk privily; certainly not their own, by any mode of construction.

Verse 19. Which taketh away the life] A covetous man is in effect, and in the sight of God, a murderer; he wishes to get all the gain that can accrue to any or all who are in the same business that he follows—no matter to him how many families starve in consequence.

Verse 20. Wisdom crieth] Here wisdom is again personified; nothing is meant but the teachings given to man, either by divine revelation or the voice of the Holy Spirit in the heart.

Verse 22. Ye simple ones] Pethayim, ye who have been seduced and deceived. See on ver. 4.

—* Ps. ii. 4.—* Ch. x. 24.—* Job xxvii. 9. xxxv. 12. Isa. i. 15. Jer. xi. 11. xiv. 12. Ezek. viii. 18. Mic. iii. 4. Zech. vii. 13. James iv. 3.—* Job xxi. 14. Ver. 22.—* Ps. cxix. 178.—* Ver. 25. Ps. lxxxi. 11.—* Job iv. 8. Ch. xiv. 14. xxii. 8. Isa. iii. 11. Jer. vi. 19.—* Or, ease of the simple.—* Ps. xxv. 12, 18.—* Ps. cxlii. 7.

Verse 23. Turn you at my reproof] My convincing mode of arguing; attend to my demonstrations.

I will pour out my spirit unto you] If you will hear, ye shall have ample instruction.

Verse 24. Because I have called] These and the following words appear to be spoken of the persons who are described, ver. 11-19, who have refused to return from their evil ways till arrested by the hand of justice; they are now about to suffer, according to law. They now wish they had been guided by wisdom, and had chosen the fear of the Lord; but it is too late: justice knows nothing of mercy.

These words cannot be considered as applying or applicable to the eternal state of the persons in question, much less to the case of any man convinced of sin, who is crying to God for mercy. No poor penitent sinner on this side of eternity can call upon God early, or seek him through Jesus Christ earnestly, for the pardon of his sins, without being heard. It is only in eternity that the state is irreversibly fixed, and where that which was guilty must be guilty still. But let none harden his heart because of this long-suffering of God; for if he die in his sin, where God is he shall never come.

Verse 27. Your destruction cometh as a whirlwind] Sense and sound are here well expressed. Suphah here is the gust of wind.

Verse 29. They hated knowledge] This argues the deepest degree of intellectual and moral depravity.

Verse 32. For the turning away of the simple] This difficult place seems to refer to such a case as we term turning king's evidence; where an accomplice saves his own life by impeaching the rest of his gang. This is called his turning or repentance, meshubah; and he was the most likely to turn, because he was of the pethayim, seduced or deceived persons. And this evidence was given against them when they were in their prosperity, shalvah, and being thus in a state of fancied security, they were the more easily taken and brought to justice. [This rendering is rather far-fetched. The word meshubah signifies *perverse*ness.]

Verse 33. But whose hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely] He shall dwell in safety, yishcan betach, he shall inhabit safety itself; and shall be quiet from fear of evil, having a full consciousness of his own innocence and God's protection.

CHAPTER II.

The teacher promises his pupil the highest advantages, if he will follow the dictates of wisdom, 1-9. He shall be happy in its enjoyment, 10, 11; shall be saved from wicked men, 12-15; and from the snares of bad women, 16-19; be a companion of the good and upright; and be in safety in the land, when the wicked shall be rooted out of it, 20-22.

MY son, if thou wilt receive my words, and *hide my commandments with thee;
 2 So that thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding;
 3 Yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and ^blifest up thy voice for understanding;
 4 *If thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures;
 5 Then shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD, and find the knowledge of God.
 6 ^aFor the LORD giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding.
 7 He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous;
 *he is a buckler to them that walk uprightly.
 8 He keepeth the paths of judgment, and ^cpreserveth the way of his saints.
 9 Then shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea, every good path.
 10 When wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul;
 11 Discretion shall preserve thee, *understanding shall keep thee:

*Ch. iv. 21. vil. 1.—^bHeb. givest thy voice.—^cCh. iii. 14. Matt. xlii. 44.—^d1 Kings iii. 9, 12. James i. 5.—^ePs. lxxxiv. 11. Ch. xxx. 5.—^f1 Sam. ii. 9. Ps. lxxvi. 9.—^gCh. vi. 22.—^hJohn iii. 19, 20.—ⁱCh. x. 28. Jer. xi. 15.—^jRom. i. 32.—^kPs. cxxv. 5.—^lCh. v. 20.

Verse 1. Hide my commandments with thee] Treasure them up in thy heart, and then act from them through the medium of thy affections. He who has the rule of his duty only in his Bible and in his head is not likely to be a steady, consistent character; but he who has the word of God in his heart, works from his heart; and he delights to do the will of his heavenly Father, because his law is in his heart.

Verse 4. If thou seekest her as silver] How do men seek money? What will they not do to get rich? Reader, be ashamed of thyself, if thou be less in earnest after the true riches than after perishing wealth.

Hid treasures] The original word signifies property of any kind concealed in the earth, in caves or suchlike: and may also mean treasures, such as the precious metals or precious stones, which are presumptively known to exist in such and such mines.

Verse 7. He layeth up sound wisdom] It is difficult to find, in any language, a term proper to express the original meaning of the word; it seems to mean generally the essence or substance of a thing, the thing itself—that which is chief of its kind. He layeth up WHAT IS ESSENTIAL for the righteous. See note on Job. xi. 6.

Verse 9. Then shalt thou understand] He who understands these things by books only is never likely to practise or profit by them.

Verse 11. Discretion shall preserve thee] Here the word is taken in a good sense, a good device. The man invents purposes of good; and all his schemes, plans, and devices have for their object God's glory and the good of man: he deviseth liberal things, and by liberal things he shall stand.

Verse 13. The man that speaketh froward things] Things of subversion. Men who wish to subvert the state of things, 12 To deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that speaketh froward things;

13 Who leave the paths of uprightness, to ^awalk in the ways of darkness;

14 Who ^brejoice to do evil, and ^cdelight in the frowardness of the wicked;

15 *Whose ways are crooked, and they froward in their paths;

16 To deliver thee from ^dthe strange woman, ^eeven from the stranger which flattereth with her words;

17 *Which forsaketh the guide of her youth, and forgetteth the covenant of her God.

18 For ^fher house inclineth unto death, and her paths unto the dead.

19 None that go unto her return again, neither take they hold of the paths of life.

20 That thou mayest walk in the way of good men, and keep the paths of the righteous.

21 *For the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it.

22 *But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be ^grooted out of it.

whether civil or religious; who are seditious themselves, and wish to make others so.

Verse 16. The stranger which flattereth with her words] The original intimates the glib, oily speeches of a prostitute. The English lick is supposed to be derived from the original word.

Verse 17. Which forsaketh the guide of her youth] Leaves her father's house and instructions, and abandons herself to the public.

The covenant of her God] Renounces the true religion, and mixes with idolaters; for among them prostitution was enormous. Or by the covenant may be meant the matrimonial contract, which is a covenant made in the presence of God between the contracting parties, in which they bind themselves to be faithful to each other.

Verse 18. For her house inclineth unto death] The path of sin is the path of ruin: the path of duty is the way of safety. For her paths incline unto the dead, rephaim, the inhabitants of the invisible world.

Verse 19. None that go unto her return again] There are very few instances of prostitutes ever returning to the paths of sobriety and truth; perhaps not one of such as become prostitutes through a natural propensity to debauchery. Rakes and debauchees are sometimes converted; but most of them never lay hold on the path of life; they have had their health destroyed, and never recover it.

Verse 20. That thou mayest walk] Therefore thou shalt walk.

Verse 22. Transgressors] The garment men, the hypocrites; those who act borrowed characters, who go under a cloak; dissemblers. All such shall be rooted out of the land; they shall not be blessed with posterity.

CHAPTER III.

An exhortation to obedience, 1-4; to trust in God's providence, 5, 6; to humility, 7, 8; to charity, 9, 10; to submission to God's chastenings, 11, 12. The profitableness of wisdom in all the concerns of life, 13-26. No act of duty should be deferred beyond the time in which it should be done, 27, 28. Brotherly love and forbearance should be exercised, 29, 30. We should not envy the wicked, 31, 32. The curse of God is in the house of the wicked; but the humble and wise shall prosper, 33-35.

MY son, forget not my law; *but let thine heart keep my commandments:
 2 For length of days, and ^b long life, and ^c peace, shall they add to thee.
 3 Let not mercy and truth forsake thee: ^d bind them about thy neck; * write them upon the table of thine heart:
 4 ^e So shalt thou find favour and ^f good understanding in the sight of God and man.
 5 ^g Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; ^h and lean not unto thine own understanding.
 6 ⁱ In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall ^j direct thy paths.
 7 ^k Be not wise in thine own eyes: ^l fear the LORD, and depart from evil.
 8 It shall be ^m health to thy navel, and ⁿ marrow ^o to thy bones.
 9 ^p Honour the LORD with thy substance, and with the first-fruits of all thine increase:
 10 ^q So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine.
 11 ^r My son, despise not the chastening of the LORD: neither be weary of his correction:

 12 For whom the LORD loveth he correcteth; ^s even as a father the son in whom he delighteth.
 13 ^t Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and ^u the man that getteth understanding.
 14 ^v For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold.
 15 She is more precious than rubies: and ^w all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her.
 16 ^x Length of days is in her right hand; and in her left hand riches and honour.
 17 ^y Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.
 18 She is ^z a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her; and happy is every one that retaineth her.
 19 ^{aa} The LORD by wisdom hath founded the earth: by understanding hath he ^{ab} established the heavens:
 20 ^{ac} By his knowledge the depths are broken up, and ^{ad} the clouds drop down the dew.

Verse 1. Forget not my law; Remember what thou hast heard, and practise what thou dost remember; and let all obedience be from the heart.

Verse 2. For length of days] THREE eminent blessings are promised here: health, long life, and abundance.

Verse 3. Let not mercy and truth forsake thee] Let these be thy constant companions through life.

Bind them about thy neck] Keep them constantly in view; let them be thy moving principles; feel them as well as see them.

Verse 4. So shalt thou find favour] Thou shalt be acceptable to God, and thou shalt enjoy a sense of his approbation.

And good understanding] Men shall weigh thy character and conduct; and by this appreciate thy motives, and give thee credit for sincerity and uprightness. A truly religious and benevolent character will in general be prized wherever it is well known.

Verse 5. Lean not unto thine own understanding.] Do not prop thyself. It is on GOD, not on thyself, that thou art commanded to depend. He who trusts in his own heart is a fool.

Verse 6. In all thy ways acknowledge him] Begin, continue, and end every work, purpose, and device, with God. Earnestly pray for his direction at the commencement; look for his continued support in the progress; and so begin and continue that all may terminate in his glory; and then it will certainly be to thy good; for we never honour God without serving ourselves. The grand sin of the human race is their continual endeavour to live independently of God: i. e., to be without God in the world. True religion consists in considering God the fountain of all good, and expecting all good from him.

Verse 8. It shall be health to thy navel] That is to say trusting in the Lord is as essential to the life of God in the soul of man, as the umbilical cord is to the life and growth of the fœtus in the womb. Without the latter, no human being could ever exist or be born; without the former, no true religion can ever be found.

And marrow to thy bones.] This metaphor is not less proper than the preceding. What the marrow is to the support and strength of the bones, and the bones to the support and strength of the body; that, faith in God is to the support, strength, energy, and salvation of the soul.

Verse 9. Honour the Lord with thy substance] The MINCHAH or gratitude-offering to God, commanded under the law, is of endless obligation. It would be well to give a portion of the produce of every article by which we get our support to God, or to the poor, the representatives of Christ. When that portion is thus disposed of, the rest is sanctified; when it is withheld, God's curse is upon the whole.

Verse 11. Despise not the chastening of the Lord] The word signifies correction, discipline, and instruction. Teaching is essentially necessary to show man the way in which he is to go; discipline is necessary to render that teaching effectual; and, often, correction is requisite in order to bring the mind into submission, without which it cannot acquire knowledge. It is of no use to rebel; if thou do, thou kickest against the pricks, and every act of rebellion against him is a wound to thine own soul. God will either end thee or mend thee; wilt thou then kick on?

Verse 12. Whom the Lord loveth] Correction is a proof of God's love to thee; thereby he shows that he treats thee as a father does the son, to whom he bears the fondest affection.

Verse 14. For the merchandise] Sachar, the traffic, the trade that is carried on by going through countries and provinces with such articles as they could carry on the back of camels, &c.

And the gain thereof] Tebuathah, its produce; what is gained by the articles after all expenses are paid. He who finds wisdom—the knowledge and salvation of God, obtains the liberty of the gospel, is adopted into the family of God, and made an heir according to the hope of eternal life.

Verse 15. She is more precious than rubies] The word principally means pearls, but may be taken for precious stones in general.

21 My son, let not them depart from thine eyes: keep sound wisdom and discretion:

22 So shall they be life unto thy soul, and ^a grace to thy neck.

23 ^b Then shalt thou walk in thy way safely, and thy foot shall not stumble.

24 ^c When thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid: yea, thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet.

25 ^d Be not afraid of sudden fear, neither of the desolation of the wicked when it cometh.

26 For the LORD shall be thy confidence, and shall keep thy foot from being taken.

27 ^e Withhold not good from ^f them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it.

28 ^g Say not unto thy neighbour, Go, and come

All the things thou canst desire] Superior to every thing that can be an object of desire here below. But who believes this?

Verse 16. Length of days is in her right hand] A wicked man shortens his days by excesses; a righteous man prolongs his by temperance.

In her left hand riches and honour] There is nothing to be understood here by the right hand in preference to the left.

Verse 18. She is a tree of life] "The tree of lives," alluding most manifestly to the tree so called which God in the beginning planted in the garden of Paradise, by eating the fruit of which all the wastes of nature might have been continually repaired, so as to prevent death for ever.

Verse 19. The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth] Here wisdom is taken in its proper acceptation, for that infinite knowledge and skill which God has manifested in the creation and composition of the earth, and in the structure and economy of the heavens.

Verse 20. By his knowledge the depths are broken up] Thus the wisest of men attributes those effects which we suppose to spring from natural causes to the Supreme Being himself.

Verse 21. Let not them depart from thine eyes] Never forget that God, who is the author of nature, directs and governs it in all things; for it is no self-determining agent.

Keep sound wisdom and discretion] To acknowledge God as the author of all good, is the tushiyah, the essence of a godly man's creed; to resolve to act according to the directions of his wisdom, is the mezimma, the religious purpose, that will bring good to ourselves and glory to God. These bring life to the soul, and are ornamental, to the man who acts in this way, ver. 22.

Verse 24. When thou liest down] The confidence, security, and safety which proceed from a consciousness of innocence. Most people are afraid of sleep, lest they should never awake, because they feel they are not prepared to again, and to-morrow I will give; when thou hast it by thee.

29 ^a Devise not evil against thy neighbour, seeing he dwelleth securely by thee.

30 ^b Strive not with a man without cause, if he have done thee no harm.

31 ^c Envy thou not ^d the oppressor, and choose none of his ways.

32 For the froward ^e is abomination to the LORD: ^f but his secret ^g is with the righteous.

33 ^h The curse of the LORD is in the house of the wicked: but ⁱ he blesseth the habitation of the just.

34 ^j Surely he scorneth the scorners: but he giveth grace unto the lowly.

35 The wise shall inherit glory: but shame ^k shall be the promotion of fools.

appear before God. True believers know that God is their keeper night and day; they have strong confidence in him that he will be their director, and not suffer them to take any false step in life, ver. 28.

Verse 27. Withhold not good from them to whom it is due] From the lords of it. But who are they? The poor. And what art thou, O rich man? Why thou art a steward to whom God has given substance that thou mayest divide with the poor. They are the right owners of every farthing thou hast to spare from thy own support, and that of thy family; and God has given the surplus for their sakes.

Verse 28. Say not unto thy neighbour] If thou have the means by thee, and thy neighbour's necessities be pressing, do not put him off till the morrow. Death may take either him or thee before that time.

Verse 30. Strive not with a man] Do not be of a litigious, quarrelsome spirit. Be not under the influence of too nice a sense of honour. If thou must appeal to judicial authority to bring him that wrongs thee to reason, avoid all enmity, and do nothing in a spirit of revenge.

Verse 31. Envy thou not the oppressor] O how bewitching is power! Every man desires it; and yet all hate tyrants. But query, if all had power would not the major part be tyrants?

Verse 32. But his secret] His secret assembly; godly people meet there, and God dwells there.

Verse 33. The curse of the Lord] No godly people meet in such a house; nor is God ever an inmate there.

But he blesseth the habitation of the just] He considers it as his own temple. There he is worshipped in spirit and in truth; and hence God makes it his dwelling-place.

Verse 35. The wise, &c.] Many such fools as Solomon speaks of are exalted to the gibbet and gallows. The way to prevent this and the like evils is to attend to the voice of wisdom.

CHAPTER IV.

The preceptor calls his pupils, and tells them how himself was educated, 1-4; specifies the teachings he received, 5-19; and exhorts his pupil to persevere in well-doing, and to avoid evil, 20-27.

HEAR, ye children, the instruction of a father, and attend to know understanding.

2 For I give you good doctrine, forsake ye not my law.

3 For I was my father's son, tender and only beloved in the sight of my mother.

4 He taught me also, and said unto me, Let thine heart retain my words: keep my commandments, and live.

5 Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth.

6 Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her, and she shall keep thee.

7 Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding.

8 Exalt her, and she shall promote thee: she shall bring thee to honour, when thou dost embrace her.

9 She shall give to thine head an ornament of grace: a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee.

10 Hear, O my son, and receive my sayings; and the years of thy life shall be many.

11 I have taught thee in the way of wisdom; I have led thee in right paths.

12 When thou goest, thy steps shall not be straitened; and when thou runnest, thou shalt not stumble.

13 Take fast hold of instruction; let her not go: keep her; for she is thy life.

Isa. lvi. 30.—Matt. v. 14, 45. Phil. ii. 15.—2 Sam. xxiii. 4.—1 Sam.

Verse 1. Hear, ye children] Such as I received from my father I give to you; and they were the teachings of a wise and affectionate parent to his only son, a peculiar object of his regards, and also those of a fond mother.

Verse 5. Get wisdom] True religion is essential to thy happiness; never forget its teachings, nor go aside from the path it prescribes.

Verse 6. Forsake her not] Wisdom personified is here represented as a guardian and companion, who, if not forsaken, will continue faithful; if loved, will continue a protector.

Verse 7. Wisdom is the principal thing] "Wisdom is the principle." It is the punctum saliens in all religion to know the true God, and what he requires of man, and for what he has made man; and to this must be added, under the Christian dispensation, to know Jesus Christ whom he hath sent, and for what end he was sent, the necessity of his being sent, and the nature of that salvation which he has bought by his own blood.

Get wisdom] Consider this as thy chief gain; that in reference to which all thy wisdom, knowledge, and endeavours should be directed.

And with all thy getting] Let this be thy chief property. While thou art passing through things temporal, do not lose those things which are eternal; and, while diligent in business, be fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.

Get understanding] Do not be contented with the lessons of wisdom merely; do not be satisfied with having a sound religious creed; do believe and tremble; but see that thou properly comprehend all that thou hast learnt; and see that thou rightly apply all that thou hast been taught.

Verse 8. She shall bring thee to honour] There is nothing, a strict life of piety and benevolence excepted, that has such a direct tendency to reflect honour upon a man, as the careful cultivation of his mind. Knowledge is power.

Verse 9. A crown of glory] A crown shall not be more honourable to the princely wearer, than sound wisdom—true religion, coupled with deep learning, shall be to the Christian and the scholar.

Verse 10. The years of thy life shall be many] Vice and intemperance impair the health and shorten the days of the wicked; while true religion, sobriety, and temperance prolong them.

14 Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men.

15 Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass away.

16 For they sleep not, except they have done mischief; and their sleep is taken away, unless they cause some to fall.

17 For they eat the bread of wickedness, and drink the wine of violence.

18 But the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

19 The way of the wicked is as darkness: they know not at what they stumble.

20 My son, attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings.

21 Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart.

22 For they are life unto them that find them, and health to all their flesh.

23 Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.

24 Put away from thee a froward mouth, and perverse lips put far from thee.

25 Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee.

26 Ponder the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established.

27 Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil.

ii. 9. Job xviii. 5, 6. Isa. lix. 9, 10. Jer. xlii. 12. Josh. i. 7.—Isa. i. 16. Rom. xii. 9.

Verse 12. Thy steps shall not be straitened] A man under the influence of true religion ponders his paths, and carefully poises occurring circumstances; and as the fear of God will ever lead him to act an upright and honest part, so his way in business and life is both clear and large. Such a man can never be embarrassed. He sees his way always plain; and when a favourable tide of providence shows him the necessity of increased exertion, he runs, and is in no danger of stumbling.

Verse 13. Take fast hold] Seize it strongly, and keep the hold! and do this as for life. Learn all thou canst, retain what thou hast learnt, and keep the reason continually in view—it is for thy life.

Verse 14. Enter not into the path of the wicked] Never associate, with those whose life is irregular and sinful; never accompany them in any of their acts of transgression.

Verse 15. Avoid it] Let it be the serious purpose of thy soul to shun every appearance of evil.

Pass not by it] Never, for the sake of worldly gain, or through complaisance to others, approach the way that thou wouldst not wish to be found in when God calls thee into the eternal world.

Turn from it] If, through unwatchfulness or unfaithfulness, thou at any time get near or into the way of sin, turn from it with the utmost speed, and humble thyself before thy maker.

And pass away] Speed from it, run for thy life, and get to the utmost distance; eternally diverging so as never to come near it whilst thou hast a being.

Verse 16. Except they have done mischief] The night is their time for spoil and depredation. And they must gain some booty before they go to rest.

Verse 17. For they eat the bread of wickedness] By privately stealing.

And drink the wine of violence] By highway robbery.

Verse 18. But the path of the just] The path of the wicked is gloomy, dark, and dangerous; that of the righteous is open, luminous, and instructive. The truly wise man is but in his twilight here below; but he is in a state of glorious preparation for the realms of everlasting light; till at last, emerging from darkness and the shadows of death, he is ushered into the full blaze of endless felicity.

Verse 21. Keep them in the midst of thine heart] Let them be wrapped up in the very centre of thy affections that they may give spring and energy to every desire, word, and wish.

Verse 23. Keep thy heart with all diligence] "Above all keeping," guard thy heart. He who knows anything of himself, knows how apt his affections are to go astray.

For out of it are the issues of life.] Is not this a plain allusion to the arteries which carry the blood from the heart through the whole body, and to the utmost extremities? So, in the spiritual life, the heart is the seat of the Lord of life and glory; and the streams of life proceed from him to all the faculties of the soul. And if the heart be pure and holy, all its purposes will be just and good. If it be impure and defiled, nothing will proceed from it but abomination.

Verse 24. A forward mouth] Beware of hastiness, anger, and rash speeches.

And perverse lips] Beware of calumniating and back-biting your neighbour.

Verse 26. Ponder the path of thy feet] Weigh well the part thou shouldst act in life. See that thou contract no bad habits.

Verse 27. Turn not to the right hand nor to the left] Avoid all crooked ways. Be an upright, downright, and straight-forward man. Avoid tricks, wiles, and deceptions of this kind.

CHAPTER V.

Farther exhortations to acquire wisdom, 1, 2. The character of a loose woman, and the ruinous consequences of attachment to such, 3-14. Exhortations to chastity and moderation, 15-21. The miserable end of the wicked, 22, 23.

MY son, attend unto my wisdom, and bow thine ear to my understanding:

2 That thou mayest regard discretion, and that thy lips may ^a keep knowledge.

3 ^b For the lips of a strange woman drop as an honeycomb, and her ^c mouth is ^d smoother than oil:

4 But her end is ^e bitter as wormwood, ^f sharp as a two-edged sword.

5 ^g Her feet go down to death; her steps take hold on hell.

6 Lest thou shouldst ponder the path of life, her ways are moveable, that thou canst not know them.

7 Hear me now therefore, O ye children, and depart not from the words of my mouth.

8 Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the door of her house:

9 Lest thou give thine honour unto others, and thy years unto the cruel:

10 Lest strangers be filled with ^h thy wealth; and thy labours be in the house of a stranger;

11 And thou mourn at the last, when thy flesh and thy body are consumed,

12 And say, How have I ⁱ hated instruction, and my heart ^j despised reproof;

13 And have not obeyed the voice of my teachers, nor inclined mine ear to them that instructed me!

14 I was almost in all evil in the midst of the congregation and assembly.

15 Drink waters out of thine own cistern, and running waters out of thine own well.

16 Let thy fountains be dispersed abroad, and rivers of waters in the streets.

17 Let them be only thine own, and not strangers' with thee.

18 Let thy fountain be blessed: and rejoice with ^k the wife of thy youth.

19 ^l Let her be as the loving hind and pleasant roe; let her breasts ^m satisfy thee at all times; and ⁿ be thou ravished always with her love.

Verse 1. Attend unto my wisdom] Take the following lessons from my own experience.

Verse 3. The lips of a strange woman] One that is not thy own, whether Jewess or heathen.

Drop as an honeycomb] She uses the most deceitful, flattering, and alluring speeches: as the droppings of the honey out of the comb are the sweetest of all.

Verse 4. Bitter as wormwood] Something as excessive in its bitterness, as honey is in its sweetness.

Verse 5. Her steps take hold on hell] First, the death of the body: and then the damnation of the soul.

Verse 6. Lest thou shouldst ponder] To prevent thee from reflecting on thy conduct, and its consequences, her ways are moveable—she continually varies her allurements.

Thou canst not know them] It is impossible to conceive all her tricks and wiles.

Verse 7. Hear me—O ye children] Sons, young men in general: for these are the most likely to be deceived and led astray.

Verse 8. Come not nigh the door of her house] Where there are generally such exhibitions as have a natural tendency to excite impure and irregular passions.

Verse 9. Lest thou give thine honour] The character, of a debauchee is universally detested: by this, even those of noble blood loose their honour and respect.

Thy years unto the cruel] Cruelty has its throne in the heart of prostitutes; and they will rob and murder those who give their strength, their wealth, and their years, to them.

Verse 11. When thy flesh and thy body are consumed

ⁱ Ch. i. 29.—^j Ch. i. 25. xii. 1.—^k Mal. ii. 14.—^l See Cant. ii. 9. iv. 5. vii. 3.—^m Heb. water thee.—ⁿ Heb. err thou always in her loss.

The word shear, which we render body, signifies; what remains, residue, or remnant of a thing; and is used here to denote the breathing carcase, putrid with the disease of debauchery: a public reproach which the justice of God entails on this species of iniquity. The mourning here spoken of, is of the most excessive kind: the word naham is often applied to the growling of a lion, and the hoarse incessant murmuring of the sea.

Verse 14. I was almost in all evil] This vice, like a whirlpool, sweeps all others into its vortex.

In the midst of the congregation and assembly] Such persons, however sacred the place, carry about with them eyes full of adultery which cannot cease from sin.

Verse 15. Drink waters out of thine own cistern] Be satisfied with thy own wife.

Verse 16. Let thy fountains be dispersed abroad] Let thy children lawfully begotten be numerous.

Verse 17. Let them be only thine own] The offspring of a legitimate connexion: a bastard brood, however numerous, is no credit to any man.

Verse 19. The loving hind and pleasant roe] By ayelah, the deer; by yaalah, the ibex or mountain goat, may be meant.

Let her breasts satisfy thee] As the infant is satisfied with the breasts of its mother; so shouldst thou be with the wife of thy youth.

Verse 23. He shall be holden with the cords of his sins] Sin repeated becomes customary; custom soon engenders habit; and habit in the end assumes the form of necessity; likely, and it is a general case; but even these may repent and live.

PROVERBS.

CHAPTER VI.

Exhortations against becoming surety for others, 1-5; against idleness, from the example of the ant, 6-11; description of a worthless person, 12-15; seven things hateful to God, 16-19; the benefits of instruction, 20-23; farther exhortations against bad women, and especially against adultery, 24-33; what may be expected from jealousy, 34, 35.

MY son, ^a if thou be surety for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger,

2 Thou art snared with the words of thy mouth, thou art taken with the words of thy mouth.

3 Do this now, my son, and deliver thyself when thou art come into the hand of thy friend; go, humble thyself, ^b and make sure thy friend.

4 ^c Give not sleep to thine eyes, nor slumber to thine eyelids.

5 Deliver thyself as a roe from the hand of the hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

6 ^d Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise:

7 Which having no guide, overseer, or ruler,

8 Provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest.

^a Ch. xi. 15. xvii. 18. xx. 16. xxii. 26. xxvii. 18.—^b Or, so shalt thou prevail with thy friend.—^c Ps. cxxxii. 4.—^d Job xii. 7.—^e Ch. xxiv. 38, 39.—^f Ch. x. 4. xiii. 4. xx. 4.—^g Job xv. 12. Ps. xxxv. 19.

Verse 1. If thou be surety for thy friend] Lereacha, for thy neighbour; i.e., any person. Give what thou canst; but except in extreme cases, be surety for no man. Striking or shaking hands when the mouth had once made the promise, was considered the ratification of the engagement; and thus the man became snared with the words of his mouth.

Verse 2. Do this—deliver thyself] Continue to press him for whom thou art become surety, to pay his creditor; else thou mayest fully expect to be left to pay the debt.

Verse 3. Deliver thyself as a roe] Make every struggle and exertion, as the antelope taken in the net, and the bird taken in the snare would, in order to get free from thy captivity.

Verse 4. Go to the ant, thou sluggard] The ant is a remarkable creature for foresight, industry, and economy. At the proper seasons they collect their food,—not in the summer to lay up for the winter; for they sleep during the winter, and eat not; and therefore such hoards would be to them useless;—but when the food necessary for them is most plentiful, then they collect it for their consumption in the proper seasons. Spring, summer, and autumn, they are incessant in their labour; and their conduct affords a bright example to man.

Verse 10. Yet a little sleep, a little slumber] This if not the language, is the feeling of the sluggard. The ant gathers its food in summer and in harvest, and sleeps in winter when it has no work to do. If the sluggard would work in the day, and sleep at night, it would be all proper.

9 ^e How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep?

10 Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep:

11 ^f So shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth, and thy want as an armed man.

12 A naughty person, a wicked man, walketh with a froward mouth.

13 ^g He winketh with his eyes, he speaketh with his feet, he teacheth with his fingers;

14 Frowardness ^h is in his heart; ⁱ he deviseth mischief continually; ^j he soweth discord.

15 Therefore shall his calamity come suddenly; suddenly shall he ^k be broken ^l without remedy.

16 These six things doth the LORD hate: yea, seven are an abomination ^m unto him:

17 ⁿ A ^o proud look, ^p a lying tongue, and ^q hands that shed innocent blood,

Ch. x. 10.—^b Mic. ii. 1.—^c Ver. 19.—^d Job. casteth forth.—^e Jer. xix. 11.—^f 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16.—^g Heb. of his soul.—^h Ps. xviii. 27. cf. 6.—ⁱ Heb. Haughty eyes.—^j Ps. cxx. 2, 3.—^k Isa. i. 15.

Verse 11. So shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth] That is, with slow, but surely approaching steps.

Thy want as an armed man] That is with irresistible fury; and thou art not prepared to oppose it.

Verse 12. A naughty person] "Adam good for nothing." When he lost his innocence.

A wicked man] He soon became a general transgressor after having departed from his God.

Verse 13. He winketh with his eyes, he speaketh with his feet, he teacheth with his fingers] These things seem to be spoken of debauchees.

Verse 14. He deviseth mischief] He plots schemes and plans to bring it to pass.

He soweth discord] Between men and their wives, by seducing the latter from their fidelity.

Verse 15. Suddenly shall he be broken] Probably alluding to some punishment of the adulterer, such as being stoned to death.

Verse 16. These six—doth the Lord hate] 1. A proud look—exalted eyes; those who will not condescend to look on the rest of mankind. 2. A lying tongue—he who neither loves nor tells truth. 3. Hands that shed innocent blood, whether by murder or by battery. 4. A heart that deviseth wicked imaginations—the heart that fabricates such, lays the foundation, builds upon it, and completes the superstructure of iniquity. 5. Feet that be swift in running to mischief—he who works iniquity with greediness. 6. A false witness that speaketh lies—one who, even on his oath

18 * An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, ^b feet that be swift in running to mischief, 19 * A false witness that speaketh lies, and he ^a that soweth discord among brethren.

20 * My son, keep thy father's commandment, and forsake not the law of thy mother :

21 ' Bind them continually upon thine heart, and tie them about thy neck.

22 * When thou goest, it shall lead thee ; when thou sleepest, ^b it shall keep thee : and when thou awakest, it shall talk with thee.

23 ' For the commandment is a ' lamp ; and the law is light ; and reproofs of instruction are the way of life :

24 * To keep thee from the evil woman, from the flattering ¹ of the tongue of a strange woman.

25 * Lust not after her beauty in thine heart ; neither let her take thee with her eye-lids.

26 For ^a by means of a whorish woman a man is brought to a piece of bread : ^a and ^a the adulteress will ^a hunt for the precious life.

before a court of justice, tells any thing but the truth. Seven are an abomination unto him] "To his soul." The seventh is, he that soweth discord among brethren—he who troubles the peace of a family, of a village, of the state : all who, by lies and misrepresentations, strive to make men's minds evil-affected towards their brethren.

Verse 22. When thou goest, it shall lead thee] Here the law is personified ; and is represented as a nurse, teacher, and guardian, by night and day.

When thou sleepest] He commends his body and soul to the protection of his Maker when he lies down ; and sleeps in peace. And when he awakes in the morning, the promises and mercies of God are the first things that present themselves to his recollection.

Verse 23. For the commandment is a lamp] It illuminates our path. It shows us how we should walk and praise God. And the law is light] A general light, showing the nature and will of GOD, and the interest and duty of MAN.

And reproofs of instruction] Or, that instruction which reproves us for our sins and errors leads us into the way of life.

Verse 24. To keep thee from the evil woman] The strange woman always means one that is not a man's own ; and sometimes it may imply a foreign harlot, one who is also a stranger to the God of Israel.

Verse 25. Neither let her take thee with her eye-lids.] It is a very general custom in the East to paint the eye-lids.

Verse 26. By means of a whorish woman] In following lewd women, a man is soon reduced to poverty and disease.

Verse 27. Can a man take fire] These were proverbial expressions, the meaning of which was plain to every capacity.

27 Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned ?

28 Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burned ?

29 So he that goeth in to his neighbour's wife ; whosoever toucheth her shall not be innocent.

30 Men do not despise a thief, if he steal to satisfy his soul when he is hungry :

31 But if he be found, ^a he shall restore seven-fold ; he shall give all the substance of his house.

32 But whoso committeth adultery with a woman ^a lacketh ^a understanding : he that doeth it destroyeth his own soul.

33 A wound and dishonour shall he get ; and his reproach shall not be wiped away.

34 For jealousy is the rage of a man : therefore he will not spare in the day of vengeance.

35 * He will not regard any ransom : neither will he rest content, though thou givest many gifts.

28.—^a Ch. xxix. 8.—^b Gen. xxxix. 14.—^c Heb. the woman of a man, or a man's wife.—^d Ezek. xiii. 18.—^e Exod. xxii. 1, 4.—^f Ch. vii. 7.—^g Heb. heart.—^h Heb. He will not accept the face of any ransom.

Verse 29. So he that goeth in to his neighbour's wife] As sure as he who takes fire into his bosom, or who walks upon live coals, is burnt thereby ; so sure he that seduces his neighbour's wife shall be punished.

Verse 30. Men do not despise a thief, if he steal] Every man pities the poor culprit who was perishing for lack of food, and stole to satisfy his hunger ; yet no law clears him ; he is bound to make restitution ; in some cases double, in others quadruple and quintuple ; and if he have not property enough to make restitution, to be sold for a bondman ; Exod. xxii. 1-4 ; Lev. xxv. 39.

Verse 32. But whoso committeth adultery] The case understood is that of a married man : he has a wife ; and therefore is not in the circumstances of the poor thief who stole to appease his hunger, having nothing to eat. In this alone the opposition between the two cases is found : the thief had no food, and he stole some ; the married man had a wife, and yet went in to the wife of his neighbour.

Destroyeth his own soul.] Sins against his life ; for, under the law of Moses, adultery was punished with death ; Lev. xx. 10 ; Deut. xxii. 22.

Verse 34. Jealousy is the rage of a man : therefore he will not spare] He will not, when he has detected the adulterer in the act, wait for the slow progress of the law : it is then to him the day of vengeance ; and, in general, he avenges himself on the spot, as we see above.

Verse 35. He will not regard any ransom.] This is an injury that admits of no compensation. No gifts can satisfy a man for the injury his honour has sustained ; and to take a bribe or a ransom, would be setting up shakshy at a price.

CHAPTER VII.

A farther exhortation to acquire wisdom, in order to be preserved from impure connexions, 1-5. The character of a harlot, and her conduct towards a youth who fell into her snare, 6-23. Solemn exhortations to avoid this evil, 24-27.

MY son, keep my words, and * lay up my commandments with thee.
 2 ^b Keep my commandments, and live; * and my law as the apple of thine eye.
 3 ^a Bind them upon thy fingers, write them upon the table of thine heart.
 4 Say unto wisdom, Thou art my sister; and call understanding thy kinswoman:
 5 * That they may keep thee from the strange woman, from the stranger which flattereth with her words.
 6 For at the window of my house I looked through my casement,
 7 And beheld among the simple ones, I discerned among the youths, a young man void of understanding,
 8 Passing through the street near her corner; and he went the way to her house,
 9 ^b In the twilight, ^c in the evening, in the black and dark night:
 10 And, behold, there met him a woman with the attire of an harlot, and subtil of heart.
 11 (^d She is loud and stubborn; ^e her feet abide not in her house:
 12 Now is she without, now in the streets, and lieth in wait at every corner.)
 13 So she caught him, and kissed him, and ^f with an impudent face said unto him, 14 ^g I have peace-offerings with me; this day have I paid my vows.

Verse 2. As the apple of thine eye.] As the pupil of the eye, which is of such essential necessity to sight, and so easily injured.

Verse 4. Thou art my sister] Thou art my dearest friend, and I will treat thee as such.

Verse 6. I looked through my casement] The casement is a small aperture in a large window, or a window opening on hinges. Here it means the lattice, for they had no glass windows in the East.

Verse 7. Among the simple ones] The inexperienced, inconsiderate young men.

A young man void of understanding] "Destitute of a heart." He had not wisdom to discern the evil intended; nor courage to resist the flatteries of the seducer.

Verse 9. In the black and dark night] When there were neither lamps nor moon-shine.

Verse 10. A woman with the attire of an harlot] It appears that sitting in some open place, and covering the face, or having a veil of a peculiar kind on, was the evidence of a harlot; Gen. xxxviii. 14, 15-19. No doubt, in Solomon's time, they had other distinctions.

Verse 11. She is loud and stubborn] Homiyah, she is never at rest, always agitated; busily employed to gain her end, and this is to go into the path of error: scorereth, "turning aside;" preferring any way to the right way. And, therefore, it is added, her feet abide not in her house; she gads abroad; and this disposition probably first led her to this vice.

Verse 12. Now is she without] She is continually exposing herself, and showing by her gait and gestures what she is, and what she wants.

Verse 13. So she caught him] Laid fast hold on him, and kissed him, to show that she was affectionately attached to him. And with an impudent face] "She strengthened her countenance," assumed the most confident look she could; endeavoured to appear friendly and sincere.

Verse 14. I have peace-offerings with me] More literally, "the sacrifices of the peace-offerings are with me." Much light is cast on this place by the fact that the gods in many parts of the East are actually worshipped in brothels, and fragments of the offerings are divided among the wretches who fall into the snare of the prostitutes.

15 Therefore came I forth to meet thee, diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee.

16 I have decked my bed with coverings of tapestry, with carved works, with * fine linen of Egypt.

17 I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon.

18 Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning: let us solace ourselves with loves.

19 For the goodman is not at home, he is gone a long journey:

20 He hath taken a bag of money * with him, and will come home at * the day appointed.

21 With ^a her much fair speech she caused him to yield, ^b with the flattering of her lips she forced him.

22 He goeth after her * straightway, as an ox goeth to the slaughter, or as a fool to the correction of the stocks;

23 Till a dart strike through his liver; * as a bird hasteth to the snare, and knoweth not that it is for his life.

24 Hearken unto me now therefore, O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth.

25 Let not thine heart decline to her ways, go not astray in her paths.

26 For she hath cast down many wounded: yea, * many strong men have been slain by her.

27 * Her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death.

¹ Heb. she strengthened her face, and said.—² Heb. Peace-offerings are upon me.—³ Isa. xix. 9.—⁴ Heb. in his hand.—⁵ Or, the new moon.—⁶ Ch. v. 3.—⁷ Ps. xii. 2.—⁸ Heb. suddenly.—⁹ Eccles. ix. 12.—¹⁰ Neh. xiii. 28.—¹¹ Ch. ii. 18. v. 6. ix. 18.

Have I paid my vows.] She seems to insinuate that she had made a vow for the health and safety of this young man; and having done so, and prepared the sacrificial banquet, came actually out to seek him, that he might partake of it with her, ver. 15.

Verse 16. I have decked my bed] "My couch or sofa;" distinguished from "my bed," ver. 17, the place to sleep on, as the other was the place to recline on at meals. The tapestry mentioned here seems to refer to the covering of the sofa; exquisitely woven and figured cloth.

Verse 17. I have perfumed my bed with myrrh] She had used every means to excite the passions she wished to bring into action.

Verse 19. For the goodman] Literally, "For the man is not in his house."

Verse 20. He hath taken] Literally, "The money bag he hath taken in his hand." He is gone a journey of itinerant merchandizing.

And will come home at the day appointed.] He will return by the approaching festival.

Verse 21. With her much fair speech] With her blandishments, and lascivious talk, she overcame all his scruples, and constrained him to yield.

Verse 22. As an ox goeth to the slaughter] The original of this and the following verse has been variously translated. All the translations mark the stupidity and folly of the man who is led away by enticing women, or who lives a life of intemperance.

Verse 24. Hearken unto me now therefore, O ye children] Ye that are young and inexperienced, seriously consider the example set before your eyes, and take warning at another's expense.

Verse 26. For she hath cast down many wounded: yea, many strong men have been slain by her.] That is, such like women have been the ruin of many. History is full of examples.

Verse 27. Her house is the way to hell] Sheol, the pit, the grave, the place of the dead, the eternal and infernal world. And they who, through such, fall into the grave, descend lower, into the chambers of death; the place where pleasure is at an end, and illusion mocks no more.

CHAPTER VIII.

The fame and excellence of wisdom, and its manner of teaching, 1-4; the matter of its exhortations, 5-12; its influence among men, 13-21; its antiquity, 22-31; the blessedness of attending to its counsels, 32-35; the misery of those who do not, 36.

DOTH not * wisdom cry? and ^b understanding put forth her voice?

2 She standeth in the top of high places, by the way in the places of the paths.

3 She crieth at the gates, at the entry of the city, at the coming in at the doors.

4 Unto you, O men, I call; and my voice is to the sons of man.

5 O ye simple, understand wisdom: and ye fools, be ye of an understanding heart.

6 Hear; for I will speak of * excellent things; and the opening of my lips shall be right things.

7 For my mouth shall speak truth; and wickedness is ^a an abomination to my lips.

8 All the words of my mouth are in righteousness; there is nothing * froward or perverse in them.

^a Ch. i. 20. ix. 3.—^b Ps. cxix. 130. cxlviii. 5.—^c Ch. xxii. 20.—^d Heb. the abomination of my lips.—^e Heb. wreathed.—^f Ch. xiv. 6.—^g Job xxviii. 15, &c. Ps. xix. 10. cxix. 127. Ch. iii. 14, 15. iv. 5, 7. xvi.

Verse 1. Doth not wisdom cry? Here wisdom is again personified; and is represented in a twofold point of view: 1. Wisdom, the power of judging rightly, implying the knowledge of divine and human things. 2. As an attribute of God, particularly displayed in the various and astonishing works of creation. Nor has it any other meaning in this whole chapter, whatever some of the Fathers may have dreamed, who find allegorical meanings every where.

Verse 2. In the places of the paths. "The constituted house of the paths." Does not this mean the house of public worship? which stands a centre to the surrounding villages, the paths from all the parts leading to and terminating at it? In such a place, where the holy word of God is read or preached, there in a particular manner does wisdom cry, and understanding lift up her voice.

Verse 3. She crieth at the gates. This might be well applied to the preaching of Jesus Christ and his apostles, and their faithful successors in the Christian ministry. He went to the temple, and proclaimed the righteousness of the Most High: he did the same in the synagogues, on the mountains, by the sea side, in the villages, in the streets of the cities, and in private houses. So must the zealous ministers of Christ go to highways and hedges, to mountains and plains, to ships and cottages, to persuade sinners to turn from the error of their ways and accept that redemption which was procured by the sacrificial offering of Jesus Christ.

Verse 4. Unto you, O men. Ishim, men of wealth and power, will I call; and not to you alone, for my voice is al beney Adam, "to all the descendants of Adam;" to the whole human race.

Verse 5. O ye simple. Ye that are deceived and with flattering words and fair speeches deluded and drawn away.

Ye fools. Ye stupid, stiff-necked, senseless people. That preaching is never likely to do much good, that is not pointed; specifying and describing vices, and charging them home on the consciences of transgressors.

Verse 6. Hear; for I will speak of excellent things. The teaching is not trifling, though addressed to triflers.

The opening of my lips shall be right things. Things which are calculated to correct your false notions, and set straight your crooked ways.

Verse 7. My mouth shall speak truth. TRUTH, without falsity, or any mixture of error, shall be the whole matter of my discourse.

Verse 8. All the words—are in righteousness. Betsedek, in justice and equity, testifying what man owes to his God, to his neighbour, and to himself; giving to each his due.

There is nothing froward. Tortuous, involved or difficult.

9 'They are all plain to him that understandeth, and right to them that find knowledge.

10 Receive my instruction, and not silver; and knowledge rather than choice gold.

11 * For wisdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it.

12 I wisdom dwell with ^b prudence, and find out knowledge of witty inventions.

13 'The fear of the LORD is to hate evil: ^c pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and ^d the froward mouth, do I hate.

14 Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom: I am understanding; ^e I have strength.

15 * By me kings reign, and princes decree justice.

16 By me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth.

16.—^b Or, subtilty.—^c Ch. xvi. 6.—^d Ch. vi. 17.—^e Ch. iv. 24.—^f Eccles. vii. 19. ^g Ps. xlviii. 1. xix. 14. xxii. 19. xxxi. 4.—^h Dan. ii. 21. Rom. xiii. 1.

Or perverse] Distorted, leading to obstinacy.

Verse 9. They are all plain. Straight forward, over against every man, level to every capacity. This is true of all that concerns the salvation of the soul.

To them that find knowledge. When a man gets the knowledge of himself, then he sees all the threatenings of God to be right. When he obtains the knowledge of God in Christ, then he finds that all the promises of God are right—yea and amen.

Verse 10. Receive my instruction, and not silver. A Hebrew idiom; receive my instruction in preference to silver.

Verse 12. I wisdom dwell with prudence. Prudence is defined, wisdom applied to practice; so wherever true wisdom is, it will lead to action, and its activity will be always in reference to the accomplishment of the best ends by the use of the most appropriate means. Hence comes what is here called knowledge of witty inventions, "I have found out knowledge and contrivance."

Verse 13. The fear of the Lord is to hate evil. As it is impossible to hate evil without loving good; and love to goodness will lead a man to do what is right in the sight of God; hence this implies the sum and substance of true religion, which is here termed the fear of the Lord.

Verse 14. Counsel is mine. The wise man alone can give this counsel; and he can give it only as continually receiving instruction from God: for this divine wisdom can say, TUSHIYAH, substance, reality, essence, all belong to me: I am the Fountain whence all are derived.

And sound wisdom. This is a totally false translation: tushiyah means essence, substance, reality; the source and substance of good.

I have strength. Speaking still of wisdom, as communicating rays of its light to man, it enables him to bring every thing to his aid; to construct machines by which one man can do the work of hundreds.

Verse 15. By me kings reign. Every wise and prudent king is such through the influence of divine wisdom. And just laws and their righteous administration come from this source.

Verse 17. I love them that love me. If the heart embraces this wisdom, follows this divine teaching, and gives itself to God, his love will be shed abroad in it by the influence of the Holy Spirit. Thus we love God because he hath first loved us; and the more we love him, the more we shall feel of his love, which will enable us to love him yet more and more; and thus we may go on increasing to eternity.

And those that seek me early shall find me. Not merely 17 'I love them that love me; and 'those that seek me early shall find me.

18 'Riches and honour are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness.

19 'My fruit is better than gold; yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver.

20 I 'lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment:

21 That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance: and I will fill their treasures.

22 'The LORD possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old.

23 'I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was.

24 When there were no depths, I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water.

25 'Before the mountains were settled, before the hills was I brought forth:

26 While as yet he had not made the earth, nor the 'fields, nor 'the highest part of the dust of the world.

betimes in the morning, though he who does so shall find it greatly to his advantage; but early in life—in youth, and as near as possible to the first dawn of reason. As the first-fruits always belong to God, youth is God's time; the time in which, to sincere youthful seekers, he pours out his benefits with great profusion.

Verse 18. Riches and honour are with me] Often the wise, prudent, and discreet man arrives literally to riches and honour; but this is not always the case. But there are other riches of which he never fails; and these seem to be what Solomon has particularly in view, durable riches and righteousness; the treasure deposited by God in earthen vessels.

Verse 20. I lead in the way of righteousness] Nothing but the teaching that comes from God by his word and Spirit can do this.

Verse 22. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way] Wisdom is not acquired by the Divine Being; man, and even angels, learn it by slow and progressive degrees; but in God it is as eternally inherent as any other essential attribute of his nature.

Verse 23. I was set up from everlasting] All the schemes, plans, and circumstances, relative to creation, government, providence, and to all being, material, animal, and intellectual, were conceived in the divine mind, by the divine wisdom, from eternity, or ever the earth was.

Verse 24. When there were no depths] Before the original chaotic mass was formed.

I was brought forth] "I was produced as by labouring throes." Possibly the heathen poets derived their idea of Minerva (wisdom) being born of Jupiter's brain, from some such high poetic personification as that in the text.

Verse 26. The highest part of the dust of the world.] "The first particle of matter." The prima materia, the primitive atom. All these verses (8-29) are a periphrasis for I existed before creation; consequently before time was. I dwelt in God as a principle which might be communicated in its influences to intellectual beings when formed.

Verse 27. When he prepared the heavens, I was there] For there is no part of the creation of God in which wisdom, skill, contrivance, are more manifest than in the construction of the visible heavens.

When he set a compass upon the face of the depth] Does not this refer to the establishment of the law of gravitation? by which all the particles of matter, tending to a common centre, would produce in all bodies the orbicular form, which we see them have; so that even the waters are not only retained within their boundaries, but are subjected to the orbicular form, in their great aggregate of seas, as other parts of matter are.

Verse 28. The clouds above] "The ethereal regions," taking in the whole of the atmosphere, with all its meteors, clouds, vapours, &c.

27 When he prepared the heavens, I was there: when he set 'a compass upon the face of the depth.

28 When he established the clouds above: when he strengthened the fountains of the deep:

29 'When he gave to the sea his decree, that the waters should not pass his commandment: when 'he appointed the foundations of the earth:

30 'Then I was by him, as one brought up with him: 'and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him:

31 Rejoicing in the habitable part of his earth; and 'my delights were with the sons of men.

32 Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children: for 'blessed are they that keep my ways.

33 Hear instruction, and be wise, and refuse it not.

34 'Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my doors.

35 For whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall 'obtain 'favour of the LORD.

36 But he that sinneth against me 'wrongeth his own soul: all they that hate me love death.

Verse 29. When he gave to the sea his decree] When he assigned its limits, adjusted its saltiness, and proportioned the extent of the surface to the quantity of vapours to be raised from it, for the irrigation of the terrene surface.

The foundations of the earth] Those irreversible laws by which all its motions are governed.

Verse 30. Then I was with him, as one brought up] Amon, a nursing, a darling child. This is poetical, and highly figurative; and they who think they find the deity of Jesus Christ in these metaphors should be very cautious how they apply such terms as these.

Rejoicing always before him] All the images in this verse are borrowed from the state and circumstances of a darling, affectionate, playful child.

Verse 31. Rejoicing in the habitable part of his earth] There God displays especially his wisdom in ordering and directing human beings, and in providing for their wants.

My delights were with the sons of men.] This divine wisdom, as it delighted in the creation of man, so it continues to delight in his instruction.

Verse 32. Now therefore] Since I have the happiness of the children of Adam so much at heart, hearken unto me: and this is for your own interest, for blessed are they who keep my ways.

Verse 34. Watching daily at my gates] Wisdom is represented as having a school for the instruction of men; and seems to point out some of the most forward of her scholars coming, through their intense desire to learn, even before the gates were opened, and waiting there for admission, that they might hear every word that was uttered, and not lose one accent of the heavenly teaching.

Verse 35. Whoso findeth me] The wisdom that comes from God, teaching to avoid evil and cleave to that which is good; findeth life—gets that knowledge which qualifies him to answer the purposes for which he was made; for he is quickened with Christ, and made a partaker of the divine life.

Verse 36. Wrongeth his own soul] It is not Satan, it is not sin, properly speaking, that hurts him; it is himself.

Love death.] They do it in effect, if not in fact; for as they love sin, that leads to death, so they may be justly said to love death, the wages of sin. He that works in this case works for wages; and he must love the wages, seeing he labours so hard in the work.

I am thoroughly satisfied that this chapter speaks not one word either about the divine or human nature of Christ, much less of any eternal filiation of his divinity. And I am fully persuaded, had there not been a preconceived creed, no soul of man, by fair criticism, would have ever found out that fond opinion of the eternal sonship of the divine nature, which so many commentators persuade us they find here. As to the Fathers in general, they were not all agreed on this subject, some supposing Christ, others the Holy Spirit, was meant in this chapter. But of these we may safely state that there is not a truth in the most orthodox creed, that cannot be proved by their authority, nor a heresy that has disgraced the Romish Church, that may not challenge them as its abettors. In points of doctrines, their authority is, with me, nothing. The word of GOD alone contains my creed. I have been shocked with reading over some things that have been lately written on the subject. I have said in my heart, They have taken away my ETERNAL LORD, and I know not where they have laid him. I cannot believe their doctrine; I never did; I hope I never shall. I believe in the holy Trinity; in three Persons in the Godhead; of which none is before or after another. I believe JEHOVAH, JESUS, the HOLY GHOST to be one infinite, eternal GODHEAD, subsisting ineffably in three Persons. I believe Jesus the Christ to be, as to his divine nature, as unoriginated and eternal as JEHOVAH himself; and with the Holy Ghost to be one infinite Godhead, neither Person being created, begotten, nor proceeding, more than another: as to its essence, but one TRINITY, in an infinite, eternal, and inseparable UNITY. And this TRIUNE GOD is the object of my faith, my adoration, and my confidence. But I believe not in an eternal sonship or generation of the divine nature of Jesus Christ. Here I have long stood, here I now stand, and here I trust to stand in the hour of death, in the day of judgment, and to all eternity. [See supplemental note on Luke i. 35; Heb. i., &c.]

CHAPTER IX.

Wisdom builds her house, makes her provision for a great feast, calls her guests, and exhorts them to partake after entertainment, 1-6. Different admonitions relative to the acquisition of Wisdom, 7-12. The character and conduct of a bad woman, 13-18.

WISDOM hath ^a builded her house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars:

2 ^b She hath killed ^c her beasts; ^d she hath mingled her wine; she hath also furnished her table.

3 She hath ^e sent forth her maidens: ^f she crieth ^g upon the highest places of the city.

4 ^h Whoso ⁱ is simple, let him turn in hither: ^j as for him that wanteth understanding, she saith to him,

5 ^k Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled.

6 Forsake the foolish, and live; and go in the way of understanding.

7 He that reproveth a scorner getteth to himself shame: and he that rebuketh a wicked man getteth himself a blot.

8 ^l Reprove not a scorner, lest he hate thee: ^m rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee.

9 Give instruction to a wise man and he will be yet wiser: teach a just man, ⁿ and he will increase in learning.

10 ^o The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom: and the knowledge of the Holy is understanding.

11 ^p For by me thy days shall be multiplied, and the years of thy life shall be increased.

12 ^q If thou be wise, thou shalt be wise for thyself: but ^r if thou scornest, thou alone shalt bear it.

13 ^s A foolish woman is clamorous: ^t she is simple, and knoweth nothing.

14 For she sitteth at the door of her house, on a seat ^u in the high places of the city,

15 To call passengers who go right on their ways:

16 ^v Whoso ^w is simple, let him turn in hither: and as for him that wanteth understanding, she saith to him,

17 ^x Stolen waters are sweet, and bread ^y eaten in secret is pleasant, 18 But he knoweth not that ^z the dead are there; and that her guests are in the depths of hell.

Verse 1. Wisdom hath builded her house] The eternal counsel of God has framed the universe.

She hath hewn out her seven pillars] Every thing has been so constructed as to exhibit a scene of grandeur, stability, and durability.

Verse 2. She hath killed her beasts] God has made the most ample provision for the innumerable tribes of animal and intellectual beings, which people the whole vortex of created nature.

Verse 3. She hath sent forth her maidens] It is a custom to the present day, in Asiatic countries, to send their invitations to guests by a company of females, preceded by eunuchs: they go to the doors of the invited, and deliver their message.

Verse 4. Whoso is simple] Let the young, heedless, and giddy, attend to my teaching.

Him that wanteth understanding] Literally, he that wanteth a heart; who is without courage, is feeble and fickle, and easily drawn aside from the holy commandment.

Verse 5. Come, eat of my bread] Not only receive my instructions, but act according to my directions.

Drink of the wine—I have mingled.] Enter into my counsels; be not contented with superficial knowledge on any subject, where any thing deeper may be attained. Look into the principles on which they were formed; investigate their nature, examine their properties, acquaint thyself with their relations, connections, influences, and various uses.

Verse 6. Forsake the foolish] For the companion of fools must be a fool.

And live] Answer the end for which thou wast born.

Verse 7. He that reproveth a scorner] The person who mocks at sacred things; the libertine, the infidel; who turns the most serious things into ridicule, and, by his wit, often succeeds in rendering the person who reproves him ridiculous.

Verse 9. Give instruction to a wise man] Literally, give to the wise, and he will be wise. Whatever you give to such, they reap profit from it. They are like the bee, they extract honey from every flower. [saints.]

Verse 10. The knowledge of the holy] Sanctum, of the Verse 11. For by me thy days shall be multiplied] Vice shortens human life, by a necessity of consequence: and by the same, righteousness lengthens it.

Verse 12. If thou be wise] It is thy own interest to be religious. Though thy example may be very useful to thy neighbours and friends, yet the chief benefit is to thyself. But if thou scorn—refuse to receive the doctrines of wisdom, and die in thy sins, thou alone shalt suffer the vengeance of an offended God.

Verse 13. A foolish woman is clamorous] Vain, empty women are those that make most noise. And she that is full of clamour, has generally little or no sense.

Verse 14. For she sitteth at the door of her house] Her conduct here marks at once her folly, impudence, and poverty.

Verse 16. Whoso is simple, let him turn in hither] FOLLY or PREASURE, here personified, uses the very same expressions as those employed by Wisdom, ver. 4.

Verse 17. Stolen waters are sweet] I suppose this to be a proverbial mode of expression, importing that illicit pleasures are sweeter than those which are legal.

Verse 18. But he knoweth not that the dead are there] He does not know that it was in this way the first apostates from God and truth walked. Rephaim; the GIANTS. The sons of men, the earth-born, to distinguish them from the sons of God, those who were born from above.

Her guests are in the depths of hell.] Those who have been drawn out of the way of understanding by profligacy have in general lost their lives, if not their souls, by their folly.

CHAPTER X.

It is impossible to give summaries of such chapters as these, where almost every verse contains a separate subject. Our common Version, not being able to exhibit the contents as usual, simply says, "From this chapter to the five and twentieth are sundry observations upon moral virtues, and their opposite vices." In general the wise man states in this chapter the difference between the wise and the foolish, the righteous and the wicked, the diligent and the idle. He speaks also of love and hatred, of the good and the evil tongue, or of the slanderer and the peacemaker.

THE proverbs of Solomon. * A wise son maketh a glad father: but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother.

2 ^b Treasures of wickedness profit nothing: but righteousness delivereth from death.

3 ^a The LORD will not suffer the soul of the righteous to famish: but he casteth away ^a the substance of the wicked.

4 ^a He becometh poor that dealeth with a slack hand: but ^a the hand of the diligent maketh rich.

5 He that gathereth in summer is a wise son: but he that sleepeth in harvest is ^a a son that causeth shame.

6 Blessings are upon the head of the just: but ^a violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

7 ^a The memory of the just is blessed: but the name of the wicked shall rot.

Verse 1. The proverbs of Solomon] The preceding nine chapters can only be considered as an introduction, if indeed they may be said to make even a part, of the proverbs of Solomon, which appear to commence only at the tenth chapter.

A wise son maketh a glad father] The parallels in this and several of the succeeding chapters are those which Bishop Louth calls the antithetic; when two lines correspond with each other by an opposition of terms and sentiments; when the second is contrasted with the first; sometimes in expression, sometimes in sense only.

Verse 2. Treasures of wickedness] Property gained by wicked means.

Delivereth from death.] Treasures gained by robbery often bring their possessors to an untimely death; but those gained by righteous dealing bring with them no such consequences.

Verse 3. But he casteth away the substance of the wicked.] The righteous have God for their feeder; and because of his infinite bounty, they can never famish for want of the bread of life. On the contrary, the wicked are often, in the course of his providence, deprived of the property of which they make a bad use.

Verse 4. He becometh poor] God has ordered, in the course of his providence, that he who will not work shall not eat. And he always blesses the work of the industrious

Verse 5. He that gathereth in summer] All the work of the field should be done in the season suitable to it.

Verse 6. Violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.] Their own violent dealings shall be visited upon them.

8 The wise in heart will receive commandments: but ^a a prating fool ^a shall fall.

9 ^a He that walketh uprightly walketh surely: but he that perverteth his ways shall be known.

10 ^a He that winketh with the eye causeth sorrow: but a prating fool ^a shall fall.

11 ^a The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life: but ^a violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

12 Hatred stirreth up strifes: but ^a love covereth all sins.

13 In the lips of him that hath understanding wisdom is found: but ^a a rod is for the back of him that is void of ^a understanding.

14 Wise men lay up knowledge: but ^a the mouth of the foolish is near destruction.

15 ^a The rich man's wealth is his strong city: the destruction of the poor is their poverty.

Verse 7. The memory of the just is blessed] Or, is a blessing.

But the name of the wicked shall rot.] The very name of the wicked is as offensive as putrid carrion.

Verse 9. He that walketh uprightly] The upright man is always safe; he has not two characters to support; he goes straight forward, and is never afraid of detection, because he has never been influenced by hypocrisy or deceit.

Verse 10. He that winketh with the eye] Instead of the latter clause, the Septuagint has, "but he that reproveth with freedom, maketh peace." A faithful, open reproof of sin is more likely to promote the peace of society than the passing it by slightly, or taking no notice of it; for if the wicked turn to God at the reproof, the law of peace will soon be established in his heart, and the law of kindness will flow from his tongue.

Verse 11. The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life] The vein of lives; an allusion to the great aorta, which conveys the blood from the heart to every part of the body.

Verse 12. Hatred stirreth up strifes] It seeks for occasions to provoke enmity. It delights in broils. On the contrary love conciliates; removes aggravations; puts the best construction on every thing; and pours water, not oil, upon the flame.

Verse 13. A rod is for the back of him] The rod is a most powerful instrument of knowledge. Judiciously applied, there is a lesson of profound wisdom in every twig.

Verse 14. Wise men lay up knowledge] They keep secret every thing that has a tendency to disturb domestic or 16 The labour of the righteous tendeth to life: the fruit of the wicked to sin.

17 He is in the way of life that keepeth instruction: but he that refuseth reproof ereth.

Verse 15. The rich man's wealth is his strong city] Behold a mystery in providence; there is not a rich man on earth but becomes such by means of the poor!

The destruction of the poor is their poverty.] Men in abject poverty never arise out of this pit. They have no nucleus about which property may aggregate.

Verse 16. The labour of the righteous] The good man labours that he may be able to support life; this is his first object: and then to have something to divide with the poor; this is his next object.

The fruit of the wicked to sin.] God's blessings are cursed to him.

Verse 17. He is in the way of life] The truly religious man accumulates knowledge that he may the better know how to live to God, and do most good among men.

Verse 18. He that hideth] This is a common case. Thus lying lips often cover the malevolence of a wicked heart.

Verse 19. In the multitude of words] It is impossible to speak much, and yet speak nothing but truth; and injure no man's character in the mean while.

Verse 20. The heart of the wicked is little worth.] Because it is his most hidden part, he vaunts of its honesty, goodness &c. Yes, yes; it is very honest and good, only the devil is in it! That is all.

Verse 22. The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich] Whatever we receive in the way of providence, has God's blessing in it, and will do us good. God's blessing gives simple enjoyment, and levies no tax upon the comfort.

Verse 23. It is as sport to a fool to do mischief] What a millstone weight of iniquity hangs about the necks of most of the jesters, facetious, and witty people!

Verse 24. The fear of the wicked] All that he has dreaded, and more than he has dreaded, shall come upon him. The 28 The hope of the righteous shall be gladness: but the expectation of the wicked shall perish.

29 The way of the Lord is strength to the upright: but destruction shall be to the workers of iniquity.

30 The righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth.

31 The mouth of the just bringeth forth wisdom: but the froward tongue shall be cut out.

32 The lips of the righteous know what is acceptable: but the mouth of the wicked speaketh frowardness.

righteous is always desiring more of the salvation of God, and God will exceed even his utmost desires.

Verse 25. As the whirlwind passeth] As tornadoes that sweep every thing away before them; so shall the wrath of God sweep away the wicked; it shall leave him neither branch nor root. But the righteous, being built on the eternal foundation shall never be shaken.

Verse 26. As vinegar to the teeth] The acid softening and dissolving the alkali of the bone, so as to impair their texture, and render them incapable of masticating; and as smoke affects the eyes, irritating their tender vessels, so as to give pain and prevent distinct vision; so the sluggard, the lounging, thriftless messenger, who never returns in time with the desired answer.

Verse 28. The expectation of the wicked shall perish.] A wicked man is always imposing on himself by the hope of God's mercy and final happiness; and he continues hoping, till he dies without receiving that mercy which alone would entitle him to that glory.

Verse 29. The way of the Lord is strength] In the path of obedience, the upright man ever finds his strength renewed; the more he labours, the stronger he grows.

Verse 30. The righteous shall never be removed] Because he is built on the eternal foundation.

Verse 31. The froward tongue shall be cut out.] This probably alludes to the punishment of cutting out the tongue for blasphemy, treasonable speeches, profane swearing, or such like. Were the tongue of every shrew or scold to be extracted, we should soon have much less noise in the world.

Verse 32. The lips of the righteous know what is acceptable] And what they believe to be most pleasing and most profitable, that they speak; but the wicked man knows as well what is perverse, and that he speaketh forth.

CHAPTER XI.

A parallel of the advantages of the righteous and wise, opposed to the miseries of the wicked and the foolish. True and false riches.

A ¹FALSE ^bbalance is abomination to the LORD: but ^aa just weight is his delight.

2 ^aWhen pride cometh, then cometh shame: but with the lowly is wisdom.

3 ^aThe integrity of the upright shall guide them; but the perverseness of transgressors shall destroy them.

4 ^aRiches profit not in the day of wrath: but ^arighteousness delivereth from death.

5 The righteousness of the perfect shall ^bdirect his way: but the wicked shall fall by his own wickedness.

6 The righteousness of the upright shall deliver them: but ^atransgressors shall be taken in their own naughtiness.

7 ^aWhen a wicked man dieth, his expectation shall perish: and the hope of unjust men perisheth.

8 ^aThe righteous is delivered out of trouble, and the wicked cometh in his stead.

9 An ^ahypocrite with his mouth destroyeth his neighbour: but through knowledge shall the just be delivered.

10 ^aWhen it goeth well with the righteous, the city rejoiceth: and when the wicked perish, there is shouting.

11 ^aBy the blessing of the upright the city is exalted: but it is overthrown by the mouth of the wicked.

Verse 1. A false balance is abomination] This refers to the balance itself deceitfully constructed, so that it is sooner turned at one end than at the other.

But a just weight] Eben shelemah, the perfect stone, probably because weights were made of stone: see the law, Dent. xxv. 13-35.

Verse 2. When pride cometh] The proud man thinks much more of himself than any other can do; and, expecting to be treated according to his own supposed worth, which treatment he seldom meets with, he is repeatedly mortified, ashamed, confounded, and rendered indignant.

With the lowly] The humble man looks for nothing but justice; has the meanest opinion of himself; and can never be disappointed, but in receiving praise which he neither expects nor desires.

Verse 4. Riches in the day of wrath] They cannot purchase the remission of sins, nor turn aside the wrath of God when that is poured out upon the opulent transgressor.

Verse 7. When a wicked man dieth] HOPE was not made for the wicked; and yet they are the very persons that most abound in it! But their hope goes no farther than the grave. There the wicked man's expectation is cut off, and his hope perishes. But to the saint, the penitent, and the cross-bearers in general, what a treasure is hope!

Verse 8. The wicked cometh in his stead] Often God makes this distinction; in public calamities and in sudden accidents he rescues the righteous, and leaves the wicked, who has filled up the measure of his iniquities, to be seized by the hand of death.

Verse 9. An hypocrite with his mouth] Chaneph might be better translated infidel than hypocrite. The latter is one that pretends to religion; that uses it for secular purposes. The former is one who disbelieves divine revelation, and accordingly is polluted, and lives in pollution. This is properly the force of the original word.

Verse 10. When it goeth well] An upright, pious, sensible man is a great blessing to the neighbourhood, where he resides, by his example, his advice, and his prayers. But when the wicked perish, who has been a general curse by the contagion of his example and conversation, there is not only no regret expressed for his decease, but a general joy because God has removed him.

12 He that is ^avoid of wisdom despiseth his neighbour: but a man of understanding holdeth his peace.

13 ^aA talebearer revealeth secrets: but he that is of a faithful spirit concealeth the matter.

14 ^aWhere no counsel is, the people fall: but in the multitude of counsellors there is safety.

15 ^aHe that is surety for a stranger ^ashall smart for it: and he that hateth ^asuretiship is sure.

16 ^aA gracious woman retaineth honour: and strong men retain riches.

17 ^aThe merciful man doeth good to his own soul: but he that is cruel troubleth his own flesh.

18 The wicked worketh a deceitful work: ^abut to him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward.

19 As righteousness tendeth to life: so he that pursueth evil pursueth it to his own death.

20 They that are of a froward heart are abomination to the LORD: but such as are upright in their way are his delight.

21 ^aThough hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished: but ^athe seed of the righteous shall be delivered.

22 As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which ^ais without discretion.

Verse 12. He that is void of wisdom] A foolish man dwells on the defects of his neighbour, and is sure to bring them into the most prominent view. But a man of understanding—a prudent, sensible man, hides those defects wherever he can, and puts the most charitable construction on those which he cannot conceal.

Verse 13. A talebearer] Holech rachil, the walking busy-body, the trader in scandal.

Revealeth secrets] Whatever was confided to him he is sure to publish abroad. The word means a hawker, or travelling chapman. Such are always great newsmongers; and will tell even their own secrets rather than have nothing to say.

Verse 15. He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it] He shall find evil upon evil in it.

Verse 16. A gracious woman retaineth honour] A good wife is an honour to her husband; and a bad wife is her husband's reproach: if this be so, how careful should a man be whom he marries?

Verse 17. The merciful man doeth good to his own soul] No man can show an act of disinterested mercy without benefiting his own soul, by improving his moral feeling.

But he that is cruel troubleth his own flesh] We seldom see a peevish, fretful, vindictive man either in good health, or good plight of body. "He frets his flesh off his bones."

Verse 18. Worketh a deceitful work] An unstable work; nothing is durable that he does, except his crimes.

Verse 19. Righteousness tendeth to life] True godliness promotes health, and is the best means of lengthening out life: but wicked men live not out half their days.

Verse 21. Though hand join in hand] Let them confederate as they please, to support each other, justice will take care that they escape not punishment.

Verse 22. A jewel of gold in a swine's snout] That is, beauty in a woman destitute of good breeding and modest carriage, is as becoming as a gold ring on the snout of a swine. In Asiatic countries the nose jewel is very common: to this the text alludes.

Verse 24. There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth] The bountiful man, who gives to the poor, never turning away his face from any one in distress, the Lord blesses his property, and the bread is multiplied in his hand.

Verse 25. The liberal soul shall be made fat] He who gives to the distressed, in the true spirit of charity, shall get an hundred fold from God's mercy.

He that watereth] A man who distributes in the right spirit gets more good himself than the poor man does who receives the bounty.

Verse 26. He that withholdeth corn] Who refuses to sell because he hopes for a dearth, and then he can make his own price.

The people shall curse him] Yes, and God shall curse him also; and if he do not turn and repent, he will get God's curse, and the curse of the poor, which will be a canker in his money during time, and in his soul throughout eternity.

Verse 30. The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life] "The tree of lives." It is like that tree which grew in the paradise of God; increasing the bodily and mental vigour of those who ate of it.

He that winneth souls is wise.] Wisdom seeks to reclaim the wanderers; and he who is influenced by wisdom will do the same.

Verse 31. Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth, &c.] The Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic read this verse as follows: "And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" And this St. Peter quotes literatim, 1st Epist. iv. 18, where see the note.

Verse 1. Whoso loveth instruction] Discipline or correction; correction is the way to knowledge.

But he that hateth reproof is brutish.] He is a bear; and expects no more benefit from correction than the ox does from the goad.

Verse 2. A good man obtaineth favour] While he walks in the path of obedience he increases in goodness, and consequently in the favour of the Lord.

Verse 3. A man shall not be established by wickedness] Evil is always variable; it has no fixed principle, except the root that is in the human heart: and even that is ever assuming new forms. Nothing is permanent but goodness; and that is unchangeable, because it comes from God.

Verse 4. A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband] A strong woman. Our word virtue (virtus) is derived from vir, a man; and as man is the noblest of God's creatures, virtue expresses what is becoming to man; what is noble, courageous, and dignified: and as vir, a man, comes from vis, power or strength, so it implies what is strong and vigorous in principle: and as in uncivilized life strength and courage were considered the very highest, because apparently the most necessary, of all virtues; hence the term itself might have become the denomination of all excellent moral qualities; and is now applied to whatever constitutes the system of morality and moral duties. In some parts of the world, however, where arts and sciences have made little progress, strength is one of the first qualifications of a wife, where the labours of the field are appointed to them. It is certain that in ancient times the women in Judea did some of the severest work in the fields, such as drawing water from the wells, and watering the flocks, &c. On this account, I think, the words may be taken literally; and especially when we add another consideration, that a woman healthy, and of good muscular powers, is the most likely to produce and properly rear up a healthy offspring; and children of this kind are a crown to their parents.

Is as rottenness in his bones.] Does not this refer to one who by her incontinence not only maketh her husband better than he that honoureth himself, and lacketh bread.

10 ^a A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast: but the ^b tender mercies of the wicked are cruel.

11 ^c He that tilleth his land shall be satisfied with bread: but he that followeth vain persons ^d is void of understanding.

12 The wicked desireth ^e the net of evil men: but the root of the righteous yieldeth fruit.

13 ^f The ^g wicked is snared by the transgression of his lips: ^h but the just shall come out of trouble.

14 ⁱ A man shall be satisfied with good by the fruit of his mouth: ^j and the recompence of a man's hands shall be rendered unto him.

15 ^k The way of the fool is right in his own eyes: but he that hearkeneth unto counsel is wise.

16 ^l A fool's wrath is ^m presently known: but a prudent man covereth shame.

ashamed, but contracts and communicates such diseases as bring rottenness into the bones?

Verse 7. The wicked are overthrown.] Seldom does God give such a long life or numerous offspring.

But the house of the righteous shall stand.] God blesses their progeny, and their families continue long in the earth, whereas the wicked seldom have many generations in a direct line.

Verse 9. He that is despised, and hath a servant.] I believe the Vulgate gives the true sense of this verse: "Better is the poor man who provides for himself, than the proud who is destitute of bread." This needs no comment.

Verse 10. A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast.] One principal characteristic of a holy man is mercy: cruelty is unknown to him; and his benevolence extends to the meanest of the brute creation. He considers what is best for the comfort, ease, health, and life of the beast that serves him; and he knows that God himself careth for oven: and one of the ten commandments provides a seventh part of time to be allotted for the rest of labouring beasts as well as for men.

The tender mercies of the wicked are cruel.] Are violent, without mercy, ruthless. The wicked, influenced by Satan, can show no other disposition than what is in their master.

Verse 11. He that tilleth his land.] God's blessing will be in the labour of the honest agriculturist.

But he that followeth vain persons.] He who, while he should be cultivating his ground, preparing for a future crop, or reaping his harvest, associates with fowlers, coursers of hares, hunters of foxes, or those engaged in any champaign amusements, is void of understanding; and I have known several such come to beggary.

Verse 12. The wicked desireth the net of evil men.] They applaud their ways, and are careful to imitate them in their wiles.

Verse 13. The wicked is snared by the transgression of his lips.] A man who deals in lies and false oaths will sooner or later be found out to his own ruin.

Verse 14. A fool's wrath is presently known.] "A fool's bolt is soon shot."

A weak-minded man has no self-government; he is easily angered, and generally speaks whatever comes first to his mind.

Verse 19. A lying tongue is but for a moment.] Truth

19 The lip of truth shall be established for ever: but a lying tongue is but for a moment.

20 Deceit is in the heart of them that imagine evil: but to the counsellors of peace is joy.

21 There shall no evil happen to the just: but the wicked shall be filled with mischief.

22 ^a Lying lips are abomination to the Lord: but they that deal truly are his delight.

23 ^b A prudent man concealeth knowledge: but the heart of fools proclaimeth foolishness.

24 ^c The hand of the diligent shall bear rule: but the ^d slothful shall be under tribute.

25 ^e Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop: but ^f a good word maketh it glad.

26 The righteous is more ^g excellent than his neighbour: but the way of the wicked seduceth them.

27 The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting: but the substance of a diligent man is precious.

stands for ever; because its foundation is indestructible: but falsehood may soon be detected; and, though it gain credit for a while, it had that credit because it was supposed to be truth.

Verse 21. There shall no evil happen to the just.] Whatever occurs to a righteous man God turns to his advantage. But, on the other hand, the wicked are filled with mischief: they are hurt, grieved, and wounded, by every occurrence; and nothing turns to their profit.

Verse 23. A prudent man concealeth knowledge.] "If a fool hold his peace he may pass for a wise man."

Verse 24. The hand of the diligent shall bear rule.] And why? because by his own industry he is independent, and every such person is respected wherever found.

Verse 25. Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop.] Sorrow of heart, hopeless love, or a sense of God's displeasure—these prostrate the man, and he becomes a child before them.

But a good word maketh it glad.] A single good or favourable word will remove despondency.

Verse 26. The righteous is more excellent than his neighbour.] That is, if the neighbour be a wicked man. The spirit of the proverb lies here: The poor righteous man is more excellent than his sinful neighbour, though affluent and noble.

Verse 27. The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting.] Because he is a slothful man, he does not hunt for prey; therefore gets none, and cannot roast, that he may eat.

But the best sense of the original is: "The fraudulent man roasteth not that which he took in hunting," the justice of God snatching from his mouth what he had acquired unrighteously.

But the substance of a diligent man.] One who by honest industry acquires all his property—is precious, because it has the blessing of God on it.

Verse 28. In the way of righteousness is life.] Lives; life temporal, and life eternal.

And in the pathway thereof there is no death.] Not only do the general precepts and promises of God lead to life eternal and promote life temporal; but every duty, every act of faith, patience of hope, and labour of love, though requiring much self-abasement, self-denial, and often an extension of corporal strength, all lead to life. For in every case, in every particular, "the path of duty is the way of safety."

Verse 1. A wise son heareth his father's instruction] The child that has had a proper nurturing, will profit by his father's counsels; but the child that is permitted to fulfil its own will, and have its own way, will jest at the reproaches of its parents.

Verse 3. He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life] How often have the foolish, headstrong, and wicked forfeited their lives by the treasonable or blasphemous words they have spoken!

But he that openeth wide his lips] It has often been remarked that God has given us two EYES, that we may see much; two EARS, that we may hear much; but has given us but ONE tongue; and that fenced in with teeth, to indicate that though we hear and see much, we should speak but little.

Verse 4. The soul of the sluggard desireth, and hath nothing] We often hear religious people expressing a desire to have more of the divine life, and yet never get forward in it. How is this? The reason is, they desire, but do not stir themselves up to lay hold upon the Lord. They seek to enter in at the strait gate, but are not able, because they do not strive.

Verse 7. There is that maketh himself rich] That labours hard to acquire money, yet hath nothing; his excessive covetousness not being satisfied with what he possesses, nor permitting him to enjoy with comfort what he has acquired.

There is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches.] As the words are here in the conjugation which implies reflex action, or the action performed on one's self, and often signifies feigning or pretending to be what one is not, or not to be what one is; the words may be understood of persons who feign or pretend to be either richer or poorer than they really are, to accomplish some particular purpose.

Verse 8. The ransom of a man's life] Those who have riches have often much trouble with them; as they had much trouble to get them, so they have much trouble to keep them.

Verse 9. The light of the righteous rejoiceth] They shall have that measure of prosperity which shall be best for them; but the wicked, however prosperous for a time, shall be brought into desolation. Light and lamp in both cases may signify posterity. So 1 Kings xi. 36; and xv. 4.

Verse 10. By pride cometh contention] Perhaps there is not a quarrel among individuals in private life, nor a war among nations, that does not proceed from pride and ambition. It was to destroy this spirit of pride, that Jesus was manifest in the extreme of humility and humiliation among men.

Verse 11. Wealth gotten by vanity] Wealth that is not the result of honest industry and hard labour is seldom permanent.

Verse 12. Hope deferred maketh the heart sick] Delay in the gratification of hope pains the mind; the increase of the delay prostrates and sickens the heart; and if delay sickens the heart, ultimate disappointment kills it. But when the thing desired, hoped for, and expected comes, it is a tree of life, "the tree of lives;" it comforts and invigorates both body and soul.

Verse 13. Whoso despiseth the word] The revelation which God has in his mercy given to man, shall be destroyed; for there is no other way of salvation but that which it points out.

But he that feareth the commandment] That respects it so as to obey it, walking as this revelation directs, shall find it to be his highest interest, and shall be in peace or safety, as the Hebrew word may be translated.

Verse 14. The law of the wise is a fountain of life] "The law is to the wise man a fountain of life."

Verse 15. The way of transgressors is hard] Never was a truer saying; most sinners have more pain and difficulty to get their soul damned, than the righteous have, with all their cross-bearing, to get to the kingdom of heaven.

Verse 17. A wicked messenger] He that betrays the counsels of his government, or the interests of his country, will sooner or later fall into mischief; but he that faithfully and loyally fulfils his mission, shall produce honour and safety to the commonwealth.

Verse 20. He that walketh with wise men shall be wise] To walk with a person implies love and attachment; and it is impossible not to imitate those we love.

Verse 22. A good man leaveth an inheritance] He files many a prayer in heaven in their behalf, and his good example and advices are remembered and quoted from generation to generation. Besides, whatever property he left was honestly acquired, and well-gotten goods are permanent.

Verse 25. To the satisfying of his soul.] His desires are all moderate; he is contented with his circumstances, and is pleased with the lot which God is pleased to send. The wicked, though he use all shifts and expedients to acquire earthly good, not sticking even at rapine and wrong, is frequently in real want, and always dissatisfied with his portion.

Verse 1. Every wise woman buildeth her house.] By her prudent and industrious management she increases property in the family, furniture in the house, and food and raiment for her household. The thriftless wife acts differently, and the opposite is the result.

Verse 3. The mouth of the foolish is a rod of pride.] The reproofs of such a person are ill-judged and ill-timed, and generally are conveyed in such language as renders them not only ineffectual, but displeasing, and even irritating.

Verse 4. But much increase is by the strength of the ox.] The ox is the most profitable of all the beasts used in husbandry. Except merely for speed, he is almost in every respect superior to the horse.

Verse 6. A scorner seeketh wisdom.] I believe the scorner means in this book the man that despises the counsel of God; the infidel. Such may seek wisdom: but he never can find it, because he does not seek it where it is to be found; neither in the teaching of God's Spirit, nor in the revelation of his will.

Verse 7. When thou perceivest not—the lips of knowledge.] Never associate with a vain, empty fellow, when thou perceivest he can neither convey nor receive instruction.

bitterness of its soul." Under spiritual sorrow, the heart feels, the soul feels; all the animal nature feels and suffers. But when the peace of God is spoken to the troubled soul, the joy is indescribable; the whole man partakes of it. And a stranger to these religious feelings does not intermeddle with them; he does not understand them: indeed they may be even foolishness to him, because they are spiritually discerned.

Verse 12. There is a way which seemeth right unto a man.] This may be his easily besetting sin, the sin of his constitution, the sin of his trade. Or it may be his own false views of religion: he may have an imperfect repentance, a false faith, a very false creed; and he may persuade himself that he is in the direct way to heaven.

Verse 13. Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful.] Many a time is a smile forced upon the face, when the heart is in deep distress. And it is a hard task to put on the face of mirth when a man has a heavy heart.

Verse 14. The backslider in heart shall be filled with his own ways.] 1. Who is the backslider? The man who once walked in the ways of religion, but has withdrawn from them.

2. But who is the backslider in heart? Not he who was surprised and overcome by the power of temptation, and the weakness of his own heart. But he who drinks down iniquity with greediness: who loves sin as before he loved godliness.

his own ways; and a good man shall be satisfied from himself.

15 The simple believeth every word: but the prudent man looketh well to his going.

16 ^a A wise man feareth, and departeth from evil: but the fool rageth, and is confident.

17 He that is soon angry dealeth foolishly: and a man of wicked devices is hated.

18 The simple inherit folly: but the prudent are crowned with knowledge.

19 The evil bow before the good; and the wicked at the gates of the righteous.

20 ^b The poor is hated even of his own neighbour: but ^c the rich hath many friends.

21 He that despiseth his neighbour sinneth: ^d but he that hath mercy on the poor, happy is he.

22 Do they not err that devise evil? but mercy and truth shall be to them that devise good.

23 In all labour there is profit: but the talk of the lips tendeth only to penury.

24 The crown of the wise is their riches: but the foolishness of fools is folly.

25 ^e A true witness delivereth souls: but a deceitful witness speaketh lies.

^a Ch. xiii. 8.—^b Ch. xix. 7.—^c Heb. many are the lovers of the rich.—^d Ps. xli. 1. cxli. 9.—^e Ver. 5.—^f Ch. xiii. 14.—^g Ch. xvi. 32. James i. 19.—^h Heb. short of spirit.—ⁱ Ps. cxli. 10.—^j Ch. xii. 4.—^k Ch. xvii. 5. Matt. xxv. 40, 45.—See Job xxxi. 15, 16. Ch.

3. What are his own ways? Folly, sin, disappointment, and death; with the apprehension of the wrath of God, and the sharp twings of a guilty conscience.

4. What is implied in being filled with his own ways? Having his soul saturated with folly, sin, and disappointment.

And a good man shall be satisfied from himself.] 1. Who is the good man? The man whose heart is right with God, whose tongue corresponds to his heart, and whose actions correspond to both.

2. He shall be satisfied from himself—he shall have the testimony of his own conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, he has his conversation among men.

3. He shall have God's Spirit to testify with his spirit that he is the child of God. The Spirit of God in his conscience, and the testimony of God in his Bible, show him that he belongs to the heavenly family.

Verse 16. A wise man feareth. He knows that his sufficiency is of God; and he has that fear that causes him to depart from evil, which is a guardian to the love he feels. Love renders him cautious; the other makes him confident. His caution leads him from sin; his confidence leads him to God.

Verse 17. He that is soon angry. "Short of nostril:" because, when a man is angry, his nose is contracted, and drawn up towards his eyes.

Dealeth foolishly. He has no time for reflection; he is hurried on by his passions, speaks like a fool and acts like a madman.

Verse 19. The evil bow before the good. They are almost constrained to show them respect; and the wicked, who have wasted their substance with riotous living, bow before the gates of the righteous—of benevolent men, begging a morsel of bread.

Verse 20. But the rich hath many friends. Many who speak to him the language of friendship; but if they profess friendship because he is rich, there is not one real friend among them.

Verse 21. He that despiseth his neighbour sinneth. To despise a man because he has some natural blemish is unjust, cruel, and wicked. He is not the author of his own imperfections; they did not occur through his fault or folly; and if he could, he would not retain them.

But he that hath mercy on the poor. Who reproaches no man for his poverty or scanty intellect, but divides his bread 26 In the fear of the LORD is strong confidence; and his children shall have a place of refuge.

27 ^f The fear of the LORD is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death.

28 In the multitude of people is the king's honour: but in the want of people is the destruction of the prince.

29 ^g He that is slow to wrath is of great understanding: but he that is ^h hasty of spirit exalteth folly.

30 A sound heart is the life of the flesh: but ⁱ envy ^j the rottenness of the bones.

31 ^k He that oppresseth the poor reproacheth ^l his Maker: but he that honoureth him hath mercy on the poor.

32 The wicked is driven away in his wickedness: but ^m the righteous hath hope in his death.

33 Wisdom resteth in the heart of him that hath understanding; but ⁿ that which is in the midst of fools is made known.

34 Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach ^o to any people.

35 ^p The king's favour is toward a wise servant: but his wrath is against him that causeth shame.

with the hungry—happy is he; the blessing of God, and of them that were ready to perish, shall come upon him.

Verse 23. In all labour there is profit. In proportion as a man labours, so will be his profit: but he who talks much labours little. And a man of words is seldom a man of deeds.

Verse 24. But the foolishness of fools is folly. The fool, from his foolishness, produces acts of folly.

Verse 26. In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence. From this, and from genuine Christian experience, we find that the fear of God is highly consistent with the strongest confidence in his mercy and goodness.

Verse 27. The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life. Another allusion to the great aorta which carries the blood from the heart to all the extremities of the body.

Verse 29. That is hasty of spirit. "The short of spirit;" one that is easily irritated; and, being in a passion, he is agitated so as to be literally short of breath.

Verse 30. A sound heart is the life of the flesh. A healthy state of the blood, and a proper circulation of that stream of life, is the grand cause, in the hand of God, of health and longevity.

Verse 31. He that oppresseth the poor reproacheth his Maker. Because the poor, or comparatively poor, are, in the order of God, a part of the inhabitants of the earth; and every man who loves God will show mercy to the poor, for with this God is peculiarly delighted.

Verse 32. The wicked is driven away in his wickedness. He does not leave life cheerfully. Poor soul! Thou wilt not go off; but God will drive thee.

But the righteous hath hope in his death. He rejoiceth to depart and be with Christ; to him death is gain; he is not reluctant to go—he flies at the call of God.

Verse 34. But sin is a reproach to any people. Which would be better rendered, And mercy is a sin-offering for the people. The plain meaning of the original seems to be, A national disposition to mercy appears in the sight of God as a continual sin-offering. Not that it atones for the sin of the people; but, as a sin-offering is pleasing in the sight of the God of mercy, so is a merciful disposition in a nation.

Verse 35. The king's favour is toward a wise servant. The king should have an intelligent man for his minister; a man of deep sense, sound judgment, and of a feeling, merciful disposition. He who has not the former will plunge the nation into difficulties; and he who has not the latter will embark her in disastrous wars.

CHAPTER XV.

The soft answer. Useful correction. Stability of the righteous. The contented mind. The slothful man. The fool. The covetous. The impious. The wicked opposed to the righteous; to the diligent; and to the man who fears the Lord.

A 'SOFT answer turneth away wrath: but grievous words stir up anger.

2 The tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright: ' but the mouth of fools ' poureth out foolishness.

3 ' The eyes of the LORD are in every place, beholding the evil and the good.

4 ' A wholesome tongue is a tree of life: but per- verseness therein is a breach in the spirit.

5 ' A fool despiseth his father's instruction: ' but he that regardeth reproof is prudent.

6 In the house of the righteous is much treasure: but in the revenues of the wicked is trouble.

7 The lips of the wise disperse knowledge: but the heart of the foolish doeth not so.

8 ' The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD: but the prayer of the upright is his delight.

9 The way of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD; but he loveth him that ' followeth after righteousness.

10 ' Correction is ' grievous unto him that for- sakes the way; and ' he that hateth reproof shall die.

11 ' Hell and destruction are before the LORD; how much more then ' the hearts of the children of men?

12 ' A scorner loveth not one that reproveth him; neither will he go unto the wise.

Verse 1. A soft answer. Gentleness will often disarm the most furious, where positive derangement has not taken place.

Verse 2. Useth knowledge aright. This is very difficult to know:—when to speak, and when to be silent; what to speak, and what to leave unspoken; the manner that is best and most suitable to the occasion, the subject, the circum- stances, and the persons. Even wise counsel may be foolishly given.

Verse 3. The eyes of the Lord are in every place. He not only sees all things, by his omnipresence, but his providence is every where. The consideration that his eye is in every place should have a tendency to appal those whose hearts are not right before him; and the consideration that his providence is every where, should encourage the upright, and all who may be in perilous or distressing circumstances.

Verse 4. A wholesome tongue is a tree of life. Here again is an allusion to the paradisaical tree, "the tree of lives."

Verse 8. The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination. Even the most sedulous attendance on the ordinances of God, is an abomination to the Lord, if the heart be not right with him, and the observance do not flow from a principle of pure devotion. No religious acts will do in place of holiness to the Lord.

The prayer of the upright is his delight. What a motive to be upright; and what a motive to the upright to pray!

Verse 11. Hell and destruction. Hades, the invisible world, the place of separate spirits till the resurrection; and 13 ' A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance: but ' by sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken.

14 The heart of him that hath understanding seeketh knowledge: but the mouth of fools feedeth on foolishness.

15 All the days of the afflicted are evil: ' but he that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast.

16 ' Better is little with the fear of the LORD, than great treasure and trouble therewith.

17 ' Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith.

18 ' A wrathful man stirreth up strife: but, he that is slow to anger appeaseth strife.

19 ' The way of the slothful man is as an hedge of thorns: but the way of the righteous ' is made plain.

20 ' A wise son maketh a glad father: but a foolish man despiseth his mother.

21 ' Folly is joy to him that is ' destitute of wisdom: ' but a man of understanding walketh uprightly.

22 ' Without counsel purposes are disappointed: but in the multitude of counsellors they are estab- lished.

23 A man hath joy by the answer of his mouth: and ' a word spoken ' in due season, how good is it!

24 ' The way of life is above to the wise, that he may depart from hell beneath.

25 ' The LORD will destroy the house of the proud. but ' he will establish the border of the widow.

Abaddon, the place of torment; are ever under the eye and control of the Lord.

Verse 18. By sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken.] Every kind of sorrow worketh death, but that which is the offspring of true repentance. This alone is healthful to the soul.

Verse 16. Better is little with the fear of the Lord.] Be- cause where the fear of God is, there are moderation and contentment of spirit.

Verse 19. The way of the slothful man is as an hedge of thorns.] He imagines ten thousand difficulties in the way, which cannot be surmounted; but they are all the creatures of his own imagination, and that imagination is formed by his sloth.

Verse 22. But in the multitude of counsellors.] Rob goatsim might be translated, chief or master of the council, the prime minister.

Verse 24. The way of life is above to the wise.] There is a treble antithesis here; 1. The way of the wise, and that of the fool. 2. The one is above, the other below. 3. The one is of life, the other is of death.

Verse 25. The house of the proud.] Families of this de- scription are seldom continued long. The Lord hates pride; and those that will not be humble he will destroy.

Verse 27. He that is greedy of gain.] He who will be rich, troubleth his own house—he is a torment to himself and his family by his avariciousness and penury, and a curse to those with whom he deals.

But he that hateth gifts.] Whatever is given to pervert

26 ^a The thoughts of the wicked are an abomination to the LORD: ^b but the words of the pure are ^c pleasant words.

27 ^a He that is greedy of gain troubleth his own house: but he that hateth gifts shall live.

28 The heart of the righteous ^a studieth to answer: but the mouth of the wicked poureth out evil things.

Verse 28. The heart of the righteous studieth to answer] His tongue never runs before his wit; he never speaks rashly, and never unadvisedly; because he studies—ponders, his thoughts and his words.

Verse 29. The Lord is far from the wicked] He is neither near to hear, nor near to help.

Verse 30. The light of the eyes rejoiceth the heart] The man who has a correct judgment, and an accurate eye, may not only amuse, but instruct himself endlessly, by the beauties of nature and art.

Verse 31. The ear that heareth the reproof] That receives it gratefully and obeys it.

30 The light of the eyes rejoiceth the heart: and a good report maketh the bones fat.

31 ^a The ear that heareth the reproof of life abideth among the wise.

32 He that refuseth ^a instruction despiseth his own soul: but he that ^a heareth reproof ^a getteth understanding.

33 ^a The fear of the LORD is the instruction of wisdom; and ^a before honour is humility.

^a Ch. vi. 18.—^b Ps. cxiv. 18, 19.—^c Ver. 5.—^d Or, correction.—^e Or, obeyeth.—^f Heb. possesseth an heart.—^g Ch. i. 7.—^h Ch. xviii. 12.

Verse 32. Despiseth his own soul] That is, constructively; for if the instruction lead to the preservation of life and soul, he that neglects or despises it throws all as much in the way of danger as if he actually hated himself.

Verse 33. The fear of the Lord] Wisdom derives its most important lessons from the fear of God. He who fears God much, is well taught.

And before honour is humility.] That is, few persons ever arrive at honour who are not humble; and those who from low life have risen to places of trust and confidence, have been remarkable for humility.

CHAPTER XVI.

Man prepares, but God governs. God has made all things for himself; he hates pride. The judgments of God. The administration of kings; their justice, anger, clemency. God has made all in weight, measure, and due proportion. Necessity produces industry. The patient man. The lot is under the direction of the Lord.

THE ^a preparations ^b of the heart in man, ^c and the answer of the tongue, is from the LORD.

2 ^a All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes: but ^a the LORD weigheth the spirits.

3 ^a Commit ^a thy works unto the LORD, and thy thoughts shall be established.

4 ^a The LORD hath made all things for himself: ^a yea, even the wicked for the day of evil.

Verse 1. The preparations of the heart in man] Literally, "To man are the dispositions of the heart; but from the LORD is the answer of the tongue." Man proposes his wishes; but God answers as he thinks proper. The former is the free offering of the heart of man; the latter, the free volition of God. Man may think as he pleases, and ask as he lists; but God will give, or not give, as he thinks proper.

Verse 3. Commit thy works unto the Lord] See that what thou doest is commanded; and then begin, continue, and end all in his name. And thy thoughts shall be established—these schemes or arrangements, though formed in the heart, are agreeable to the divine will, and therefore shall be established. His thoughts—his meditations, are right; and he begins and ends his work in the Lord; and therefore all issues well.

Verse 4. The Lord hath made all things for himself] He has so framed and executed every part of his creation, that it manifests his wisdom, power, goodness, and truth.

tion to the LORD: ^a though hand join in hand, he shall not be ^a unpunished.

6 ^a By mercy and truth iniquity is purged: and ^a by the fear of the LORD men depart from evil.

7 When a man's ways please the LORD, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him.

8 ^a Better is a little with righteousness, than great revenues without right.

Even the wicked for the day of evil.] As raah literally signifies to feed, it has been conjectured that the clause might be read, yea, even the wicked he feeds by the day, or daily.

If we take the words as they stand in our present Version, they mean no more than what is expressed by the Chaldee and Syriac, that "the wicked are reserved for the day of punishment." The Lord does not make the wicked or ungodly man; but when man has made himself such, even then God bears with him. But if he repent not, when the measure of his iniquity is filled up, he shall fall under the wrath of his God Maker.

Verse 5. Though hand join in hand, he shall not be unpunished.] The day of wrath shall come on the wicked, whatever means he may take to avoid it.

Verse 6. By mercy and truth iniquity is purged] This may be misunderstood, as if a man by showing mercy and acting according to truth, could atone for his own iniquity.

10 * A divine sentence is in the lips of the king : his mouth transgresseth not in judgment.

11 A ^b just weight and balance are the LORD's : ^c all the weights of the bag are his work.

12 It is an abomination to kings to commit wickedness : for ^d the throne is established by righteousness.

13 * Righteous lips are the delight of kings ; and they love him that speaketh right.

14 'The wrath of a king is as messengers of death : but a wise man will pacify it.

15 In the light of the king's countenance is life ; and ^e his favour is ^f as a cloud of the latter rain.

16 'How much better is it to get wisdom than gold ? and to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver ?

17 The highway of the upright is to depart from evil : he that keepeth his way preserveth his soul.

18 'Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall.

19 Better it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud.

20 * He that handleth a matter wisely shall find good : and whoso ^g trusteth in the LORD, happy is he.

21 The wise in heart shall be called prudent : and the sweetness of the lips increaseth learning.

The Hebrew text is not ambiguous : "By mercy and truth he shall atone for iniquity." He—God, by his mercy, in sending his son Jesus into the world, "shall make an atonement for iniquity" according to his truth—the word which he declared by his holy prophets since the world began. Or, if we retain the present version, reading "iniquity is purged" or "atoned for," the sense is unexceptionable, as we refer the mercy and the truth to God.

Verse 9. A man's heart deviseth his way] This is precisely the same sentiment as that contained in the first verse, on the true meaning of which so much has been already said.

Verse 10. A divine sentence] Kesem, "divination," as the margin has it. Is the meaning as follows? Though divination were applied to a righteous king's lips, to induce him to punish the innocent and spare the guilty, yet would not his lips transgress in judgment ; so firmly attached is he to God, and so much is he under the divine care and influence. Whatever judgment such a one pronounces, it may be considered as a decision from God.

Verse 11. All the weights of the bag are his] Alluding, probably, to the standard weights laid up in a bag in the sanctuary, unto which all weights in common use in the land were to be referred, in order to ascertain whether they were just : but some think the allusion is to the weights carried about by merchants in their girdles, by which they weigh the money, silver and gold, that they take in exchange for their merchandise.

Verse 12. It is an abomination to kings, &c.] In all these verses the wise man refers to monarchical government rightly administered.

Verse 17. The highway of the upright] The upright man is ever departing from evil ; this is his common road : and by keeping on in this way, his soul is preserved.

Verse 18. Pride goeth before destruction] Here pride is personified : it walks along, and has destruction in its train.

22 * Understanding is a well-spring of life unto him that hath it : but the instruction of fools is folly.

23 * The heart of the wise ^o teacheth his mouth, and addeth learning to his lips.

24 Pleasant words are as an honeycomb, sweet to the soul, and health to the bones.

25 * There is a way that seemeth right unto a man ; but the end thereof are the ways of death.

26 * He ^p that laboureth laboureth for himself ; for his mouth ^q craveth it of him.

27 * An ungodly man diggeth up evil : and in his lips there is as a burning fire.

28 * A froward man ^r soweth strife : and ^s a whisperer separateth chief friends.

29 A violent man ^t enticeth his neighbour, and leadeth him in the way that is not good.

30 He shutteth his eyes to devise froward things : moving his lips he bringeth evil to pass.

31 * The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.

32 * He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty ; and he that ruleth his spirit, than he that taketh a city.

33 The lot is cast into the lap : but the whole disposing thereof is of the LORD.

And a haughty spirit before a fall.] A haughty spirit marches on, and ruin comes after.

Verse 22. Understanding is a well-spring of life] An allusion to the artery that carries the blood from the heart to distribute it to all the extremities of the body.

Verse 23. The heart of the wise teacheth his mouth] He has a wise heart ; he speaks as it dictates ; and therefore his speeches are all speeches of wisdom.

Verse 24. Pleasant words are as an honeycomb] The honey of which is sweeter than that which has been expressed from it, and has a much finer flavour before it has come in contact with the atmospheric air.

Verse 26. He that laboureth.] No thanks to a man for his labour and industry ; if he do not work he must starve.

Verse 27. An ungodly man diggeth up evil] A wicked man labours as much to bring about an evil purpose, as the quarry-man does to dig up stones.

In his lips—a burning fire.] His words are as inflammable, in producing strife and contention among his neighbours, as fire is in igniting dry stubble.

Verse 30. He shutteth his eyes to devise, &c.] He meditates deeply upon ways and means to commit sin.

Verse 31. The hoary head is a crown of glory] The latter part of the verse is very well added, for many a sinner has a hoary head.

Verse 32. He that ruleth his spirit, than he that taketh a city.] It is much easier to subdue an enemy without than one within. There have been many kings who had conquered nations, and yet were slaves to their own passions.

Verse 33. The lot is cast into the lap] On the lot, see the note on Num. xxvi. 55. How far it may be proper now to put difficult matters to the lot, after earnest prayer and supplication, I cannot say. Formerly, it was both lawful and efficient ; for after it was solemnly cast, the decision was taken as coming immediately from the Lord.

CHAPTER XVII.

Contentment. The wise servant. The Lord tries the heart. Children a crown to their parents. We should hide our neighbour's faults. The poor should not be despised. Litigations and quarrels to be avoided. Wealth is useless to a fool. The good friend. A fool may pass for a wise man when he holds his peace.

BETTER is a dry morsel, and quietness therewith, than an house full of sacrifices with strife.

2 A wise servant shall have rule over a son that causeth shame, and shall have part of the inheritance among the brethren.

3 The fining pot is for silver, and the furnace for gold: but the LORD trieth the hearts.

4 A wicked doer giveth heed to false lips; and a liar giveth ear to a naughty tongue.

5 Whoso mocketh the poor reproacheth his Maker: and he that is glad at calamities shall not be unpunished.

6 Children's children are the crown of old men; and the glory of children are their fathers.

7 Excellent speech becometh not a fool: much less do lying lips a prince.

8 A gift is as a precious stone in the eyes of him that hath it: whithersoever it turneth, it prospereth.

9 He that covereth a transgression seeketh love: but he that repeateth a matter separateth very friends.

10 A reproof entereth more into a wise man, than an hundred stripes into a fool.

11 An evil man seeketh only rebellion: therefore a cruel messenger shall be sent against him.

12 Let a bear robbed of her whelps meet a man, rather than a fool in his folly.

Verse 1. Better is a dry morsel] Peace and contentment, and especially domestic peace, are beyond all other blessings.

Verse 3. The fining pot is for silver] When silver is mixed, or suspected to be mixed, with base metal, it must be subjected to such a test as the cupel to purify it. And gold also must be purified by the action of the fire. So God tries hearts.

Verse 4. A wicked doer giveth heed] An evil heart is disposed and ever ready to receive evil; and liars delight in lies.

Verse 5. He that is glad at calamities] He who is pleased to hear of the misfortune of another will, in the course of God's just government, have his own multiplied.

Verse 7. Excellent speech becometh not a fool] This proverb is suitable to those who affect, in public speaking, fine language, which neither comports with their ordinary conversation, nor with their education.

Verse 8. A gift is as a precious stone] It both enriches and ornaments. In the latter clause there is an evident allusion to cut stones. Whithersoever you turn them, they reflect the light, are brilliant and beautiful.

Verse 10. A reproof entereth more] Though the rod, judiciously applied, is a great instrument of knowledge, yet it is of no use where incurable dulness, or want of intellect, prevails. Besides, there are generous dispositions on which counsel will work more than stripes.

Verse 12. Let a bear robbed of her whelps] At which times such animals are peculiarly fierce.

Verse 13. Whoso rewardeth evil for good] As many persons are guilty of the sin of ingratitude, and of paying kindness with unkindness, and good with evil, it is no wonder 13 Whoso rewardeth evil for good, evil shall not depart from his house.

14 The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water: therefore leave off contention, before it be meddled with.

15 He that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the just, even they both are abomination to the LORD.

16 Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a fool to get wisdom, seeing he hath no heart to it?

17 A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity.

18 A man void of understanding striketh hands, and becometh surety in the presence of his friend.

19 He loveth transgression that loveth strife: and he that exalteth his gate seeketh destruction.

20 He that hath a froward heart findeth no good: and he that hath a perverse tongue falleth into mischief.

21 He that begetteth a fool doeth it to his sorrow: and the father of a fool hath no joy.

22 A merry heart doeth good like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the bones.

23 A wicked man taketh a gift out of the bosom to pervert the ways of judgment.

24 Wisdom is before him that hath understanding: but the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth.

we find so much wretchedness among men; for God's word cannot fail.

Verse 14. The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water] As soon as the smallest breach is made in the dike or dam, the water begins to press from all parts towards the breach: the resistance becomes too great to be successfully opposed, so that dikes and all are speedily swept away. Such is the beginning of contentions, quarrels, law-suits, &c.

Leave off contention, before it be meddled with.] Before it be mingled together, before the spirits of the contending parties come into conflict, and begin to deal out mutual reflections and reproaches. When you see that the dispute is likely to take this turn, leave it off immediately.

Verse 17. A friend loveth at all times] Equally in adversity as in prosperity. And a brother, according to the ties and interests of consanguinity, is born to support and comfort a brother in distress.

Verse 18. Striketh hands] Striking each others hands, or shaking hands, was anciently the form in concluding a contract.

Verse 19. He that exalteth his gate] Possibly gate is here taken for the mouth; and the exalting of the gate may mean proud boasting and arrogant speaking, such as has a tendency to kindle and maintain strife. And this interpretation seems to agree better with the scope of the context than the above.

Verse 22. A merry heart doeth good like a medicine] The Chaldees and Syriac translate in this way: "A merry heart doeth good to the body: but a broken spirit drieth the bones." Nothing has such a direct tendency to ruin health and waste 25 * A foolish son is a grief to his father, and bitterness to her that bare him.

 26 ^b Also to punish the just is not good, nor to strike princes for equity.
 27 ^c He that hath knowledge spareth his words:

out life as grief, anxiety, fretfulness, bad tempers, &c.

Verse 23. A gift out of the bosom] Out of his purse; as in their bosoms, above their girdles, the Asiatics carry their purses.

Verse 24. Are in the ends of the earth.] Wisdom is within the sight and reach of every man: but he whose desires are scattered abroad, who is always aiming at impossible things, or is of an unsteady disposition, is not likely to find it.

Verse 26. Not to strike princes for equity.] To kill a king on the ground of justice is a most dreadful crime to any land and a man of understanding is of ^d an excellent spirit.

28 * Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise: and he that shutteth his lips is esteemed a man of understanding.

* James i. 19.—^d Or, a cool spirit.—* Job xlii. 5.

Where was it ever done, that it promoted the public prosperity? No experiment of this kind has ever yet succeeded, howsoever worthless the king might be.

Verse 28. Even a fool] He is counted wise as to that particular. He may know that he cannot speak well, and he has sense enough to keep from speaking.

A man may be golden-mouthed and silver-tongued in eloquence; but to know when and where to speak and to be silent, is better than diamonds.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The man who separates himself and seeks wisdom. The fool and the wicked man. Deep wisdom. Contention of fools. The tale-bearer and the slothful. The name of the Lord. Pride and presumption because of riches. Hastiness of spirit. The wounded spirit. The influence of gifts. The lot. The offended brother. The influence of the tongue. A wife a good from God. The true friend.

THROUGH ^a desire a man, having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom.

2 A fool hath no delight in understanding, but that his heart may discover itself.

3 When the wicked cometh, then cometh also contempt, and with ignominy reproach.

4 ^b The words of a man's mouth are as deep waters, and ^c the well-spring of wisdom as a flowing brook.

5 ^d It is not good to accept the person of the wicked, to overthrow the righteous in judgment.

* Or, He that separateth himself, seeketh according to his desire, and intermeddleth in every business. See Jude 19.—^b Ch. x. 11. xx. 5.—^c Ps. lxxviii. 2.—^d Lev. xix. 15. Deut. i. 17. xvi. 19. Ch. xxiv. 23. xxviii. 21.—Ch. x. 14. xii. 13. xlii. 8. Eccles. x. 12.—Ch. xii. 18.

Verse 1. Through desire a man, having separated himself] The original is difficult and obscure. The nearest translation to the words is perhaps the following: "He who is separated shall seek the desired (i.e., the object of his desire), and shall intermeddle (mingle himself) with all realities or all essential knowledge." He finds that he can make little progress in the investigation of divine and natural things, if he have much to do with secular or trifling matters: he therefore separates himself as well from unprofitable pursuits as from frivolous company, and then enters into the spirit of his pursuit.

Verse 2. But that his heart may discover itself.] It is a fact that most vain and foolish people are never satisfied in company, but in showing their own nonsense and emptiness.

Verse 3. When the wicked cometh, &c.] A wicked man is despised even by the wicked. He who falls under ignominy falls under reproach.

Verse 4. The words of a man's mouth] That is, the wise sayings of a wise man are like deep waters; howsoever much you pump or draw off, you do not appear to lessen them.

The well-spring of wisdom] Where there is a sound understanding, and a deep, well-informed mind, its wisdom and its counsels are an incessant stream.

6 A fool's lips enter into contention, and his mouth calleth for strokes.

7 * A fool's mouth is his destruction, and his lips are the snare of his soul.

8 ^a The words of a tale-bearer are ^b as wounds, and they go down into the ^c innermost parts of the belly.

9 He also that is slothful in his work is ^d brother to him that is a great waster.

10 ^e The name of the Lord is a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it, and ^f is safe.

11 ^g The rich man's wealth is his strong city, and as an high wall in his own conceit.

xxvi. 22.—^a Or, whisperer.—^b Or, like as when men are wounded.—^c Heb. chambers.—Ch. xxviii. 24.—^d 2 Sam. xxii. 3, 51. Ps. xviii. 2. xxvii. 1. lxi. 8, 4. xci. 2. cxliv. 2.—^e Heb. is set aloft.—^f Ch. x. 15.

Verse 5. To accept the person of the wicked] We must not, in judicial cases, pay any attention to a man's riches, influence, friends, offices, &c., but judge the case according to its own merits. When the wicked rich man opposes and oppresses the poor righteous, then all those things should be utterly forgotten.

Verse 8. The words of a tale-bearer] The words of a deceiver, the fair-spoken, deeply-malicious man, though they appear soft and gracious, are wounds deeply injurious.

Verse 9. He also that is slothful] A slothful man neglects work, and the materials go to ruin: the waster, he destroys the materials. They are both destroyers.

Verse 10. The name of the Lord is a strong tower] The name of the Lord may be taken for the Lord himself; he is a strong tower, a refuge, and place of complete safety, to all that trust in him.

Verse 18. He that answereth a matter] This is a common case; before a man can tell out his story, another will begin his. Before a man has made his response, the other wishes to confute piece-meal, though he has had his own speech already.

Verse 14. The spirit of a man will sustain] A man sustains the ills of his body, and the trials of life, by the strength and energy of his mind. But if the mind be wounded, 12 * Before destruction the heart of man is haughty, and before honour is humility.

13 He that ^b answereth a matter * before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him.

14 The spirit of a man will sustain his infirmity; but a wounded spirit who can bear?

15 The heart of the prudent getteth knowledge; and the ear of the wise seeketh knowledge.

16 ^a A man's gift maketh room for him, and bringeth him before great men.

17 He that is first in his own cause seemeth just; but his neighbour cometh and searcheth him.

18 The lot causeth contentions to cease, and parteth between the mighty.

19 A brother offended is harder to be won than a

* Ch. xi. 2. xv. 33. xvi. 18.—^b Heb. returneth a word.—^c John vii. 51.—^d Gen. xxi. 20. 1 Sam. xxv. 27. Ch. xvii. 8. xxi. 14.—^e Ch.

if this be cast down, if slow-consuming care and grief have shot the dagger into the soul, what can then sustain the man? Nothing but the unseen God. Therefore, let the afflicted pray.

Verse 16. A man's gift maketh room for him] It is, and ever has been, a base and degrading practice in Asiatic countries, to bring a gift or present to the great man into whose presence you come. Without this there is no audience, no favour, no justice. This arose from the circumstance that men must not approach the altar of God without an offering.

Verse 17. He that is first in his own cause] Any man may, in the first instance, make out a fair tale, because he has the choice of circumstances and arguments. But when the neighbour cometh and searcheth him, he examines all, dissects all, swears and cross-questions every witness, and brings out truth and fact.

Verse 19. A brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city] Almost all the Versions agree in the following reading: "A brother assisted by a brother, is like a fortified city; and their decisions are like the bars of a city." If we take the words according to the common Version, we see them express what, alas! we know to be too generally true: that when brothers fall out, it is with extreme difficulty that they can be reconciled. And fraternal enmities are generally strong and inveterate.

Verse 20. With the fruit of his mouth] Our own words strong city: and their contentions are like the bars of a castle.

20 * A man's belly shall be satisfied with the fruit of his mouth; and with the increase of his lips shall he be filled.

21 'Death and life are in the power of the tongue: and they that love it shall eat the fruit thereof.

22 * Whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing, and obtaineth favour of the Lord.

23 The poor useth entreaties; but the rich answereth ^b roughly.

24 A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly: ^a and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

frequently shape our good or evil fortune in life.

Verse 21. Death and life are in the power of the tongue] This may apply to all men. Many have lost their lives by their tongue, and some have saved their lives by it: but it applies most forcibly to public pleaders; on many of their tongues hangs life or death.

Verse 22. Whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing] Marriage, with all its troubles and embarrassments, is a blessing from God; and there are few cases where a wife of any sort is not better than none, because celibacy is an evil; for God himself hath said, "It is not good for man to be alone."

Verse 24. A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly] Love begets love; and love requires love as its recompence. If a man do not maintain a friendly carriage, he cannot expect to retain his friends. Friendship is a good plant; but it requires cultivation to make it grow.

There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.] Some apply this to God; others to Christ; but the text has no such meaning.

The original is condensed and obscure: some would read: A man of friends may ring again; i. e., he may boast and mightily exult: but there is a friend, ohab, a lover, that sticketh closer, dabek, is glued or cemented, meach, beyond, or more than, a brother. The former will continue during prosperity, but the latter continues closely united to his friend, even in the most disastrous circumstances.

CHAPTER XIX.

The worth of the poor upright man. Riches preserve friends. False witnesses. False friends. A king's wrath. The foolish son. The prudent wife. Slothfulness. Pity for the poor. The fear of the Lord. The spend-thrift son. Obedience to parents.

2 Also, that the soul be without knowledge,

* Ch. xxviii. 6.—^b Ch. xiv. 24. xv. 2, 14.

Verse 1. Better is the poor] The upright poor man is always to be preferred to the rich or self-sufficient fool.

Verse 2. Also, that the soul be without knowledge, it is not good] Would it not be plainer, as it is more literal, to say, "Also, to be without knowledge, is not good for the soul." The soul was made for God; and to be without his knowledge, to be unacquainted with him, is not only not it is not good; and he that hasteth with his feet sinneth.

good, but the greatest evil the soul can suffer, for it involves all other evils.

And he that hasteth with his feet sinneth.] A man who has not the knowledge of God is incautious, rash, headstrong, and precipitate: and hence he sinneth—he is continually missing the mark, and wounding his own soul.

Verse 3. The foolishness of man] Most men complain of 4 * Wealth maketh many friends : but the poor is separated from his neighbour.

5 ^b A false witness shall not be * unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall not escape.

6 * Many will entreat the favour of the prince : and * every man is a friend to him that giveth gifts.

7 * All the brethren of the poor do hate him : how much more do his friends go ^b far from him ? he pursueth them with words, yet they are wanting to him.

8 He that getteth wisdom loveth his own soul : he that keepeth understanding shall find good.

9 * A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall perish.

10 Delight is not seemly for a fool ; much less ¹ for a servant to have rule over princes.

11 * The discretion of a man deferreth his anger ; and it is his glory to pass over a transgression.

12 * The king's wrath is as the roaring of a lion : but his favour is as dew upon the grass.

13 * A foolish son is the calamity of his father : and the contentions of a wife are a continual dropping.

14 * House and riches are the inheritance of fathers : and * a prudent wife is from the LORD.

15 * Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep ; and an idle soul shall * suffer hunger.

cross providences, because they get into straits and difficulties through the perverseness of their ways ; and thus they fret against God ; whereas, in every instance, they are the causes of their own calamities.

Verse 4. The poor is separated from his neighbour. Because he has the "disease of all shunned poverty."

Verse 7. Do hate him. They shun him as they do the person they hate. They neither hate him positively, nor love him : they disregard him ; they will have nothing to do with him.

Verse 10. Delight is not seemly for a fool. Taanug, splendid or luxurious living, rank, equipage, &c. These sit ill on a fool, though he be by birth a lord.

Verse 12. The king's wrath is as the roaring of a lion. There is nothing more dreadful than the roaring of this tyrant of the forest. At the sound of it all other animals flee away, and hide themselves. The king who is above law, and rules without law, and whose will is his own law, is like the lion.

Verse 13. The contentions of a wife are a continual dropping. The man who has got such a wife is like a tenant who has got a cottage with a bad roof, through every part of which the rain either drops or pours. He can neither sit, stand, work, nor sleep without being exposed to these droppings. God help the man who is in such a case, with house or wife !

Verse 14. A prudent wife is from the Lord. One who has a good understanding, ishshah masecalet ; who avoids complaining, though she may often have cause for it.

Verse 15. Into a deep sleep. Sloth renders a man utterly unconscious of all his interests. Though he has frequently felt hunger, yet he is regardless that his continual slothfulness must necessarily plunge him into more sufferings.

Verse 17. Lendeth unto the Lord. O what a word is this ! God makes himself debtor for everything that is given to the poor ! Who would not advance much upon such credit ? God will pay it again. And in no case has he ever forfeited his word.

Verse 18. Let not thy soul spare for his crying. This is a hard precept for a parent. But it is better that the child may be caused to cry, when the correction may be healthful to his soul, than that the parent should cry afterwards, when the child is grown to man's estate, and his evil habits are sealed for life.

Verse 19. A man of great wrath. He who is of an irritable, fiery disposition will necessarily get himself into many broils ; and he that is surety for him once is likely to be called on again and again for the same friendly office.

Verse 24. A slothful man hideth his hand in his bosom. Is too lazy to feed himself. If he dip his hand once in the dish, he is too lazy to put it in a second time.

Verse 26. He that wasteth his father. Destroys his substance by riotous or extravagant living, so as to embitter his latter end by poverty and affliction ; and adds to this wickedness the expulsion of his aged widowed mother from the paternal house ; is a son of shame—a most shameful man ; and a son of reproach—one whose conduct cannot be sufficiently execrated. It is prostitution of the term to call such, man.

Verse 27. Cease, my son. Hear nothing that would lead thee away from God and his truth.

Verse 29. Stripes for the back of fools. Profane and wicked men expose themselves to the punishments denounced against such by just laws.

Strong drink] Sechar, any strong fermented liquor, whether of the vine, date, or palm species.

Verse 4. The sluggard will not plow] The meaning of the proverb is: the slothful man, under the pretence of unfavourable weather, neglects cultivating his land till the proper time is elapsed.

Verse 5. Counsel in the heart of man] Men of the deepest and most comprehensive minds are rarely apt, unsolicited, to join in any discourse, in which they might appear even to the greatest advantage; but a man of understanding will elicit this, by questions framed for the purpose, and thus pump up the salubrious waters from the deep and capacious well.

Verse 8. A king that sitteth in the throne of judgment] Kings should see to the administration of the laws, as well as of the state transactions, of their kingdom.

Verse 9. Who can say, I have made my heart clean] No man. But thousands can testify that the blood of Jesus Christ has cleansed them from all unrighteousness. And he is pure from his sin, who is justified freely through the redemption that is in Jesus.

Verse 10. Divers weights, and divers measures] Hebrew: "A stone and a stone; an ephah and an ephah." One the standard, the other below it; one to buy with, the other to sell by.

Verse 11. Even a child is known by his doings] That is, in general terms, the effect shows the nature of the cause. A child is easily detected when he has done evil; he immediately begins to excuse and vindicate himself, and profess his innocence, almost before accusation takes place. But probably the principal thing intended by the wise man is, that we may easily learn from the child what the man will be.

Verse 12. The hearing ear, and the seeing eye] Every good we possess comes from God; and we should neither use our eyes, nor our ears, nor any thing we possess, but in strict suberviency to his will.

Verse 13. Love not sleep, lest thou come to poverty] Sleep, ¹⁰ ^p Divers ^q weights, and ^r divers measures, both of them are alike abomination to the Lord.

¹¹ Even a child is ^s known by his doings, whether his work ^t be pure, and whether ^u it be right.

¹² ^v The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the Lord hath made even both of them.

¹³ ^w Love not sleep, lest thou come to poverty; open thine eyes, and thou shalt be satisfied with bread.

¹⁴ ^x It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer: but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth.

¹⁵ There is gold, and a multitude of rubies: but ^y the lips of knowledge are a precious jewel.

¹⁶ ^z Take his garment that is surety for a stranger: and take a pledge of him for a strange woman.

¹⁷ ^{aa} Bread ^{ab} of deceit is sweet to a man; but afterwards his mouth shall be filled with gravel.

¹⁸ ^{ac} Every purpose is established by counsel: ^{ad} and with good advice make war.

indescribable in its nature, is an indescribable blessing; but how often is it turned into a curse! It is like food; a certain measure of it restores and invigorates exhausted nature; more than that oppresses and destroys life.

Verse 14. It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer] How apt are men to decry the goods they wish to purchase, in order that they may get them at a cheaper rate; and, when they have made their bargain and carried it off, boast to others at how much less than its value they have obtained it! Are such honest men? Is such knavery actionable? Can such be punished only in another world?

Verse 15. There is gold] Gold is valuable, silver is valuable, and so are jewels; but the teachings of sound knowledge are more valuable than all.

Verse 16. Take his garment that is surety for a stranger] If a stranger or unknown person become surety in a case, greater caution should be used, and such security taken from this stranger as would prevent him from running away from his engagements.

Verse 17. Bread of deceit is sweet] Property acquired by falsehood, speculation, &c., without labour, is pleasant to the unprincipled, slothful man; but there is a curse in it, and the issue will prove it.

Verse 18. With good advice make war] Perhaps there is not a precept in this whole book so little regarded as this. Most of the wars that are undertaken are wars of injustice, ambition, aggrandizement, and caprice, which can have had no previous good counsel.

Verse 20. Whoso curseth his father] Such persons were put to death under the law; see Exod. xxi. 17; Lev. xx. 9; and here it is said, Their lamp shall be put out—they shall have no posterity; God shall cut them off both root and branch.

Verse 21. An inheritance—gotten hastily] Gotten by speculation; by lucky hits; not in the fair progressive way of traffic, in which money has its natural increase. All such inheritances are short-lived; God's blessing is not in them, because they are not the produce of industry; and they lead to idleness, pride, fraud, and knavery.

20 * Whoso curseth his father or his mother, his ^c lamp shall be put out in obscure darkness.
 21 ^d An inheritance may be gotten hastily at the beginning; * but the end thereof shall not be blessed.
 22 ^e Say not thou, I will recompense evil; but ^f wait on the Lord, and he shall save thee.
 23 ^h Divers weights are an abomination unto the Lord; and ⁱ a false balance is not good.

Verse 22. I will recompense evil] Wait on the Lord; judgment is his, and his judgments are sure. In the meantime pray for the conversion of your enemy.

Verse 24. Man's goings are of the Lord] He, by his providence, governs all the great concerns of the world. Man often traverses these operations; but he does it to his own damage.

Verse 25. Who devoureth that which is holy] It is a sin to take that which belongs to God, his worship, or his work, and devote it to one's own use.

And after vows to make inquiry.] That is, if a man be inwardly making a rash vow, the fitness or unfitness, the necessity, expediency, and propriety of the thing should be first carefully considered. But how foolish to make the vow first, and afterwards to inquire whether it was right in the sight of God to do it! This equally condemns all rash and inconsiderate conduct.

Verse 26. Bringeth the wheel over them.] He thrashes them in his anger, as the wheel does the grain on the threshing-floor. Grain was separated from its husks in Palestine, by the feet of the oxen trampling among the sheaves, or bringing a rough-shod wheel over them.

Verse 27. The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord] which is holy, and ^k after vows to make inquiry.

26 ^l A wise king scattereth the wicked, and bringeth the wheel over them.

27 ^m The spirit of man is the ⁿ candle of the Lord, searching all the inward parts of the belly.

God has given to every man a mind, which he so enlightens by his own Spirit, that the man knows how to distinguish good from evil; and conscience, which springs from this, searches the inmost recesses of the soul.

Verse 28. Mercy and truth preserve the king] These are the brightest jewels in the royal crown; and those kings who are most governed by them have the stablest government.

Verse 29. The glory of young men is their strength] Scarcely any young man affects to be wise, learned, &c.; but all delight to show their strength and to be reputed strong.

And the beauty of old men is the grey head.] They are fond of being reputed wise, and of having respect paid to their understanding and experience.

Verse 30. The blueness of a wound] Chabburoth from chabar, to unite, to join together. Does it not refer to the cicatrice of a wound when, by its healing, the two lips are brought together? By this union the wound is healed; and by the previous discharge the lacerated ends of fibres and blood-vessels are purged away. So stripes, though they hurt for the time, become the means of correcting and discharging the moral evil of the inmost soul, the vice of the heart, the easily-besetting sin.

CHAPTER XXI.

The king's heart is in the hand of God. We should practise mercy and justice. The lying tongue. The quarrelsome woman. The punishment of the wicked. The uncharitable. The private gift. The happiness of the righteous. The wicked a ransom for the righteous. The treasures of the wise. He who guards his tongue. Desire of the sluggard. The false witness. Salvation is of the Lord.

THE king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, as the rivers of water: he turneth it whithersoever he will.

2 * Every way of a man is right in his own eyes: ^b but the Lord pondereth the hearts.

3 * To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice.

* Ch. xvi. 2.—^c Ch. xxiv. 12. Luke xvi. 15.—^d 1 Sam. xv. 22. Ps. i. 8. Ch. xv. 8. Isa. i. 11, &c. Hos. vi. 6. Mic. vi. 7, 8.

Verse 1. The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord] The Lord is the only ruler of princes. But there is an allusion here to the eastern method of watering their lands. Several canals are dug from one stream; and by opening a particular sluice, the husbandman can direct a stream to whatever part he please: so the king's heart, wherever it turns; ^e i. e., to whomsoever he is disposed to show favour.

Verse 2. The Lord pondereth the hearts.] Every man

4 ^f An ^g high look, and a proud heart, and ^h the plowing of the wicked, is sin.

5 ⁱ The thoughts of the diligent tend only to plentiness; but of every one that is hasty only to want.

6 ^j The getting of treasures by a lying tongue is a vanity tossed to and fro of them that seek death.

^k Ch. vi. 17.—^l Heb. Haughtiness of eyes.—^m Or, the light of the wicked.—ⁿ Ch. x. 4. xiii. 4.—^o Ch. x. 2. xiii. 11. xx. 21. 2 Pet. ii. 8.

feels strongly attached to his own opinions, modes of acting, &c.; yet he should endeavour to see that what he does is acceptable in the eyes of his Maker and Judge.

Verse 4. An high look] The evidence of pride, self-conceit, and vanity. A proud heart, from which the high look, &c., come.

And the plowing] The lamp, the prosperity and posterity of the wicked; is sin—it is evil in the seed, evil in the root, evil in the branch, and evil in the fruit.

7 The robbery of the wicked shall * destroy them : because they refuse to do judgment.

8 The way of man is froward and strange : but as for the pure, his work is right.

9 ^b It is better to dwell in a corner of the house-top, than with a brawling woman in a wide house.

10 ^a The soul of the wicked desireth evil : his neighbour findeth no favour in his eyes.

11 ^a When the scorner is punished, the simple is made wise : and when the wise is instructed, he receiveth knowledge.

12 The righteous man wisely considereth the house of the wicked : but God overthroweth the wicked for their wickedness.

13 ^b Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard.

14 ^a A gift in secret pacifieth anger : and a reward in the bosom strong wrath.

15 It is joy to the just to do judgment : ^j but destruction shall be to the workers of iniquity.

16 The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead.

17 He that loveth ^k pleasure shall be a poor man : he that loveth wine and oil shall not be rich.

18 The wicked shall be a ransom for the righteous, and the transgressor for the upright.

Verse 6. Of them that seek death.] Instead of mebakshey, "them that seek," several MSS. have makeshey, the snares. He who gets treasures by a lying tongue, pursues vanity into the snares of death. Our common translation may be as good. But he who, by the snares of his tongue, endeavours to buy and sell to the best advantage, is pursuing what is empty in itself ; and he is ensnared by death, while he is attempting to ensnare others.

Verse 7. The robbery of the wicked.] The wicked shall be terrified and ruined by the means they use to aggrandize themselves.

Verse 9. In a corner of the housetop.] A shed raised on the flat roof : — a wide house ; what we should call a lodging-house or a house occupied by several families. This was usual in the East, as well as in the West.

Verse 11. When the scorner is punished.] When those who mock at religion meet with that degree of punishment which their crimes deserve ; then the simple, who were either led away, or in danger of being led away, by their pernicious doctrines, are made wise. But only blasphemy against God and the Bible should be thus punished. Private opinion the state should not meddle with.

Verse 12. The righteous man wisely considereth.] This verse is understood as implying the pious concern of a righteous man for a wicked family, whom he endeavours by his instructions to bring into the way of knowledge and peace.

Verse 13. Whoso stoppeth his ears.] See the conduct of the priest and Levite to the man who fell among thieves ; and let every man learn that he who shuts his ear against the cry of the poor, shall have the ear of God shut against his cry.

Verse 16. In the congregation of the dead.] Rephaim, the lost : either separate spirits in general, or rather the assembly of separate spirits, which had fallen from primitive rectitude ; than with a contentious and an angry woman. 20 ^a There is treasure to be desired and oil in the dwelling of the wise ; but a foolish man spendeth it up.

21 ^a He that followeth after righteousness and mercy findeth life, righteousness, and honour.

22 ^a A wise man scaleth the city of the mighty, and casteth down the strength of the confidence thereof.

23 ^a Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from troubles.

25 ^a The desire of the slothful killeth him ; for his hands refuse to labour.

26 He coveteth greedily all the day long : but the ^a righteous giveth and spareth not.

27 ^a The sacrifice of the wicked is abomination : how much more, when he bringeth it ^a with a wicked mind ?

28 ^a A ^a false witness shall perish : but the man that heareth speaketh constantly.

29 A wicked man hardeneth his face : but as for the upright, he ^a directeth his way.

30 ^a There is no wisdom nor understanding nor counsel against the LORD.

and shall not be restored to the divine favour ; particularly those sinners who were destroyed by the deluge. This passage intimates that those called rephaim are in a state of conscious existence. It is difficult to assign the true meaning of the word in several places where it occurs ; but it seems to mean the state of separate spirits, i. e., of those separated from their bodies, and awaiting the judgment of the great day : but the congregation may also include the fallen angels.

Verse 17. He that loveth pleasure.] When he should be attending to the culture of the fields.

Verse 18. The wicked shall be a ransom for the righteous.] God often in his judgments cuts off the wicked, in order to prevent them from destroying the righteous.

Verse 22. A wise man scaleth the city of the mighty.] Wisdom is in many respects preferable to strength, even in the case of defence.

Verse 25. The desire of the slothful killeth him.] He desires to eat, drink, and be clothed : but as he does not labour, hence he dies with this desire in his heart, envying those who possess plenty through their labour and industry.

Verse 27. When he bringeth it with a wicked mind.] If such a person even bring the sacrifices and offerings which God requires, they are an abomination to him, because the man is wicked.

Verse 31. The horse is prepared against the day of battle.] Among the ancient Asiatics, the horse was used only for war : oxen laboured in the plough and cart ; the ass and the camel carried backloads ; and mules and asses served for riding. We often give the credit of a victory to man, when they who consider the circumstances see that it came from God.

CHAPTER XXII.

A good reputation. The rich and the poor. The idle. Good habits formed in infancy. Injustice and its effects. The providence of God. The lewd woman. The necessity of timely correction. Exhortation to wisdom. Rob not the poor. Be not the companion of the froward. Avoid suretyship. Be honest. The industrious shall be favoured.

A GOOD name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and ^b loving favour rather than silver and gold.

2 ^c The rich and the poor meet together : ^d the Lord is the Maker of them all.

3 ^e A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself : but the simple pass on, and are punished.

4 ^f By ^g humility and the fear of the Lord are riches, honour, and life.

5 ^h Thorns and snares are in the way of the froward : ⁱ he that doth keep his soul shall be far from them.

6 ^j Train ^k up a child ^l in the way he should go : and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

7 ^m The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower is servant ⁿ to the lender.

8 ^o He that soweth iniquity shall reap vanity : ^p and the rod of his anger shall fail.

9 ^q He ^r that hath a bountiful eye shall be blessed ; for he giveth of his bread to the poor.

10 ^s Cast out the scorner, and contention shall go out ; yea, strife and reproach shall cease.

11 ^t He that loveth pureness of heart, ^u for the grace of his lips the king shall be his friend.

12 The eyes of the Lord preserve knowledge,

13 ^w The slothful man saith, There is a lion without, I shall be slain in the streets.

14 ^x The mouth of strange women is a deep pit : ^y he that is abhorred of the Lord shall fall therein.

15 Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child ; but ^z the rod of correction shall drive it far from him.

16 He that oppresseth the poor to increase his riches, and he that giveth to the rich, shall surely come to want.

17 Bow down thine ear, and hear the words of the wise, and apply thine heart unto my knowledge.

18 For ^{aa} it is a pleasant thing if thou keep them ^{ab} within thee ; they shall withal be fitted in thy lips.

is there any likelihood that such impressions shall ever be effaced, or that such habits shall ever be destroyed.

Chanac, which we translate train up or initiate, signifies also dedicate ; and is often used for the consecrating any thing, house, or person to the service of God. Dedicate, therefore, 'in the first instance, your child to God ; and nurse, teach, and discipline him as God's child, whom he has intrusted to your care.

Verse 7. The rich ruleth over the poor] So it is in the order of God, and may be a blessing to both.

Verse 8. He that soweth iniquity] The crop must be according to the seed. If a man sow thistle seed, is it likely he shall reap wheat ?

Verse 9. A bountiful eye] One that disposes him to help all that he sees to be in want ; the bountiful eye means the bountiful heart ; for the heart looks through the eye.

Verse 11. He that loveth pureness of heart] Who aims to be what God would have him to be,—the King of kings shall be his friend.

Verse 12. The eyes of the Lord—(the divine providence) preserve knowledge] This providence has been wonderfully manifested in preserving the sacred oracles, and in preserving many ancient authors, which have been of great use to the civil interests of man.

Verse 13. The slothful man saith, There is a lion without] He will not go abroad to work in the fields, because he thinks there is a lion in the way ; he will not go out into the town for employment, as he fears to be assassinated in the streets ! From both these circumstances he seeks total cessation from activity.

Verse 17. Bow down thine ear] From this to the end of ver. 21 are contained, not proverbs, but directions how to profit by that which wisdom has already delivered ; the nature of the instruction, and the end for which it was given.

Verse 1. A good name] Shem, a name, put for reputation, credit, fame.

Is rather to be chosen than great riches] Because character will support a man in many circumstances ; and there are many rich men that have no name : but the word of the man of character will go farther than all their riches.

Verse 2. The rich and the poor meet together] Without the poor, the rich could not be supplied with the articles which they consume ; for the poor include all the labouring classes of society : and without the rich, the poor could get no vent for the produce of their labour, nor, in many cases, labour itself.

The Lord is the Maker of them all] Both the states are in the order of God's providence, and both are equally important in his sight. How wise is that ordinance which has made the rich and the poor !

Verse 3. A prudent man foreseeth the evil] His experience shows him that there are many natural evils in a current state the course of which he can neither stem nor divert : prudence shows him beforehand the means he may use to step out of their way, and hide himself. The simple—the inexperienced, headstrong, giddy, and foolish, rush on in the career of hope, without prudence to regulate, chastise, and guide it.

Verse 5. Thorns and snares] Various difficulties, trials, and sufferings.

Verse 6. Train up a child in the way he should go] Literally, "Initiate the child at the opening (the mouth) of his path." When he comes to the opening of the way of life, being able to walk alone, and to choose ; stop at this entrance, and begin a series of instructions, how he is to conduct himself in every step he takes. Beg incessantly the blessing of God on all this teaching and discipline ; and then you have obeyed the injunction of the wisest of men. Nor Verse 23. Neither oppress the afflicted in the gate] In judgment let the poor have a fair hearing; and let him not be borne down because he is poor. Courts of justice were held at the gates of cities in the East.

Verse 24. For the Lord will plead their cause] Woe therefore to them that oppress them, for they will have God, not the poor, to deal with.

Verse 25. Make no friendship with an angry man] Spirit has a wonderful and unaccountable influence upon spirit. From those with whom we associate we acquire habits, and learn their ways, imbibe their spirit, show their tempers, and walk in their steps. We cannot be too choice of our company, for we may soon learn ways that will be a snare to our soul.

Verse 26. That strike hands] See on the parallel texts in the margin.

Verse 27. If thou hast nothing to pay] Should any man give security for more than he is worth? If he does, is it not a fraud on the very face of the transaction?

27 If thou hast nothing to pay, why should he take away thy bed from under thee?

28 ^a Remove not the ancient landmark, which thy fathers have set.

29 Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men.

^aDeut. xix. 14. xxvii. 17. Ch. xxlii. 10.—^a Or, bound.—^b Heb. obscure men.

Why should he take away thy bed from under thee?] The creditor will not pursue the debtor whom he knows to be worth nothing; but he will sue the bail or bondsman. And why shouldst thou put thyself in such circumstances as to expose thyself to the loss even of thy bed?

Verse 28. Remove not the ancient landmark] Do not take the advantage, in ploughing or breaking up a field contiguous to that of thy neighbour, to set the dividing stones farther into his field, that thou mayest enlarge thy own. Let all ancient divisions, and the usages connected with them, be held sacred. Bring in no new dogmas, nor rites, nor ceremonies into religion, or the worship of God, that are not clearly laid down in the sacred writings. Jer. vi. 16.

Verse 29. He shall not stand before mean men] Chashukim, dark or obscure persons; men of no repute.

The general meaning of the proverb is, "Every diligent, active man shall be at once independent and respectable."

CHAPTER XXIII.

Sobriety in eating and drinking, especially at the tables of the great. Have no fellowship with the covetous. Remove not the ancient landmark. Children should receive due correction. Avoid the company of wine-bibbers. Obedience to parents. Avoid lewd connexions. The effect of an unfeeling conscience.

WHEN thou sittest to eat with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee:

2 And put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite.

3 Be not desirous of his dainties: for they are deceitful meat.

4 ^a Labour not to be rich: ^b cease from thine own wisdom.

5 ^c Wilt thou set thine eyes upon that which is not? for riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away as an eagle toward heaven.

*Ch. xxviii. 20. 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.—^b Ch. iii. 5. Rom. xii. 16.—^c Heb. Will thou cause thine eyes to fly upon.—^d Ps. cxli. 4.—^e Deut.

Verse 1. When thou sittest to eat with a ruler] When invited to the table of thy betters, eat moderately. Do not appear as if half-starved at home. Eat not of delicacies to which thou art not accustomed; they are deceitful meat; they please, but they do not profit. These are prudential cautions; and should be carefully observed by all who would avoid the conduct of a clown, and desire to pass for a well-bred man.

Verse 2. Put a knife to thy throat] Eat, drink, and converse, under a check.

Verse 4. Labour not to be rich] Let not this be thy object. Labour to provide things honest in the sight of God and all men.

6 ^a Eat thou not the bread of him that hath ^a an evil eye, neither desire thou his dainty meats:

7 For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he: Eat and drink, saith he to thee; but his heart is not with thee.

8 The morsel which thou hast eaten shalt thou vomit up, and lose thy sweet words.

9 ^a Speak not in the ears of a fool: for he will despise the wisdom of thy words.

10 ^b Remove not the old landmark; and enter not into the fields of the fatherless:

11 ^c For their redeemer is mighty: he shall plead their cause with thee.

xx. 9.—^a Ps. xii. 2.—^b Ch. ix. 8. Matt. vii. 6.—^c Deut. xix. 14. xxvii. 17. Ch. xxii. 28.—^d Or, bound.—^e Job xxxi. 21. Ch. xxii. 29.

Cease from thine own wisdom] The world says, "Get rich if thou canst, and how thou canst." This is the devil's counsel, and well it is followed; but Solomon says, and God says, "Cease from thine own counsel." Lay up treasure for heaven, and be rich towards God.

Verse 6. Of him that hath an evil eye] Never eat with a covetous or stingy man; if he entertains you at his own expense, he grudges every morsel you put in your mouth.

Verse 8. The morsel which thou hast eaten] On reflection thou wilt even blame thyself for having accepted his invitation.

Verse 10. Enter not into the fields of the fatherless] Take nothing that belongs to an orphan. The heaviest curse of God will fall upon them that do so.

12 Apply thine heart unto instruction, and thine ears to the words of knowledge.

13 * Withhold not correction from the child: for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die.

14 Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and ^b shalt deliver his soul from hell.

15 My son, ^c if thine heart be wise, my heart shall rejoice, ^d even mine.

16 Yea, my reins shall rejoice, when thy lips speak right things.

17 * Let not thine heart envy sinners: but ^e be thou in the fear of the LORD all the day long.

18 * For surely there is an ^h end; and thine expectation shall not be cut off.

19 Hear thou, my son, and be wise, and ⁱ guide thine heart in the way.

20 ^j Be not among winebibbers; among riotous eaters ^k of flesh:

21 For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty: and ^l drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags.

22 * Harken unto thy father that begat thee, and despise not thy mother when she is old.

23 * Buy the truth, and sell it not; also wisdom, and instruction, and understanding.

24 * The father of the righteous shall greatly rejoice: and he that begetteth a wise child shall have joy of him.

25 Thy father and thy mother shall be glad, and she that bare thee shall rejoice.

26 My son, give me thine heart, and let thine eyes observe my ways.

27 ^m For a whore ⁿ is a deep ditch; and a strange woman ^o is a narrow pit.

28 * She also lieth in wait ^p as for a prey, and increaseth the transgressors among men.

29 * Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who ^q hath redness of eyes?

30 * They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek ^r mixed wine.

31 Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, ^s when it moveth itself aright.

32 At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like ^t an adder.

33 Thine eyes shall behold strange women, and thine heart shall utter perverse things.

34 Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down ^u in the midst of the sea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast.

35 ^v They have stricken me, ^w shalt thou say, and I was not sick; they have beaten me, ^x and ^y I ^z felt it not: ^{aa} when shall I awake? I will seek it yet again.

Verse 11. For their redeemer is mighty] The word means the person who has a right, being next in blood, to redeem a field or estate, alienated from the family; to avenge the blood of a murdered relative, by slaying the murderer; and to take to wife a brother's widow, who had died childless, in order to preserve the family. The strength here mentioned refers to the justness of his claim, the extent of his influence, and the powerful abettors of such a cause. But in reference to the orphans here mentioned, they having no kinsman, God takes up, vindicates, and avenges their cause.

Verse 14. Thou shalt beat him with the rod] A proper correction of children was a favourite point of discipline with Solomon.

Verse 18. Surely there is an end] There is another life; "and thy expectation" of the enjoyment of a blessed immortality "shall not be cut off."

Verse 22. Despise not thy mother when she is old] A very necessary caution, as very old women are generally helpless, useless, and burdensome: yet these circumstances do not at all lessen the child's duty.

Verse 23. Buy the truth] Acquire the knowledge of God at all events; too much pains, industry, and labour cannot be expended.

And sell it not] When once acquired, let no consideration deprive thee of it. Cleave to and guard it, even at the risk of thy life.

Verse 26. My son, give me thine heart] This is the speech of God to every human soul; give thy affections to God, so as to love him with all thy heart, soul, mind, and strength.

And let thine eyes observe my ways] Be obedient to me in all things. This exhortation contains three words: BELIEVE, LOVE, OBEY! This is the sum of God's counsels to every child of man.

Verse 28. Increaseth the transgressors among men] More iniquity springs from this one source of evil, than from any other cause in the whole system of sin.

Verse 29. Who hath woe?] I believe Solomon refers here to the natural effects of drunkenness. And perhaps of, which we translate woe, and aboi, which we translate sorrow, are mere natural sounds or vociferations that take place among drunken men, either from illness, or the nauseating effects of too much liquor.

Verse 31. Look not thou upon the wine] Let neither the colour, the odour, the sparkling, &c., of the wine, when poured out, induce thee to drink of it.

Verse 33. Thine eyes shall behold strange women] Evil concupiscence is inseparable from drunkenness.

Verse 34. Lieth down in the midst of the sea] He is utterly regardless of life; which is expressed very forcibly by one in a state of intoxication ascending the shrouds, clapping the mast-head, and there falling asleep; whence, in a few moments, he must either fall down upon the deck and be dashed to pieces, or fall into the sea and be drowned.

Verse 35. They have stricken me] SIN makes a man contemptible in life, miserable in death, and wretched to all eternity. Is it not strange, then, that men should LOVE it.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Do not be envious. Of the house wisely built. Counsel necessary in war. Save life when thou canst. Of honey and the honeycomb. Of the just that falleth seven times. We should not rejoice at the misfortune of others. Ruin of the wicked. Fear God and the king. Prepare thy word. The field of the sluggard, and the vineyard of the foolish described.

BE not thou ^a envious against evil men, ^b neither desire to be with them.

2 ^c For their heart studieth destruction, and their lips talk of mischief.

3 Through wisdom is an house builded; and by understanding it is established:

4 And by knowledge shall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant riches.

5 ^d A wise man is ^e strong; yea, a man of knowledge ^f increaseth strength.

6 ^g For by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war: and in multitude of counsellors there is safety.

7 ^h Wisdom is too high for a fool: he openeth not his mouth in the gate.

8 He that ⁱ deviseth to do evil shall be called a mischievous person.

9 The thought of foolishness is sin: and the scorner is an abomination to men.

Verse 3. Through wisdom is an house builded] That is, a family; household affairs.

Verse 5. A wise man is strong] His wisdom enables him to construct a great variety of machines, by which, under his own influence, he can do the labour of a hundred or even a thousand men. But in all cases wisdom gives power and influence; and he who is wise to salvation can overcome even Satan himself.

Verse 7. A fool—openeth not his mouth in the gate.] Is not put into public offices of trust and responsibility.

Verse 9. The thought of foolishness is sin] “The device of folly is transgression;” or, “an evil purpose is sinful;” or, perhaps more literally, “the device of the foolish is sin.”

Fool is here taken for a wicked man, who is not only evil in his actions, but every thought of his heart is evil, and that continually. A simple thought about foolishness, or about sin itself, is not sinful; it is the purpose or device, the harbouring evil thoughts, and devising how to sin, that is criminal.

Verse 10. If thou faint] If thou give way to discouragement and despair in the day of adversity—time of trial or temptation.

Thy strength is small.] Thy strength is contracted. In times of trial we should endeavour to be doubly courageous; when a man loses his courage, his strength avails him nothing.

Verse 11. If thou forbear to deliver] If thou seest the innocent taken by the hand of lawless power or superstitious zeal, and about to be put to death, thou shouldst rise up in their behalf, boldly plead for them, and testify to their innocence.

Verse 13. And the honeycomb] The flavour of honey is much finer in the honeycomb than it is after it has been expressed from it, and exposed to the action of the air.

Verse 14. So shall the knowledge of wisdom be unto thy soul] True religion, experimental godliness, shall be to thy soul as the honeycomb is to thy mouth.

Then there shall be a reward, and thy expectation shall not be cut off.] There is another world or life, and thy expectation of happiness in a future world shall not be cut off.

unto death, and those that are ready to be slain;

12 If thou sayest, Behold, we knew it not: doth not ^l he that pondereth the heart consider it? and he that keepeth thy soul, doth not he know it? and shall not he render to every man ^m according to his works?

13 My son, ⁿ eat thou honey, because it is good; and the honeycomb, which is sweet ^o to thy taste.

14 ^p So shall the knowledge of wisdom be unto thy soul: when thou hast found it, ^q then there shall be a reward, and thy expectation shall not be cut off.

15 ^r Lay not wait, O wicked man, against the dwelling of the righteous; spoil not his resting-place.

Verse 15. The dwelling of the righteous] Tsaddik, the man who is walking unblameably in all the testimonies of God; who is rendering to every man his due.

Verse 16. For a just man] Tsaddik, the righteous, the same person mentioned above.

Falleth seven times] Gets very often into distress through his resting-place being spoiled by the wicked man, the robber, the spoiler of the desert lying in wait for this purpose, ver. 15.

And riseth up again] Though God permit the hand of violence sometimes to spoil his tent, temptations to assail his mind, and afflictions to press down his body, he constantly emerges; and every time he passes through the furnace, he comes out brighter and more refined.

But the wicked shall fall into mischief.] And there they shall lie; having no strong arm to uphold them.

Verse 17. Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth] When he meets with any thing that injures him; for God will not have thee to avenge thyself, or feel any disposition contrary to love; for if thou do, the Lord will be angry, and may turn away his wrath from him, and pour it out on thee.

This I believe to be the true sense of these verses: but we must return to the sixteenth, as that has been most sinfully misrepresented.

For a just man falleth seven times.—That is, say many, “the most righteous man in the world sins seven times a day on an average.” Solomon does not say so:—1. There is not a word about sin in the text. 2. The word day is not in the Hebrew text, nor in any of the Versions. 3. The word yippol, from naphal, to fall, is never applied to sin. 4. When set in opposition to the words riseth up, it merely applies to affliction or calamity. See Mic. vii. 8; Amos. viii. 4; Jer. xxv. 27; and Ps. xxxiv. 19, 20. “The righteous falls into trouble.”

Verse 18. And he turn away his wrath from him.] Wrath is here taken for the effect of wrath, punishment; and the meaning must be as paraphrased above,—let he take the punishment from him, and inflict it upon thee.

Verse 20. For there shall be no reward to the evil man] There shall not be the future state of blessedness to the 21 My son, ^f fear thou the LORD and the king: and meddle not with ^h them that are given to change:

22 For their calamity shall rise suddenly; and who knoweth the ruin of them both?

23 These things also belong to the wise. ⁱ It is not good to have respect of persons in judgment.

24 ^j He that saith unto the wicked, Thou art righteous; him shall the people curse, nations shall abhor him:

25 But to them that rebuke him shall be delight, and ^k a good blessing shall come upon them.

wicked. His candle shall be put out; his prosperity shall finally cease, or he shall have no posterity. Some have thought that this text intimates the annihilation of sinners; but it refers not to being, but to the state or condition of being. The wicked shall be; but they shall not be HAPPY.

Verse 21. My son, fear thou the Lord and the king] Pay to each the homage due: to the LORD, divine honour and adoration; to the king, civil respect, civil honour, and political obedience.

Meddle not with them that are given to change] "And with the changelings mingle not thyself." The innovators; those who are always for making experiments on modes of government, forms of religion, &c. The most dangerous spirit that can infect the human mind.

Verse 26. Kiss his lips] Shall treat him with affection and respect.

Verse 27. Prepare thy work without] Do nothing without a plan. In winter prepare seed, implements, tackle, gears, &c., for seed-time and harvest.

Verse 28. Be not a witness] Do not be forward to offer thyself to bear testimony against a neighbour, in a matter which may prejudice him, where the essential claims of justice do not require such interference: and especially do not do this in a spirit of revenge, because he has injured thee before.

Verse 30. I went by the field of the slothful] This is a most instructive parable; is exemplified every day in a variety of forms; and is powerfully descriptive of the state of many a backslider and trifler in religion.

CHAPTER XXV.

A new series of Solomon's proverbs. God's glory in mysteries. Observations concerning kings. Avoid contentions. Opportune speech. The faithful ambassador. Delicacies to be sparingly used. Avoid familiarity. Amusements not grateful to a distressed mind. Do good to your enemies. The misery of dwelling with a scold. The necessity of moderation and self-government.

THESE ^a are also proverbs of Solomon, which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied out.

Verse 1. These are also proverbs of Solomon] It seems that the remaining part of this book contains Proverbs which had been collected by the order of king Hezekiah, and were added to the preceding book as a sort of supplement, having been collected from traditional sayings of Solomon. And as the men of Hezekiah may mean Isaiah, Shebna, and other inspired men, who lived in that time, we may consider them as of equal authority with the rest, else such men could not have united them to the sacred book.

Verse 2. It is the glory of God to conceal a thing] This has been understood as referring to the revelation of God's will in his word, where there are many things concealed in and ^a his throne shall be established in righteousness.

6 ^b Put not forth thyself in the presence of the king, and stand not in the place of great men :

And it is becoming the majesty of God so to publish his will, that it must be seriously studied to be understood, in order that the truth may be more prized when it is discovered. And if it be God's glory thus partially to conceal his purposes, it is the glory of a king to search and examine this word, that he may understand how by Him kings reign and princes decree judgment.

Verse 8. The heaven for height] The simple meaning of this is, the reasons of state, in reference to many acts of the executive government, can no more be fathomed by the common people, than the height of the heavens and the depth of the earth.

Verse 4. Take away the dross from the silver] ^a You cannot have a pure silver vessel till you have purified the silver ; and no nation can have a king a public blessing till the wicked—all bad counsellors, wicked and interested ministers, and sycophants, are banished from the court and cabinet.

Verse 7. Come up hither] Be humble ; affect not high things ; let those who are desperate climb dangerous precipices ; keep thyself quiet, and thou shalt live at ease, and in peace.

Verse 8. Go not forth hastily to strive] Lerib, to enter into a law-suit. Keep from this pit of the bottomless deep, unless urged by the direst necessity.

Verse 9. Debate thy cause with thy neighbour] Take the advice of friends. Let both sides attend to their counsels ; but do not tell the secret of thy business to any. After squandering your money away upon lawyers, both they and the judge will at last leave it to be settled by twelve of your fellow-citizens.

Verse 11. A word fitly spoken] Al ophannaiv, upon its wheels. An observation, caution, reproof, or advice, that comes in naturally, runs smoothly along, is not forced nor dragged in, that appears to be without design, to rise out of the conversation, and though particularly relative to one point, will appear to the company to suit all.

of the golden yellow fruit in the exquisitely wrought silver basket, which may be all termed picture work, has a fine and pleasing effect upon the eye, as the contained fruit has upon the palate at an entertainment in a sultry climate. So the word spoken judiciously and opportunely is as much in its place, as the golden apples in the silver baskets.

Verse 12. As an ear-ring of gold] I believe nexem to mean the nose ring, with its pendants ; the left nostril is pierced, and a ring put through it, as in the ear. This is very common in almost every part of the East, among women of condition.

Verse 13. As the cold of snow] Snow was frequent in Judea ; and in the East they have snow-houses—places dug under ground, where they lay up snow for summer use. By means of the mass of snow deposited in them, the icy temperature is kept up, so that the snow is easily preserved. How agreeable this must be in a burning climate, may be easily conceived.

Verse 14. A false gift] A lying gift, one promised, but never bestowed. "A bragging man, who does not fulfil his promises," is like clouds which appear to be laden with vapour, and like the wind which, though it blow from a rainy quarter, brings no moistness with it.

Verse 15. A soft tongue breaketh the bone.] An angry word does nothing but mischief.

Verse 16. Hast thou found honey ?] Make a moderate use of all thy enjoyments.

Verse 17. Withdraw thy foot] Another proverb will illustrate this : "Too much familiarity breeds contempt."

Verse 20. As vinegar upon nitre] The original word nather is what is known among chemists as the natron of the ancients and of the Scriptures, and carbonate of soda. It is found native in Syria and India, and occurs as an efflorescence on the soil. It appears to have its Hebrew name from nathar, to dissolve or loosen : because a solution of it in water is abstrusive, taking out spots, &c. It is used in the East for the purposes of washing. If vinegar be poured on it, a strong fermentation immediately takes place.

Verse 22. Thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head] Not to consume, but to melt him into kindness ; a metaphor taken from smelting metallic ores

Verse 23. The north wind driveth away rain.] The margin has, "The north wind bringeth forth rain." This is the true reading.
A backbiting tongue.] A hidden tongue.

Verse 27. It is not good to eat much honey.] He that searches too much into mysteries is likely to be confounded by them. I think this is the meaning of the phrase.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Honour is not seemly in a fool. The correction and treatment suitable to such Of the slothful man. Of him who interferes with matters which do not concern him. Contentions to be avoided. Of the dissembler and the lying tongue.

AS snow in summer, *and as rain in harvest; so honour is not seemly for a fool.

2 As the bird by wandering, as the swallow by flying, so *the curse causeless shall not come.

3 *A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back.

4 Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like unto him.

5 *Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in *his own conceit.

6 He that sendeth a message by the hand of a fool cutteth off the feet, and drinketh *damage.

7 The legs of the lame *are not equal; so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

8 *As he that bindeth a stone in a sling, so is he that giveth honour to a fool.

9 As a thorn goeth up into the hand of a drunkard; so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

10 *The great God that formed all things both rewardeth the fool, and rewardeth transgressors.

11 As a dog returneth to his vomit; *so a fool *returneth to his folly.

12 *Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? there is more hope of a fool than of him.

13 *The slothful man saith, There is a lion in the way; a lion is in the streets.

Luke xviii. 11.

Verse 1. As snow in summer] None of these is suitable to the time; and at this unsuitable time, both are unwelcome: so a fool to be in honour is unbecoming.

Verse 2. As the bird.] As the sparrow flies about the house and the swallow emigrates to strange countries; so an undeserved malediction may flutter about the neighbourhood for a season: but in a short time it will disappear as the bird of passage; and never take effect on the innocent person against whom it was pronounced.

Verse 3. A whip for the horse] Correction is as suitable to a fool, as a whip is for a horse, or a bridle for an ass.

Verse 6. Cutteth off the feet] Sending by such a person is utterly useless.

Verse 8. As he that bindeth a stone in a sling, so is he that giveth honour to a fool.] It is entirely thrown away. The Hebrew may be translated, "As a piece of precious stone among a heap of stones, so is he that giveth honour to a fool."

Verse 10. The great God that formed all things] See the margin, where this verse is very differently translated. The rab may mean either the great God, or a great man: hence the two renderings, in the text and in the margin.

Verse 16. That seven men that can render a reason.] Seven here only means perfection, abundance, or multitude.

14 As the door turneth upon his hinges, so doth the slothful upon his bed.

15 *The slothful hideth his hand in his bosom; *it grieveth him to bring it again to his mouth.

16 The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit than seven men that can render a reason.

17 He that passeth by, and *meddleth with strife belonging not to him, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears.

18 As a mad man who casteth *firebrands, arrows, and death;

19 So is the man that deceiveth his neighbour, and saith, *Am not I in sport?

20 *Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: so *where there is no *talebearer, the strife *ceaseth.

21 *As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire; so is a contentious man to kindle strife.

22 *The words of a talebearer are as wounds, and they go down into the *innermost parts of the belly.

23 Burning lips and a wicked heart are like a potsherd covered with silver dross.

24 He that hateth *dissembleth with his lips, and layeth up deceit within him:

25 *When he *speaketh fair, believe him not; for there are seven abominations in his heart.

26 *Whose hatred is covered by deceit, his wicked-

He is wiser in his own eyes than a multitude of the wisest men.

Verse 17. He that passeth by] This proverb stands true ninety-nine times out of a hundred, where people meddle with domestic broils, or differences between men and their wives.

Verse 19. Am not I in sport?] Sportive as such persons may think their conduct to be, it is as ruinous as that of the madman who shoots arrows, throws firebrands, and projects in all directions instruments of death, so that some are wounded, some burnt, and some slain.

Verse 20. Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out] The tale-receiver and the tale-bearer are the agents of discord. If none received the slander in the first instance, it could not be propagated. Hence our proverb, "The receiver is as bad as the thief."

Verse 23. Burning lips and a wicked heart] Splendid, shining, smooth lips; that is, lips which make great professions of friendship are like a vessel plated over with base metal to make it resemble silver; but it is only a vile pot, and even the outside is not pure.

Verse 25. When he speaketh fair] For there are such hypocrites and false friends in the world.

ness shall be shewed before the whole congregation.
27 * Whoso diggeth a pit shall fall therein: and he that rolleth a stone, it will return upon him.

* Ps. vii, 15, 18. ix. 15. x. 2.

Believe him not] Let all his professions go for nothing. For there are seven abominations in his heart.] That is, he is full of abominations.

Verse 27. Whoso diggeth a pit] There is a Latin proverb like this: Malum consilium consultori pessimum, "A bad counsel, but worst to the giver."

28 A lying tongue hateth those that are afflicted by it; and a flattering mouth worketh ruin.

lvii. 6. Ch. xxviii. 10. Eccles. x. 8.

Verse 28. A lying tongue hateth those that are afflicted by it] He that injures another hates him in proportion to the injury he has done him; and, strange to tell, in proportion to the innocence of the oppressed. The debtor cannot bear the sight of his creditor; nor the knave, of him whom he has injured.

CHAPTER XXVII.

To-morrow is uncertain. Self-praise forbidden. Anger and envy. Reproof from a friend. Want makes us feel the value of a supply. A good neighbour. Beware of suretiship. Suspicious praise. The quarrelsome woman. One friend helps another. Man insatiable. The incorrigible fool. Domestic cares. The profit of flocks for food and raiment.

BOAST * not thyself of to-morrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth.

2 * Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips.

3 A stone is heavy, and the sand weighty; but a fool's wrath is heavier than them both.

4 * Wrath is cruel, and anger is outrageous; but who is able to stand before envy?

5 * Open rebuke is better than secret love.

6 * Faithful are the wounds of a friend: but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful.

7 The full soul loatheth an honeycomb; but to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet.

8 As a bird that wandereth from her nest, so is a man that wandereth from his place.

9 Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart: so doth the sweetness of a man's friend by hearty counsel.

Verse 1. Boast not thyself of to-morrow] Do not depend on any future moment for spiritual good which at present thou needest, and God is willing to give, and without which, should death surprise thee, thou must be eternally lost; such as repentance, faith in Christ, the pardon of sin, the witness of the Holy Spirit, and complete renovation of soul.

Verse 2. Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth] "Self-praise is no recommendation."

Verse 5. Open rebuke is better than secret love.] Partial friendship covers faults; envy, malice, and revenge will exhibit, heighten, and even multiply them. The former conceals us from ourselves; the latter shows us the worst part of our character. Thus we are taught the necessity of amendment and correction. In this sense open rebuke is better than secret love. Yet it is a rough medicine, and none can desire it. But the genuine open-hearted friend may be intended, who tells you your faults freely, but conceals them from all others; hence the sixth verse: "Faithful are the wounds of a friend."

Verse 8. As a bird that wandereth from her nest] So is the man who leaves his family connections and country, and goes into strange parts to find employment, better his circumstances, make a fortune, &c.

10 Thine own friend, and thy father's friend, forsake not; neither go into thy brother's house in the day of thy calamity: for better is a neighbour that is near, than a brother far off.

11 * My son, be wise, and make my heart glad, that I may answer him that reproacheth me.

12 * A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself; but the simple pass on, and are punished.

13 * Take his garment that is surety for a stranger, and take a pledge of him for a strange woman.

14 He that blesseth his friend with a loud voice, rising early in the morning, it shall be counted a curse to him.

15 * A continual dropping in a very rainy day and a contentious woman are alike.

16 Whosoever hideth her hideth the wind, and the ointment of his right hand, which bewrayeth itself.

17 Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend.

Verse 9. Ointment and perfume] Anointing the head and various parts of the body with aromatic oil is frequent in the East, and fuming the beards of the guests at the conclusion of an entertainment is almost universal; as is also sprinkling rose-water, and water highly odoriferous.

Verse 10. Thine own friend] A well and long tried friend is invaluable. Him that has been a friend to thy family never forget, and never neglect. And, in the time of adversity, rather apply to such a one, than go to thy nearest relative, who keeps himself at a distance.

Verse 14. He that blesseth his friend] Extravagant public professions are little to be regarded.

Verse 16. Whosoever hideth her hideth the wind] You may as well attempt to repress the blowing of the wind, as the tongue of a sould; and to conceal this unfortunate propensity of a wife is as impossible as to hush the storm, and prevent its sound from being heard.

The ointment of his right hand] You can no more conceal such a woman's conduct, than you can the smell of the aromatic oil with which your hand has been anointed. The Hebrew is very obscure, and has been variously translated.

18 *Whoso keepeth the fig tree shall eat the fruit thereof: so he that waiteth on his master shall be honoured.

19 As in water face answereth to face; so the heart of man to man.

20 ^b Hell and destruction are ^c never full, so ^d the eyes of man are never satisfied.

21 * As the fining pot for silver, and the furnace for gold; so is a man to his praise.

22 'Though thou shouldest bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him.

Verse 17. Iron sharpeneth iron] As hard iron, viz., steel, will bring a knife to a better edge when it is properly whetted against it; so one friend may be the means of exciting another to reflect, dive deeply into, and illustrate a subject, without which whetting or excitement, this had never taken place.

Verse 19. As in water face answereth to face] All men's hearts are pretty nearly alike; water is not more like to water, than one heart to another. Or, as a man sees his face perfectly reflected by the water, when looking into it; so the wise and penetrating man sees generally what is in the heart of another by considering the general tenor of his words and actions.

Verse 20. Hell and destruction are never full] How hideous must the soul of a covetous man be, when God compares it to hell and perdition!

The eyes of man are never satisfied.] As the grave can never be filled up with bodies, nor perdition with souls; so the restless desire, the lust of power, riches, and splendour, is never satisfied.

Verse 21. As the fining pot for silver] As silver and gold are tried by the art of the refiner, so is a man's heart by the praise he receives.

Verse 22. Though thou shouldest bray a fool] A metaphor

23 Be thou diligent to know the state of thy flocks, and look well to thy herds.

24 For ^b riches are not for ever: and doth the crown endure ^c to every generation?

25 'The hay appeareth, and the tender grass sheweth itself, and herbs of the mountains are gathered.

26 The lambs are for thy clothing, and the goats are the price of the field.

27 And thou shalt have goats' milk enough for thy food, for the food of thy household, and for the ^b maintenance for thy maidens.

taken from pounding metallic ores in very large mortars such as are still common in the East, in order that, when subjected to the action of the fire, the metal may be the more easily separated from the ore.

Verse 23. The state of thy flocks] Do not trust thy flocks to the shepherd merely.

Verse 24. For riches are not for ever] All other kinds of property are very transitory. Money and the highest civil honours are but for a short season. Flocks and herds, properly attended to, may be multiplied and continued from generation to generation. The crown itself is not naturally so permanent.

Verse 25. The hay appeareth] Take care that this be properly mown, carefully dried, and safely ricked or housed. And when the tender grass and the proper herbs appear in the mountains in the spring, then send forth the lambs, the young of the flock, that they may get suitable pasturage, without too much impoverishing the home fields; for by the sale of the lambs and goats, the price of the fields is paid—all the landlord's demands are discharged.

Verse 27. Goats' milk enough for thy food] "To thy bread;" for they ate the bread and supped the milk to assist mastication, and help deglutition.

CHAPTER XXVIII

The timidity of the wicked. Quick succession in the government of a country is a punishment to the land. Of the poor who oppress the poor. The upright poor man is preferable to the wicked rich man. The unprofitable conduct of the usurer. The prosperity of the righteous a cause of rejoicing. He is blessed who fears always. A wicked ruler a curse. The murderer generally execrated. The faithful man. The corrupt judge. The foolishness of trusting in one's own heart. The charitable man. When the wicked are elevated it is a public evil.

THE ^a wicked flee when no man pursueth: but the righteous are bold as a lion.

2 For the transgression of a land many are the princes thereof: but ^b by a man of understanding and knowledge the state thereof shall be prolonged.

* Lev. xxvi. 17, 36. Ps. lxxv. 5.—^a Or, by men of understanding and wisdom shall they likewise be prolonged.—^b Matt. xviii. 28.—^c Heb. without food.—^d Ps. x. 3. xlix. 18. Rom. i. 32.—^e 1 Kings xviii. 18, Verse 1. The wicked flee] Every wicked man, however bold he may appear, is full of dreary apprehensions relative to both worlds. But the righteous has true courage, being conscious of his own innocence, and the approbation of his God.

Verse 2. Many are the princes] Nations, as nations, cannot be judged in a future world; therefore, God judges

3 * A poor man that oppresseth the poor is like a sweeping rain, ^d which leaveth no food.

4 * They that forsake the law praise the wicked: ^b but such as keep the law contend with them.

5 * Evil men understand not judgment: but ^b they that seek the Lord understand all things.

them here. And where the people are very wicked, and the constitution very bad, the succession of princes is frequent—they are generally taken off by an untimely death.

But by a man of understanding] Whether he be a king, or the king's prime minister, the prosperity of the state is advanced by his counsels.

Verse 3. A poor man that oppresseth the poor] Our 6 ^a Better is the poor that walketh in his uprightness, than he that is perverse in his ways, though he be rich.

7 ^b Whoso keepeth the law is a wise son: but he that is a companion of riotous men shameth his father.

8 ^c He that by usury and ^e unjust gain increaseth his substance, he shall gather it for him that will pity the poor.

9 ^f He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, ^g even his prayer shall be abomination.

10 ^h Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way, he shall fall himself into his own pit: but the upright shall have good things in possession.

11 The rich man is wise in his own conceit: but the poor that hath understanding searcheth him out.

12 ^k When righteous men do rejoice, there is great glory: but when the wicked rise, a man is hidden.

13 ^l He that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy.

14 Happy is the man ^m that feareth alway: ⁿ but he that hardeneth his heart shall fall into mischief.

15 ^p As a roaring lion, and a ranging bear; ^q so is a wicked ruler over the poor people.

16 The prince that wanteth understanding is also a great oppressor: but he that hateth covetousness shall prolong his days.

Lord illustrates this proverb most beautifully, by the parable of the two debtors, Matt. xviii. 23.

Like a sweeping rain] These are frequent in the East; and sometimes carry flocks, crops, and houses away with them.

Verse 4. They that forsake the law] He that transgresses says, in fact, that it is right to transgress; and thus other wicked persons are encouraged.

Verse 5. They that seek the Lord understand all things.] They are wise unto salvation; they "have an unction from the Holy One, and they know all things," 1 John ii. 20, every thing that is essentially needful for them to know, in reference to both worlds.

Verse 8. He that by usury—increaseth his substance] By taking unlawful interest for his money; lending to a man in great distress money, for the use of which he requires an exorbitant sum.

Verse 9. He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law] Many suppose, if they do not know their duty, they shall not be accountable for their transgressions; and therefore avoid every thing that is calculated to enlighten them. Even the prayers of such persons are reputed sin before God.

Verse 10. Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray] He who strives to pervert one really converted to God, in order that he may pour contempt on religion, shall fall into that hell to which he has endeavoured to lead the other.

Verse 12. When righteous men do rejoice] When true religion is no longer persecuted, and the word of God duly esteemed, there is great glory; for the word of the Lord has then free course, runs, and is glorified—but when the wicked rise—when they are elevated to places of trust, and put at the head of civil affairs, then the righteous man is obliged to hide himself; the word of the Lord becomes scarce, and there is no open vision.

Verse 18. He that covereth his sins] Here is a general

17 ^a A man that doeth violence to the blood of any person shall flee to the pit; let no man stay him.

18 ^b Whoso walketh uprightly shall be saved: but he that is perverse in his ways shall fall at once.

19 ^c He that tilleth his land shall have plenty of bread: but he that followeth after vain persons shall have poverty enough.

20 A faithful man shall abound with blessings: but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent.

21 ^d To have respect of persons is not good; for ^e for a piece of bread that man will transgress.

22 ^f He ^g that hasteth to be rich ^h hath an evil eye, and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him.

23 ⁱ He that rebuketh a man afterwards shall find more favour than he that flattereth with the tongue.

24 Whoso robbeth his father or his mother, and saith, It is no transgression; the same ^j is the companion of ^k a destroyer.

25 ^l He that is of a proud heart stirreth up strife: but he that putteth his trust in the Lord shall be made fat.

26 He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool: but whoso walketh wisely, he shall be delivered.

27 ^m He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack: but he that hideth his eyes shall have many a curse.

28 ⁿ When the wicked rise, ^o men hide themselves: but when they perish, the righteous increase.

direction relative to conversion. 1. If the sinner do not acknowledge his sins, he shall find no salvation. God will never admit a sinful, unhumiliated soul into his kingdom. 2. But if he confess his sin, with a penitent and broken heart, and, by forsaking every evil way, give this proof that he feels his own sore, and the plague of his heart, then he shall have mercy.

Verse 14. Happy is the man that feareth alway] That ever carries about with him that reverential and filial fear of God, which will lead him to avoid sin, and labour to do that which is lawful and right in the sight of God his Saviour.

Verse 16. The prince that wanteth understanding] A weak prince will generally have wicked ministers, for his weakness prevents him from making a proper choice; and he is apt to prefer them who flatter him and minister most to his pleasures. The quantum of the king's intellect may be always appreciated by the mildness or oppressiveness of his government.

Verse 17. That doeth violence to the blood] He who either slays the innocent, or procures his destruction, may flee to hide himself: but let none give him protection. The law demands his life, because he is a murderer and let none deprive justice of its claim.

Verse 18. Shall fall at once.] Shall fall without resource, altogether.

Verse 24. Whoso robbeth his father] He is worse than a common robber; to the act of dishonesty and rapine he adds ingratitude, cruelty, and disobedience. Such a person is the companion of a destroyer; he may be considered as a murderer.

Verse 25. Shall be made fat.] Shall be prosperous.

Verse 26. He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool] For his heart, which is deceitful and desperately wicked, will infallibly deceive him.

CHAPTER XXIX.

We must not despise correction. The prudent king. The flatterer. The just judge. Contend not with a fool. The prince who opens his ears to reports. The poor and the deceitful. The pious king. The insolent servant. The humiliation of the proud. Of the partner of a thief. The fear of man. The Lord the righteous Judge.

* HE, ^bthat being often reproved hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

3 'Whoso loveth wisdom rejoiceth his father : *but he that keepeth company with harlots spendeth his substance.

4 The king by judgment establisheth the land : but ^bhe that receiveth gifts overthroweth it.

5 A man that flattereth his neighbour spreadeth a net for his feet.

6 In the transgression of an evil man there is a snare : but the righteous doth sing and rejoice.

7 'The righteous considereth the cause of the poor : but the wicked regardeth not to know it.

8 'Scornful man ^abring a city into a snare : but wise men ¹turn away wrath.

9 If a wise man contendeth with a foolish man, ^mwhether he rage or laugh, there is no rest.

10 * The ^obloodthirsty hate the upright : but the just seek his soul.

11 A ^pfool uttereth all his mind : but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards.

19 A servant will not be corrected by words : for though he understand he will not answer.

20 Seest thou a man that is hasty ^cin his words ? ^dthere is more hope of a fool than of him.

Verse 1. Hardeneth his neck] Becomes stubborn and obstinate.

Verse 3. But he that keepeth company] Roeb, he that feedeth harlots, yeabed, shall utterly destroy his substance. Has there ever been a single case to the contrary ?

Verse 5. Spreadeth a net for his feet] Beware of a flatterer ; he does not flatter merely to please you, but to deceive you and profit himself.

Verse 11. A fool uttereth all his mind] A man should be careful to keep his own secret, and never tell his whole mind upon any subject, while there are other opinions yet to be delivered ; else, if he speak again, he must go over his old ground ; and as he brings out nothing new, he injures his former argument.

Verse 12. If a ruler hearken to lies] Wherever the system of espionage is permitted to prevail, there the system of falsity is established ; for he who is capable of being a spy and informer, is not only capable of telling and swearing lies, but also of cutting his king's or even his father's throat.

Verse 13. The poor and the deceitful man] It is difficult to fix the meaning of techachim, which we here render the deceitful man. I suppose the meaning may be the same as in chap. xxii. 2 : "The rich and the poor meet together ; the Lord is the Maker of them all."

Verse 16. When the wicked are multiplied] On this account wicked nations and wicked families are cut off and rooted out. Were it not so, righteousness would in process of time be banished from the earth.

Verse 18. Where there is no vision] Where divine revelation, and the faithful preaching of the sacred testimonies, are neither revered nor attended, the ruin of that land is at no great distance.

But he that keepeth the law, happy is he] Go how it may with others, he shall be safe.

Verse 21. He that delicately bringeth up his servant] Such persons are generally forgetful of their obligations, assume the rights and privileges of children, and are seldom good for anything.

Verse 22. An angry man stirreth up strife] His spirit begets its like wherever he goes.

And a furious man aboundeth in transgression] His furious spirit is always carrying him into extremes, and each of these is a transgression.

Verse 24. Hateth his own soul] Raphsho, his life, as the outraged law may at any time seize on and put him to death.

He heareth cursing] Alah, the execration or adjuration (for all culprits were charged, as before God, to tell the truth), velo yoggid, but he will not tell it. He has no fear of God, nor reverence for an oath, because his heart is hardened through the deceitfulness of sin.

Verse 25. The fear of man bringeth a snare] How often has this led weak men, though sincere in their general character, to deny their God, and abjure his people!

Verse 26. Many seek the ruler's favour To be screened from the punishment determined by the law; but should he grant the favour sought, and pardon the criminal, this takes not away his guilt in the sight of God, from whom all just judgment proceeds.

CHAPTER XXX.

Agur's confession of faith, 1-6. His prayer, 7-9. Of wicked generations, 10-14. Things that are never satisfied, 15, 16. Of him who despises his parents, 17. Three wonderful things, 18-20. Three things that disquiet the land, 21-23. Four little but very intelligent animals, 24-28. Four things that go well, 29-31. A man should cease from doing foolishly, and from strife, 32, 33.

THE words of Agur the son of Jakeh, even the prophecy: the man spake unto Ithiel, even unto Ithiel and Ucal, 3 I neither learned wisdom, nor ^c have the knowledge of the holy.

4 ^a Who hath ascended up into heaven, or descended? ^a who hath gathered the wind in his fists? who hath bound the waters in a garment? who hath established all the ends of the earth? what is his name and what is his son's name, if thou canst tell?

6 ^a Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.

8 Remove far from me vanity and lies: give me neither poverty nor riches; ^b feed me with food convenient for me.

9 ^a Lest I be full, and ^a deny thee, and say, Who is the LORD? or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain.

10 ^a Accuse not a servant unto his master, lest he curse thee, and thou be found guilty.

11 There is a generation that curseth their father, and doth not bless their mother.

12 There is a generation ^a that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness.

13 There is a generation, O how ^a lofty are their eyes! and their eyelids are lifted up.

14 ^a There is a generation, whose teeth are as swords, and their jaw teeth as knives, ^a to devour the poor from off the earth, and the needy from among men.

Verse 1. The words of Agur the son of Jakeh] The words Agur, Jakeh, Ithiel, and Ucal, have been considered by some as proper names; by others, as descriptive characters. With some, Agur is Solomon; and Jakeh, David; and Ithiel and Ucal are epithets of Christ.

From this introduction, from the names here used, and from the style of the book, it appears evident that Solomon was not the author of this chapter; and that it was designed to be distinguished from his work by this very preface, which specifically distinguishes it from the preceding work.

Verse 2. Surely I am more brutish] These words can in no sense, nor by any mode of speech, be true of Solomon. But Agur might have used them with strict propriety, for aught we know; for it is very probable that he was a rustic, without education, and without any human help, as was the prophet Amos; and that all that he knew now was by the inspiration of the Almighty, independently of which he was rustic and uneducated.

Verse 3. I neither learned wisdom] I have never been a scholar in any of those schools of the wise men, nor have the knowledge of the holy, of the saints or holy persons.

Verse 4. Who hath ascended up into heaven, or descended?] The person whose words we are here examining speaks a knowledge more sublime than that contained in the simple laws of the Lord, common to all the people of Israel. He speaks of the sublime science of the designs of God, of his ways, and of his secrets; and in this sense he affirms he has no knowledge.

Who hath gathered the wind in his fists?] It is as difficult for a mortal man to acquire this divine science by his own reason and strength, as to collect the winds in his fists.

What is his name?] Show me the nature of this Supreme Being.

What is his son's name?] Some copies of the Septuagint have "Or the name of his sons;" meaning, I suppose, the holy angels, called his saints or holy ones, ver. 8.

Many are of opinion that Agur refers here to the first and second persons of the ever-blessed TRINITY. It may be so; but who would venture to rest the proof of that most glorious doctrine upon such a text, to say nothing of the obscure author? The doctrine is true, sublimely true; but many doctrines have suffered in controversy, by improper texts being urged in their favour.

Verse 5. Every word of God is pure] "Every oracle of God is purified." A metaphor taken from the purifying of metals. Whatever trials it may be exposed to, it is always like gold: it bears the fire, and comes out with the same lustre, the same purity, and the same weight.

He is a shield unto them] And this oracle among the rest. "He is the defence of all them that put their trust in him."

17 'The eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of ^b the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it.

18 There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not:

19 The way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the ^cmidst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid.

20 Such is the way of an adulterous woman; she eateth, and wipeth her mouth, and saith, I have done no wickedness.

21 For three things the earth is disquieted, and for four which it cannot bear:

22 ^d For a servant when he reigneth; and a fool when he is filled with meat;

23 For an odious woman when she is married; and an handmaid that is heir to her mistress.

24 There be four things which are little upon the earth, but they are ^e exceeding wise:

^a Gen. ix. 22. Lev. xx. 9. Ch. xx. 20. xlii. 22. — ^b Or, the brook — ^c Heb. heart. — ^d Ch. xix. 10. Eccles. x. 7 — ^e Heb. wise, made wise. — Ch. vi. 6, &c. — ^f Ps. civ. 18. — ^g Heb. gathered together. —

Verse 6. Add not thou unto his words] You can no more increase their value by any addition, than you can that of gold by adding any other metal to it.

Lest he reprove thee] Lest he try thy word by fire, as his has been tried; and it appears that, far from abiding the test, the fire shows thine to be reprobate silver; and so thou be found a falsifier of God's word, and a liar.

Verse 7. Two things have I required of thee] These two petitions are mentioned in the next verse; and he wishes to have them answered before he should die. That is, he wishes the answer now, that he may live the rest of his life in the state he describes.

Verse 8. Remove far from me vanity and lies] 1. Shav, all false shows, all false appearances of happiness, every vain expectation. Let me not set my heart on any thing that is not solid, true, durable, and eternal. 2. Lies, all words of deception, empty pretensions, false promises, uncertain dependencies, and words that fail; promises which, when they become due, are like bad bills; they are dishonoured because they are found to be forged, or the drawer insolvent.

From the import of the original, I am satisfied that Agur prays against idolatry, false religion, and false worship of every kind.

Give me neither poverty nor riches] Here are three requests: 1. Give me not poverty. The reason is added: Lest, being poor, I shall get into a covetous spirit, and, impelled by want, distrust my Maker, and take my neighbour's property; and in order to excuse, hide, or vindicate my conduct, I take the name of my God in vain; taphasti, "I catch at the name of God." Or, by swearing falsely, endeavour to make myself pass for innocent.

2. Give me not riches. For which petition he gives a reason also: Lest I be full, and addict myself to luxurious living, pamper the flesh and starve the soul, and so deny thee, the Fountain of goodness; and, if called on to resort to first principles, I say, Who is Jehovah? Why should I acknowledge, why should I serve him? And thus cast aside all religion, and all moral obligation.

3. The third request is, Feed me with food convenient for me, the meaning of which is, "give me as prey my statute allowance of bread," i.e., my daily bread, a sufficient portion for each day. The allusion is to hunting.

Verse 10. Accuse not a servant] In general, do not meddle with other people's servants.

Verse 11. There is a generation] In this and the three following verses the wise man points out four grand evils that prevailed in his time.

Verse 15. The horseleach hath two daughters, crying, Give, give.] Many explanations have been given of this verse; but as all the Versions agree in rendering alukah the horseleach or bloodsucker, the general meaning collected has been, "There are persons so excessively covetous and greedy, that they will scarcely let any live but themselves; and when they lay hold of any thing by which they may profit, they never let go their hold till they have extracted the last portion of good from it."

25 'The ants are a people not strong; yet they prepare their meat in the summer;

26 'The conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks;

27 The locusts have no king, yet go they forth all of them ^b by bands;

28 The spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in kings' palaces.

29 There be three things which go well, yea, four are comely in going:

30 A lion which is strongest among beasts, and turneth not away for any;

31 A 'greyhound; ^c an he-goat also; and a king, against whom there is no rising up.

32 If thou hast done foolishly in lifting up thyself, or if thou hast thought evil, ^d lay thine hand upon thy mouth.

33 Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter, and the wringing of the nose bringeth forth blood: so the forcing of wrath bringeth forth strife.

^a Or, horse. — ^b Heb. girt in the loins. — ^c Job xxi 5. xl. 4. Eccles. viii. 8. Mic. vii. 16.

The word which we here translate horseleach, is read in no other part of the Bible. May it not, like Agur, Jakeh, Ithiel, and Ucal, be a proper name, belonging to some well-known woman of his acquaintance, and well known to the public, who had two daughters notorious for their covetousness and lechery?

Verse 17. The eye that mocketh at his father] This seems to be spoken against those who curse their father, and do not bless their mother, ver. 11.

The ravens of the valley] Those which frequent the places where dead carcases and offal are most likely to be found.

The young eagles shall eat it.] The mother eagle shall scoop out such an eye, and carry it to the nest to feed her young.

Verse 19. The way of an eagle] If we take the four things which Agur says were too wonderful for him, in their obvious sense, there is little difficulty in them. 1. The passage which a bird makes through the air; 2. That which is made by a serpent on a rock; and, 3. That made by a ship through the sea, are such as cannot be ascertained: for who can possibly show the track in which either of them has passed? And as to the fourth, if it refer to the suspected incontinence of one reputed a virgin, the signs are so equivocal as to be absolutely unascertainable.

Verse 21. For three things the earth is disquieted, and for four which it cannot bear] This is another enigma. Four things insupportable to men.

1. A slave, when he comes to bear rule, is an unprincipled tyrant.

2. The overfed fool. The intellectually weak man, who has every thing at his command, has generally manners which none can bear; and, if a favourite with his master, he is insupportable to all others.

3. An ill-tempered woman, when she gets embarrassed with domestic cares, is beyond bearing.

4. A servant maid, when, either through the death of the mistress, or the sin of the husband, she is in fact exalted to be head over the family, is so insolent and impudent, as to be hateful to every one, and execrated by all.

Verse 24. There be four things]

1. The ants show their wisdom by preparing their meat in the summer; seeking for it and storing it when it may be had; not for winter consumption, for they sleep all that time; but for autumn and spring. The ants are a people; they have their houses, towns, cities, public roads, &c.

2. The rabbits act curiously enough in the construction of their burrows; but the word shaphan probably does not here mean the animal we call coney or rabbit. It is most likely a creature like a rabbit, never burrowing in the ground, but dwelling in clefts and holes of rocks.

3. The locusts. Though they have no leader; yet they go forth by troops, some miles in circumference, when they take wing.

4. The spider. This is a singularly curious animal, both in the manner of constructing her house, her nets, and taking her prey. [Probably the reference of the original is to one of the new tribe.]

Verse 29. There be three things which go well]

1. Nothing can be more majestic than the walk of the lion. It is deliberate, equal, firm, and in every respect becoming the king of the forest.

2. The greyhound. Zarzir mothnayim, the girl in the loins; but what this beast is we do not distinctly know. It is most likely that this was the greyhound, which in the East are remarkably fine, and very fleet.

3. The goat. This is generally allowed to be the he-goat; and how he walks, and what state he assumes, in the presence of his part of the flock, every one knows, who has at all noticed this animal.

4. And a king, against whom there is no rising up. That is, a king whose court, counsels, and troops are so firmly united to him, as to render all hopes of successful conspiracy against him utterly vain. He walks boldly and majestically about, being safe in the affections of his people. But the Hebrew is singular; it makes but two words; "and king Alkum." It is a doubt whether this may not be a proper name, as Agur abounds in them; see Ithiel, Ucal, and probably Alukah, ver. 15.

Verse 32. If thou hast done foolishly] And who has not, at one time or other of his life?

Lay thine hand upon thy mouth.] Like the leper; and cry to God, Unclean! unclean! and keep silence to all besides. God will blot out thy offence, and neither the world nor the church ever know it, for he is merciful; and man is rarely able to pass by a sin committed by his fellows, especially if it be one to which himself is by nature not liable or inclined.

Verse 38. And the wringing] This is well expressed in homely phrase. Avoid all strong excitements and irritations.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The words and prophecy of king Lemuel, and what his mother taught him, 1, 2. Debauchery and much wine to be avoided, 3-7. How kings should administer justice, 8, 9. The praise of a virtuous woman and good housewife, in her economy, prudence, watchfulness, and assiduity in labour, 10-29. Frailty of beauty, 30, 31.

THE words of king Lemuel, *the prophecy that his mother taught him.

2 What, my son? and what ^b the son of my womb? and what, the son of my vows?

3 *Give not thy strength unto women, nor thy ways ^d to that which destroyeth kings.

4 *It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink:

5 *Lest they drink, and forget the law, and *pervert the judgment ^b of any of the afflicted.

6 *Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be ^d of heavy hearts.

7 Let him drink, and forget his poverty; and remember his misery no more.

Verse 1. The words of king Lemuel] "The words to Muel the king." So the Syriac; and so I think it should be read, the lamed being the article or preposition. But who is Muel or Lemuel? Solomon, according to general opinion; and the mother here mentioned, Bath-sheba. But there is no evidence whatever that Muel or Lemuel means Solomon; the chapter seems to be much later than this time, and the several Chaldaisms which occur in the very opening of it are no mean proof of this. If Agur was not the author of it, it may be considered as another supplement to the Book of Proverbs. Most certainly Solomon did not write it.

The prophecy that his mother taught him.] Massa may here signify the oracle; the subject that came by divine inspiration; see on Chap. xxx. 1. Houbigant thinks that Massa here is the name of a place; and, therefore, translates "The words of Lemuel, king of Massa, with which his mother instructed him."

Verse 2. What, my son?] This verse is very elliptical; and commentators, according to their different tastes, have inserted words, indeed some of them a whole sentence, to make up the sense.

8 *Open thy mouth for the dumb ⁱ in the cause of all ^m such as are appointed to destruction.

9 Open thy mouth, "judge righteously, and *plead the cause of the poor and needy.

Verse 5. Lest they drink and forget the law] When they should be administering justice, they are found incapable of it; or if they go into the judgment seat, may pervert justice.

Verse 6. Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish] Inebriating drinks were mercifully given to condemned criminals, to render them less sensible of the torture they endured in dying. This is what was offered to our Lord; but he refused it.

Verse 8. Open thy mouth for the dumb] For such accused persons as have no counsellors, and cannot plead for themselves.

Verse 10. Who can find a virtuous woman? This and the following verses are acrostic, each beginning with a consecutive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. From this to the end of the chapter we have the character of a woman of genuine worth laid down; first, in general, ver. 10, 11, and 12; secondly, in its particular or component parts, ver. 13-29; and thirdly, the summing up of the character, ver. 30, 31.

I. Her general character.

1. She is a virtuous woman—a woman of power and strength.

2. She is invaluable; her price is far above rubies—no quantity of precious stones can be equal to her worth.

Verse 11. The heart of her husband

3. She is an unspotted wife. The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her—he knows she will take care that a proper provision is made for his household, and will not waste any thing. He has no need for spoil—he is not obliged to go out on predatory excursions, to provide for his family, at the expense of the neighbouring tribes.

Verse 12. She will do him good

4. She has her husband's happiness in view constantly. Her good is unmixed; she will do him good, and not evil. Her good is not capricious; it is constant and permanent, while she and her husband live.

Verse 13. She seeketh wool, and flax, and worketh willingly, &c.

II. This is the second part of her character.

1. She did not buy ready woven cloth: she procured the raw material, if wool, most probably from her own flocks; if flax, most probably from her own fields.

2. These she manufactured; for she worketh willingly with her hands. And all her labour is a cheerful service; her will, her heart, is in it.

Verse 14. She is like the merchants' ships

3. She acts like merchants. If she buy any thing for her household, she sells sufficient of her own manufactures to pay for it; if she imports, she exports: and she sends articles of her own manufacturing or produce to distant countries; she traffics with the neighbouring tribes.

Verse 15. She riseth also while it is yet night

4. She is an economist of time; and when the nights are long, and the days short, her family not only spend a part of the evening after sunset in domestic labour, but they all arise before daylight, and prepare the day's food, that they may not have their labour interrupted. To those who are going to the fields, and to the flocks, she gives the food necessary for the day: prey, a term taken from hunting, the object of which was, the supplying their natural wants; hence applied to daily food. And to the women who are to be employed within she gives the task—the kind of work they are to do, the materials out of which they are to form it, and the quantity she expects from each.

Verse 16. She considereth a field, and buyeth it

5. She provides for the growing wants of her family. More land will shortly be needed, for the family is growing up; and having seen a field contiguous to her own, which was on sale, she estimates its worth, and purchases it a good bargain; and she pays for it by the fruit of her own industry.

he sitteth among the elders of the land.

24 She maketh fine linen, and selleth it; and delivereth girdles unto the merchant.

25 Strength and honour are her clothing; and she shall rejoice in time to come.

26 She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of ^a kindness.

27 She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness.

28 Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her.

29 Many daughters ^b have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.

30 Favour is deceitful, and ^c beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the LORD, she shall be praised.

31 Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates.

^d Ch. xii. 4.—^e 1 Tim. iii. 4.—^f Or, have gotten riches.—^g Isa. xxviii. 1, 4.

6. She does not restrict herself to the bare necessities of life; she is able to procure some of its comforts. She plants a vineyard, that she may have wine for a beverage, for medicine, and for sacrifice. This also is procured of her own labour. Whatever goes out brings its worth in; and barter, not buying, is her chief mode of traffic.

Verse 17. She girdeth her loins with strength

7. She takes care of her own health and strength, not only by means of useful labour, but by healthy exercise. Her loins are firm, and her arms strong.

Verse 18. She perceiveth that her merchandise is good

8. She takes care to manufacture the best articles of the kind, and to lay on a reasonable price that she may secure a ready sale. Her goods are in high repute, and she knows she can sell as much as she can make. And she finds that while she pleases her customers, she increases her own profits.

9. She is watchful and careful. Her candle—her lamp, burns all night, which is of great advantage in case of sudden alarms; and in the times and places where there were so many banditti, this was a very necessary family regulation.

Verse 19. She layeth her hands to the spindle

10. She gives an example of skill and industry to her household. She takes the distaff, that on which the wool or flax was rolled; and the spindle, that by twisting of which she twisted the thread with the right hand, while she held the distaff in the guard of the left arm, and drew down the thread with the fingers of the left hand.

Verse 20. She stretcheth out her hand to the poor

11. She is truly charitable. She knows that in every portion of a man's gain God requires a lot for the poor; and if this is not given, God's blessing is not in the rest.

Verse 21. She is not afraid of the snow

12. She is not anxious relative to the health and comfort of her family in the winter season, having provided clothes sufficient for each in the cold weather, in addition to those which they wore in the warm season.

For all her household are clothed with scarlet.] Not scarlet, for the colour can avail nothing in keeping off the cold. But shanin, from shanah, to iterate, to double, signifies not only scarlet, so called from being twice or doubly dyed, but also double garments not only the ordinary coat, but the surcoat or great coat also, or a cloak to cover all. But most probably double garments, or twofold to what they were accustomed to wear, are here intended.

Verse 22. She maketh herself coverings of tapestry

13. She has coverings or carpeting for her guests to sit upon; she has also tapestry, marbaddim, either tapestry, carpeting, or quilted work for her beds; and her own clothing is shesh, fine flax, or linen cloth, and purple; probably for a cloak or mantle. The fine linen or cotton cloth of Egypt is probably intended.

Verse 23. Her husband is known in the gates

14. She is a loving wife, and feels for the respectability and honour of her husband. He is an elder among his people, and he sits as a magistrate in the gate. He is respected not only on account of the neatness and cleanliness of his person and dress; but because he is the husband of a woman who is justly held in universal esteem.

Verse 24. She maketh fine linen, and selleth it

15. She is here remarkable for carrying on a traffic of splendid and ornamental dresses, or habits, as she is, ver. 13, for "a coarser manufacture." The sidon is supposed to signify a kind of loose inner garment, shirt, chemise, or fine muslin covering.

Verse 25. Strength and honour are her clothing]

16. All the articles manufactured by herself or under her care have a double perfection: 1. They are strong. 2. They are elegant; Strength and honour are her clothing; and on account of this she shall rejoice in time to come; she shall never have occasion to blush for any thing she has made, for any thing she or hers have worn, or for any thing she has sold.

Verse 26. She openeth her mouth with wisdom]

17. He comes now to the moral management of her family. 1. She is wise and intelligent; she has not neglected the cultivation of her mind. 2. She is amiable in her carriage, full of good nature, well tempered, and conciliating in her manners and address.

In her tongue is the law of kindness.] There are very few of those who are called managing women who are not lords over their husbands, tyrants over their servants, and insolent among their neighbours. But this woman, with all her eminence and excellence, was of a meek and quiet spirit. Blessed woman!

Verse 27. She looketh well to the ways of her household]

18. She is a moral manager; she takes care that all shall behave themselves well; that none of them shall keep bad company or contract vicious habits. In her house, diligence in business, and fervency of spirit serving the Lord, go hand in hand.

And eateth not the bread of idleness.]

19. She knows that idleness leads to vice; and therefore every one has his work, and every one has his proper food. That they may work well, they are fed well.

Verse 28. Her children arise up, and call her blessed]

20. She considers a good education next to divine influence; and she knows also that if she train up a child in the way he should go, when he is old he will not depart from it.

Verse 29. Many daughters have done virtuously] This is undoubtedly the speech of the husband, giving testimony to the excellence of his wife: "Her husband also, and he praiseth her, saying, 'Many daughters,' women, 'have done virtuously,' with due propriety as wives, mistresses, and mothers; 'but THOU,' my incomparable wife, 'excellest them all.'"

Verse 30. Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain, &c.]

Favour, grace of manner may be deceitful, many a fair appearance of this kind is put on, assumed for certain secular or more unworthy purposes; but it is a lie, a mere semblance, an outward varnish.

Beauty, elegance of shape, symmetry of features, dignity of mien, and beauty of countenance, are all vanity; sickness impairs them, suffering deranges them, and death destroys them.

She shall be praised.] This is the lasting grace, the unfading beauty.

Verse 31. Give her of the fruit of her hands] This may be a prayer. May she long enjoy the fruit of her labours! May she see her children's children, and peace upon Israel!

And let her own works praise her in the gates.] Let what she has done be spoken of for a memorial of her; let her bright example be held forth in the most public places.

INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOK

ECCLESIASTES.

THE Book, entitled Koheleth, or Ecclesiastes, has ever been received, both by the Jewish and Christian Church, as written under the inspiration of the Almighty; and was held to be properly a part of the sacred canon. But while this has been almost universally granted, there has been but little unanimity among learned men and critics as to its author.

The Jews in general, and St. Jerome, hold the book to be the composition of Solomon, and the fruit of his repentance when restored from his idolatry, into which he had fallen through means of the strange or heathenish women whom he had taken for wives and concubines.

Others, of no mean note, who consider Solomon as the author, believe that he wrote it before his fall; there being no evidence that he wrote it afterwards; nor, indeed, that he ever recovered from his fall. Besides, it was in his old age that his wives turned away his heart from God; and the book bears too many evidences of mental energy to allow the supposition that in his declining age, after so deep a fall from God, he was capable of writing such a treatise. This opinion goes far towards destroying the divine inspiration of the book; for if he did recover and repent, there is no evidence that God gave him back that divine inspiration which he before possessed; for we hear of the Lord appearing to him twice before his fall, but of a third appearance there is no intimation. And, lastly, of the restoration of Solomon to the favour of God there is no proof in the sacred history; for in the very place where we are told that "in his old age his wives turned away his heart from the Lord," we are told of his death, without the slightest intimation of his repentance.

Nothing, however, of this uncertainty can affect either the character, importance, or utility of the book in question. It is a production of singular worth; and the finest monument we have of the wisdom of the ancients, except the Book of Job.

But the chief difficulty attending this book is the principle on which it should be interpreted. Some have supposed it to be a dialogue between a true believer and an infidel, which makes it to the unwary reader appear abounding with contradiction, and, in some instances, false doctrine; and that the parts must be attributed to their respective speakers, before interpretation can be successfully attempted. I am not convinced that the book has any such structure; though in some places the opinions and sayings of infidels may be quoted; e. g., chap. vii. 16, and in some of the following chapters.

Of the authenticity of the Book of Ecclesiastes I have no doubt; but I must say, the language and style puzzle me not a little. Chaldaisms and Syriacisms are certainly frequent in it, and not a few Chaldee words and terminations; and the style is such as may be seen in those writers who lived at or after the captivity. If these can be reconciled with the age of Solomon, I have no objection; but the attempts that have been made to deny this, and overthrow the evidence, are in my view often trifling, and generally ineffectual. That Solomon, son of David, might have been the author of the whole matter of this, and a subsequent writer put it in his own language, is a possible case; and were this to be allowed, it would solve all difficulties. Let us place the supposition thus: Solomon said all these things, and they are highly worthy of his wisdom; and a divine writer, after his time, who does not mention his name, gives us a faithful version of the whole in his own language.

Some have supposed that the Book of Ecclesiastes is a poem. That some poetic lines may be found in it, there is no doubt; but it has nothing in common with poetic books, nor does it exist in the hemistich form in any printed edition or MS. yet discovered. It is plain prose, and is not susceptible of that form in which the Hebrew poetic books appear. But it has what is essential to poetry, a truly dignified style; there are no mean, creeping words in it, whether pure Hebrew, or borrowed from any of its dialects. They are all well chosen, nervous, and highly expressive. They are, in short, such as become the subject, and are worthy of that inspiration by which the author was guided.

ECCLESIASTES;

OR

THE PREACHER.

CHAPTER I.

The prophet shows that all human courses are vain, 1-4. The creatures are continually changing, 5-8. There is nothing new under the sun, 9-11. Who the prophet was, his estate and his studies, 12-18.

THE words ^a of the Preacher, the son of David, king of Jerusalem.

2 ^b Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; ^c all is vanity.

3 ^d What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?

4 One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: ^e but the earth abideth for ever.

5 ^f The sun also ariseth, and the sun goeth down, and ^g hasteth to his place where he arose.

6 ^h The wind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits.

7 ⁱ All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full: unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they ^j return again.

8 All things are full of labour; man cannot utter it: ^k the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing.

9 ^l The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done, is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun.

10 Is there any thing whereof it may be said, See, this is new? it hath been already of old time which was before us.

11 There is no remembrance of former things: neither shall there be any remembrance of things that are to come with those that shall come after.

12 ^m I the Preacher was king over Israel in Jerusalem:

13 And I gave my heart to seek and search out by wisdom concerning all things that are done under heaven: ⁿ this sore travail hath God given to the Verse 1. The words of the Preacher] Literally, "The words of Choholeth, son of David, king of Jerusalem."

The word Koholeth is a feminine noun, from the root kahal, to collect, gather together, assemble; and means, she who assembles or collects a congregation; translated by the Septuagint, Ecclesiastes, a public speaker, a speaker in an assembly; and hence translated by us a preacher.

Verse 2. Vanity of vanities] As the words are an exclamation, it would be better to translate, O vanity of vanities! Emptiness of emptinesses.

Verse 3. What profit hath a man] What is the sum of the real good he has gained by all his toils in life? They, in themselves, have neither made him contented nor happy.

Verse 4. One generation passeth away] Men succeed each other in unceasing generations; but the earth is still the same; it undergoes no change that leads to melioration, or greater perfection. And it will continue the same aeonum, during the whole course of time; till the end of all things arrives.

Verses 5 and 6. These verses are confused by being falsely divided. The first clause of the sixth should be joined to the fifth verse.

Verse 8. "The wind is continually whirling about, and the wind returneth upon its whirlings."

It is plain, from the clause which I have restored to the fifth verse, that the author refers to the approximations of the sun to the northern and southern tropics, viz., of Cancer and Capricorn.

Verse 7. All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full] The reason is, nothing goes into it either by the rivers or by rain, that does not come from it: and to the place whence the rivers come, whether from the sea originally by evaporation, or immediately by rain, thither they return again.

Verse 8. All things are full of labour] It is impossible to calculate how much anxiety, pain, labour, and fatigue are necessary in order to carry on the common operations of life. But an endless desire of gain, and an endless curiosity to witness a variety of results, cause men to labour on.

Verse 9. The thing that hath been] Every thing in the whole economy of nature has its revolutions; summer and winter, heat and cold, rain and drought, seed time and autumn, with the whole system of corruption and generation, alternately succeed each other, so that whatever has been shall be again.

Verse 10. Is there any thing, &c.] The original is beautiful. "Is there anything which will say, See this! it is new?"

Verse 11. There is no remembrance] Multitudes of ancient transactions have been lost, because they were not recorded; and of many that have been recorded, the records are lost. And this will be the case with many others which are yet to occur.

sons of man, * to be exercised therewith.

14 I have seen all the works that are done under the sun; and, behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

15 That which is crooked cannot be made straight; and that which is wanting cannot be numbered.

16 I communed with mine own heart, saying, Lo, I am come to great estate, and have gotten more

* Or, to afflict them.—^b Ch. vii. 13.—^c Heb. defeat.—
^d 1 Kings iii. 12, 13. iv. 33. x. 7, 23. Ch. ii. 9.

Verse 12. I the preacher was king] Literally, "I, Choheleth, have been king over Israel, in Jerusalem."

It has been conjectured from this, that if the book were written by Solomon, it was intended to be a posthumous publication.

Verse 13. And I gave my heart to seek and search] While Solomon was faithful to his God, he diligently cultivated his mind. He had not intuitive knowledge from God; but he had a capacity to obtain every kind of knowledge useful to man.

This sore travail] In order to investigate the operations of nature, the most laborious discussions and perplexing experiments must be instituted, and conducted to their proper results. It is God's determination that knowledge shall be acquired in no other way.

Verse 14. Behold all is vanity] After all these discussions and experiments, when even the results have been the most successful, I have found only rational satisfaction; but not that supreme good by which alone the soul can be made happy.

Verse 15. That which is crooked cannot be made straight] wisdom than all they that have been before me in Jerusalem; yea, my heart had great experience of wisdom and knowledge.

17 And I gave my heart to know wisdom, and to know madness and folly: I perceived that this also is vexation of spirit.

18 For in much wisdom is much grief; and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow.

* Heb. had seen much.—^c Ch. ii. 3, 12, vii. 23, 25. 1 Thes. v. 21.
^d Ch. xii. 12.

This is the impression from a general view of nature; but the more we study and investigate its operations, the more we shall be convinced that all is a consecutive and well-ordered whole; and that in the chain of nature not one link is broken, deficient, or lost.

Verse 16. I communed with mine own heart] Literally, "I spoke, I, with my heart, saying." When successful in my researches, but not happy in my soul, though easy in my circumstances, I entered into my own heart, and there inquired the cause of my discontent.

Verse 17. To know madness and folly] Perhaps gaiety and sobriety may be the better meaning for these two difficult words.

Verse 18. For in much wisdom is much grief] The more we know of ourselves the less satisfied shall we be with our own hearts; and the more we know of mankind the less willing shall we be to trust them, and the less shall we admire them.

He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow.] And why so? Because, independently of God, the principal objects of knowledge are natural and moral evils.

CHAPTER II.

The vanity of human courses in the works of pleasure, planting, building, equipage, amassing wealth, &c., 1-11. Wisdom preferable to folly, 12-14; yet little difference between the wise and the foolish in the events of life, 15-17. The vanity of amassing wealth for heirs, when whether they will be foolish or wise cannot be ascertained, 18-21. There is much sorrow in the labour of man, 22, 23. We should enjoy what the providence of God gives, 25, 26.

I SAID in mine heart, Go to now, I will prove thee with mirth; therefore enjoy pleasure: and, behold, this also is vanity.

2 I said of laughter, It is mad; and of mirth, What doeth it?

3 *I sought in mine heart * to give myself unto wine, (yet acquainting mine heart with wisdom,) and to lay hold on folly, till I might see what was*

* Luke xii. 19.—^b Isa. i. 11.—^c Prov. xiv. 13. Ch. vii. 6.—
^d Ch. i. 17.—^e Heb. to draw my flesh with wine.

Verse 2. I said of laughter, It is mad] Literally, "To laughter I said, O mad one! and to mirth, What is this one doing?"

Solomon does not speak here of a sober enjoyment of the things of this world, but of intemperate pleasure, whose two attendants, laughter and mirth, are introduced by a beautiful prosopopoeia as two persons; and the contemptuous manner wherewith he treats them has something remarkably striking.

Verse 3. To give myself unto wine, (yet acquainting [noheg, "guiding"] mine heart with wisdom.)] I did not run into extremes, as when I gave up myself to mirth and pleasure.

that good for the sons of men which they should do under the heaven 'all the days of their life.

4 I made me great works; I builded me houses; I planted me vineyards;

5 I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits;

6 I made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees;

7 I got me servants and maidens, and had ser-

* Heb. the number of the days of their life.—^c Heb. sons of my house.

There, I threw off all restraint; here, I took the middle course, to see whether a moderate enjoyment of the things of the world might not produce that happiness which I supposed man was created to enjoy here below.

Verse 4. I builded me houses] Palace after palace; the house of the forest of Lebanon, 1 Kings vii. 1, &c.; a house for the queen; the temple, &c., 2 Chron. viii. 1, &c.; 1 Kings ix. 10, &c., besides many other buildings of various kinds.

Verse 5. I made me gardens and orchards] Pardesim, "paradises." I doubt much whether this be an original Hebrew word. How well Solomon was qualified to form vants born in my house; also I had great possessions of great and small cattle above all that were in Jerusalem before me;

8 *I gathered me also silver and gold, and the peculiar treasure of kings and of the provinces; I gat me men-singers and women-singers, and the delights of the sons of men, as ^b musical instruments and that of all sorts.

9 So *I was great, and increased more than all that were before me in Jerusalem: also my wisdom remained with me.

10 And whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them, I withheld not my heart from any joy; for my heart rejoiced in all my labour; and ^a this was my portion of all my labour.

11 Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do: and, behold, all was ^a vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun.

12 And I turned myself to behold wisdom, ^a and madness, and folly: for what can the man do that cometh after the king? ^a even that which hath been already done.

13 Then I saw ^b that wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness.

14 ^a The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the gardens, orchards, vineyards, conservatories, &c., may be at once conceived when we recollect his knowledge of natural history.

Verse 6. Pools of water] Tanks and reservoirs.

To water therewith the wood] Aqueducts to lead the water from the tanks to different parts.

Verse 7. Servants and maidens] For my works, fields, folds, and various domestic labours.

Servants born in my house] Besides those hired from without, he had married couples in the precincts of his grounds, palaces, &c., who, when their children grew up, got them employment with themselves.

Great and small cattle] Oxen, neat, horses, asses, mules, camels, and such like; with sheep and goats. Probably, such another court for splendour and expense was not in the universe.

Verse 8. The peculiar treasure of kings and of the provinces] 1. The taxes levied off his subjects. 2. The tribute given by the neighbouring potentates.

Men-singers and women-singers] This includes all instrumental and vocal performers. These may be called the delights of the sons of men.

Musical instruments, and that of all sorts.] For these seven words, there are only two in the original, shiddah veshiddoth. These words are acknowledged on all hands to be utterly unknown, if not utterly inexplicable. Some render them male and female captives; others, cups and flagons; others, cooks and confectioners; others, a species of musical compositions. Others, with more probability, wives and concubines; and if these be not spoken of here, they are not mentioned at all; whereas music, and every thing connected with that, was referred to before.

If, after all this, I may add one conjecture, it shall be this; sadeh, in Hebrew, is a field, and occurs in various parts of the Bible. May not Solomon be speaking here of farms upon farms, or estates upon estates, which he had added by purchase to the common regal portion?

Verse 11. And, behold, all was vanity] Emptiness and insufficiency in itself.

And vexation of spirit] Because it promised the good I wished for, but did not, could not, perform the promise; and left my soul discontented and chagrined.

Verse 12. For what can the man do that cometh after the king?] None can, in the course of things, ever have such powers and means of gratification.

Verse 13. Then I saw that wisdom excelleth folly] Though in none of these pursuits I found the supreme good, the fool walketh in darkness: and I myself perceived also that ^a one event happeneth to them all.

15 Then said I in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so it ^a happeneth even to me; and why was I then more wise? Then I said in my heart, that this also is vanity.

16 For there is no remembrance of the wise more than of the fool for ever; seeing that which now is, in the days to come shall all be forgotten: and how dieth the ^a wise man? as the fool.

17 Therefore I hated life; because the work that is wrought under the sun is grievous unto me: for all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

18 Yea, I hated all my labour, which I had ^a taken under the sun; because ^a I should leave it unto the man that shall be after me.

19 And who knoweth whether he shall be a wise man or a fool? yet shall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have shewed myself wise under the sun. This is also vanity.

20 Therefore I went about to cause my heart to despair of all the labour which I took under the sun.

21 For there is a man whose labour is in wisdom and in knowledge, and in equity; yet to a man that than in folly, &c.—Prov. xvii. 21. Ch. viii. 1.—Ps. xlix. 10. Ch. ix. 2, 3, 11.—^b Heb. happeneth to me, even to me.—Job v. 13. Ps. xciv. 8. Ch. ii. 15. vi. 8. vii. 16. Isa. xlv. 25.—^c Heb. laboured.—^d Ps. xlix. 10.

happiness my soul longed after; yet I could easily perceive that wisdom excelled the others, as far as light excels darkness. And he immediately subjoins the reasons.

Verse 15. As it happeneth to the fool] Literally, "According as the event is to the fool, it happens to me, even me." There is a peculiar beauty and emphasis in the repetition of me.

Verse 16. There is no remembrance] Time sweeps away all remembrances, except the very few out of millions which are preserved for a while in the page of history.

Verse 17. Therefore I hated life] The lives, both of the wise, the madman, and the fool. Also all the stages of life, the child, the man, and the sage. There was nothing in it worth pursuing, no period worth re-living, and no hope that if this were possible I could again be more successful.

Verse 18. I hated all my labour] It has not answered the end for which it was instituted; and I can enjoy the fruits of it but a short time; and I must leave it to others, and know not whether a wise man, a knave, or a fool will possess it.

Verse 19. A wise man or a fool?] Alas! Solomon, the wisest of all men, made the worst use of his wisdom, had three hundred wives, and seven hundred concubines, and yet left but one son behind him, to possess his estates and his throne, and that one was the silliest of fools!

Verse 20. I went about to cause my heart to despair] What makes all worse, there is no remedy. It is impossible in the present state of things to prevent these evils.

Verse 21. For there is a man] Does he not allude to himself and to his son Rehoboam?

Verse 22. For what hath man of all his labour] Labour of body, disappointment of hope, and vexation of heart have been all my portion.

Verse 23. His days are sorrows] What a picture of human life where the heart is not filled with the peace and love of God!

This is also vanity.] Emptiness of good and substantial misery.

Verse 25. For who can eat—more than I?] But instead of chuts mimmenni, more than I; chuts mimmennu, without him, is the reading of eight of Kennicott's and De Rossi's MSS., as also of the Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic.

I believe this to be the true reading. No one can have a true relish of the comforts of life without the divine blessing.

Verse 26. Giveth—wisdom, and knowledge, and joy] 1. God gives wisdom—the knowledge of himself, light to direct in the way of salvation. 2. Knowledge—understanding to hath not laboured therein shall he ^aleave it for his portion. This also is vanity, and a great evil.

22 ^bFor what hath man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the sun?

23 For all his days are ^csorrows, and his travail grief; yea, his heart taketh not rest in the night. This is also vanity.

24 ^dThere is nothing better for a man, than that he should eat and drink, and that he ^eshould make his soul enjoy good in his labour. This also I saw that it was from the hand of God.

25 For who can eat, or who else can hasten hereto, more than I?

26 For God giveth to a man that is good ^fin his sight wisdom, and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he giveth travail, to gather, and to heap up, that ^ghe may give to him that is good before God. This also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

him. Gen. vii. 1. Luke i. 6.—^gJob xxvii. 16, 17. Prov. xxviii. 6.

But to the sinner he giveth travail] He has a life of labour, disappointment, and distress; for because he is an enemy to God, he travails in pain all his days; and as the wise man says elsewhere, the wealth of the wicked is laid up for the just. So he loseth earthly good because he would not take a heavenly portion with it.

CHAPTER III.

Every thing has its time and season, 1-8. Men are exercised with labour, 9, 10. Every thing is beautiful in its season, 11. Men should enjoy thankfully the gifts of God, 12, 13. What God does is for ever, 14. There is nothing new, 15. The corruption of judgment; but the judgments of God are right, 16, 17. Man is brutish, and men and brutes die in like manner, 18-21. Man may enjoy the fruit of his own labours, 22.

TO every thing there is a season, and a ^atime to every purpose under the heaven.

2 A time ^bto be born, and a ^ctime to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

3 A time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up;

4 A time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance;

5 A time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together; a time to embrace, and ^da time ^eto refrain from embracing;

6 A time to ^fget, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away;

7 A time to rend, and a time to sew; ^fa time to keep silence, and a time to speak;

8 A time to love, and a time to ^hhate; a time of war, and a time of peace.

9 ⁱWhat profit hath he that worketh in that wherein he laboureth?

^aVer. 17. Ch. viii. 6.—^bHeb. to hear.—^cHeb. ix. 27.—^dJoel ii. 16. 1 Cor. vii. 5.—^eHeb. to be far from.—^fOr, seek.—^gAmos v. 13.—^hLuke xiv. 26.—ⁱCh. i. 3.—^jCh. i. 13.—^kPs. cxi. 3. Isa. xl. 13.

Verse 1. To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose] It is worthy of remark, that in all this list there are but two things which may be said to be done generally by the disposal of God, and in which men can have but little influence; the time of birth and the time of death. But all the others are left to the opinion of man, though God continues to overrule them by his providence.

Verse 9. What profit hath he] What real good, what solid pleasure, is derived from all the labours of man? Necessity drives him to the principal part of his cares and toils: he labours that he may eat and drink; and he eats and drinks that he may be preserved alive, and kept from sickness and pain. Love of money, the basest of all passions, and restless ambition, drive men to many labours and expedients, which preplex, and often destroy them. He, then, who lives without God, travails in pain all his days.

10 ⁱI have seen the travail, which God hath given to the sons of men to be exercised in it.

11 He hath made every thing beautiful in his time: also he hath set the world in their heart, so that ^kno man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end.

12 ^lI know that there is no good in them, but for a man to rejoice, and to do good in his life.

13 And also ^mthat every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God.

14 I know that whatsoever God doeth, it shall be for ever: ⁿnothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it: and God doeth it, that men should fear before him.

15 ^oThat which hath been is now; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requir-eth ^pthat which is past.

16 And moreover ^qI saw under the sun the place of judgment, that wickedness was there; and the place of righteousness, that iniquity was there.

Verse 10, I have seen the travail] Man is a sinner; and because he is such, he suffers.

Verse 11. Beautiful in his time] God's works are well done: there are order, harmony, and beauty in them all. Nothing of this kind can be said of the works of man. The most finished works of art are bungling jobs, when compared with the meanest operation of nature.

He hath set the world in their heart] The proper translation of this clause is the following: "Also that eternity hath he placed in their heart, without which man could not find out the work which God hath made from the commencement to the end." God has deeply rooted the idea of eternity in every human heart; and every considerate man sees, that all the operations of God refer to that endless duration. And it is only in eternity that man will be able to discover what God has designed by the various works he has formed.

17 I said in mine heart, "God shall judge the righteous and the wicked: for there is ^a time there for every purpose and for every work.

18 I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, "that God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts.

19 ^d For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have

Verse 12. I know that there is no good in them, but, &c.] Since God has so disposed the affairs of this world that the great events of providence cannot be accelerated or retarded by human cares and anxieties, submit to God; make a proper use of what he has given: do thyself no harm, and endeavour as much as possible to do others good.

Verse 14. I know that whatsoever God doeth, it shall be for ever] God has produced no being that he intends ultimately to destroy. However matter may be changed and refined, animal and intellectual beings shall not be deprived of their existence. The brute creation shall be restored, and all human spirits shall live for ever; the pure in a state of supreme and endless blessedness, the impure in a state of indestructible misery.

Nothing can be put to it] No new order of beings, whether animate or inanimate, can be produced. God will not create more; man cannot add.

Nor any thing taken from it] Nothing can be annihilated; no power but that which can create, can destroy. And whatever he has done, he intended to be a means of impressing a just sense of his being, providence, mercy, and judgments, upon the souls of men.

Verse 15. That which hath been is now] God governs the world now, as he has governed it from the beginning; and the revolutions and operations of nature are the same now, that they have been from the beginning.

And God requireth that which is past.] i.e., That it may return again in its proper order. The heavens themselves, taking in their great revolutions, show the same phenomena. Even comets are supposed to have their revolutions, though some of them are hundreds of years in going round their orbits.

But in the economy of grace, does not God require that which is past? Whatever blessing or influence God gives to the soul of man, he intends shall remain and increase; and it will, if man be faithful.

Verse 16. The place of judgment, that wickedness was there] The abuse of power, and the perversion of judgment, have been justly complained of in every age of the world.

Verse 17. For there is a time there for every purpose] Man has his time here below, and God shall have his time above. At his throne the judge shall be rejudged, and iniquity for ever close her mouth.

Verse 18. That they might see that they themselves are all one breath; so that man hath no preeminence above a beast: for all is vanity.

20 All go unto one place; ^a all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again.

21 ^f Who knoweth the spirit ^g of man that ^h goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?

22 ⁱ Wherefore I perceive that there is nothing better than that a man should rejoice in his own works; for ^j that is his portion; ^k for who shall bring him to see what shall be after him?

^h Heb. is ascending — Ch. ii. 24. v. 18. xi. 9 — ⁱ Ch. ii. 10. — ^j Ch. vi. 12. viii. 7. x. 14.

beasts.] These words are to be referred to those in authority who abused their power; particularly to the corrupt magistrates mentioned above.

Verse 19. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts] With respect to the mortality of their bodies.

As the one dieth, so dieth the other] Animal life is the same both in the man and in the beast.

They have all one breath] They respire in the same way; and when they cease to respire, animal life becomes extinct.

Verse 21. Who knoweth the spirit of man] The word ruach, which is used in this and the nineteenth verse, has two significations, breath and spirit. It signifies spirit, or an incorporeal substance, as distinguished from flesh, or a corporeal one, 1 Kings xxii. 21, 22, and Isai. xxxi. 3. And it signifies the spirit or soul of man, Ps. xxxi. 6, Isai. lvii. 16, and in this book, chap. xii. 7, and in many other places. In this book it is used also to signify the breath, spirit, or soul of a beast. While it was said in ver. 19, they have all one breath, i. e., the man and the beast live the same kind of animal life; in this verse, a proper distinction is made between the ruach, soul of man, and the ruach, or soul of the beast; the one goeth upwards, the other goeth downwards. This place gives no countenance to the materiality of the soul; and yet it is the strongest hold to which the cold and fruitless materialist can resort.

Solomon most evidently makes an essential difference between the human soul and that of brutes. Both have souls, but of different natures; the soul of man was made for God, and to God it shall return. The soul of the beast was made to derive its happiness from this lower world. Brutes shall have a resurrection, and have an endless enjoyment in a new earth. The body of man shall arise, and join his soul that is already above; and both enjoy final blessedness in the fruition of God. That Solomon did not believe they had the same kind of spirit, and the same final lot, as some materialists and infidels say, is evident from chap. xii. 7: "The spirit shall return unto God, who gave it."

Verse 22. A man should rejoice in his own works] Do not turn God's blessings into sin by perverseness and complaining; make the best of life. God will sweeten its bitterness to you, if you be faithful. Remember this is the state to prepare for glory; and the evils of life may be so sanctified to you as to work for your good.

CHAPTER IV.

The vanity of life is increased by oppression, 1-3; by envy, 4; by idleness, 5. The misery of a solitary life, and the advantages of society, 6-12. A poor and wise child better than an old and foolish king, 13. The uncertainty of popular favour, 14-16.

SO I returned, and considered all the ^a oppressions that are done under the sun: and behold the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter; and on the ^b side of their oppressors there was power; but they had no comforter.

2 ^c Wherefore I praised the dead which are already dead more than the living which are yet alive.

3 ^d Yea, better is he than both they, which hath not yet been, who hath not seen the evil work that is done under the sun.

4 Again, I considered all travail, and ^e every right work, that ^f for this ^g a man is envied of his neighbour. This is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

5 The fool ^h foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own flesh.

6 ⁱ Better is an handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit.

7 Then I returned, and I saw vanity under the sun.

8 There is one alone, and there is not a second; yea, he hath neither child nor brother: yet is there no end of all his labour: neither is his ^j eye satisfied with riches, ^k neither sailth he, For whom do I

Verse 1. Considered all the oppressions] Ashakim signifies any kind of injury which a man can receive in his person, his property, or his good fame.

Verse 2. Wherefore I praised the dead] I considered those happy who had escaped from the pilgrimage of life to the place where the wicked cease from troubling, and where the weary are at rest.

Verse 3. Which hath not yet been] Better never to have been born into the world, than to have seen and suffered so many miseries.

Verse 4. For this a man is envied] For if a man act uprightly and properly in the world, he soon becomes the object of his neighbours' envy and calumny too. Therefore the encouragement to do good, to act an upright part, is very little. This constitutes a part of the vain and empty system of human life.

Verse 5. The fool foldeth his hands] After all, without labour and industry no man can get any comfort in life; and he who gives way to idleness is the voriest of fools.

Verse 6. Better is an handful with quietness] These may be the words of the slothful man, and spoken in vindication of his idleness; or they may contain Solomon's reflection on the subject.

labour, and bereave my soul of good? This is also vanity, yea, it is a sore travail.

9 Two are better than one; because they have a good reward for their labour.

10 For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up.

11 Again, if two lie together, then they have heat: but how can one be warm alone?

12 And if one prevail against him, two shall withstand him; and a threefold cord is not quickly broken.

13 Better is a poor and a wise child, than an old and foolish king, ^k who will no more be admonished.

14 For out of prison he cometh to reign; whereas also he that is born in his kingdom becometh poor.

15 I considered all the living which walk under the sun, with the ^l second child that shall stand up in his stead.

16 There is no end of all the people, even of all that have been before them: they also that come after shall not rejoice in him. Surely this also is ^m vanity and vexation of spirit.

xv. 16, 17. xvi. 18.—Prov. xxvii. 20. 1 John ii. 16.—Ps. xxxix. 6.—ⁿ Heb. who knoweth not to be admonished.—1 Kings xi. 43.—^o Ch. i. 2, 14.

Verse 8. There is one alone, and there is not a second] Here covetousness and avarice are characterized. The man who is the centre of his own existence; has neither wife, child, nor legal heir; and yet is as intent on getting money as if he had the largest family to provide for; nor does he only labour with intense application, but he even refuses himself the comforts of life out of his own gains!

Verse 9. Two are better than one] Married life is infinitely to be preferred to this kind of life, for the very reasons alleged below, and which require no explanation.

Verse 15. With the second child that shall stand up] History affords many instances of mean persons raised to sovereign authority, and of kings being reduced to the meanest offices, and to a morsel of bread. Agrippa himself ascended the throne of Israel after having been long in prison.

Verse 16. There is no end of all the people] This is supposed to refer to the multitudes of people who hail the advent and accession of a new sovereign; for, as Suetonius remarks, "Most people adore the rising sun." But when the new king becomes old, very few regard him; and perhaps he lives long enough to be as much despised by the very persons who before were ready to worship him. This is also a miserable vanity.

CHAPTER V.

The reverence to be observed in attending divine worship, 1-3. We should be faithful to our engagements, 4-7. The oppression of the innocent, 8. The king dependent on the produce of the soil, 9. Against covetousness, 10, 11. The peace of the honest labourer, 12. The evil effect of riches, 13, 14. Man cannot carry his property to the grave, 15-17. We should thankfully enjoy the blessings of God, 18-20.

KEEP ^a thy foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be more ready to hear, ^b than to give the sacrifice of fools: for they consider not that they do evil.

^a See Exod. iii. 5. Isa. i. 12, &c.—^b 1 Sam. xv. 22. Ps. i. 8. Prov. xv. 8. xxi. 27. Hos. vi. 6.

Verse 1. Keep thy foot] This verse the Hebrew and all the Versions join to the preceding chapter.

The whole verse might be more literally translated thus: "Guard thy steps as thou art going to the house of God; and approach to hearken, and not to give the sacrifice of fools,

2 Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any ^c thing before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words ^d be few.

for none of them have knowledge about doing evil."

Verse 2. Be not rash with thy mouth] Do not hasten with thy mouth; weigh thy words, feel deeply, think much, speak little.

Verse 3. For a dream cometh] That is, as dreams are

3 For a dream cometh through the multitude of business; and ^a a fool's voice is known by multitude of words.

4 ^b When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; for ^c he hath no pleasure in fools: ^d pay that which thou hast vowed.

5 ^e Better is it that thou shouldst not vow, than that thou shouldst vow and not pay.

6 Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin; ^f neither say thou before the angel that it ^g was an error: wherefore should God be angry at thy voice, and destroy the work of thine hands?

7 For in the multitude of dreams and many words ^h there are also divers vanities: but ⁱ fear thou God.

8 If thou ^j seest the oppression of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not ^k at the matter: for ^l he that is higher than the highest regardeth; and ^m there be higher than they.

9 Moreover the profit of the earth is for all; the king ⁿ himself is served by the field.

10 He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase; this is also vanity.

11 When goods increase, they are increased that eat them: and what good is ^o there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes.

12 The sleep of a labouring man is sweet, generally the effect of the business in which we have been engaged during the day; so a multitude of words evidence the feeble workings of the foolish heart.

Verse 4. When thou vowest a vow] When in distress and difficulty, men are apt to promise much to God if he will relieve them; but generally forget the vow when the distress or trouble is gone by.

Verse 5. Better is it that thou shouldst not vow, &c.] We are under constant obligations to live to God; no vow can make it more so. Yet, there may be cases in which we should bind ourselves to take up some particular cross, to perform some particular duty, to forego some particular attachment that does not tend to bring our souls nearer to God.

Verse 6. Neither say thou before the angel that it was an error] I believe by the angel nothing else is intended than the priest, whose business it was to take cognizance of vows and offerings. See Lev. v. 4, 5. In Mal. ii. 7, the priest is called the "angel of the Lord of hosts."

Verse 7. In dreams—are—divers vanities; but fear thou God.] If, by the disturbed state of thy mind during the day, or by Satanic influence, thou dream of evil, do not give way to any unreasonable fears, or gloomy forebodings of any coming mischief—FEAR GOD. Most certainly, he that fears God need fear nothing else.

Verse 8. Marvel not at the matter] Hachephets, the will, i.e., of God; which permits such evils to take place; for all things shall work together for good to them that love him.

Verse 9. The profit of the earth is for all] The earth, if properly cultivated, is capable of producing food for every living creature; and without cultivation none has a right to expect bread.

The king himself is served by the field.] Without the field he cannot have supplies for his own house; and, unless agriculture flourish, the necessary expenses of the state cannot be defrayed.

Verse 10. He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver] The more he gets, the more, he would get.

Verse 11. When goods increase] An increase of property always brings an increase of expense, by a multitude of servants; and the owner really possesses no more, and probably enjoys much less, than he did, when every day provided it whether he eat little or much: but the abundance of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

13 ¹ There is a sore evil ² which I have seen under the sun, ³ namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt.

14 But those riches perish by evil travail: and he begetteth a son, and ⁴ there is nothing in his hand.

15 ⁵ As he came forth of his mother's womb, naked shall he return to go as he came, and shall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand.

16 And this also ⁶ is a sore evil, ⁷ that in all points as he came, so shall he go: and ⁸ what profit hath he ⁹ that hath laboured for the wind?

17 All his days also ¹⁰ he eateth in darkness, and ¹¹ he hath much sorrow and wrath with his sickness.

18 Behold ¹² that which I have seen: ¹³ it ¹⁴ is good and comely ¹⁵ for one to eat and to drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labour that he taketh under the sun ¹⁶ all the days of his life, which God giveth him: ¹⁷ for it is his portion.

19 ¹⁸ Every man also to whom God hath given riches and wealth, and hath given him power to eat thereof, and to take his portion, and to rejoice in his labour; this is the gift of God.

20 ¹⁹ For he shall not much remember the days of his life; because God answereth ²⁰ him in the joy of his heart.

own bread, and could lay up no store for the next.

Verse 12. The sleep of a labouring man is sweet] His labour is healthy exercise. He is without possessions, and without cares; his sleep, being undisturbed, is sound and refreshing.

Verse 13. Riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt.] This may be the case through various causes. 1. He may make an improper use of them, and lose his health by them. 2. He may join in an unfortunate partnership, and lose all. 3. His riches may excite the desire of the robber, and he may spoil him of his goods, and even take away his life. 4. Or, he may leave them to his son, who turns prodigal, spends the whole, and ruins both body and soul.

Verse 14. And he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand.] He has been stripped of his property by unfortunate trade or by plunderers; and he has nothing to leave to his children.

Verse 15. As he came forth] If he die worth millions, those millions are dead to him for ever; so he has had no real profit from all his labours, cares, anxieties, and vast property.

Verse 17. All his days also he eateth in darkness] Even his enjoyments are embittered by uncertainty. He fears for his goods; the possibility of being deprived of them fills his heart with anguish.

And wrath with his sickness.] He is full of anguish at the thought of death; but the fear of it is horrible. But if he have a sense of God's wrath in his guilty conscience, what horror can be compared with his horror!

Verse 18. Behold that which I have seen] This is the result of my observations and experience. God gives every man, in the course of his providence, the necessities of life; and it is his will that he should thankfully use them.

For it is his portion.] What is requisite for him in the lower world; without them his life cannot subsist; and earthly blessings are as truly the portion of his body and animal life, as the salvation of God is the portion of his soul.

Verse 20. For he shall not much remember] The person who acts in this way, extracts all the good requisite from life. He passes through things temporal so as not to lose those that are eternal.

CHAPTER VI.

The vanity of riches without use, 1, 2. Of children and of old age without riches and enjoyment, 3-7. Man does not know what is good for himself, 8-12.

THERE ^ais an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men :

2 A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honour, ^bso that he wanteth nothing for his soul of all that he desireth, ^cyet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it : this is vanity, and it is an evil disease.

3 If a man beget an hundred children, and live many years, so that the days of his years be many, and his soul be not filled with good, and ^dalso that he have no burial ; I say, that ^ean untimely birth is better than he :

4 For he cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkness, and his name shall be covered with darkness.

5 Moreover he hath not seen the sun, nor known any thing : this hath more rest than the other.

6 Yea, though he live a thousand years twice

Verse 2. A man to whom God hath given riches] A man may possess much earthly goods, and yet enjoy nothing of them. It belongs to God as much to give the power to enjoy as it does to give the earthly blessings.

Verse 3. If a man beget an hundred children] If he have the most numerous family and the largest possessions, and is so much attached to his riches that he grudges himself a monument ; an abortion in the eye of reason is to be preferred to such a man ; himself is contemptible, and his life worthless.

Verse 7. All the labour of man] This is the grand primary object of all human labour ; merely to provide for the support of life by procuring things necessary. And life only exists for the sake of the soul ; because man puts these things in place of spiritual good, the appetite—the intense desire after the supreme good, is not satisfied.

Verse 8. For what hath the wise more than the fool ?] They must both labour for the same end. Both depend upon the labour of themselves or others for the necessities of life. Both must eat and drink in order to live ; and the rich man can no more eat two meals at a time, than he can comfortably wear two changes of raiment.

Verse 9. Better is the sight of the eyes than the wandering of the desire] It is better to enjoy the present than to feed told, yet hath he seen no good : do not all go to one place ?

7 ^aAll the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the ^bappetite is not filled.

8 For what hath the wise more than the fool ? what hath the poor, that knoweth to walk before the living ?

9 Better is the sight of the eyes ^cthan the wandering of the desire : this is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

10 That which hath been is named already, and it is known that it is man : ^dneither may he contend with him that is mightier than he.

11 Seeing there be many things that increase vanity, what is man the better ?

12 For who knoweth what is good for man in this life, ^eall the days of his vain life which he spendeth as ^fa shadow ? for ^gwho can tell a man what shall be after him under the sun ?

^a Heb. than the walking of the soul.—^b Job ix. 32. Is. xlv. 9. Jer. xlix. 10.—^c Heb. the number of the days of the life of his vanity.—^d Ps. cii. 11. cix. 23. cxliv. 4. James iv. 14.—^e Ps. xxxix. 6. Ch. viii. 7.

one's self with vain desires of the future. What we translate the wandering of desire, is the travelling of the soul. What is this ? Does it simply mean desire ? Or is there any reference here to the state of separate spirits ? It however shows the soul to be in a restless state, and consequently to be unhappy. If Christ dwell in the heart by faith, the soul is then at rest, and this is properly the rest of the people of God.

Verse 10. That which hath been is named already] The Hebrew of this verse might be translated, "Who is he who is ? His name has been already called. And it is known that he is Adam ; and that he cannot contend in judgment with him who is stronger than he."

Verse 12. For who knoweth what is good for man in this life] Those things which we deem good are often evil. And those which we think evil are often good. So ignorant are we, that we run the greatest hazard in making a choice. It is better to leave ourselves and our concerns in the hands of the Lord, than to keep them in our own.

For who can tell a man what shall be after him] Futurity is with God. While he lives, man wishes to know what is before him. When he is about to die, he wishes to know what will be after him. All this is vanity ; God, because he is merciful, will reveal neither.

CHAPTER VII.

The value of a good name, 1. Advantages of sorrow and correction, 2-5. The emptiness of a fool's joy, 6. Of oppression, 7. The end better than the beginning, 8. Against hastiness of spirit, 9. Comparison of former and present times, 10. Excellence of wisdom, 11, 12. Of the dispensations of Providence, 13-15. Against extremes, 16-18. The strength of wisdom, 19. Man is ever liable to sin and mistake, 20. We should guard our words, 21, 22. Difficulty of obtaining wisdom, 23-25. A bad woman dangerous, 26. There are few who are really upright, 27-29.

A ^aGOOD name is better than ^b precious ointment; and the day of death than the day of one's birth.

2 It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to go to the house of feasting: for that is the end of all men; and the living will lay it to his heart.

3 ^c Sorrow is better than laughter: ^d for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.

4 The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning; but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.

5 ^e It is better to hear the rebuke of the wise, than for a man to hear the song of fools.

6 ^f For as the ^g crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool: this also is vanity.

7 Surely oppression maketh a wise man mad; ^h and a gift destroyeth the heart.

8 Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof: and ⁱ the patient in spirit is better than the ^j proud in spirit.

9 ^k Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry: for anger resteth in the bosom of fools.

10 Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire ^l wisely concerning this,

^a Prov. xv. 33. xxii. 1.—^b Matt. xxvi. 7. Mark xiv. 3. Luke vii. 37.—^c Or, Anger.—^d 2 Cor. vii. 10.—^e See Ps. cxli. 5. Prov. xiii. 18. xv. 31, 32.—^f Ps. cxviii. 12. James i. 19.—^l Heb. out of wisdom.—^m Or, as good as an inheritance, yea, better too.—ⁿ Ch. xi. 7.

Verse 1. A good name] Unsatisfactory as all sublimary things are, yet still there are some which are of great consequence, and among them a good name.

Verse 2. It is better to go to the house of mourning] Birth-days were generally kept with great festivity, and to these the wise man most probably refers; but according to his maxim, the miseries of life were so many and so oppressive that the day of a man's death was to be preferred to the day of his birth. But, independently of the allusion, it is much more profitable to visit the house of mourning for the dead, than the house of festivity.

Verse 3. Sorrow is better than laughter] The reason is immediately given: for by the sorrow of the countenance—the grief of heart that shows itself in the countenance.

The heart is made better] In such cases, most men try themselves at the tribunal of their own consciences, and resolve on amendment of life.

Verse 4. The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning] A wise man loves those occasions from which he can derive spiritual advantage; and therefore prefers visiting the sick, and sympathising with those who have suffered privations by death.

Verse 5. For as the crackling of thorns] They make a great noise, a great blaze; and are extinguished in a few moments. Such indeed, comparatively, are the joys of life: they are noisy, flashy, and transitory.

Verse 7. Oppression maketh a wise man mad] This has been translated with good show of reason, "Surely oppression shall give lustre to a wise man: but a gift corrupteth the heart." We cannot think that the wise man—he that is truly religious can be made mad by any kind of oppression; but as he trusts in God, so in patience he possesses his soul.

Verse 8. Better is the end] We can then judge of the whole, and especially if the matter relate to the conduct of Divine Providence. At the beginning we are often apt to make very rash conjectures, and often suppose that such and such things are against us; and that everything is going wrong.

Verse 9. Anger resteth in the bosom of fools] A wise man, off his guard, may feel it for a moment; but in him it cannot rest: it is a fire which he immediately casts out of his breast. But the fool—the man who is under the dominion of his own tempers, harbours and fosters it, till it takes the form of malice, and then excites him to seek full revenge on those whom he deems enemies.

Verse 10. The former days were better than these?] This is a common saying; and it is as foolish as it is common.

11 Wisdom is good with an inheritance: and by it there is profit to them that see the sun.

12 For wisdom is a defence, and money is a defence: but the excellency of knowledge is, that wisdom giveth life to them that have it.

13 Consider the work of God: for who can make that straight, which he hath made crooked?

14 In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider: God also hath set the one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him.

15 All things have I seen in the days of my vanity: there is a just man that perisheth in his righteousness, and there is a wicked man that longeth his life in his wickedness.

16 Be not righteous over much: neither make thyself over wise: why shouldest thou destroy thyself?

17 Be not over much wicked, neither be thou foolish: why shouldest thou die before thy time?

18 It is good that thou shouldst take hold of this; yea, also from this withdraw not thine hand: for he that feareth God shall come forth of them all.

19 Wisdom strengtheneth the wise more than ten mighty men which are in the city.

—^a Heb. shadow.—^b See Job xli. 14. Ch. i. 15. Isa. xiv. 27.—^c Ch. iii. 4. Deut. xxviii. 47.—^d Heb. made.—^e Ch. viii. 14.—^f Prov. xxv. 16.—^g Eccles. iii. 21. 22. Rom. xii. 3.—^h Heb. be desolate.—ⁱ Job xv. 32. 1's. iv. 23. Prov. x. 27.—^j Heb. not in thy time.—^k Prov. xxi. 22. xxiv. 5. Ch. ix. 16. 18.

There is no weight nor truth in it; but men use it to excuse their crimes, and the folly of their conduct.

Verse 11. Wisdom is good with an inheritance] In this chapter, Solomon introduces many observations which appear to be made by objectors against his doctrine; and as he was satisfied of their futility, he proposes them in their own full strength, and then combats and destroys them.

Verse 12. Wisdom is a defence] All true wisdom is most undoubtedly a great advantage to men in all circumstances; and money is also of great use; but it cannot be compared to wisdom. Wisdom—the religion of the true God, gives life to them that have it. Money cannot procure the favour of God, nor give life to the soul.

Verse 13. Consider the work of God] Such is the nature of his providence, that it puts money into the hands of few: but wisdom is within the reach of all.

Verse 14. In the day of prosperity be joyful] When ye receive these temporal gifts from God, enjoy them, and be thankful to the Giver: but remember this, sunshine will not always last.

Verse 15. There is a just man that perisheth] This is another objection; as if he had said, "I also have had considerable experience; and I have not discovered any marked approbation of the conduct of the righteous, or disapprobation of that of the wicked. On the contrary, I have seen a righteous man perish, while employed in the work of righteousness; and a wicked man prosperous, and even exalted, while living wickedly."

Verse 16. Why shouldest thou destroy thyself?] Make thyself desolate, so that thou shalt be obliged to stand alone; neither make thyself over wise, do not pretend to abundance of wisdom. In other words, and in modern language, "There is no need of all this watching, fasting, praying, self-denial, &c., you carry things to extremes. Why should you wish to be reputed singular and precise?"

Verse 17. Be not over much wicked, neither be thou foolish: why shouldest thou die before thy time?] Do not multiply wickedness; do not add direct opposition to godliness to the rest of your crimes. Why should you provoke God to destroy you before your time? Perdition will come soon enough.

Verse 18. It is good that thou shouldst take hold of this] Get what you can in an honest way; but do not forget to get true religion; for he that fears God will be saved from all evil.

Verse 19. Wisdom strengtheneth the wise] One wise, thoroughly learned, and scientific man, may be of more use 20 *For there is not a just man upon earth that doeth good, and sinneth not.

21 Also ^btake no heed unto all words that are spoken; lest thou hear thy servant curse thee:

22 For oftentimes also thine own heart knoweth that thou thyself likewise hast cursed others.

23 All this have I proved by wisdom; *I said, I will be wise; but it was far from me.

24 ^dThat which is far off, and *exceeding deep, who can find it out?

25 *I ^aapplied mine heart to know, and to search, and to seek out wisdom, and the reason of things, and to know the wickedness of folly, even of foolishness and madness.

Verse 20. There is not a just man upon earth that doeth good, and sinneth not.] There is not a man upon earth, howsoever just he may be, and habituated to do good, but is peccable—liable to commit sin; and therefore should continually watch and pray, and depend upon the Lord. But the text does not say, the just man does commit sin, but simply that he may sin; and so our translators have rendered it in 1 Sam. ii. 25, twice in 1 Kings viii. 31, 46, and 2 Chron. vi. 36.

Verse 21. Thy servant curse thee] Mekallelecha, make light of thee, speak evil of thee.

Verse 22. Thou thyself—hast cursed others.] Hast spoken evil; hast vilified others. Do not wonder if God, in his justice, permit thee to be calumniated, seeing thou hast so frequently calumniated others.

Verse 23. All this have I proved by wisdom] These rules I have laid down for my own conduct, and sought after more wisdom; but have fallen far short of what I wished to be.

Verse 24. That which is far off] Though the wisdom that is essential to our salvation may be soon learned, through the teaching of the Spirit of wisdom, yet in wisdom itself there are extents and depths which none can reach or fathom.

Verse 25. I applied mine heart] I cast about, sabbothi, I made a circuit; and all within my circle I was determined to know, and to investigate, and to seek out wisdom, and the reason of things. Every doctrine of God is a subject both for reason and faith to work on.

26 *And I find more bitter than death the woman whose heart is snares and nets, and her hands as bands: ¹whoso pleaseth God shall escape from her; but the sinner shall be taken by her.

27 Behold, this have I found, saith ¹the preacher, ^acounting one by one, to find out the account:

28 Which yet my soul seeketh, but I find not: ¹one man among a thousand have I found; but a woman among all those have I not found.

29 Lo, this only have I found, ^mthat God hath made man upright; but ⁿthey have sought out many ^oinventions.

Verse 26. And I find more bitter than death the woman] He found nothing equally dangerous and ruinous with the blandishments of cunning women.

Whoso pleaseth God] The man who walks with God, and he alone, shall escape this sore evil: and even he that fears God, if he get with an artful woman, may be soon robbed of his strength, and become like other men. A bad or artful woman is represented as a company of hunters, with nets, gins, &c., to catch their prey.

Verse 27. Counting one by one] I have gone over every particular. I have compared one thing with another; man with woman, his wisdom with her wiles; his strength with her blandishments: and in a thousand men, I have found one thoroughly upright man; but among one thousand women I have not found one such. This is a lamentable account of the state of morals in Judea, in the days of the wise king Solomon.

Verse 29. Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright] Whatever evil may be now found among men and women, it is not of God; for God made them all upright.

I doubt much whether the word chishbonoth should be taken in a bad sense. It may signify the whole of human devices, imaginations, inventions, artifice, with all their products; arts, sciences, schemes, plans, and all that they have found out for the destruction or melioration of life. God has given man wondrous faculties; and of them he has made strange uses, and sovereign abuses: and they have been, in consequence, at one time his help, and at another his bane.

CHAPTER VIII.

A man's wisdom makes his face to shine, 1. Kings are to be greatly respected, 2-4. Of him who keeps the commandment; of the misery of man; of the certainty of death, 5-8. Of him that rules another to his own hurt, 9. The end of the wicked, 10. God's long-suffering, 11, 12. It shall be ill with wicked men, 13. Strange events in the course of providence, 14, 15. God's works cannot be found out, 16, 17.

WHO is as the wise man? and who knoweth the interpretation of a thing? ^aa man's wisdom maketh his face to shine, and ^bthe boldness of his face shall be changed.

2 I counsel thee to keep the king's commandment, ^cand that in regard of the oath of God.

^aProv. iv. 8. 9. xvii. 21. See Acts vi. 15.—^bHeb. the strength,—^cDeut. xxv. ii. 59.

Verse 1. Who knoweth the interpretation] Every state of the heart shines through the countenance: but there is such an evidence of the contented, happy, pure, benevolent state of the soul in the face of a truly pious man, that it must be observed, and cannot be mistaken.

The boldness of his face shall be changed.] The verse might be read, "The wisdom of a man shall illuminate his face; and the strength of his countenance shall be doubled." He shall speak with full confidence; and all will feel the weight of his observations.

3 ^dBe not hasty to go out of his sight: stand not in an evil thing; for he doeth whatsoever pleaseth him.

Verse 2. To keep the king's commandment] This sentence would be better translated, I keep the mouth of the king; I take good heed not to meddle with state secrets; and if I know, to hide them. Or, I am obedient to the commands of evil thing: and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment.

6 Because ^ato every purpose there is time and judgment, therefore the misery of man ^bis great upon him.

7 ^bFor he knoweth not that which shall be: for who can tell him ^cwhen it shall be?

8 ^aThere is no man that hath power ^cover the spirit to retain the spirit; neither ^bhath he power in the day of death: and ^dthere is no ^edischarge in that war; neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it.

9 All this have I seen, and applied my heart unto every work that is done under the sun: ^athere is a time wherein one man ruleth over another to his own hurt.

10 And so I saw the wicked buried, who had come and gone from the place of the holy, and they were forgotten in the city where they had so done: this ^ais also vanity.

11 ^aBecause sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil.

12 ^bThough a sinner do evil an hundred times, and his ^cdays be prolonged, yet surely I know that laws; I feel myself bound by whatever the king has decreed.

^a Ch. iii. 1.—^b Prov. xxiv. 22. Ch. vi. 12. ix. 12. x. 14.—^c Or, how it shall be.—^d Ps. xlix. 6. 7.—^e Job xiv. 5.—^f Or, casting off weapons.—^g Ps. x. 6. 1. 21. Isa. xxvi. 10.—^h Isa. lxxv. 20. Rom. ii. 5.—ⁱ Ps. xxxviii.

In regard of the oath of God.] You have sworn obedience to him; keep your oath, for the engagement was made in the presence of God.

Verse 8. Be not hasty] Be steadily faithful to your sovereign. If you have done wrong, do not endeavour to vindicate yourself before him; it is of no use; his power is absolute, and he will do what he pleases. He will take his own view of the subject, and he will retain it.

Verse 5. Both time and judgment.] WHAT shall I speak? WHAT shall I do? When, how, and what answer to time, manner, and matter. To discern all these, and act suitably, is a lesson for a philosopher, and a study for a Christian.

Verse 6. To every purpose there is time] Every volition, every thing that depends on the will of man. He has generally the opportunity to do whatever he purposes; and as his purposes are frequently evil, his acts are so too; and in consequence his misery is great.

Verse 8. There is no man that hath power over the spirit to retain the spirit] Some translate: "No man hath power over the wind to restrain him; and none has power over death to restrain him; and when a man engages as a soldier, he cannot be discharged from the war till it is ended; and by wickedness no man shall be delivered from any evil." Taking it in this way, these are maxims which contain self-evident truths. Others suppose the verse to refer to the king who tyrannizes over and oppresses his people. He shall also account to God for his actions; he shall die, and he cannot prevent it; and when he is judged, his wickedness cannot deliver him.

Verse 9. One man ruleth over another to his own hurt.] This may be spoken of rulers generally, who, instead of feeding, fleece the flock; tyrants and oppressors who came to an untimely end by their mismanagement of the offices of the state.

Verse 10. Who had come and gone from the place of the holy] The place of the holy is the sacred office which they held, anointed either as kings or priests to God; and, not it shall be well with them that fear God, which fear before him:

13 But it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his days, which are as a shadow; because he feareth not before God.

14 There is a vanity which is done upon the earth; that there be just men, unto whom it ^ahappeneth according to the work of the wicked; again, there be wicked men, to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous: I said that this also ^bis vanity.

15 ^aThen I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry; for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.

16 When I applied mine heart to know wisdom, and to see the business that is done upon the earth: (for also ^athere is that neither day nor night seeth sleep with his eyes):

17 Then I beheld all the work of God, that ^aa man cannot find out the work that is done under the sun: because, though a man labour to seek it out, yet he shall not find it; yea farther; though a wise man think to know it, ^byet shall he not be able to find it.

having fulfilled the holy office in a holy way, have been carried to their graves without lamentation, and lie among the dead without remembrance.

Verse 11. Because sentence] Because God does not immediately punish every delinquency, men think he disregards evil acts; and therefore they are emboldened to sin on. So this long-suffering of God, which leadeth to repentance, is abused so as to lead to farther crimes!

Verse 12. Though a sinner do evil an hundred times] If God bear so long with a transgressor, waiting in his long-suffering for him to repent and turn to him, surely he will be peculiarly kind to them that fear him, and endeavour to walk uprightly before him.

Verse 13. But it shall not be well with the wicked] Let not the long-spared sinner presume that, because sentence is not speedily executed on his evil works, and he is suffered to go on to his hundredth transgression, God has forgotten to punish. No; he feareth not before God; and therefore he shall not ultimately escape.

Verse 15. Then I commended mirth] These are some more of the cavils of the infidel objector.

Verse 16. When I applied mine heart to know wisdom] This is the reply of the wise man. We may study night and day, and deprive ourselves of rest and sleep, but we shall never fathom the depths that are in the divine government; but all is right and just. This is the state of probation; and in it neither can the wicked be punished, nor the righteous rewarded. But eternity is at hand; and then shall every man receive according to his works.

Verse 17. Then I beheld all the work of God, that a man cannot find out the work that is done under the sun] I saw it to be of such a nature—1. That a man cannot find it out. 2. That if he labour to find it out, he shall not succeed. 3. That though he be wise—the most instructed among men, and think to find it out, he shall find he is not able. It is beyond the wisdom and power of man. How vain then are all your cavils about providence. You do not understand it; you cannot comprehend it. Fear God.

CHAPTER IX.

No man knows, by any present sign, what is before him, 1. All things happen alike to all, 2, 3. Comparison of the state of the dead and the living, 4-6. Enjoy God's mercies, and live to his glory, 7-10. The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, 11. Man is ignorant of futurity, 12, 13. The account of the little city, and the poor wise man, 14-18.

FOR all this ^a I considered in my heart even to declare all this, ^b that the righteous, and the wise, and their works, are in the hand of God: no man knoweth either love or hatred by all that is before them.

2 ^c All things come alike to all: there is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to the good and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that sacrificeth, and to him that sacrificeth not: as is the good, so is the sinner; and he that sweareth, as he that feareth an oath.

3 This is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all: yea, also the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live, and after that they go to the dead.

4 For to him that is joined to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion.

5 For the living know that they shall die: but ^d the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for ^e the memory of them is forgotten.

6 Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun.

7 Go thy way, ^f eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works.

8 Let thy garments be always white; and let thy head lack no ointment.

Verse 1. The righteous, and the wise, and their works, are in the hand of God] This is a continuation of the preceding subject; the wise man draws a conclusion from what he had seen, and from the well-known character of God, that the righteous, the wise, and their conduct, were all in the hand of God; but we cannot judge from the occurrences which take place in life who are the objects of God's love or displeasure.

Verse 2. All things come alike to all] This is very generally true; but God often makes a difference; and his faithful followers witness many interventions of Divine Providence in their behalf. But there are general blessings and general natural evils, that equally affect the just and the unjust. But in this all is right; the evils that are in nature are the effects of the FALL of man; and God will not suspend general laws, or alter them, to favour individual cases.

Verse 3. The heart of the sons of men is full of evil] No wonder then that the curse of God should be frequent in the earth.

Verse 4. For to him that is joined to all the living there is hope] While a man lives he hopes to amend, and he hopes to have a better lot; and thus life is spent, hoping to grow better, and hoping to get more.

A living dog is better than a dead lion.] The smallest measure of animal existence is better than the largest of dead matter.

Verse 5. The living know that they shall die] This is so self-evident that none can doubt it; and therefore all that given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity: ^h for that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun.

10 Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.

11 I returned, ⁱ and saw under the sun, that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all.

12 For ^j man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men ^k snared in an evil time, when it filleth suddenly upon them.

13 This wisdom have I seen also under the sun, and it seemed great unto me:

14 ^l There was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it:

15 Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man.

16 ^m Then said I, Wisdom is better than strength: nevertheless ⁿ the poor man's wisdom is despised and his words are not heard.

17 The words of wise men are heard in quiet more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools.

18 ^o Wisdom is better than weapons of war: but, ^p one sinner destroyeth much good.

have this conviction should prepare for death and eternal blessedness.

But the dead know not any thing] Cut off from life, they know nothing of what passes under the sun.

Verse 6. Also their love, and their hatred] It is evident that he speaks here of the ignorance, want of power, &c., of the dead, in reference only to this life. And though they have no more a portion under the sun, yet he does not intimate that they have none anywhere else.

Verse 7. Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy] Do not vex and perplex yourselves with the dispensations and mysteries of Providence; enjoy the blessings which God has given you, and live to his glory; and then God will accept your works.

Verse 8. Let thy garments be always white] The Jews wore white garments on festival occasions, as emblems of joy and innocence. Be always pure, and always happy.

Verse 9. Live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest] Marry prudently, keep faithfully attached to the wife thou hast chosen, and rejoice in the labour of thy hands.

Verse 11. The race is not to the swift] God causes the lame often to take the prey, the prize; and so works, that the weak overthrow the strong; therefore no man should confide in himself.

Happeneth to them all.] Every man has what may be called time and space to act in, and opportunity to do a particular work. But in this TIME and OPPORTUNITY there is INCIDENT, what may fall in; and OCCURRENCE, what may meet and frustrate an attempt. While you have TIME, seek an OPPORTUNITY to do what is right; but calculate on hindrances and oppositions, because time and opportunity have their INCIDENT and OCCURRENCE.

Verse 12. As the birds that are caught] Man acts so heedlessly, notwithstanding all his wisdom, and all his warnings, that he is often taken, as a fish is by the baited hook, and the bird by the baited snare.

Verse 14. There was a little city, and few men within it]

Here is another proof of the vanity of sublunary things; the ingratitude of men, and the little compensation that genuine merit receives. The little history mentioned here may have either been a fact, or intended as an instructive fable.

Verse 18. Destroyeth much good.] One sinner has often injured the work of God; one stumbling-block has sometimes destroyed a revival of religion. Sin acts like a ferment; whatever comes in contact with it, it assimilates to itself.

Observations on wisdom and folly, 1-3. Concerning right conduct towards rulers, 4. Merit depressed, and worthlessness exalted, 5-7. Of him who digs a pit, and removes a landmark, 8-9. The use of wisdom and experience, 10. Of the babbler and the fool, 11-15. The infant king, 16. The well-regulated court, 17. Of slothfulness, 18. Of feasting, 19. Speak not evil of the king, 20.

DEAD flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour.

3 Yea also, when he that is a fool walketh by the way, his wisdom faileth him, and he saith to every one that he is a fool.

4 If the spirit of the ruler rise up against thee, leave not thy place; for yielding pacifieth great offences.

5 There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, as an error which proceedeth from the ruler:

6 Folly is set in great dignity, and the rich sit in low place.

7 I have seen servants upon horses, and princes walking as servants upon the earth.

8 He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it; and whoso breaketh an hedge a serpent shall bite him.

* Heb. Flies of death.—† Heb. his heart.—c Prov. xiii. 16. xviii. 2.—d Ch. viii. 3.—e 1 Sam. xiv. 24, &c. Prov. xxv. 15.—f Heb. from before.—g Eccl. iii. 1.—h Heb. in great heights.—i Prov. xix. 10, xxx. 22.—j Ps. vii. 16. Prov. xxvi. 27.—k Ps. lvi. 4, 5. Jer. viii.

Verse 1. Dead flies] Any putrefaction spoils perfume; and so a foolish act ruins the character of him who has the reputation of being wise and good. Hence, no man can be said to be safe, till he is taken to the paradise of God.

Verse 2. A wise man's heart is at his right hand] The wise man has command over his own mind, feelings, passions, &c., and there is prudence in all his acts. The fool wants prudence and management, he has no restraint on his passions, and no rule or guard upon his tongue.

Verse 8. When a fool walketh by the way] In every act of life, and in every company he frequents, the irreligious man shows what he is.

Verse 4. If the spirit of the ruler rise up against thee] If the king get incensed against thee.

Leave not thy place] Humble thyself before him, that is thy place and duty; for yielding to him, and not standing stoutly in thy defence, pacifieth great offences: and then, when his anger is appeased, he will hear anything in thy justification, if thou have anything to offer. This is good advice to a child in reference to his parents, and to an inferior of any kind in reference to his superiors.

Verse 5. An error which proceedeth from the ruler] What this error in the ruler is, the two following verses point out: it is simply this—an injudicious distribution of offices, and raising people to places of trust and confidence who are destitute of merit, &c. This is frequent in the governments of the world; and favouritism has often brought prosperous nations to the brink of ruin.

Verse 8. Whoso breaketh an hedge, a serpent shall bite him.] While spoiling his neighbour's property, he himself may 9 Whoso removeth stones shall be hurt thereby; and he that cleaveth wood shall be endangered thereby.

10 If the iron be blunt, and he do not whet the edge, then must he put to more strength: but wisdom is profitable to direct.

11 Surely the serpent will bite without enchantment; and a babbler is no better.

12 The words of a wise man's mouth are gracious; but the lips of a fool will swallow up himself.

13 The beginning of the words of his mouth is foolishness: and the end of his talk is mischievous madness.

14 A fool also is full of words: a man cannot tell what shall be; and what shall be after him, who can tell him?

15 The labour of the foolish wearieth every one of them, because he knoweth not how to go to the city.

16 Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a come to greater mischief: while pulling out the sticks, he may be bit by a serpent, who has his nest there.

Verse 9. Whoso removeth stones] Whoever pulls down an old building is likely to be hurt by the stones; and in cleaving wood many accidents occur for want of sufficient caution.

Verse 10. If the iron be blunt] If the axe have lost its edge, and the owner do not sharpen it, he must apply the more strength to make it cut; but the wisdom that is profitable to direct will teach him, that he should whet his axe, and spare his strength. Thus, without wisdom and understanding we cannot go profitably through the meanest concerns in life.

Verse 11. The serpent will bite without enchantment] As a snake may bite before it hiss, so also will the babbler, talkative person, or calumniator. Without directly speaking evil, he insinuates, by innuendoes, things injurious to the reputation of his neighbour. The moral of this saying is simply this: A calumniator is as dangerous as a poisonous serpent; and from the venomous tongue of slander and detraction no man is safe.

Verse 12. The words of a wise man's mouth] Everything that proceeds from him is decent and orderly; creditable to himself, and acceptable to those who hear him. But the lips of the fool are not only not pleasant to others, but often destructive to himself.

Verse 14. A man cannot tell what shall be] A foolish babbling man will talk on every subject, though he can say as little on the past, as he can on the future.

Verse 15. He knoweth not how to go to the city.] "He knows nothing; he does not know his way to the next village."

 17 Blessed art thou, O land, when thy king is the son of nobles, and ^athy princes eat in due season, for strength, and not for drunkenness!

^a Prov. xxxi. 4.—^b Ps. civ. 15.—^c Heb. maketh glad the life.
 —^d Exod. xxii. 28. Acts xxiii. 5.

Verse 16. Woe to thee, O land when thy king is a child] Minorities are, in general, very prejudicial to a state. Regents either disagree, and foment civil wars, or oppress the people.

Thy princes eat in the morning] They do nothing in order; turn night into day, and day into night; sleep when they should wake, and wake when they should sleep; attending more to chamberings and banquetings, than to the concerns of the state.

Verse 17. When thy king is the son of nobles] Such a one as comes to the throne in a legitimate way, from an ancient regal family, whose right to the throne is incontestable.

And thy princes eat in due season] All persons in places of trust for the public weal, from the king to the lowest public functionary, should know, that the public are exceedingly scandalized at repeated accounts of entertainments, where 19 A feast is made for laughter, and ^bwine ^cmaketh merry: but money answereth all things.

20 ^dCurse not the king, no, not in thy ^ethought; and curse not the rich in thy bedchamber: for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter.

irregularity prevails, much money is expended, and no good done.

Verse 18. By much slothfulness] This is remarkably the case in some countries. Houses are not repaired till they almost fall about the ears of the inhabitants.

Verse 19. A feast is made for laughter] The object of it is to produce merriment, to banish care and concern of every kind.

Verse 20. Curse not the king] Do not permit thyself even to think evil of the king; lest thy tongue at some time give vent to thy thoughts, and so thou be chargeable with treason.

For a bird of the air shall carry the voice] Does he refer here to such fowls as the carrier pigeon, which were often used to carry letters under their wings to a great distance, and bring back answers?

Verse 2. Give a portion to seven] Never cease giving while thou seest a person in distress, and hast wherewithal to relieve him.

Thou knowest not what evil] Thou mayest yet stand in need of similar help thyself.

Verse 3. If the clouds be full of rain] Act as the clouds; when they are full, they pour out their water indifferently on the field and on the desert. Better relieve or give to a hundred worthless persons, than pass by one who is in real distress.

heavenly disposition while here; for there will be no change after this life. In whatever disposition or state of soul thou diest, in that thou wilt be found in the eternal world. Death refines nothing, purifies nothing, kills no sin, helps to no glory.

Verse 4. He that observeth the wind shall not sow] If a man neither plough nor sow till the weather is entirely to his mind, the season will in all probability pass before he will have done any thing; those very punctilious and scrupulous people, who will sift every thing to the bottom in every case, and, before they will act, must be fully satisfied on all points, seldom do any good. While they are observing the clouds and the rain, others have joined hands with God, and made a poor man live.

Verse 5. As thou knowest not—the way of the spirit] Why God should have permitted such and such persons to fall into want, and how they came into all their distresses, thou canst not tell, no more than thou canst how their soul is united to their body, or how the child was formed in the womb of its mother.

Verse 6. In the morning sow thy seed] Be ready at all times to show mercy; begin in the morning, continue till the evening. If thy motive be good, God will applaud and reward thee; not according to the worthiness or unworthiness of the object of thy charity, but according to the motive which induced thee to relieve him.

Verse 7. Truly the light is sweet] Life is dear to every man as the light of the sun is to the eye.

Verse 8. If a man live many years] And even have prosperity through the whole; yet the days of darkness—times of affliction, weakness, and perhaps old age, will be many. If he die not a violent death, which no man can wish, he will die a lingering death; and this is ordinarily attended with many pains and many sorrows; therefore let him prepare to meet his God; and to carry this thought through life, that all must terminate in death.

Verse 9. Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth] It is in the order of God, that the young should rejoice in their youth; but they should make such a moderate use of all their enjoyments, that they may not be confounded in the day of judgment. But, O young man, if thou wilt follow the propensities of thy own heart, the noisy mirth of the fool, and the dissipation of the profligate,—go on; take thy full swing; but take this with thee, that "for all these things, God will judge thee;" and if the righteous are scarcely saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

Verse 10. Therefore remove sorrow] Grief, anger; every kind of violent passion, all filthiness of the flesh and spirit. Eternity alone is permanent; live for eternity.

CHAPTER XII.

Youth should remember their Creator, 1. A description of old age and its infirmities, with the causes of death and dissolution, 2-9. How the preacher taught the people knowledge, 9-11. General directions, and conclusion of the work, 12-14.

REMEMBER * now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, ^b when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them.

2 While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain;

3 In the day when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and ^c the grinders cease because they are few, and those that look out of the windows be darkened,

4 And the ^d doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low, and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all ^e the daughters of music shall be brought low;

* Prov. xxii. 6. Lam. iii. 27.—^b See 2 Sam. xix. 25.—^c Or, the grinders fail, because they grind little.—^d Ps. cxli. 3.—^e 2 Sam. xix. 25.—Job xvii. 13.—^f Jer. ix. 17.—Gen. iii. 19. Job xxxiv. 15.

Verse 1. Remember thy Creator] Boreseycha, thy CREATOR. The word is most certainly in the plural number in all our common Hebrew Bibles; but it is in the singular number, Borecha, in one hundred and seventy-six of Dr. Kennicott's MSS., and ninety-six of De Rossi's; in many ancient editions; and in all the ancient Versions.

The evidence, therefore, that this text is supposed to give to the doctrine of the ever-blessed Trinity is but precarious, and on it little stress can be laid; and no man who loves truth would wish to support it by dubious witnesses. But what does the text say?

I. You are not your own, you have no right to yourselves. God is your Creator, as he created you, so he preserves you; he feeds, clothes, upholds you. He has made you capable of knowing, loving, and serving him in this world, and of enjoying him in his own glory for ever. And when you had undone yourselves by sin, he sent his Son to redeem you by his blood; and he sends his Spirit to enlighten, convince, and draw you away from childishness, from vain and trifling, as well as from sinful pursuits.

II. Remember him; consider that he is your Creator, your loving and affectionate Father. In youth memory is strong and tenacious; but, through the perversion of the heart by sin, young people can remember any thing better than GOD.

III. Remember him in thy youth, in order that you may have a long and blessed life, that you may be saved from the corruption and misery into which young people in general run.

IV. Remember him now, in this part of your youth—you have no certainty of life; now is yours, to-morrow may not be.

V. Should you live to old age, it is a very disadvantageous time to begin to serve the Lord in. Infirmities press down both body and mind, and the oppressed nature has enough to do to bear its own infirmities; and as there is little time, so there is generally less inclination to call upon the Lord.

Verse 2. While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened] i. e., in the SPRING, prime, and prosperity of life.

Nor the clouds return] The infirmities of old age, of which WINTER is a proper emblem, as spring is of youth, in the former clause of this verse.

Verse 3. In the day when the keepers of the house] The BODY of man is here compared to a HOUSE:—mark the metaphors and their propriety.

1. The keepers shall tremble—the hands become paralytic, as is constantly the case, less or more, in old age.

2. The strong men shall bow] The legs become feeble, and unable to support the weight of the body.

3. The grinders cease because they are few] The teeth good heed, and sought out, and ^a set in order many proverbs.

10 The preacher sought to find out ^b acceptable words: and that which was written was upright, even words of truth.

11 The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies, which are given from one shepherd.

decayed and mostly lost; the few that remain being incapable of properly masticating hard substances or animal food.

8. Those that look out of the windows] The optic nerves, which receive impressions, through the medium of the different humours of the eye, from surrounding objects,—they are darkened; the humours becoming thick, flat, and turbid,—they are no longer capable of transmitting those images in that clear distinct manner as formerly.

Verse 4. And the doors shall be shut in the streets]

5. The doors—the lips, which are the doors by which the mouth is closed.

6. Be shut in the streets] The cavities of the cheeks and jaws, through which the food may be said to travel before it is fitted by mastication or chewing to go down the oesophagus into the stomach. The doors or lips are shut to hinder the food in chewing from dropping out; as the teeth, which prevented that before, are now lost.

7. The sound of the grinding is low] Little noise is now made in eating, because the teeth are either lost, or become so infirm as not to suffer their being pressed closed together; and the mouth being kept shut to hinder the food from dropping out, the sound in eating is scarcely heard.

8. He shall rise up at the voice of the bird] His sleep is not sound as it used to be; he slumbers rather than sleeps; and the crowing of the cock awakes him.

9. All the daughters of music shall be brought low] The voice, that wonderful instrument, almost endless in the strength and variety of its tones, becomes feeble and squeaking, and merriment and pleasure are no more.

Verse 5. When they shall be afraid of that which is high]

10. Being so feeble, they are afraid to trust themselves to ascend steps, stairs, &c., without help. And when they look upwards, their heads turn giddy, and they are ready to fall.

11. Fears shall be in the way] They dare not walk out, lest they should meet some danger, which they have not strength to repel, nor agility to escape. A second childishness has taken place,—apprehensions, fears, terrors, and weakness.

12. The almond tree shall flourish] Yenaets, not flourish, but fall off. The hair begins to change, first grey, then white; it having no longer that supply of nutritive juices which it once had, this animal vegetable withers and falls off. The almond tree, having white flowers, is a fit emblem of a hoary head.

13. The grasshopper shall be a burden] Even such an inconsiderable thing as a locust, or a very small insect, shall be deemed burdensome, their strength is so exceedingly diminished.

14. Desire shall fail] Both relish and appetite for food, even the most delicate, that to which they were formerly so much attached, now fails.

15. Because man goeth to his long home] "To the house of his age;" the place destined to receive him, when the whole race or course of life shall be finished.

16. He is just departing into the invisible world; and this is known by the mourners going about the streets, the long hollow groans and throat-rattlings which proceed from him; the sure prognostications of the extreme debility and speedy cessation of those essential animal functions next mentioned.

Verse 6. Or ever the silver cord be loosed] We have already had all the external evidences of old age, with all its attendant infirmities; next follows what takes place in the body, in order to produce what is called death, or the separation of body and soul.

1. The silver cord.—The spinal marrow, from which all the nerves proceed, as itself does from the brain. This is termed a cord, from its exact similitude to one; and a silver cord, from its colour, as it strikingly exhibits the silver grey; and from its preciousness. This is said to be loosed; as the ed: of making many books there is no end; and ^a much ^d study is a weariness of the flesh.

13 ^a Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: ^b Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man.

14 For ^c God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.

—^c Deut. vi. 2. x. 12. — ^d Ch. xi. 9. Matt. xii. 36. Acts xvii. 30, 31. Rom. ii. 16. xiv. 10, 12. 1 Cor. iv. 5. 2 Cor. v. 10.

nervous system became a little before, and at the article of death, wholly debilitated. The last loosing being the fall of the under jaw, the invariable and never-failing evidence of immediate death; a few struggles more, and the soul is dismissed from its clay tenement.

2. The golden bowl be broken] The brain contained in the cranium, or skull; here called a bowl, from its resemblance to such a vessel, the container being put for the contained; and golden, because of its colour, and because of its exceeding preciousness. Broken—be rendered unfit to perform its functions, neither supplying nor distributing any nervous energy.

3. Or the pitcher be broken at the fountain] The vena cava, which brings back the blood to the right ventricle of the heart, here called the fountain, hammabbua, the spring whence the water gushes up; properly applied here to the heart, which by its contraction and expansion, sends out, and afterwards receives back, the blood: for all the blood flows from, and returns back, to the heart.

4. The wheel broken at the cistern.] The great aorta, which receives the blood from the cistern, the left ventricle of the heart, and distributes it to the different parts of the system. These may be said, as in the case of the brain above, to be broken, i.e., rendered useless. The wheel is used in allusion to the Asiatic wheels, by which they raise water from their wells and tanks, and deep cisterns, for domestic purposes, or to irrigate the grounds.

Verse 7. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God]

5. Putrefaction and solution take place; the whole mass becomes decomposed, and in process of time is reduced to dust, from which it was originally made; while the spirit, haruach, that spirit, which God at first breathed into the nostrils of man, when he in consequence became a LIVING SOUL, an intelligent, rational, discoursing animal, returns to God who gave it.

Verse 9. Because the preacher was wise, he still taught the people knowledge] And in order to do this he took good heed—considered what would be most useful. He set in order—collected and arranged many parables, probably alluding to the book over which we have already passed.

Verse 10. He sought to find out acceptable words] Words of desire, words of will; the best, the most suitable words; those which the people could best understand. But these words were not such as might merely please the people; they were words of truth; such as came from God, and might lead them to him.

Verse 11. The words of the wise] Doctrines of faith, illustrated by suitable language, are as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies, baalei asuphoth, the masters of collections, those who had made the best collections of this kind, the matter of which was of the most excellent nature; every saying sinking as deeply into the mind, by the force of the truth contained in it, as a nail well pointed does into a board, when impelled by the hammer's force. These masters of collections have been supposed to be public persons appointed by the prince himself, the sole shepherd, to see that nothing was put into the people's hands but what would be profitable for them to read; and that, when any wise man gave public instructions, a good scribe sat by to take down the words; and then the master examined what he had written, to see that it was upright, and that the words were doctrines of truth.

After all, masters of assemblies may mean public teachers; that which was written, the oracles of God, out of which they instructed the people; the one Shepherd, God ALMIGHTY, from whom they received their authority and unction to preach the truth; and by the energy of whose Spirit the heavenly teaching was fastened in their hearts, as a well driven nail in a sound piece of wood.

Verse 12. And further, by these, my son, be admonished] Hear such teachers, and receive their admonitions; and do not receive the grace of God in vain.

And much study is a weariness of the flesh.] O how true is this! Let the trembling knees, the palsied hands, the darkened eyes, the aching heart, and the puzzled mind of every real student declare!

Verse 13. After all, the sum of the great business of human life is comprised in this short sentence, on which some millions of books have been already written!

FEAR GOD, AND KEEP HIS COMMANDMENTS.

The word duty, added here by our translators, spoils, if not perverts, the sense, Verse 14. For God shall bring every work into judgment] This is the reason why we should "fear God and keep his commandments." 1. Because there will be a day of judgment. 2. Every soul of man shall stand at that bar. 3. God, the infinitely wise, the heart-searching God, will be judge. 4. He will bring to light every secret thing—all that has been done since the creation, by all men; whether forgotten or registered; whether done in secret or in public. 5. All the works of the godly, as well as all the works of the wicked, shall be judged in that day; the good which the godly strove to conceal, as well as the evil which the wicked endeavoured to hide.

INTRODUCTION

CANTICLES, OR SONG OF SOLOMON.

THE Book before us is called in the Hebrew SHIR HASHSHIRIM, "The Song of Songs;" or, "An Ode of the Odes:" which might be understood, "An Ode taken or selected from others of a similar kind;" or, "An Ode the most excellent of all others:" this being an idiom common to the Hebrew language.

There have been some doubts concerning its author. Some of the rabbins supposed it to be the work of the prophet Isaiah; but most have without hesitation, attributed it to Solomon, whose name it bears; and if the Book of Ecclesiastes be his, this will follow in course, as the style is exactly the same, allowing for the difference of the subject. Both books seem to have been written about the same time, and to have had the same author.

This book, if written by Solomon, could not have been written in his old age; for we find that long before Solomon's old age he had three hundred wives, and seven hundred concubines; but at the time this Song was written, Solomon had only sixty wives and eighty concubines. And the Song most certainly celebrates a marriage; whether between Solomon and the daughter of Pharaoh, or between him and some Jewish princess, has not been fully agreed on among critics and commentators. It is most likely to have been a juvenile or comparatively juvenile production; and indeed the high and glowing colouring, and the strength of the images, are full proofs of this.

But to what denomination of writing do the Canticles belong? Are they mere Odes or Idylls, or Pastorals; or are they an Epithalamium? Strictly speaking, the Book of Canticles falls under neither of these: it is rather a composition sui generis, and seems to partake more of the nature of what we call a MASK, than any thing else; an entertainment for the guests who attended the marriage ceremony, with a dramatic cast throughout the whole, though the persons who speak and act are not formally introduced.

As to the persons chiefly concerned, it is generally believed that Solomon and Pharaoh's daughter are the bridegroom and bride; with their proper attendants, viz., companions of the bridegroom, and companions of the bride, with certain mutes, who only appear, or are mentioned by others, without taking any particular part in the transactions.

But it is much more easy to be satisfied on the species of composition to which this book belongs, than on the meaning of the book itself. Is it to be understood in the obvious manner in which it presents itself? And are Solomon and his bride, their friends and companions, to be considered as mere dramatis personæ? Or are they typical or representative persons? Does this marriage represent a celestial union? Do the speeches of each contain divine doctrines? Are the metaphors taken from earthly things, to be understood of spiritual matters? In a word, does Solomon here represent Jesus Christ? Is the daughter of Pharaoh the Christian Church, or, according to some Roman Catholics, the Virgin Mary? Are watchmen, vineyard keepers, shepherds, &c., the ministers of the Gospel? Wine and various fruits, the influences and graces of the Divine Spirit? &c. &c.

The different opinions held on this book are the following:—

I. It is a plain epithalamium on the marriage of Solomon with the daughter of Pharaoh, king of Egypt.

II. It is an allegory relative to the conduct of God towards the Hebrews, in bringing them out of Egypt through the wilderness to the Promised Land.

III. It is intended to represent the incarnation of Jesus Christ, or his marriage with human nature, in reference to its redemption.

IV. It represents Christ's love to the church or elected souls, and their love to him.

V. It is an allegorical poem on the glories of Jesus Christ and the Virgin Mary.

VI. It is a collection of sacred idylls; the spiritual meaning of which is not agreed on.

Each of these opinions has its powerful supporters, and each of these has reasons to offer for the support of the opinion which is espoused; and nothing but a direct revelation from God can show us which of these opinions is the correct one, or whether any of them are correct.

What do Christ and his apostles say of it?

1. If Jesus Christ or any of his apostles had referred to it as an allegory, and told us the subject which it pointed out, we should then have had data, and had only to proceed in the way of elucidation. But we find nothing of this in the New Testament.

2. If they had referred to it as an allegory, without intimating the meaning, then we should be justified in searching everywhere for that meaning; and conjecture itself would have been legal, till we had arrived at some self-testifying issue.

3. If they had referred to it at all in connexion with spiritual subjects, then we should have at once seen that it was to be spiritually understood; and, comparing spiritual things with spiritual, we must have humbly sought for its spiritual interpretation.

4. Had the Supreme Being been introduced, or referred to in any of his essential attributes, or by any of the names which he has been pleased to assume in his revelations to men, we should have then seen that the writer was a spiritual man, and wrote probably in reference to a spiritual end; and, that we should pass by or through his letter, in order to get to the spirit concealed under it. But none of these things appear in this book: the name of God is not found in it; nor is it quoted in the New Testament. As to certain references which its allegorical expositors suppose are made to it, either in the Gospels, Epistles, or Apocalypse, they are not express, and do not, by any thing in or connected with them, appear unequivocally to point out this book. And after all that has been said, I am fully of opinion it is not once referred to in the New Testament. But this is no proof of its not being canonical, as there are other books, on which there is no doubt, that are in the same predicament. But still, if it refer so distinctly to Christ and his church, as some suppose, it certainly would not have been passed over by both evangelists and apostles without pointed and especial notice; and particularly if it points out the love of Christ to his church, and the whole economy of God's working in reference to the salvation of the souls of men.

From all this it will appear to the intelligent reader, that the spiritual meaning of this book cannot easily be made out: 1. Because we do not know that it is an allegory. 2. If one, the principles on which such allegory is to be explained do nowhere appear.

I must own I see no indubitable ground for the opinion that it is a spiritual allegory, representing the loves of Christ and his church. This conviction is the result of frequent examination, careful reading, and close thinking, at intervals, for nearly fifty years; and however I may be blamed by some, and pitied by others, I must say, and I say it as fearlessly as I do conscientiously, that in this inimitably fine elegant Hebrew ode I see nothing of Christ and his church, and nothing that appears to have been intended to be thus understood; and nothing, if applied in this way, that, per se, can promote the interests of vital godliness, or cause the simple and sincere not to, "know Christ after the flesh."

INTRODUCTION TO THE CANTICLES, OR SONG OF SOLOMON.

[More recent criticism has not settled the question as to the principles of interpretation to be adopted in the study of this Song. The literalists, however, are gaining ground; and though the allegorist school is by no means contemptible, the best Biblical scholars agree in the interpretation that "The Song is intended to display the victory of humble and constant love over the temptations of wealth and royalty. The tempter is Solomon: the object of his seductive endeavours is a Shulamite shepherdess, who, surrounded by the glories of the court, pines for the shepherd lover from whom she has been involuntarily separated." The moral is obvious.]

THE SONG OF SOLOMON.

CHAPTER I.

*The bride's love to her spouse, 1-5. She confesses her unworthiness; desires to be directed to the flock, 6, 7; and she is directed to the shepherds' tents, 8. The bridegroom describes his bride, and shows how he will provide * for her, and how comfortably they are accommodated, 9-17.*

THE ¹ song of songs, which is Solomon's.
2 Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth: ² for ³ thy love is better than wine.

3 Because of the savour of thy good ⁴ ointments thy name is as ointment poured forth, therefore do the virgins love thee.

4 Draw me, * we will run after thee: the king ⁵ hath brought me into his chambers: we will be glad and rejoice in thee, we will remember thy love more than wine: ⁶ the upright love thee.

5 I am black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon.

6 Look not upon me, because I am black, because the sun hath looked upon me: my mother's children were angry with me; they made me keeper of the vineyards; but mine own vineyard have I not kept.

7 Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon: for why should I be as ⁸ one that turneth aside by the flocks of thy companions?

* 1 Kings iv. 32.—² Ch. iv. 10.—³ Heb. thy loves.—⁴ Hos. xi. 4. John vi. 44.—⁵ Phil. iii. 12, 13, 14.—⁶ Ps. xiv. 14, 15. John xiv. 2. Eph. ii. 6.—⁷ Or, they love thee uprightly.—⁸ Or, as one that is veiled Verse 1. The song of songs] A song of peculiar excellence. See the Introduction. The rabbins consider this superior to all songs.

Verse 2. Let him kiss me, &c.] She speaks of the bridegroom in the third person, to testify her own modesty, and to show him the greater respect.

Thy love is better than wine.] The Versions in general translate dodeyca, thy breasts.

Verse 3. Thy name is as ointment poured forth] Ointments and perfumes were, and still are, in great request among the Asiatics. Thy name is as refreshing to my heart, as the best perfumes diffused through a chamber are to the senses of the guests.

Therefore do the virgins love thee.] She means herself; but uses this periphrasis through modesty.

Verse 4. Draw me] Let me have the full assurance of thy affection.

We will run after thee] Speaking in the plural through modesty, while still herself is meant.

The king hath brought me] My spouse is a potentate, a mighty king, no ordinary person.

Into his chambers] He has favoured me with his utmost confidence.

The upright love thee.] The most perfect and accomplished find thee worthy of their highest esteem.

8 If thou know not, ¹ O thou fairest among women, go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock, and feed thy kids beside the shepherds' tents.

9 I have compared thee, ² O my love, ³ to a company of horses in Pharaoh's chariots.

10 ¹ Thy cheeks are comely with rows of jewels, thy neck with chains of gold.

11 We will make thee borders of gold with studs of silver.

12 While the king sitteth at his table, my spike-nard sendeth forth the smell thereof.

13 A bundle of myrrh is my well-beloved unto me; he shall lie all night betwixt my breasts.

14 My beloved is unto me as a cluster of ⁵ camphire in the vineyards of En-gedi.

15 ⁶ Behold, thou art fair, ⁷ O my love; behold, thou art fair; thou hast doves' eyes.

16 Behold, thou art fair; my beloved, yea, pleasant: also our bed is green.

17 The beams of our house are cedar, and our ⁸ rafters of fir.

—¹ Ch. v. 9. vi. 1.—² Ch. ii. 2, 10, 13. iv. 1, 7. v. 2. vi. 4. John xv. 14, 15.—³ 2 Chron. i. 16, 17.—⁴ Ezek. xvi. 11, 12, 13.—⁵ Or, cypress. Ch. iv. 13.—⁶ Ch. iv. 1. v. 12.—⁷ Or, my companion.—⁸ Or, galleries.

Verse 5. I am black, but comely] This is literally true of many of the Asiatic women; though black or brown, they are exquisitely beautiful.

As the tents of Kedar] I am tawny, like the tents of the Arabians, and like the pavilions of Solomon, probably covered by a kind of tanned cloth.

Verse 6. Because the sun hath looked upon me] Here the brown complexion of the Egyptians is attributed to the influence of the sun or climate.

My mother's children were angry with me] Acted severely. The bringing of a foreigner to the throne would no doubt excite jealousy among the Jewish females; who, from their own superior complexion, national and religious advantages, might well suppose that Solomon should not have gone to Egypt for a wife and queen, while Judea could have furnished him with every kind of superior excellence.

Verse 7. Tell me—where thou feedest] This is spoken as if the parties were shepherds, or employed in the pastoral life. But how this would apply either to Solomon, or the princess of Egypt, is not easy to ascertain. [According to the literalist interpretation, she now addresses her shepherd-lover.]

To rest at noon] In hot countries the shepherds and their flocks are obliged to retire to shelter during the burning heats of the noon-day sun.

One that turneth aside] As a wanderer; one who, not knowing where to find her companions, wanders fruitlessly in seeking them.

Verse 8. If thou know not] This appears to be the reply of the virgins. They know not exactly; and therefore direct the bride to the shepherds, who would give information.

Verse 9. I have compared thee—to a company of horses] This may be translated, more literally, "I have compared thee, lesusathi, to my mare, in the chariots or courses of Pharaoh;" and so the Versions understood it. [The speaker is supposed to be Solomon.]

Verse 10. Thy cheeks are comely] The Arabian ladies wear a great many pearls about their necks and caps.

Verse 11. Borders of gold] The handkerchiefs, shawls, and head attire of the eastern women, are curiously and expensively worked in the borders with gold and silver, and variously coloured silk, which has a splendid effect.

Verse 12. While the king sitteth at his table] Bimsibbo, in his circle, probably meaning the circle of his friends at the marriage festivals, or a round table.

Verse 13. He shall lie all night betwixt my breasts.] Mr Harmer contends that it is the bundle of myrrh which the bride says shall lie all night betwixt her breasts, to which she compares the bridegroom, his name being as pleasing and refreshing to her mind, as the myrrh or stacte was to her senses, by its continual fragrance.

Verse 14. A cluster of camphire] Perhaps the poet alludes to the dark colour of the hair, which by the Greeks was not unfrequently compared to the bunches of grapes; by no means an unfit similitude for thick black clustering curls.

Verse 15. Thou hast doves eyes.] The large and beautiful dove of Syria is supposed to be here referred to, the eyes of which are remarkably fine.

Verse 16. Also our bed is green.] Probably a green bank is meant, on which they sat down, being now on a walk in the country. Or it may mean a bower in a garden, or the nuptial bed.

Verse 17. The beams of our house are cedar] Perhaps it was under a cedar tree, whose vast limbs were interwoven with the beroth, a tree of the cyprus kind, where they now sat. And this natural bower recommended itself to the poet's attention by its strength, loftiness, and its affording them a shady cover and cool retreat. How natural to break out into the praise of a bower, by whose branches and foliage we are shielded from the intense heat of the sun!

CHAPTER II.

A description of the bridegroom, and his love for the bride, 1-9. A fine description of spring, 10-13. The mutual love of both, 14-17.

I AM the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys.

2 As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

3 As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. * I sat down under his shadow with great delight, ^b and his fruit was sweet to my ^c taste.

4 He brought me to the ^d banquetting house, and his banner over me was love.

5 Stay me with flagons, * comfort me with apples: for I am sick of love.

6 ^e His left hand is under my head, and his right hand doth embrace me.

7 ^f I ^g charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes, and by the hinds of the field, that ye stir not up, nor awake my love, till he please.

* Heb. I delighted and eat down, &c.—^b Rev. xxii. 1, 2.—^c Heb. palate.—^d Heb. house of wine.—^e Heb. straw me with apples.—^f Ch, 8 The voice of my beloved! behold, he cometh leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills.

9 ^h My beloved is like a roe, or a young heart: behold, he standeth behind our wall, he looketh forth at the windows, ⁱ shewing himself through the lattice.

10 My beloved spake, and said unto me, ^k Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away.

11 For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone;

12 The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land;

13 The fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. ^l Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away.

viii. 3.—^h Heb. I admire you.—ⁱ Ch. iii. 5. viii. 4.—^j Ver. 17.—^k Heb. flourishing.—^l Ver. 13.—^m Ver. 10.

Verse 5. Stay me with flagons] I believe the original words mean some kind of cordials with which we are unacquainted. The Versions in general understand some kind of ointment or perfumes by the first term.

Verse 7. I charge you—by the roes] This was probably some rustic mode of adjuration. The verses themselves require little comment.

Verse 8. Behold, he cometh leaping] This appears to be highly characteristic of the gambols of the shepherds, and points out the ecstacy with which those who were enamoured ran to their mates.

Verse 9. He standeth behind our wall] This may refer to the wall by which the house was surrounded, the space between which and the house constituted the court. He was first seen behind the wall, and then in the court; and lastly came to the window of his bride's chamber.

Verse 13. The fig tree putteth forth her green figs] The fig-tree in Judea bears double crops; the first of which is ripe in spring. But the tree bears figs all the year through, in the climes congenial to it. That is, the fig-tree has always ripe or unripe fruit on it. But in the beginning of spring they grow fast, and become turgid.

Verse 1. I am the rose of Sharon] Sharon was a very fruitful place, where David's cattle were fed, 1 Chron. xxvii. 29. It is mentioned as a place of excellence, Isa. xxxv. 2, and as a place of flocks, Isa. lxx. 10. Perhaps it would be better, with almost all the Versions, to translate, "I am the rose of the field." The bridegroom had just before called her fair; she, with a becoming modesty, represents her beauty as nothing extraordinary, and compares herself to a common flower of the field. This, in the warmth of his affection, he denies, insisting that she as much surpasses all other maidens as the flower of the lily does the bramble, ver. 2.

Verse 3. As the apple tree] The bride returns the compliment, and says, As the apple or citron tree is among the trees of the wood, so is the bridegroom among all other men. I sat down under his shadow] I am become his spouse, and my union with him makes me indescribably happy.

Verse 4. He brought me to the banquetting house] Literally, the house of wine. The ancients preserved their wine, not in barrels or dark cellars under ground, as we do, but in large pitchers, ranged against the wall in some upper apartment in the house, the place where they kept their most precious effects.

14 O my dove that art in the clefts of the rock, in the secret places of the stairs, let me see thy countenance, let me hear thy voice; for sweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely.

15 Take us ^b the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines: for our vines have tender grapes.

* Ch. viii. 13.—^b Ps. lxxx. 19. Ezek. xiii. 4. Luke xiii. 32.—^c Ch. vi. 8. vii. 10.

The vines with the tender grape.] The Versions understand this of the flowers of the vine. These were formerly put into the new wine to give it a fine flavour.

Verse 14. My dove—in the clefts of the rock.] He compares his bride hiding herself in her secret chambers and closets to a dove in the clefts of the rock.

Verse 15. Take us the foxes.] That these were ruinous to vines all authors allow. They abounded in Judea; and did most damage when the clusters were young and tender.

Verse 16. My beloved is mine.] The words of the bride on his entering: "I am thy own; thou art wholly mine."

16 ^c My beloved is mine, and I am his: he feedeth among the lilies.

17 ^d Until the day break, and the shadows flee away, turn, my beloved, and be thou ^e like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains ^f of Bethel.

^d Ch. iv. 6.—^e Ver. 9. Ch. viii. 14.—^f Or, of division.

He feedeth among the lilies.] The odour with which he is surrounded is as fine as if he passed the night among the sweetest scented flowers.

Verse 17. Until the day break.] Literally, until the day breathe; until the first dawn, which is usually accompanied with the most refreshing breezes.

The shadows flee away.] Referring to the evening or setting of the sun, at which all shadows vanish.

The mountains of Bethel.] Translated also mountains of division, supposed to mean the mountains of Beth-horon.

CHAPTER III.

The bride mentions the absence of her spouse, her search after him, and her ultimate success, 1-5. A description of the bridegroom, his bed, chariot, &c., 6-11.

BY ^a night on my bed I sought him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but I found him not.

2 I will rise now, and go about the city in the streets, and in the broad ways I will seek him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but I found him not.

3 ^b The watchmen that go about the city found me: to whom I said, Saw ye him whom my soul loveth?

4 It was but a little that I passed from them, but I found him whom my soul loveth: I held him, and would not let him go, until I had brought him into my mother's house, and into the chamber of her that conceived me.

5 ^c I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes, and by the hinds of the field, that ye stir not up, nor awake my love, till he please.

* Isa. xxvi. 9.—^b Ch. v. 7.—^c Ch. ii. 7. viii. 4.

Verse 1. By night on my bed I sought him.] It appears that the bridegroom only saw the bride by night: that on the night referred to here he did not come as usual. The bride, troubled on the account, rose and sought him; inquired of the city guards, and continued to seek till at last she found him, and brought him to her apartment, ver. 2-4.

Verse 4. Into my mother's house.] The women in the East have all separate apartments, into which no person ever attempts to enter except the husband. Gen. xxiv. 67.

Verse 6. Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness.] Going to Egypt was called descending or going down, coming from it was termed coming up. The bride, having risen, goes after her spouse to the country, and the clouds of incense arising from her palanquin seemed like pillars of smoke; and the appearance was altogether so splendid as to attract the admiration of her own women, who converse about her splendour, excellence, &c., and then take occasion to describe Solomon's nuptial bed and chariot.

Verse 7. Threescore valiant men.] These were the guards about the pavilion of the bridegroom, who were placed there because of fear in the night. The security and state of the 6 ^d Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke, perfumed with myrrh and frankincense, with all powders of the merchant?

7 Behold his bed, which is Solomon's; threescore valiant men are about it, of the valiant of Israel.

8 They all hold swords, being expert in war: every man hath his sword upon his thigh because of fear in the night.

9 King Solomon made himself ^e a chariot of the wood of Lebanon.

10 He made the pillars thereof of silver, the bottom thereof of gold, the covering of it of purple, the midst thereof being paved with love, for the daughters of Jerusalem.

prince required such a guard as this, and the passage is to be literally understood.

Verse 8. They all hold swords.] They are swordsmen. Every man has a sword, and is well instructed how to use it.

Verse 9. Of the wood of Lebanon.] Of the cedar that grew on that mount. It is very likely that a nuptial bed, not a chariot, is intended by the original word appiryon. It may, however, mean a palanquin.

Verse 10. The covering—of purple.] Most probably the canopy.

The midst—paved with love.] The counterpane, a superb piece of embroidery, wrought by some of the noble maids of Jerusalem, and, as a proof of their affection, respect, and love, presented to the bride and bridegroom on their nuptial day. This is most likely to be the sense of the passage, though some suppose it to refer to the whole court.

Verse 11. Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion.] This is the exhortation of the companions of the bride to the females of the city to examine the superb appearance of the bridegroom, and especially the nuptial crown, which appears to have been made by Bathsheba, who it is supposed might have lived till

In the day of the gladness of his heart. The day in which all his wishes were crowned, by being united to that female whom beyond all others he loved.

The bridegroom's description of his bride, her person, her accomplishments, her chastity, and her general excellence,

BEHOLD, "thou art fair, my love; behold, thou art fair; thou hast doves' eyes within thy locks: thy hair is as a flock of goats," that appear from Mount Gilead.

2 "Thy teeth are like a flock of sheep that are even shorn, which came up from the washing; whereof every one bear twins, and none is barren among them.

3 Thy lips are like a thread of scarlet, and thy speech is comely: "thy temples are like a piece of a pomegranate within thy locks.

4 "Thy neck is like the tower of David builded for an armoury, whereon there hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men.

5 "Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are twins, which feed among the lilies.

6 "Until the day break, and the shadows flee away, I will get me to the mountain of myrrh, and to the hill of frankincense.

the top of Shenir¹ and Hermon, from the lions' dens, from the mountains of the leopards.

Verse 1. Thou hast doves' eyes within thy locks] Perhaps this refers rather to a sort of veil worn by many of the eastern women, but especially in Egypt. But the clause, within thy locks, is not well translated, either by ourselves or by the Versions.

As a flock of goats] Because it was black and sleek, as the hair of the goats of Arabia and Palestine is known to be; which, with its fine undulation, is supposed to bear some resemblance to the curls or plaits of a woman's tresses. The mountains of Gilead were beyond Jordan, on the frontiers of Arabia Deserta.

Verse 2. Thy teeth are like a flock] This comparison appears to be founded on the evenness, neatness, and whiteness of the newly shorn and newly washed sheep.

Verse 3. Thy lips are like a thread of scarlet] Both lips and cheeks were ruddy. Like the section of a pomegranate, that side cut off on which is the finest blush. This is a good and apt metaphor. But the inside may be referred to, as it is finely streaked with red and white melting into each other.

Verse 4. Thy neck is like the tower of David] It is certain that bucklers were frequently hung about towers, both for their ornaments, and to have them at hand when their use was required; see Ezek. xvii. 10. But the allusion here may be to those pillars which are often seen in armouries on which weapons of various kinds are hung, formed into a great variety of shapes, and very splendid.

Verse 5. Thy two breasts are like two young roes] The poet speaks the language of nature; and in a case of this kind, where the impassioned lover attempts to describe the different perfections of his bride, language often fails him, and his comparisons and similitudes are often without strict correctness.

Feed among the lilies.] It may be the nipples especially, which the poet compares to the two young roes; and the lilies may refer to the whiteness of the breasts themselves.

Verse 6. Until the day-break] Until the morning breeze. The shadows flee away] Till the sun sets.

Mountain of myrrh] Probably the same as the mountains of Bethel, chap. ii. 17. Mountains where the trees grew from which myrrh and incense were extracted.

Verse 7. Thou art all fair—there is no spot in thee.] "My beloved, every part of thee is beautiful; thou hast not a single defect."

Verse 8. My spouse] The callah, which we translate spouse, seems to have a peculiar meaning. Mr. Harmer thinks the Jewish princess is intended by it; and this seems to receive confirmation from the bridegroom calling her sister, ver. 9, that is one of the same stock and country; and thus different from the Egyptian bride. [It probably means "my betrothed."]

Look from the top of Amana, &c.] Mount Libanus separates Phœnicia from Syria. Amanus is between Syria and Cilicia. Shenir and Hermon are beyond Jordan, to the south of Damascus and Mount Libanus, and northward of the mountains of Gilead. Hermon and Shenir are but different parts of the same chain of mountains which separates Trachonitis, or the country of Manasses, from Arabia Deserta.

Verse 9. Thou hast ravished my heart] "Thou hast hearted me," i. e., taken away my heart; as we say, "He has barked the tree," i. e., he has stripped it of its bark; "He has fleeced the flock," i. e., deprived them of their wool.

With one of thine eyes] This has been thought a harsh expression, and various emendations have been sought. If even taken literally, the sense is good; for the poet may refer to a side glance, shot in passing by, or turning away, where only one eye could be seen.

With one chain of thy neck.] Probably referring to the play of the cervical muscles, rather than to mechanical Verse 11. Thy lips—drop as the honeycomb] Thy words are as delicious to my heart as the first droppings of the honeycomb are to the palate.

Honey and milk are under thy tongue] Eloquence and persuasive speech were compared among the ancients to honey and milk.

Verse 12. A garden inclosed—a spring shut up, a fountain sealed.] Different expressions to point out the fidelity of the bride, or of the Jewish queen. She is unsullied, a chaste, pure virgin. None has ever entered into this garden; none has yet tasted of this spring; the seal of this fountain has never been broken.

Verse 13. Thy plants are an orchard of pomegranates] This seems to refer to the fecundity of the bride or Jewish queen; to the former, it would be a prediction; to the latter, a statement of what had already taken place.

Verse 15. A fountain of gardens] Perhaps gannim, "gardens," was originally chayim, "lives," a living fountain, a continual spring. But this is expressed afterwards; though there would be nothing improper in saying, "a living fountain, a well of living waters, and streams from Mount Lebanon." A fountain of gardens may mean one so abundant as to be sufficient to supply many gardens, to water many plots of ground; an exuberant fountain.

Verse 16. Awake, O north wind; and come, thou south] He wishes the winds from all directions to carry throughout the land the fume of his spices, virtue, and perfections.

CHAPTER V.

The bridegroom calls on his spouse to admit him, 1-3. She hesitates; but arising finds him gone, seeks him, and is treated unworthily by the city watch, 4-7. Inquires of the daughters of Jerusalem, who question her concerning her beloved, 8-9. This gives her occasion to enter into a fine description of his person and accomplishments, 10-16.

I AM come into my garden, my sister, my spouse: I have gathered my myrrh with my spice; I have eaten my honeycomb with my honey; I have drunk my wine with my milk: eat, O friends; drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved.

2 I sleep, but my heart waketh: it is the voice of my beloved that knocketh, saying, Open to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled: for my head is filled with dew, and my locks with the drops of the night.

3 I have put off my coat; how shall I put it on? I have washed my feet; how shall I defile them?

4 My beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door, and my bowels were moved for him.

5 I rose up to open to my beloved; and my hands dropped with myrrh, and my fingers with sweet smelling myrrh, upon the handles of the lock.

6 I opened to my beloved; but my beloved had withdrawn himself, and was gone: my soul failed when he spake: I sought him, but I could not find him; I called him, but he gave me no answer.

7 The watchmen that went about the city found me, they smote me, they wounded me; the keepers of the walls took away my veil from me.

8 I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, if ye find my beloved, that ye tell him, that I am sick of love.

9 What is thy beloved more than another beloved, O thou fairest among women? what is thy beloved more than another beloved, that thou dost so charge us?

Verse 1. I am come into my garden] I came, or have come; this should be translated in the past tense, as the other preterite verbs in this clause. I think the latter clause of the preceding verse should come in here: "Let my beloved come into his garden, and eat his pleasant fruits. I have come into my garden, my sister, callah, or spouse: I have gathered my myrrh," &c.

Eat, O friends—drink abundantly] These are generally supposed to be the words of the bridegroom, after he returned from the nuptial chamber. The entertainment is served up; and he invites his companions, and the friends of both parties, to eat and drink abundantly, as there was such a universal cause of rejoicing.

Verse 2. I sleep, but my heart waketh] Though I sleep; yet so impressed is my heart with the excellences of my beloved, that my imagination presents him to me in the most pleasing dreams throughout the night. I doubt whether the whole, from this verse to the end of the seventh, be not a dream: several parts of it bear this resemblance; and I confess there are some parts of it, such as her hesitating to rise, his sudden disappearance, &c., which would be of easier solution on this supposition.

For my head is filled with dew] She supposed he had come in the night, and was standing without, wet, and exposed to the inclemency of the weather.

Verse 3. I have put off my coat] "The bride must have been in a dream, or in much disorder of mind, to have made the frivolous excuses here mentioned. The words relate to the case of a person who had gone to take rest on his bed. As they wore nothing but sandals, they were obliged to wash their feet previously to their lying down."

read), in me.—s Heb. passing or running about.—l Sam. x. 21. Ch. iii. 1. Luke ii. 44, 45.—Ch. iii. 3.—Heb. what.—Ch. i. 8.

Verse 4. My beloved put in his hand] It may refer to his attempts to open the door, when she hesitated to arise, on the grounds mentioned ver. 3. But this also bears every evidence of a dream.

Verse 5. My hands dropped with myrrh] It was a custom among the Romans, to conduct the bride to the house of the bridegroom with lighted torches; and those who brought her anointed the door-posts with fragrant oils, whence the name usor, or as it was formerly written unwor, for a wife or married woman, because of the anointing which took place on the occasion; for sometimes the bride herself anointed the door-posts, and sometimes those who brought her; probably both at the same time. The same custom might have existed among the Jews.

Verse 7. Took away my veil] They tore it off rudely, to discover who she was.

Verse 8. I am sick of love] "I am exceedingly concerned for his absence: and am distressed on account of my thoughtless carriage towards him." The latter clause may be well translated, "What should ye tell him?" Why, "that I am sick of love."

Verse 9. What is thy beloved more than another beloved] This question gives the bride an opportunity to break out into a highly wrought description of the beauty and perfections of her spouse.

Verse 10. My beloved is white and ruddy] Red and white, properly mixed, are essential to a fine complexion; and this is what is intimated: he has the finest complexion among ten thousand persons; not one in that number is equal to him.

Verse 11. His head is as the most fine gold] He has the 10 My beloved is white and ruddy, * the chiefest among ten thousand.

11 His head is as the most fine gold, his locks are ^b bushy, and black as a raven.

12 ^c His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the rivers of waters, washed with milk, and ^d fitly set.

Verse 12. Washed with milk] The white of the eye, ex-[fitly set.] Or, as the margin, very properly, sitting in fulness; not sunk, not contracted.

Verse 13. His cheeks are as a bed of spices] Possibly meaning a bed in the garden, where odoriferous herbs grew.
But it has been supposed to refer to his beard, which in a young well-made man is exceeding beautiful.

His lips like lilies] The shoshannim may mean any flower of the lily kind, such as the rubens liliun, mentioned by Pliny, or something of the tulip kind. There are tints in such flowers that bear a very near resemblance to a fine ruly lip.

Verse 14. His hands—gold rings set with the beryl] This really seems to refer to gold rings set with precious stones on the fingers, and perhaps to circlets or bracelets about the wrists. Some suppose it to refer to the roundness and exquisite symmetry of the hand and fingers.

His belly—bright ivory overlaid with sapphires.] This must refer to some garment set with precious stones which went round his waist, and was peculiarly remarkable. If we take it literally, the sense is plain enough. His belly was beautifully white, and the blue veins appearing under the skin resembled the sapphire stone.

Verse 15. His legs are as pillars of marble] Exquisitely turned and well-shaped; the sockets of gold may refer to his slippers. On these a profusion of gold and ornaments are still lavished in Asiatic countries.

His countenance is as Lebanon] As Lebanon exalts its head beyond all the other mountains near Jerusalem, so my beloved is tall and majestic, and surpasses in stature and majesty all other men. He is also as straight and as firm as the cedars.

Verse 16. His mouth is most sweet] His eloquence is great, and his voice is charming. Then, her powers of description failing, and metaphor exhausted, she cries out,
"The whole of him is loveliness. This is my beloved, and this is my companion, O ye daughters of Jerusalem."

CHAPTER VI.

The companions of the bride inquire after the bridegroom, 1-3. A description of the bride, 4-13.

WHITHER is thy beloved gone, * O thou fairest among women ?
whither is thy beloved turned aside ? that we may seek him with thee.

2 My beloved is gone down into his garden, to the beds of spices, to feed in the gardens, and to gather lilies.

3 ^b I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine :
he feedeth among the lilies.

4 Thou art beautiful, O my love, as Tirzah, comely as Jerusalem, ^c terrible as an army with banners.

* Ch. i. 8.—^b Ch. ii. 16. vii. 10.—^c Ver. 10.—^d Or, they have puffed me up.

Verse 1. Whither is thy beloved gone] These words are supposed to be addressed to the bride by her own companions, and are joined to the preceding chapter by the Hebrew and all the Versions.

Verse 2. My beloved is gone down into his garden] The answer of the bride to her companions.

Verse 4. Beautiful—as Tirzah.] This is supposed to be the address of Solomon to the bride. Tirzah was a city in the tribe of Ephraim (Josh. xii. 24), and the capital of that district. It appears to have been beautiful in itself, and beautifully situated, for Jeroboam made it his residence before Samaria was built; and it seems to have been the ordinary residence of the kings of Israel, 1 Kings xiv. 17;
xv. 53. Its name signifies beautiful or delightful.

Comely as Jerusalem.] This was called the perfection of beauty, Ps. xlviii. 2, 8; 1. 2. And thus the poet compares from the washing, whereof every one beareth twins, and there is not one barren among them.

7 ^a As a piece of a pomegranate are thy temples only one of her mother, she is the choice one of her that bare her. The daughters saw her, and blessed her; yea, the queens and the concubines, and they praised her.

lestine, and the capitals of the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah.

Terrible as an army with banners.] This has been supposed to carry an allusion to the caravans in the East, and the manner in which they are conducted in their travels by night.

Verse 5. Turn away thine eyes] The look of the bride was such as pierced the heart, and quite overwhelmed the person who met it.

Verse 8. There are threescore queens] Though there be sixty queens and eighty concubines, or secondary wives, and virgins innumerable, in my harem, yet thou, my dove, my undefiled, art achath, ONE, the ONLY ONE, she in whom I delight beyond all.

only the Jewish women in general spoke well of her on her arrival, but the queens and concubines praised her as the most accomplished of her sex.

Verse 10. Looketh forth as the morning] The bride is as lovely as the dawn of day, the Aurora, or perhaps the morning star, VENUS. She is even more resplendent, she is as beautiful as the MOON. She even surpasses her, for she is as clear and bright as the SUN; and dangerous withal to look on, for she is as formidable as the vast collection of lights that burn by night at the head of every company in a numerous caravan. The comparison of a fine woman to the splendour of an unclouded full moon is continually recurring in the writings of the Asiatic poets.

Verse 11. I went down into the garden of nuts] It is probably not the hazel but the almond nut, that is referred to here.

13 Return, return, O Shulamite; return, return, that we may look upon thee. What will ye see in the Shulamite? As it were the company ^a of two armies.

willing people.—^a Or, of Mahanaim. Gen. xxxii. 2.

Verse 12. The chariots of Amminadib.] Probably for their great speed these chariots became proverbial. The passage marks a strong agitation of mind, and something like what we term palpitation of the heart.

Verse 13. Return, O Shulamite] This appears to be addressed to the bride, as now the confirmed, acknowledged wife of Solomon; for shulammith, appears to be a feminine formed from shelomoh, or shelomon, as we form Charlotte from Charles; Henrietta, from Henry; Janette, from John, &c.

The company of two armies.] Or the musicians of the camps. She is as terrible as hosts of armed men, on the ground of what is said on verses 4, 5. The two armies may refer to the choirs of the bride's virgins, and the bridegroom's companions; but the similitude is not very perceptible.

CHAPTER VII.

A further description of the bride, 1-9.

HOW beautiful are thy feet with shoes, * O prince's daughter! the joints of thy thighs are like jewels, the work of the hands of a cunning workman:

2 Thy navel is like a round goblet, which wanteth not ^b liquor: thy belly is like an heap of wheat set about with lilies.

3 ^c Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are twins.

4 ^d Thy neck is as a tower of ivory; thine eyes like the fishpools in Heshbon, by the gate of Bath-rabbim: thy nose is as the tower of Lebanon which looketh toward Damascus.

5 Thine head upon thee is like * Carmel, and the hair of thine head like purple; the king is ^e held in the galleries.

6 How fair and how pleasant art thou, O love, for delights!

7 This thy stature is like to a palm tree, and thy breasts to clusters of grapes.

* Ps. xlv. 13.—^b Heb. mixture.—^c Ch. iv. 5.—^d Ch. iv. 4.—^e Or, crimson.—^f Heb. bound.—^g Heb. straightly.—^h Or, of the ancient.—

Verse 1. How beautiful are thy feet with shoes] "How graceful is thy walking."

The shoes, sandals, or slippers of the eastern ladies are most beautifully formed, and richly embroidered. The majestic walk of a beautiful woman in such shoes is peculiarly grand. And to show that such a walk is intended, he calls her a prince's daughter.

The joints of thy thighs] Must refer to the ornaments on the beautiful drawers, which are in general use among ladies of quality in most parts of the East.

Verse 2. Thy navel is like a round goblet] This may also refer to some ornamental dress about the loins.

An heap of wheat set about with lilies.] This is another instance of the same kind.

Verse 3. Thy two breasts] Where the hair and breasts are fine, they are the highest ornaments of the person of a female.

Verse 4. Thy neck—as a tower of ivory] High, white, and ornamented with jewellery as the tower of David was with bucklers.

The fishpools in Heshbon] Clear, bright, and serene.

Her invitation to the bridegroom, 10-13.

8 I said, I will go up to the palm tree, I will take hold of the boughs thereof: now also thy breasts shall be as clusters of the vine, and the smell of thy nose like apples;

9 And the roof of thy mouth like the best wine for my beloved, that goeth down ^a sweetly, causing the lips ^b of those that are asleep to speak.

10 ^c I am my beloved's, and ^d his desire is toward me.

11 Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field; let us lodge in the villages.

12 Let us get up early to the vineyards; let us ^e see if the vine flourish, whether the tender grape ^f appear, and the pomegranates bud forth: there will I give thee my loves.

13 The ^g mandrakes give a smell, and at our gates ^h are all manner of pleasant fruits, new and old, which I have laid up for thee, O my beloved.

ⁱ Ch. ii. 16. vi. 3.—^j Ps. xlv. 11.—^k Ch. vi. 11.—^l Heb. open.—^m Gen. xxx. 14.—ⁿ Matt. xiii. 52.

These must have been very beautiful to have been introduced here in comparison.

Thy nose—as the tower of Lebanon] There was doubtless a propriety in this similitude also which cannot now be discerned.

Verse 5. Thine head—like Carmel] Rising majestically upon thy neck, and above thy shoulders, as Mount Carmel does in its district.

The hair of thine head like purple] Ornamented with ribbons and jewellery of this tint.

The king is held in the galleries.] Or is detained in the ante-chamber. His heart is captivated by thy person and conduct. Some understand the ringlets of the bride's hair.

Verse 6. How fair and how pleasant] Thou art every way beautiful, and in every respect calculated to inspire pleasure and delight.

Verse 7. Like to a palm tree] Which is remarkably straight, taper, and elegant.

And thy breasts to clusters of grapes.] Dates are the fruit of the palm-tree; they grow in clusters; and it is these, not grapes, which are intended.

Verse 8. I will go up to the palm tree] I will take hold on the boughs of this tree, and climb up by them, in order to gather the clusters of dates at the top.

Verse 9. The roof of thy mouth like the best wine] The voice or conversation of the spouse is most probably what is meant.

Causing the lips of those that are asleep to speak.] As good wine has a tendency to cause the most backward to speak fluently when taken in moderation; so a sight of thee, and hearing the charms of thy conversation, is sufficient to excite the most taciturn to speak, and even to become eloquent in thy praises.

Verse 11. Let us go forth into the field] Here the bride wishes to accompany her spouse to the country, and spend a night at his country house.

Verse 12. Let us get up early to the vineyards] When in the country, we shall have the better opportunity to contemplate the progress of the spring vegetation; and there she promises to be peculiarly affectionate to him.

Verse 13. The mandrakes give a smell] See the note on Gen. xxx. 14, where the mandrake is particularly described; from which this passage will receive considerable light.

All manner of pleasant fruits] Fruits new and old; flowers and herbs of every kind which the season could yield.

CHAPTER VIII.

The love of the bride to her spouse, and the nature of that love, 1-7. The younger sister, 8-10. Solomon's vineyard, 11, 12. The confidence of the bride and bridegroom in each other, 13-14.

O THAT thou wert as my brother, that sucked the breasts of my mother! when I should find thee without, I would kiss thee; yea, * I should not be despised.

2 I would lead thee, and bring thee into my mother's house, who would instruct me: I would cause thee to drink of ^b spiced wine of the juice of my pomegranate.

3 ^c His left hand should be under my head, and his right hand should embrace me.

4 ^d I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, * that ye stir not up, nor awake my love, until he please.

5 ^e Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness, leaning upon her beloved? I raised thee up under the apple tree: there thy mother brought thee forth: there she brought thee forth that bare thee.

6 ^f Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm: for love is strong as death; jealousy is ^h cruel as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame.

7 Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it: ⁱ if a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be condemned.

8 ^j We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts: what shall we do for our sister in the day when she shall be spoken for?

9 If she be a wall, we will build upon her a palace of silver; and if she be a door, we will inclose her with boards of cedar.

10 I am a wall, and my breasts like towers: then was I in his eyes as one that found ^k favour.

11 Solomon had a vineyard at Baal-hamon; ^l he let out the vineyard unto keepers; every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thousand pieces of silver.

12 My vineyard, which is mine, is before me: thou, O Solomon, must have a thousand, and those that keep the fruit thereof two hundred.

13 Thou that dwellest in the gardens, the companions hearken to thy voice: ^m cause me to hear it.

Verse 1. O that thou wert as my brother] The bride, fearing that her fondness for her spouse might be construed into too great a familiarity, wishes that he were her little brother; and then she might treat him in the most affectionate manner, and kiss him even in the streets without suspicion, and without giving offence to any one.

Verse 2. Would—bring thee into my mother's house, who would instruct me] She would teach me how to conduct myself towards thee, as she would how to nurse a young child.

To drink of spiced wine] Wine rendered peculiarly strong and invigorating. The bride and bridegroom on the wedding-day both drank out of the same cup, to show that they were to enjoy and equally bear together the comforts and adversities of life.

Verse 5. That cometh up from the wilderness] Perhaps the words of the daughters of Jerusalem, who, seeing the bride returning from the country, leaning on the arm of her beloved, are filled with admiration at her excellent carriage and beauty.

I raised thee up under the apple tree] The original of this clause is obscure, and has given birth to various translations. The following is nearly literal: "Under the apple-tree I excited thee (to espouse me); there, thy mother contracted thee;—there, she that brought thee forth contracted thee (to me.)

Verse 6. Set me as a seal upon thine heart] It was customary in the Levant and other places to make impressions of various kinds upon the arms, the breast, and other parts.

A most vehement flame.] It may mean the lightning; or, as our text understands it, a most vehement or intense fire.

Verse 7. Many waters] Neither common nor uncommon adversities, even of the most ruinous nature, can destroy love when it is pure; and pure love is such that nothing can procure it. If it be not excited naturally, no money can purchase it, no property can procure it, no arts can persuade it.

Verse 8. We have a little sister] This young girl belonged most probably to the bride.

She hath no breasts] She is not yet marriageable.

What shall we do for our sister] How shall we secure her comfort and welfare?

In the day when she shall be spoken for] When any person shall demand her in marriage.

Verse 9. If she be a wall] All these expressions show that it was necessary to provide a husband for this young sister. For a woman without a husband is like a wall without towers, and without defence; is like a gate or door without bar or lock; and like a city without walls.

CHAP. VIII.

Verse 10. I am a wall, and my breasts like towers] I am become marriageable, and I stood in need of the defence I have now in my beloved; and as soon as I was so, and became pleasing in the eyes of my beloved, I was given to him in marriage, and have ever since found favour in his sight. As soon then as my sister is in my state, let a proper match be sought out for her.

Verse 11. Solomon had a vineyard] Some suppose that there is a reference here to some property which Pharaoh had given to Solomon with his daughter.

Verse 14. Make haste, my beloved] What these mountains of spices were, we cannot particularly tell; but they must have been thus named from their producing the trees on which the spices grew.

Thus ends this most singular book; the oldest pastoral in the world, if it may be ranked among this species of writing. To whatever species of composition it belongs, it is, beyond all controversy, the finest, the most sublime for imagery and colouring, that ever came from the pen of man.

INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOK

OF THE

PROPHET ISAIAH.

OF ISAIAH, the writer of this book, very little is known. He is supposed to have been of the tribe of Judah, and of the royal family of David. Himself says that he was son of Amoz; and others tell us that this Amoz was the son of Joash, and brother of Amaziah king of Judah. It has been also said that Isaiah gave his daughter in marriage to Manasseh, son of Hezekiah, king of Judah: and that himself was put to death by Manasseh, being sawn asunder with a wooden saw. But all these traditions stand on very slender authority, and are worthy of very little regard. Several commentators have thought that his prophecies afford presumptive evidence of his high descent and elegant education: 1. Because his style is more correct and majestic than any of the other prophets. 2. That his frequent use of images taken from royalty is a proof that this state was familiar to him, being much at court, as he must have been, had he been brother of the king. These things are spoken by many with much confidence; for my own part, I had rather look to his inspiration for the correctness of his language and the dignity of his sentiments, than to those very inferior helps. On the other hypothesis nothing is left to the Divine Spirit, except the mere matter of his prophecies. Suppositions of this kind are not creditable to divine revelation.

ISAIAH exercised the prophetic office during a long period of time, if he lived to the reign of Manasseh; for the lowest computation, beginning from the year in which Uzziah died, when some suppose him to have received his first appointment to that office, brings it to sixty-one years. But the tradition of the Jews, that he was put to death by Manasseh, is very uncertain; and one of their principal rabbins, Aben Ezra, Com. in Isai. i. 1, seems rather to think that he died before Hezekiah, which is indeed more probable. It is however certain that he lived at least to the fifteenth or sixteenth year of Hezekiah; this makes the least possible term of the duration of his prophetic office about forty-eight years. The time of the delivery of some of his prophecies is either expressly marked, or sufficiently clear from the history to which they relate; that of a few others may with some probability be deduced from internal marks; from expressions, descriptions, and circumstances interwoven.

THE BOOK

OF THE

PROPHET ISAIAH.

CHAPTER I.

The prophet, with a boldness and majesty becoming the herald of the Most High, begins with calling on the whole creation to attend while Jehovah speaks, 2. A charge of gross insensibility and ingratitude is then brought against the Jews, by contrasting their conduct with that of the ox and ass, the most stupid of animals, 3. This leads to an amplification of their guilt, 4; highly aggravated by their slighting the chastisements and judgments of God, though repeated till they had been left almost like Sodom and Gomorrah, 5-9. The incidental mention of those places leads to an address to the rulers and people of the Jews, under the character of princes of Sodom, and people of Gomorrah, which is no less spirited and severe than elegant and unexpected, 10. The vanity of trusting to the performance of the outward rites and ceremonies of religion is then exposed, 11-15; and the necessity of repentance and reformation is strongly enjoined, 16, 17, and urged by the most encouraging promises as well as by the most awful threatenings, 18-20. But neither of these producing the proper effect on that people who were the prophet's charge, he bitterly laments their degeneracy, 21-23; and concludes with introducing God, declaring his purpose of inflicting such heavy judgments as would entirely cut off the wicked, and excite in the righteous, who should also pass through the furnace, an everlasting shame and abhorrence of every thing connected with idolatry, the source of their misery, 24-31.

THE vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah.

2 ^a Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the LORD hath spoken, ^c I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me.

3 ^d The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel ^e doth not know, my people ^f doth not consider.

Verse 1. The vision of Isaiah] It seems doubtful whether this title belongs to the whole book, or only to the prophecy contained in this chapter.

Verse 2. Hear, O heavens—“Hear, O ye heavens”] God is introduced as entering into a public action, or pleading, before the whole world, against his disobedient people. The prophet, as herald or officer to proclaim the summons to the court, calls upon all created beings, celestial and terrestrial, to attend and bear witness to the truth of his plea and the justice of his cause.

Hath spoken—“That speaketh”] I render it in the present tense, for there seems to be an impropriety in demanding attention to a speech already delivered. But the prophet may be understood to declare to the people what the Lord had first spoken to him.

I have nourished] The Septuagint have, “I have begotten.”

Verse 3. The ox knoweth] An amplification of the gross

5 ^h Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will ⁱ revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint.

6 From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrefying sores; ^j they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ^k ointment.

insensibility of the disobedient Jews, by comparing them with the most heavy and stupid of all animals, yet not so insensible as they.

Jeremiah's comparison to the same purpose is equally elegant, but has not so much spirit and severity as this of Isaiah. Jer. viii. 7; see also Hosea xi. 4.

Doth not know] The ancient Versions agree in adding ME, which very properly answers, and indeed is almost necessarily required to answer, the words possessor and lord preceding.

Verse 4. Ah sinful nation] “Degenerate.” See the same word in the same form and in the same sense, Prov. xxv. 26. Are corrupters] “Are estranged.”

They are gone away backward.] “They have turned their backs upon him.”

Verse 5. Why should ye be stricken any more?] The Vulgate renders it, super quo, upon what part.

“On what part will ye strike again; will ye add correc-

10 Hear the word of the LORD, ye rulers ^f of Sodom; give ear unto the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah.

11 To what purpose is the multitude of your ^g sacrifices unto me? saith the LORD: I am full of the burnt-offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of ^h he goats.

12 When ye come ⁱ to ^j appear before me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts?

13 Bring no more ^k vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and sabbaths, ^l the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is ^m iniquity, even the solemn meeting.

14 Your ⁿ new moons and your ^o appointed feasts my soul hateth: they are a trouble unto me; ^p I am weary to bear them.

tion?" This is addressed to the instruments of God's vengeance; those that inflicted the punishment, who or whatsoever they were. [A better reading is: "Why would ye be perpetually smitten, multiplying rebellion?"]

Verse 5. The whole head is sick]. The king and the priests are equally gone away from truth and righteousness. Or, The state is oppressed by its enemies, and the church corrupted in its rules and in its members.

Verse 6. They have not been closed, &c.] The pharmaceutical art in the East consists chiefly in external applications: accordingly the prophet's images in this place are all taken from surgery.

Verses 7—9. Your country is desolate] The description of the ruined and desolate state of the country in these verses does not suit with any part of the prosperous times of Uzziah and Jotham. It very well agrees with the time of Ahaz, when Judea was ravaged by the joint invasion of the Israelites and Syrians, and by the incursions of the Philistines and Edomites. The date of this prophecy is therefore generally fixed to the time of Ahaz. But on the other hand it may be considered whether those instances of idolatry which are urged in ver. 29,—the worshipping in groves and gardens,—having been at all times too commonly practised, can be supposed to be the only ones which the prophet would insist upon in the time of Ahaz. It is said, 2 Kings xv. 37, that in Jotham's time "the Lord began to send against Judah Resin—and Pekah." If we suppose any invasion from that quarter to have been actually made at the latter end of Jotham's reign, I should choose to refer this prophecy to that time.

Verse 8. As a cottage in a vineyard] "As a shed in a vineyard." A little temporary hut, covered with boughs, straw turf, or the like materials, for a shelter from the heat by day, and the cold and dews by night, for the watchman that kept the garden or vineyard during the short season the fruit was ripening (see Job xxvii. 18), and presently removed when it had served that purpose. They were probably obliged to have such a constant watch to defend the fruit from the jackals.

As a lodge, &c.] That is, after the fruit was gathered; the lodge being then permitted to fall into decay. Such was the desolate ruined state of the city.

17 Learn to do well; ^d seek judgment, ^e relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow.

18 Come now, and ^f let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, ^g they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

19 If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land:

20 But if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: ^h for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.

As a besieged city.] "A city taken by siege."

Verse 9. The Lord of hosts] As this title of God, Yehovah tsebaoth, "JEHOVAH God of Hosts" occurs here for the first time, I think it proper to note, that I translate it always, as in this place, "JEHOVAH God of Hosts;" taking it as an elliptical expression for Yehovah Elohey tsebaoth. This title imports that JEHOVAH is the God or Lord of hosts or armies; as he is the Creator and Supreme Governor of all beings in heaven and earth, and disposeth and ruleth them all in their several orders and stations; the almighty, universal Lord.

We should have been as Sodom] As completely and finally ruined as that and the cities of the plain were, no vestige of which remains at this day.

Verse 10. Ye rulers of Sodom] The incidental mention of Sodom and Gomorrah in the preceding verse suggested to the prophet this spirited address to the rulers and inhabitants of Jerusalem, under the character of princes of Sodom and people of Gomorrah. Two examples of a sort of elegant turn of the like kind may be observed in St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, chap. xv. 4, 5, 12, 13.

Verse 11. To what purpose, &c.—"What have I to do?"] The prophet Amos has expressed the same sentiments with great elegance, Amos v. 21-24.

The fat of fed beasts, &c.] The fat and the blood are particularly mentioned, because these were in all sacrifices set apart to God. See Lev. iv.

Verse 12. When ye come to appear] The appearing before God here refers chiefly to the three solemn annual festivals. See Exod. xxiii. 14.

Verse 13. The new moons and sabbaths] "The fast and the day of restraint." These words are rendered in many different manners by different interpreters, to a good and probable sense by all; but I think by none in such a sense as can arise from the phrase itself, agreeably to the idiom of the Hebrew language. Instead of aven, the Septuagint manifestly read tsom, "the fast." The prophet could not well have omitted the fast in the enumeration of the solemnities, nor the abuse of it among the instances of their hypocrisy, which he has treated at large with such force and elegance in his fifty-eighth chapter. Asarah, "the restraint," is rendered, both here and in other places the mighty One of Israel, Ah, * I will ease me of mine adversaries, and avenge me of mine enemies :

25 And I will turn my hand upon thee, and ^b purely ^c purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin :

26 And I will restore thy judges ^d as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning : afterward * thou shalt be called, The city of righteousness, the faithful city.

27 Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and ^e her converts with righteousness.

of our English translation, "the solemn assembly." Certain holy days ordained by the law were distinguished by a particular charge that "no servile work should be done therein." Lev. xxviii. 36; Numb. xxix. 35; Deut. xvi. 8. This circumstance clearly explains the reason of the name, the restraint, or the day of restraint, given to those days.

Verse 16. Wash you] Referring to the preceding verse, "your hands are full of blood;" and alluding to the legal washings commanded on several occasions. See Lev. xiv. 8, 9, 47.

Verse 17. Relieve the oppressed] "Amend that what is corrupted." In rendering this obscure phrase, I follow Bochart, though I am not perfectly satisfied with this explanation of it. [Delitzsch renders it: "Set the oppressor right."]]

Verse 18. Though your sins be as scarlet] Shani, "scarlet or crimson;" twice dipped, or double dye; from shanah, to double, or to do a thing twice. Tela, the same, properly the worm, vermiculus (from whence vermet), for this colour was produced from a worm or insect which grew in a cocoon or excrecence of a shrub of the ilex kind, like the cochineal worm in the opuntia of America.

Though they be red, &c.] But the conjunction and is added by some MSS. and early editions, with the Septuagint, Syriac, Vulgate, and Arabic. It makes a fuller and more emphatic sense.

Verse 19. Ye shall eat the good of the land] Referring to ver. 7: it shall not be "devoured by strangers."

Verse 20. Ye shall be devoured with the sword] "Ye shall be food for the sword." The Septuagint and Vulgate read tochalchem, "the sword shall devour you:" which is of much more easy construction than the present reading of the text.

Verse 22. Wine mixed with water] It is remarkable that whereas the Greeks and Latins by mixed wine always understood wine diluted and lowered with water, the Hebrews on the contrary generally mean by it wine made stronger and more inebriating by the addition of higher and more powerful ingredients, such as honey, spices, defrutum (* wine inspissated by boiling it down to two-thirds or one-half of the quantity), myrrh, mandragora, opiates, and other strong drugs.

Such was the "spiced wine and the juice of pomegranates," mentioned, Cant. viii. 2.

Thus the drunkard is probably described, Prov. xxiii. 30 and Isai. v. 22. And hence the poet took that highly poetical and sublime image of the cup of God's wrath, called by Isaiah, li. 17, the "cup of trembling," causing intoxication and stupefaction, containing, as St. John expresses in Greek the Hebrew idea with the utmost precision, though with a seeming contradiction in terms, pure wine made yet stronger by a mixture of powerful ingredients. Rom. xvi. 10. Ps. lxxv. 8.

Verse 24. Ah, I will ease me] This is a strong instance of the metaphor called anthropopathia, by which, throughout the Scriptures, as well the historical as the poetical parts, the sentiments, sensations, and affections, the bodily faculties, qualities, and members, of men, and even of brute animals, are attributed to God, and that with the utmost liberty and latitude of application. The foundation of this is obvious; we have no idea of the natural attributes of God, of his pure essence, of his manner of existence, of his manner of acting; when therefore we would treat on these subjects, we find ourselves forced to express them by sensible images.

28 And the * destruction ^b of the transgressors and of the sinners shall be together, and they that forsake the LORD shall be consumed.

29 For they shall be ashamed of 'the oaks which ye have desired, ^c and ye shall be confounded for the gardens that ye have chosen.

30 For ye shall be as an oak whose leaf fadeth, and as a garden that hath no water.

Verse 25. I will turn my hand upon thee] So the common Version; and this seems to be a metaphor taken from the custom of those who, when the metal is melted, strike off the scoria with their hand previously to its being poured out into the mould.

Purge away thy dross] The text has cabbor, which some render "as with soap;" but soap can have nothing to do with the purifying of metals. Others, "according to purity," or "purely," as our Version. Le Clerc conjectured that the true reading is kechur, "as in the furnace;" see Ezek. xxii. 18, 20. That this is the true reading is highly probable.

Verse 27. With judgment] By the exercise of God's strict justice in destroying the obdurate (see ver. 28), and delivering the penitent in righteousness; by the truth and faithfulness of God in performing his promises.

Verse 29. For they shall be ashamed of the oaks] Sacred groves were a very ancient and favourite appendage of idolatry. They were furnished with the temple of the god to whom they were dedicated, with altars, images, and every thing necessary for performing the various rites of worship offered there; and were the scenes of many impure ceremonies, and of much abominable superstition. They made a principal part of the religion of the old inhabitants of Canaan; and the Israelites were commanded to destroy their groves, among other monuments of their false worship. The Israelites themselves became afterwards very much addicted to this species of idolatry.

Of what particular kinds the trees here mentioned are, cannot be determined with certainty. In regard to ellah, Celsius understands it of the terebinth, because the most ancient interpreters render it so; in the first place the Septuagint. But I think neither the oak nor the terebinth will do, from the last circumstance which is mentioned,—their being deciduous; whereas the prophet's design seems to me to require an evergreen, otherwise the casting of its leaves would be nothing out of the common established course of nature, and no proper image of extreme distress and total desolation, parallel to that of a garden without water, that is, wholly burnt up and destroyed. Upon the whole I make it the ilex, or holly, which, though it generally appear as a sort of shrub, grows, in a good soil, where it is unmolested, to a considerable height. [The terebinth seems the most likely rendering.]

Verse 30. As a garden that hath no water.] In the hotter parts of the eastern countries, a constant supply of water is so absolutely necessary for the cultivation and even for the preservation and existence of a garden, that should it want water but for a few days, every thing in it would be burnt up with the heat, and totally destroyed.

Moses, having described the habitation of man newly created as a garden planted with every tree pleasant to the sight and good for food, adds, as a circumstance necessary to complete the idea of a garden, that it was well supplied with water, "And a river went out of Eden to water the garden." Gen. ii. 10: see also xiii. 10.

The palmye mayim, mentioned in the first psalm, and others places of Scripture, "the divisions of waters," are the waters distributed in artificial canals; see Jeremiah, chap. xvii. 8; Prov. xxi. 1, and Eccl. ii. 5-6.

CHAPTER II.

Prophecy concerning the kingdom of the Messiah, and the conversion of the Gentile world, 1-5. Great wickedness and idolatry of the unbelieving Jews, 6-9. Terrible consternation that will seize the wicked, who shall in vain seek for rocks and mountains to hide them from the face of God in the day of his judgments, 10-17. Total destruction of idolatry in consequence of the establishment of Messiah's kingdom, 18-21. An exhortation to put no confidence in man, 22.

THE word that Isaiah the son of Amoz saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem.

2 And ^ait shall come to pass ^bin the last days ^cthat the mountain of the LORD's house shall ^dbe established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; ^eand all nations shall flow unto it.

3 And many people shall go and say, 'Come ye and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: ^ffor out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

4 And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and ^gthey shall beat their swords into plough-shares, and their spears into ^hpruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, ⁱneither shall they learn war any more.

We will walk in his paths] Unless we purpose to walk in the light, of what use can that light be to us?

For out of Zion shall go forth the law] In the house of God, and in his ordinances only, can we expect to hear the pure doctrines of revelation preached. 1. God alone can give a revelation of his own will. 2. We must use the proper means in order to know this will. 3. We should know it in order to do it. 4. We should do it in order to profit by it. 5. He who will not walk in the light when God vouchsafes it, shall be shut up in everlasting darkness. 6. Every man should help his neighbour to attain that light, life, and felicity: "Come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord."

Verse 4. Neither shall they learn war any more.] If wars are necessary, how deep must that fall be that renders them so! But what a reproach to humanity is the trade of war! Men are regularly instructed in it, as in any of the necessary arts.

And is this a necessary part of a finished education in civilized society?

Verse 6. They be replenished] Seven MSS. and one edition, for yaspiku, read yaspichu, "and have joined themselves to the children of strangers;" that is in marriage or worship. But the learned Michaelis has explained the word yaspachu, in another manner; saphiach, the noun, means corn springing up, not from the seed regularly sown on cultivated land, but in the untillied field, from the scattered grains of the former harvest. This, by an easy metaphor, is applied to a spurious brood of children irregularly and casually begotten.

And are soothsayers] Heb.: "They are filled from the east;" or "more than the east." The sentence is manifestly imperfect.

Verse 7. Their land is also full of horses] This was in direct contradiction to God's command in the law: Deut. xvii. 16, 17. Uziah seems to have followed the example of Verse 2. In the last days] "Wherever the latter times are mentioned in Scripture, the days of the Messiah are always meant," says Kimchi on this place: and, in regard to this place, nothing can be more clear and certain. And the mountain of the Lord's house, says the same author is Mount Moriah, on which the temple was built. The prophet Micah, chap. iv., 1-4, has repeated this prophecy of the establishment of the kingdom of Christ, and of its progress to universality and perfection in the same words, with little and hardly any material variation: for as he did not begin to prophesy till Jotham's time, and this seems to be one of the first of Isaiah's prophecies, I suppose Micah to have taken it from hence. The variations are of no great importance. Micah has improved the passage by adding a verse, or sentence, for imagery and expression, worthy even of the elegance of Isaiah:—

"And they shall sit every man under his vine
And under his fig-tree, and none shall affright them:
For the mouth of JEHOVAH, God of hosts, hath spoken it."
The description of well-established peace, by the image of "beating their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks," is very poetical.

The prophet Joel, chap. iii. 10, has reversed it, and applied it to war prevailing over peace:—

"Beat your ploughshares into swords,
And your pruning-hooks into spears."
Ezekiel, chap. xvi. 22-24, has presigned the same great event with equal clearness, though in a more abstruse form, in an allegory; from an image, suggested by the former part of the prophecy, happily introduced, and well pursued.

Verse 8. To the house] The conjunction vau is added by many MSS.; AND to the house. It makes the sentence more emphatic.

He will teach us of his own ways] Unless God grant a revelation of his will, what can we know?

16 * And upon all the ships of Tarshish, and upon all ^b pleasant pictures.

18 And * the idols he shall utterly abolish.

19 And they shall go into the ^c holes of the rocks, and into the caves of ^d the earth, ^b for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth ¹ to shake terribly the earth.

Solomon, see 1 Kings x. 26-29, who first transgressed in these particulars; he recovered the port of Elath on the Red Sea, and with it that commerce which in Solomon's days had "made silver and gold as plenteous at Jerusalem as stones," 2 Chron. i. 15. He had an army of 307,500 men, in which, as we may infer from the testimony of Isaiah, the chariots and horse made a considerable part.

Verse 8. Their land also is full of idols] There was hardly any time when the people were quite free from this irregular and unlawful practice, which they seemed to have looked upon as very consistent with the true worship of God; and which seems in some measure to have been tolerated, while the tabernacle was removed from place to place, and before the temple was built. Even after the conversion of Manasseh, when he had removed the strange gods, and commanded Judah to serve JEHOVAH, the God of Israel, it is added, "Nevertheless the people did sacrifice still on the high places, yet unto JEHOVAH their God only," 2 Chron. xxxiii. 17. The worshipping on the high places therefore does not necessarily imply idolatry; and from what is said of these two kings, Uzziah and Jotham, we may presume that the public exercise of idolatrous worship was not permitted in their time. The idols therefore here spoken of must have been such as were designed for private and secret use. Such probably were the teraphim so often mentioned in Scripture.

Verse 9. Boweth down] This has reference to the preceding verse. They bowed themselves down to their idols, therefore shall they be bowed down and brought low under the avenging hand of God.

Verse 10. "When he ariseth to strike the earth with terror." On the authority of the Septuagint, confirmed by the Arabic and an ancient MS., I have added here to the text a line, which in the 19th and 21st verses is repeated together with the preceding line, and has, I think, evidently been omitted by mistake in this place.

Verses 13-16. And upon all the cedars] In many places cedars of Lebanon and oaks of Bashan are used in the way of metaphor and allegory for kings, princes, potentates of the highest rank; high mountains and lofty hills, for kingdoms, republics, states, cities; towers and fortresses, for defenders and protectors, whether by counsel or strength, in peace or war; ships of Tarshish and works of art, and invention employed in adorning them, for merchants, men enriched by commerce, and abounding in all the luxuries and elegancies of life, such as those of Tyre and Sidon; for it appears from the course of the whole passage, and from the train of ideas, that the fortresses and the ships are to be taken metaphorically, as well as the high trees and the lofty mountains.

Ships of Tarshish] The learned seem now to be perfectly well agreed that Tarshish is Tartessus, a city of Spain, at the mouth of the river Bætis, whence the Phœnicians, who first opened this trade, brought silver and gold (Jer. x. 9, Ezek. xxvii. 12), in which that country then abounded; and, pursuing their voyage still further to the Cassiterides, the islands of Scilly and Cornwall, they brought from thence lead and tin.

Verses 19-21. Into the holes of the rocks] The country of Judea, being mountainous and rocky, is full of caverns, as appears from the history of David's persecution under Saul. At En-gedi, in particular, there was a cave so large that David with six hundred men hid themselves in the sides of it; and Saul entered the mouth of the cave without perceiving that any one was there, 1 Sam. xxiv. To these the people betook themselves for refuge in times of distress and hostile invasion, 1 Sam. xiii. 6, and see Jer. xli. 9. Therefore "to enter into the rock, to go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth," was to them a very proper and familiar image to express terror and consternation. The prophet Hosea, chap. x. 8, has carried the same image further, and added great strength and spirit to it. See also Rev. vi. 15.

Verse 20. Which they made each one for himself to worship] The word lo, for himself, is omitted by two ancient MSS., and is unnecessary.

To the moles] They shall carry their idols with them into the dark caverns, old ruins, or desolate places, to which they shall flee for refuge; and so shall give them up, and relinquish them to the filthy animals that frequent such places, and have taken possession of them as their proper habitation.

Verse 22. Cease ye from man] Trust neither in him, nor in the gods that he has invented. Neither he, nor they, can either save or destroy.

CHAPTER III.

The whole of this chapter, with the first verse of the next, is a prophecy of those calamities that should be occasioned by the Babylonish invasion and captivity. These calamities are represented as so great and so general, that even royal honours, in such a state, are so far from being desirable, that hardly any can be got to accept them, 1-7. This visitation is declared to be the consequence of their profanity and guilt; for which the prophet further reproveth and threatens them, 8-15. Particular amplification of the distress of the delicate and luxurious daughters of Zion; whose deplorable situation is finely contrasted with their former prosperity and ease, 16-26.

Verse 1. The stay and the staff] Hebrew, "the support masculine, and the support feminine;" that is, every kind of support, whether great or small, strong or weak.

The words mashen umashenah come from the same root shaan, to lean against, to incline, to support; and here, being masculine and feminine, they may signify all things necessary for the support both of man and woman.

The two following verses, 2, 3, are very clearly explained by the sacred historian's account of the event, the captivity of Jehoiachin by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, 11 Kings xxiv. 14.

Verse 4. I will give children to be their princes] This also was fully accomplished in the succession of weak and wicked princes, from the death of Josiah to the destruction of the city and temple, and the taking of Zedekiah, the last of them, by Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 6. Of the house of his father] For beith, the house, the ancient interpreters seems to have read, mibbeith, from the house. And, his brother, of his father's house, is little better than a tautology. The case seems to require that the man should apply to a person of some sort of rank and eminence; one that was the head of his father's house (see Josh. xii. 14), whether of the house of him who applies to him, or of any other; and I cannot help suspecting, therefore, that the word rosh, head, chief, has been lost out of the text. [Bethabiy may be taken as the "accusative of place." Then there is no need of understanding rosh.]

Thou hast clothing] "Take by the garment." That is, shall treat him in a humble and supplicating manner. See Zech. viii. 23. And so in Isaiah iv. 1, the same gesture is used to express earnest and humble entreaty. The behaviour of Saul towards Samuel was of the same kind, when he laid hold on the skirt of his raiment, 1 Sam. xv. 27.

Verse 7. In that day shall he swear] The Septuagint, Syriac, and Jerome read veiyssa, adding the conjunction, which seems necessary in this place.

For in my house is neither bread nor clothing] Princes and great men in the East are obliged to have a great stock of clothes in readiness for presents upon all occasions. A great quantity of provision for the table is equally necessary. The daily provision for Solomon's household, whose attendants were exceedingly numerous, was proportionately great, 1 Kings iv. 22, 23. See also Nehemiah v. 17, 18.

This explains the meaning of the excuse made by him that is desired to undertake the government. He alleges that he has not wherewithal to support the dignity of the station, by such acts of liberality and hospitality as the law of custom required of persons of superior rank.

16 Moreover the LORD saith, Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched forth necks and ^qwanton eyes, walking and ^rmincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet:

17 Therefore the LORD will smite with ^sa scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion, and the LORD will ^tdiscover ^utheir secret parts.

Verse 8. The eyes] This word appears to be of very doubtful form, from the printed editions, the MSS., and the ancient Versions. I think it should be anan, "a cloud," as the Syriac reads, instead of eyney, eyes; and the allusion is to the cloud in which the glory of the Lord appeared above the tabernacle; see Exod. xvi. 9, 10; xl. 34-38; Numb. xvi. 41, 42.

Either of the readings gives a very good sense. The allusion may be to the cloud of the Divine Presence in the wilderness; or the eyes of the Lord may be meant, as they are in every place beholding the evil and the good. And he cannot look upon iniquity but with abhorrence; therefore, the eyes of his glory might be well provoked by their crimes. [There is no need for the proposed emendation. The expression, "eyes of his glory," may be a Hebraism for his "glorious eyes."]

Verse 9. The shew of their countenance] Their eyes tell the wickedness of their hearts. The eye is the index of the mind. Envy, hatred, malice, malevolence, concupiscence, and murder, when in the heart, look most intelligently out at the eye. They tell the innocent to be on their guard; and serve the same purpose as the sonorous rings in the tail of the rattlesnake—they announce the presence of the destroyer.

They declare their sin as Sodom] Impure propensities are particularly legible in the eyes: whoever has beheld the face of a debauchee or a prostitute knows this; of those it may be said, they wish to appear what they really are. They glory in their iniquity. This is the highest pitch of ungodliness.

They have rewarded evil unto themselves] Every man's sin is against his own soul. Evil awaiteth sinners—and he that offends his God injures himself.

Verse 10. Say ye to the righteous] The righteous is the person, 1. Who fears God. 2. Departs from evil. 3. Walks according to the testimonies of God. 4. And expects and prepares for a glorious immortality.

"It shall be well with him," ki tob, "that good." Say nothing to such but good. He is a good man, he does nothing but good, and has a good God to deal with, from whom he expects nothing but goodness. It shall be well with such in all circumstances of life. In every case, occurrence, and circumstance, he shall eat the fruit of his doings—he shall derive benefit from being a righteous man, and walking in a righteous way.

Verse 11. Woe unto the wicked] As he is wicked, he does that which is wicked; and is influenced by the wicked one, of whom he is the servant and the son. It shall be ill with him, ra; in a single word say to him—evil! Of him

20 The bonnets, and the ornaments of the legs, and the head-bands, and the *tablets, and the earrings, you can speak no good : and to him you can speak no good—ail is evil, in him—before him—after him—round about him—above him—below him. Evil in time—evil through eternity!

The reward of his hands] What he has deserved he shall get. He shall be paid that for which he has laboured, and his reward shall be in proportion to his work.

Verse 12. Err] Billeu, "swallow." [This singular use of the word "swallow" is illustrated in Job xxxix. 27, where a galloping horse is said to "swallow the road," that is, to make it disappear.]

Verse 15. And grind the faces] The expression and the image is strong, to denote grievous oppression; but it is exceeded by the prophet Micah, chap. iii. 1-3.

Verse 16. And wanton eyes] Hebrew, falsifying their eyes. I take this to be the true meaning and literal rendering of the word: from shakar. Though the colouring of the eyes with stibium be not particularly here expressed, yet I suppose it to be implied; and so the Chaldee paraphrase explains it; "with eyes dressed with stibium." This fashion seems to have prevailed very generally among the eastern people in ancient times; and they retain the very same to this day.

The following inventory, as one may call it, of the wardrobe of a Hebrew lady, must, from its antiquity, and the nature of the subject, have been very obscure even to the most ancient interpreters which we have of it; and from its obscurity must have been also peculiarly liable to the mistakes of transcribers. However, it is rather matter of curiosity than of importance; and is indeed, upon the whole more intelligible and less corrupted than one might have reasonably expected.

Verse 17. Will discover their secrets parts.] "Expose their nakedness." It was the barbarous custom of the conquerors of those times to strip their captives naked, and to make them travel in that condition, exposed to the inclemency of the weather; and the worst of all, to the intolerable heat of the sun. But this to the women was the height of cruelty and indignity; and especially to such as those here described, who had indulged themselves in all manner of delicacies of living, and all the superfluities of ornamental dress; and even whose faces had hardly ever been exposed to the sight of man. This is always mentioned as the hardest part of the lot of captives. Nahum, chap. iii. 5, 6.

Verse 18. Ornaments about their feet] Chains or rings, which made a tinkling sound as they moved nimbly in walking. Hindoo women of ill fame wear loose ornaments one above another on their ankles, which at every motion make a tinkling noise.

And their curls] "The net-works." [Schröder understands these as ornaments worn round the neck, and shaped like little suns.]

Verse 20. The tablets] The words bottey hannephesh which we translate tablets, and Bishop Lowth, perfume boxes, literally signify houses of the soul; and may refer to strong-scented bottles used for pleasure and against fainting; sweet smell there shall be stink; and instead of a girdle a rent; and instead of well-set hair ^a baldness; and instead of a stomacher a girding of sack-cloth; and burning instead of beauty.

25 Thy men shall fall by the sword, and thy ^a mighty in the war.

similar to bottles with otto of roses, worn by the ladies of the East to the present time. [Nephesh may very properly be rendered breath, or aroma.]

Verse 21. Nose-jewels] Schroeder explains this, as many others do, of jewels, or strings of pearl hanging from the forehead, and reaching to the upper part of the nose; than which nothing can be more ridiculous, as such are seldom seen on an Asiatic face. But it appears from many passages of Holy Scripture that the phrase is to be literally and properly understood of nose-jewels, rings set with jewels hanging from the nostrils, as ear-rings from the ears, by holes bored to receive them.

Ezekiel, enumerating the common ornaments of women of the first rank, has not omitted this particular, and is to be understood in the same manner, chap. xvi. 11, 12. See also Gen. xxiv. 47, and Prov. xi. 22.

This fashion, however strange it may appear to us, was formerly, and is still common, in many parts of the East, among women of all ranks.

Verse 23. And the vails.] A kind of silken dress, transparent, like gauze; worn only by the most elegant women, and such as dressed themselves "more elegantly than modest women should." Such garments are worn to the present day; garments that not only show the shape of every part of the body, but the very colour of the skin. This sort of garments was afterwards in use among the Greeks.

Verse 24. Instead of sweet smell] A principal part of the delicacy of the Asiatic ladies consists in the use of baths, and the richest oils and perfumes; an attention to which is in some degree necessary in those hot countries. Frequent mention is made of the richointments of the spouse in the Song of Solomon, Cant. iv. 10, 11.

The preparation for Esther's being introduced to king Ahasuerus was a course of bathing and perfuming for a whole year; "six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with sweet odours." Esth. ii. 12. A diseased and loathsome habit of body, instead of a beautiful skin, softened and made agreeable with all that art could devise, and all that nature, so prodigal in those countries of the richest perfumes, could supply, must have been a punishment the most severe and the most mortifying to the delicacy of these haughty daughters of Sion.

Burning instead of beauty.] "A sunburnt skin." The clause ki thachath yophi seems to me rather to be imperfect at the end. Not to mention that ki, taken as a noun for adustio, burning, is without example, and very improbable. The passage ends abruptly, and seems to want a fuller conclusion. [The word ki may be rendered, "branding," i.e. the mark burnt on the forehead of a captive.]

Verse 26. Sit upon the ground.] Sitting on the ground was a posture that denoted mourning and deep distress. The prophet Jeremiah (Lam. ii. 8) has given it the first place among many indications of sorrow, in an elegant description of the same state of distress of his country.

CHAPTER IV.

The havoc occasioned by war, and those other calamities which the prophet had been describing in the preceding chapter, are represented as so terribly great that seven women should be left to one man, 1. Great blessedness of the remnant that shall be accounted worthy to accept these judgments, 2-4. The privileges of the gospel set forth by allusions to the glory and pomp of the Mosaic dispensation, 5, 6.

AND in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel: only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach.

2 In that day shall the branch of the LORD be beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely for them that are escaped of Israel.

3 And it shall come to pass, that he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jerusalem, shall be called holy, even every one that is written among the living in Jerusalem.

Verse 1. And seven women] The division of the chapters has interrupted the prophet's discourse, and broken it off almost in the midst of the sentence. "The numbers slain in battle shall be so great, that seven women shall be left to one man." The prophet has described the greatness of this distress by images and adjuncts the most expressive and forcible. The young women, contrary to their natural modesty, shall become suitors to the men; they will take hold of them, and use the most pressing importunity to be married. In spite of the natural suggestions of jealousy, they will be content with a share only of the rights of marriage in common with several others; and that on hard conditions, renouncing the legal demands of the wife on the husband (see Exod. xxi. 10), and begging only the name and credit of wedlock, and to be freed from the reproach of celibacy. See chap. liv. 4, 5.

"This happened," says Kimchi, "in the days of Ahaz, when Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judea one hundred and twenty thousand men in one day; see 2 Chron. xviii. 6. The widows which were left were so numerous, that the prophet said, 'They are multiplied beyond the sand of the sea.'" Jer. xv. 8.

Verse 2. The branch of the Lord] The branch is an appropriate title of the Messiah; and the fruit of the land means the great Person to spring from the house of Judah, and is only a parallel expression signifying the same; or perhaps the blessings consequent upon the redemption procured by him. Compare chap. xlv. 8, where the same great event is set forth under similar images, and see the note there.

Verse 3. Written among the living] That is, whose name stands in the enrolment or register of the people; or every man living, who is a citizen of Jerusalem. See Ezek. xiii. 9; and compare Ps. lix. 28, lxxvii. 6; Exod. xxxii. 32.

Verse 4. The spirit of burning] Means the fire of God's wrath, by which he will prove and purify his people; gathering them into his furnace, in order to separate the dross from the silver, the bad from the good. The severity of God's judgments, the fiery trial of his servants, Ezekiel (chap. xxii. 18-22) has set forth at large, after his manner, with great boldness of imagery and force of expression. God threatens to gather them into the midst of Jerusalem, as into the furnace; to blow the fire upon them, and to melt them. Malachi chap. iii. 2, 3, treats the same subject, and represents the same event, under the like images.

Verse 5. And the Lord will create] One MS., the Septuagint, and the Arabic have yabi, He shall bring: the cloud already exists; the Lord will bring it over. This is a blessed promise of the presence of God in all the assemblies of his people.

Every dwelling place] The Hebrew text has, every station: but four MSS. (one ancient) omit col, all; very rightly, as it should seem: for the station was Mount Zion itself, and no other. See Exod. xv. 17.

A cloud and smoke by day] This is a manifest allusion to the pillar of cloud and of fire, which attended the Israelites in their passage out of Egypt, and to the glory that rested on the tabernacle. Exod. xiii. 21, xl. 38. The prophet Zechariah, chap. ii. 5, applies the same image to the same purpose:

"And I will be unto her a wall of fire round about;

And a glory will I be in the midst of her."

That is, the visible presence of God shall protect her. Which explains the conclusion of this verse of Isaiah; where the makkaph between col and cabod, connecting the two words in construction, which ought not to be connected, has thrown an obscurity upon the sentence, and misled most of the translators. [This interpretation which makes "the glory" the defence is very doubtful.]

For upon all the glory shall be a defence] Whatever God creates he must uphold, or it will fail. Every degree of grace brings with it a degree of power to maintain itself in the soul.

Verse 6. A tabernacle] In countries subject to violent tempests, as well as to intolerable heat, a portable tent is a necessary part of a traveller's baggage, for defence and shelter. And to such tents the words of the text make evident allusion. They are to be met with in every part of Arabia and Egypt, and in various other places in the East.

CHAPTER V.

This chapter begins with representing, in a beautiful parable, the tender care of God for his people, and their unworthy returns for his goodness, 1-7. The parable or allegory is then dropped; and the prophet, in plain terms, reproves and threatens them for their wickedness; particularly for their covetousness, 8-10; intemperance, 11; and inattention to the warnings of Providence, 12. Then follows an enumeration of judgments as the necessary consequence. Captivity and famine appear with all their horrors, 13. Hades, or the grave, like a ravenous monster, opens wide its jaws, and swallows down its myriads, 14. Distress lays hold on all ranks, 15; and God is glorified in the execution of judgment, 16; till the whole place is left desolate, a place for the flocks to range in, 17. The prophet then pauses; and again resumes his subject, reproving them for several other sins, and threatening them with woes and vengeance, 18-24; after which he sums up the whole of his awful denunciation in a very lofty and spirited epiphonema or conclusion. The God of armies having hitherto corrected to no purpose, is represented with inimitable majesty, as only giving a hint, and a swarm of nations hasten to his standard, 25-27. Upon a guilty race, unpitied by heaven or by earth, they execute their commission; and leave the land desolate and dark, without one ray of comfort to cheer the horrid gloom, 28-30.

NOW will I sing to my well-beloved a song of my beloved touching ^ahis vineyard. My well-beloved hath a vineyard in ^aa very fruitful hill.

2 And he ^afenced it, and gathered out the stones thereof, and planted it with the choicest vine, and built a tower in the midst of it, and also ^amade a winepress therein: ^aand he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

3 And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah, ^ajudge, I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard.

4 What could have been done more to my ^avineyard, that I have not done in it? wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?

5 And now go to; I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard: ^aI will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and break down ^athe wall thereof, and it shall be ^atrodden down:

6 And I will lay it waste: it shall not be pruned, nor digged; but there shall come up briars and thorns: I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it.

Verse 1. Now will I sing to my well-beloved a song of my beloved.] A MS., respectable for its antiquity, adds the word shir, a song, after now, which gives so elegant a turn to the sentence by the repetition of it in the next member, and by distinguishing the members so exactly in the style and manner in the Hebrew poetical composition, that I am much inclined to think it genuine.

A song of my beloved.] "A song of loves." In this way of understanding it we avoid the great impropriety of making the author of the song, and the person to whom it is addressed, to be the same.

In a very fruitful hill.] Heb. : "on a horn the son of oil." The expression is highly descriptive and poetical. The parts of animals are, by an easy metaphor, applied to parts of the earth, both in common and poetical language. A promontory is called a cape or head; the Turks call it a nose. A horn is a proper and obvious image for a mountain or mountainous country.

Here the precise idea seems to be that of a high mountain standing by itself.

Judea was in general a mountainous country, whence Moses sometimes calls it The Mountain, Exod. xv. 17; Deut. iii. 25. And in a political and religious view it was detached and separated from all the nations round it. Whoever has considered the descriptions given of Mount Tabor, its regular conic form, rising singly in a plain to a great height, from a base small in proportion, and its beauty and fertility to the very top, will have a good idea of "a horn the son of oil;" and will perhaps be induced to think that the prophet took his image from that mountain.

Verse 2. And gathered out the stones.] This was agreeable to the husbandry.

The choicest vine.] "Sorek." Many of the ancient interpreters have retained this word as a proper name; I think very rightly. Sorek was a valley lying between Ascalon and Gaza, and running far up eastward in the tribe of Judah. Both Ascalon and Gaza were anciently famous for wine, and it seems that the upper part of the valley of Sorek, and that of Eschol, where the spies gathered the single cluster of grapes, which they were obliged to bear between two upon a staff, being both near to Hebron, were in the same neighbourhood, and that all this part of the country abounded with rich vineyards. Compare Numb. xiii. 22, 23; Judg. xvi. 8, 4. The name of Sorek was known to the Israelites, being 7 For the vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah ^ahis pleasant plant: and he looked for judgment, but behold ^aoppression; for righteousness, but behold ^aa cry.

8 Woe unto them that join ^ahouse to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place, that ^athey may be placed alone in the midst of the earth!

9 ^aIn ^amine ears said the Lord of hosts, ^aOf a truth many houses shall be desolate, even great and fair, without inhabitant.

10 Yea, ten acres of vineyard shall yield one ^abath, and the seed of an homer shall yield an ^aephah.

11 ^aWoe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink; that continue until night, till wine ^ainflammeth them!

12 And ^athe harp, and the viol, the tabret, and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts: but ^athey regard not the work of the Lord, neither consider the operation of his hands.

13 ^aTherefore my people are gone into captivity, ^abecause they have no knowledge: and ^atheir honourable men are famished, and their multitude dried up with thirst.

^aHeb. a scab. Mte. ii. 2. Heb. ye. Ch. xxi. 14. Or, This is in mine ears, saith the LORD, &c. Heb. If not, &c. See Ezek. xiv. 11. Prov. xxiii. 29, 30. Eccles. x. 18. Ver. 22. Or, pursue them. mentioned by Moses, Gen. xlix. 11, before their coming out of Egypt. Egypt was not a wine country. The vines of Egypt are spoken of in Scripture, Ps. lxxviii. 47; cv. 83; and see Gen. xli. 11. But they had no large vineyards, nor was the country proper for them, being little more than one large plain, annually overflooded by the Nile. The vine and the wine of Sorek therefore, which lay near at hand for importation into Egypt, must in all probability have been well known to the Israelites when they sojourned there.

And built a tower in the midst of it.] Our Saviour, who has taken the general idea of one of his parables, Matt. xxi. 33, Mark xii. 1, from this of Isaiah, has likewise inserted this circumstance of building a tower; which is generally explained by commentators as designed for the keeper of the vineyard to watch and defend the fruits. But for this purpose it was usual to make a little temporary hut (Isaiah i. 8), which might serve for the short season while the fruit was ripening, and which was removed afterwards. The tower therefore should rather mean a building of a more permanent nature and use; the farm, as we may call it, of the vineyard, containing all the offices and implements, and the whole apparatus necessary for the culture of the vineyard, and the making of the wine. To which image in the allegory, the situation, the manner of building, the use, and the whole service of the temple, exactly answered.

And also made a winepress therein.] This image also our Saviour has preserved in his parable. It means not the winepress itself, or calcatorium, which is called gath, or purah; but what the Romans called lacus, the lake; the large open place or vessel, which by a conduit or spout received the must from the winepress.

And he looked.] "And he expected." Jeremiah, chap. ii. 21, uses the same image, and applies it to the same purpose, in an elegant paraphrase of this part of Isaiah's parable, in his flowing and plaintive manner.

Wild grapes.] Beushim, not merely useless, unprofitable grapes, such as wild grapes; but grapes offensive to the smell, noxious, poisonous. By the force and intent of the allegory, to good grapes ought to be opposed fruit of a dangerous and pernicious quality; as, in the explication of it, to judgment is opposed tyranny, and to righteousness, oppression. Gephen, the vine, is a common name or genus, including several species under it; and Moses, to distinguish the true vine, or that from which wine is made, from the 15 And ^a the mean man shall be brought down, and the mighty man shall be humbled, and the eyes of the lofty shall be humbled:

16 But the LORD of hosts shall be exalted in judgment, and ^b God ^c that is holy shall be sanctified in righteousness.

17 Then shall the lambs feed after their manner, and the waste places of ^d the fat ones shall strangers eat.

18 Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart rope:

19 ^e That say, Let him make speed, and hasten his work, that we may see it: and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know it!

rest, calls it Numb. vi. 4, gephen haiyayin, the wine-vine. Some of the other sorts were of a poisonous quality, as appears from the story related among the miraculous acts of Elisha, 2 Kings iv. 30-41.

From some such sorts of poisonous fruits of the grape kind Moses has taken those strong and highly poetical images with which he has set forth the future corruption and extreme degeneracy of the Israelites, in an allegory which has a near relation, both in its subject and imagery, to this of Isaiah: Deut. xxxii. 32, 33.

Verse 7. And he looked for judgment] The paronomasia, or play on the words, in this place, is very remarkable; meshpat, meshpach, tsedakah, tsakah. There are many examples of it in the other prophets, but Isaiah seems peculiarly fond of it. See chap. xiii. 6, xiv. 17, xvii. 7, xxxiii. 1, lvii. 6, lxi. 8. lxi. 12.

Verse 9. In mine ears] The sentence in the Hebrew text seems to be imperfect in this place; as likewise in chap. xxii. 14, where the very same sense seems to be required as here. See the note there; and compare 1 Sam. ix. 15.

Many houses] This has reference to what was said in the preceding verse.

Verse 11. Woe unto them that rise up early] There is a likeness between this and the following passage of the prophet Amos, chap. vi. 8-9, who probably wrote before Isaiah.

Follow strong drink] Theodoret and Chrysostom on this place, both Syrians, and unexceptionable witnesses in what belongs to their own country, inform us that shekar (so the Greek of both Testaments, rendered by us by the general term strong drink) meant properly palm wine or date wine, which was and is still much in use in the eastern countries. Judea was famous for the abundance and excellence of its palm-trees; and consequently had plenty of this wine.

Verse 13. And their honourable men] These verses have likewise a reference to the two preceding. They that indulged in feasting and drinking shall perish with hunger and thirst; and Hades shall indulge his appetite as much as they had done, and devour them all. The image is strong and expressive in the highest degree. Habakkuk, chap. ii. 8, uses the same image with great force. But, in Isaiah, Hades is introduced to much greater advantage, in person; and placed before our eyes in the form of a ravenous monster, opening wide his immeasurable jaws, and swallowing them all together: "Therefore Sheol hath dilated her soul, she hath opened her mouth beyond limit." Destruction expects more than a common meal, when God visits Jerusalem for her iniquities. This seems to refer to the ruin brought on the Jews by the Romans. Our blessed Lord repeats this parable, and applies it to this very transaction, Matt. xxi. 33.

Verse 17. The lambs] Gerim, "strangers." The Septuagint read, more agreeably to the design of the prophet, gerim, "the lambs." The meaning is, their luxurious habitations shall be so entirely destroyed as to become a pasture for flocks.

After their manner] "Without restraint." Kadobram,

20 Woe unto them ^a that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!

21 Woe unto them that are ^b wise in their own eyes, and prudent ^c in their own sight!

22 ^d Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink:

23 Which ^e justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him!

24 Therefore ^f as ^g the fire devoureth the stubble, and the flame consumeth the chaff, so ^h their root shall be as rottenness, and their blossom shall go up as dust: because they have cast away the law of the LORD of hosts, and despised the word of the Holy One of Israel.

25 ⁱ Therefore is the anger of the LORD kindled against his people, and he hath stretched forth his hand against them, and hath smitten them: and as their own will shall lead them. [Or, as if they were in their own pasture-ground.]

Verse 18. With a cart rope] "An evil inclination," says Kimchi on this place, from the ancient rabbins, "is at the beginning like a fine hair-string, but at the finishing like a thick cart-rope." By a long progression in iniquity, and a continued accumulation of sin, men arrive at length to the highest degree of wickedness; bidding open defiance to God and scoffing at his threatened judgments, as it is finely expressed in the next verse. The Chaldee paraphrast explains it in the same manner, of wickedness increasing from small beginnings, till it arrives to a great magnitude.

I believe the rabbins have not hit on the true meaning of this place; the prophet seems to refer to idol sacrifices. The victims they offered were splendidly decked out for the sacrifice. Their horns and hoofs were often gilded, and their heads dressed out with fillets and garlands. The cords of vanity may refer to the silken strings by which they were led to the altar, some of which were unusually thick. The offering for iniquity was adorned with fillets and garlands: the sin-offering with silken cords, like unto cart-ropes. Pride, in their acts of humiliation, had the upper hand.

Verse 22. Mighty to drink wine] "They show not," says Kimchi, "their strength in combating their enemies, but in drunkenness and debauchery."

Verse 24. The flame] "The tongue of fire." The metaphor is so exceedingly obvious, as well as beautiful, that one may wonder that it has not been more frequently used.

The dispersed tongues, as it were of fire, Acts ii. 3, which appeared at the descent of the Holy Spirit on the apostles, give the same idea; that is, of flames shooting diversely into pyramidal forms, or points, like tongues. It may be further observed that the prophet in this place has given the metaphor its full force, in applying it to the action of fire in eating up and devouring whatever comes in its way, like a ravenous animal whose tongue is principally employed in taking in his food or prey; which image Moses has strongly exhibited in an expressive comparison. Numb. xxii. 4. See also 1 Kings xviii. 38.

Their root shall be as rottenness] Cammak, like mak; whence probably our word muck, dung, was derived.

Verse 25. The hills did tremble] Probably referring to the great earthquakes in the days of Uzziah king of Judah, in or not long before the time of the prophet himself, recorded as a remarkable era in the title of the prophecies of Amos, chap. i. 1, and by Zechariah, chap. xiv. 5.

Verse 26. He will—hiss] The metaphor is taken from the practice of those that keep bees, who draw them out of their hives into the fields, and lead them back again, by a hiss or a whistle. In chap. vii. 18, the metaphor is more apparent, by being carried farther, where the hostile armies are expressed by the fly and the bee; on which place see Deut. i. 44, Ps. cxviii. 12; and God calls the locusts his great army, Joel ii. 25; Exod. xxiii. 23.

With speed] This refers to the nineteenth verse. As the

* the hills did tremble, and their carcases were ^b torn in the midst of the streets. 'For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

* 28 'And he will lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and will 'hiss unto them from 'the end of the earth: and, behold, ^a they shall come with speed swiftly:

27 None shall be weary nor stumble among them; none shall slumber nor sleep; neither ^b shall the girdle of their loins be loosed, nor the latchet of their shoes be broken:

souffers had challenged God to make speed, and to hasten his work of vengeance, so now God assures them that with speed and swiftly it shall come.

Neither shall the girdle] The eastern people, wearing long and loose garments, were unfit for action or business of any kind, without girding their clothes about them. When their business was finished they took off their girdles. A girdle therefore denotes strength and activity; and to unloose the girdle is to deprive of strength, to render unfit for action. God promises to unloose the loins of kings before Cyrus, chap. xiv. 1. The girdle is so essential a part of a soldier's accoutrement, being the last that he puts on to make himself ready for action, that to be girded, with the Greeks, meant to be completely armed and ready for battle. It is used in the same manner by the Hebrews. (1 Kings xx. 11.)

Verse 28. Their horses' hoofs shall be counted like flint] The shoeing of horses with iron plates nailed to the hoof is quite a modern practice, and was unknown to the ancients, as appears from the silence of the Greek and Roman writers, especially those that treat of horse-medicine, who could not have passed over a matter so obvious and of such importance that now the whole science takes its name from it, being called by us farriery. The horse-shoes of leather and iron which are mentioned: the silver and gold shoes with which Nero and Poppæa shod their mules, used occasionally to preserve the hoofs of delicate cattle, or for vanity, were of a very different kind; they enclosed the whole hoof as in a case, or as a shoe does a man's foot, and were bound or tied on. For this reason the strength, firmness, and solidity of a horses hoof was of much greater importance with them than with us, and was esteemed one of the first praises of a fine horse.

28 'Whose arrows are sharp, and all their bows bent, their horses' hoofs shall be counted like flint, and their wheels like a whirlwind:

29 Their roaring shall be like a lion, they shall roar like young lions: 'yea, they shall roar, and lay hold of the prey, and shall carry it away safe, and none shall deliver it.

30 And in that day they shall roar against them like the roaring of the sea: and if one ^b look unto the land, behold darkness and ^c 'sorrow, 'and the ^a light is darkened in the heavens thereof.

These circumstances must be taken into consideration in order to give us a full notion of the propriety and force of the image by which the prophet sets forth the strength and excellence of the Babylonish cavalry, which made a great part of the strength of the Assyrian army.

Like a whirlwind] Cassuphah, like the stormy blast. Here sense and sound are well connected.

Verse 30. If one look unto the land, &c.] An ancient Coptic Version from the Septuagint, supposed to be of the second century, some fragments of which are preserved in the library of St. Germain des Prez at Paris, completes the sentence; for, according to this Version, it stood thus in the Septuagint, "And they shall look unto the heaven above and unto the earth beneath." This is probably the true reading, with which I have made the translation agree. Compare chap. viii. 22; where the same sense is expressed in regard to both particulars, which are here equally and highly proper, the looking upwards, as well as down to the earth: but the form of expression is varied.

CHAPTER VI.

This chapter, by a particular designation of Isaiah to the prophetic office, 1-8, introduces, with great solemnity, a declaration of the whole tenor of the divine conduct in reference to his people, who, on account of their unbelief and impenitence, should for a very long period be given up to a judicial blindness and hardness of heart, 9, 10; and visited with such calamities as would issue in the total desolation of their country, and their general dispersion, 11, 12. The prophet adds, however, that under their repeated dispersions (by the Chaldeans, Romans, &c.), a small remnant would be preserved as a seed from which will be raised a people, in whom will be fulfilled all the divine promises, 13.

IN the year that * king Uzziah died, I ^b saw also the LORD sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and * his train filled the temple.

2 Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and ^a with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly.

3 And * one cried, unto another, and said, 'Holy, holy, holy, is the LORD of hosts: * the ^b whole earth is full of his glory.

Verse 1. The Lord] Many MSS. for Adonai, "the Lord," read "JEHOVAH," which is probably the true reading (compare ver. 6); as in many other places, in which the superstition of the Jews has substituted Adonai for Yehovah.

Verse 2. Above it stood the seraphims] From seraph, to burn. He saw, says Kimchi, the angels as flames of fire, that the depravity of that generation might be exhibited, which was worthy of being totally burnt up.

He covered his feet] By the feet the Hebrews mean all the lower parts of the body. But the people of the East generally wearing long robes, reaching to the ground, and covering the lower parts of the body down to the feet, it may, hence have been thought want of respect and decency to appear in public and on solemn occasions with even the feet themselves uncovered.

Verse 3. Holy, holy, holy] This hymn, performed by the seraphim, divided into two choirs, the one singing responsively to the other, is formed upon the practice of alternate singing, which prevailed in the Jewish church from the time of Moses, whose ode at the Red Sea was thus performed

4 And the posts of the ^a door moved at the voice of him that cried, and ^b the house was filled with smoke.

5 ^c Then said I, Woe is me! for I am ^d undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts.

6 Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, ^e having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off ^f the altar:

7 And he ^g laid ^h it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged.

8 Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for ⁱ us? Then said I, ^j Here am I; send me.

(see Exod. xv. 20, 21), to that of Ezra, under whom the priests and Levites sung alternately (Ezra iii. 11).

Verse 5. Woe is me! for I am undone] There is something exceedingly affecting in this complaint. I a man of unclean lips; I cannot say, Holy, holy, holy! which the seraphs exclaim. They are holy; I am not so: they see God, and live; I have seen him, and must die, because I am unholy. Only the pure in heart shall see God; and they only can live in his presence for ever. Reader, lay this to heart; and instead of boasting of thy excellence, and trusting in thy might, or comforting thyself in thy comparative innocence, thou wilt also be dumb before him, because thou hast been a man of unclean lips, and because thou hast still an unclean heart.

I am undone—"I am struck dumb." I understand it as from dum or damam, "to be silent;" and so it is rendered by the Syriac, Vulgate, Symmachus, and by some of the Jewish interpreters. The rendering of the Syriac is, "I am amazed." He immediately gives the reason why he was struck dumb: because he was a man of polluted lips, and dwelt among a people of polluted lips; and was unworthy either to join the seraphim in singing praises to God, or to be the messenger of God to his people. Compare Exod. iv. 10, vi. 12; Jer. i. 6.

Verse 6. A live coal] The word of prophecy, which was put into the mouth of the prophet.

From off the altar] That is, from the altar of burnt-offerings, before the door of the temple, on which the fire that came down at first from heaven (Lev. ix. 24; 2 Chron. vii. 1) was perpetually burning. It was never to be extinguished, Lev. vi. 12, 13.

Verse 10. Make the heart of this people fat] The prophet speaks of the event, the fact as it would actually happen, not of God's purpose and act by his ministry. The prophets are in other places said to perform the thing which they only foretell. See Jer. i. 10; Ezek. xliii. 3. To hear and not understand; to see, and not perceive; is a common saying in many languages.

^l indeed, = but understand not; and see ye ^m indeed but perceive not.

10 Make ⁿ the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; ^o lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed.

11 Then said I, Lord, how long? And he answered, ^p Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be ^q utterly desolate, 12 ^r And the LORD have removed men far away, and there be a great forsaking in the midst of the land.

13 But yet in it shall be a tenth, ^s and it shall return, and shall be eaten: as a teil tree, and as an oak, whose ^t substance is in them, when they cast their leaves: so ^u the holy seed shall be the substance thereof.

Or the words may be understood thus, according to the Hebrew idiom: "Ye certainly hear, but do not understand; ye certainly hear, but do not acknowledge." Seeing this is the case, make the heart of this people fat—declare it to be stupid and senseless; and remove from them the means of salvation, which they have so long abused.

And shut] Mr. Harmer very ingeniously applies to this passage a practice of sealing up the eyes as a ceremony, or as a kind of punishment used in the East, from which the image may possibly be taken.

And be healed.] "And I should heal," verba, Septuagint, Vulgate. So likewise Mat. xiii. 14; John xii. 40; Acts. xxviii. 27.

Verse 13. A tenth] When Nebuchadnezzar had carried away the greater and better part of the people into captivity, there was a tenth remaining in the land, the poorer sort left to be vinedressers and husbandmen, under Gedaliah, 2 Kings xxv. 12, 22, and the dispersed Jews gathered themselves together, and returned to him, Jer. xl. 12; yet even these, fleeing into Egypt after the death of Gedaliah, contrary to the warning of God given by the prophet Jeremiah, miserably perished there. Again, in the subsequent and more remarkable completion of the prophecy in the destruction of Jerusalem and the dissolution of the commonwealth by the Romans, when the Jews, after the loss of above a million of men, had increased from the scanty residue that was left of them, and had become very numerous again in their country; Hadrian, provoked by their rebellious behaviour, slew above half a million more of them, and a second time almost extirpated the nation. Yet after these signal and almost universal destructions of that nation, and after so many other repeated exterminations and massacres of them in different times and on various occasions since, we yet see, with astonishment, that the stock still remains, from which God, according to his promise frequently given by his prophets, will cause his people to shoot forth again, and to flourish.

CHAPTER VII.

The king of Judah and the royal family being in the utmost consternation on receiving accounts of the invasion of the kings of Syria and Israel, the prophet is sent to assure them that God would make good his promises to David and his house; so that, although they might be corrected, they could not be destroyed, while these prophecies remained to be accomplished, 1-9. The Lord gives Ahaz a sign that the confederacy against Judah shall be broken, which sign strikingly points out the miraculous conception of the Messiah, who was to spring from the tribe of Judah, 10-16. Prediction of very heavy calamities which the Assyrians would inflict upon the land of Judah, 17-25.

AND it came to pass in the days of ^aAhaz the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah, that Rezin the king of Syria, and ^bPekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up toward Jerusalem to war against it, but could not prevail against it.

2 And it was told the house of David, saying, Syria ^cis confederate with Ephraim. And his heart was moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind.

3 Then said the LORD unto Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou, ^dand ^eShearjashub thy son, at the end of the ^fconduit of the upper pool in the ^ghighway of the fuller's field;

4 And say unto him, Take heed, and be quiet; fear not, ^hneither be fainthearted for the two tails of these smoking firebrands, for the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah.

5 Because Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying, Verse 4 The Syriac omits vearam, "and Syria;" the Vulgate reads melech aram, "king of Syria;" one or the other seems to be the true reading. I prefer the former.

Verse 5. Because—Remaliah All these words are omitted by one MS. and the Syriac; a part of them also by the Sextuagint.

Verse 8. 9. Threescore and five years It was sixty-five years from the beginning of the reign of Ahaz, when this prophecy was delivered, to the total depopulation of the kingdom of Israel by Esharaddon, who carried away the remains of the ten tribes which had been left by Tiglath-Pileser, and Shalmaneser, and who planted the country with new inhabitants. That the country was not wholly stripped of its inhabitants by Shalmaneser appears from many passages of the history of Josiah, where Israelites are mentioned as still remaining there, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 6, 7, 88, xxxv. 18; 2 Kings xxiii. 19, 20. This seems to be the best explanation of the chronological difficulty in this place, which has much embarrassed the commentators.

If ye will not believe That is, unless ye believe this prophecy of the destruction of Israel, ye Jews also, as well as the people of Israel, shall not remain established as a kingdom and people; ye shall also be visited with punishment at the same time: as our Saviour told the Jews in his time, "Unless ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish;" intimating their destruction by the Romans; to which also, as well as to the captivity of Manasseh, and to the Babylonish captivity, the views of the prophet might here extend. The exhortation of Jehoshaphat, 2 Chron. xx. 20, to his people when God had promised to them, by the prophet Jahaziel, victory over the Moabites and Ammonites, is very like this both in sense and expression.

Verse 15. That he may know On Matt. i. 23, I have given what I judge to be the true meaning and right application of the whole passage, as there quoted by the evangelist, the substance of which it will be necessary to repeat here:—

At the time referred to, the kingdom of Judah, under the government of Ahaz, was reduced very low. Pekah, king of Israel, had slain in Judea one hundred and twenty thousand persons in one day; and carried away captives two hundred thousand, including women and children, together with much spoil. To add to their distress, Rezin, king of Syria, being confederate with Pekah, had taken Blath, a fortified city of Judah, and carried the inhabitants away captive to Damascus. In this critical conjunction, need we wonder that Ahaz was afraid that the enemies who were now united against him must destroy Jerusalem, and annihilate the family of David? To meet and remove this fear, apparently well grounded, Isaiah is sent from the Lord to Ahaz, in order to assure him that the counsels of his enemies should not stand; and that they should be utterly discomfited. To encourage Ahaz, he commands him to ask a sign or miracle, which should be a pledge in hand, that God should, in due 7 Thus saith the Lord God, ²It shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass.

8 ³For the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, ⁴that it be not a people.

9 And the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son. ⁵If ⁶ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established.

10 ⁷Moreover the Lord spake again unto Ahaz, saying,

11 ⁸Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God; ⁹ask it either in the depth, or in the height above.

12 But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I tempt the Lord.

13 And he said, Hear ye now, O house of David; Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also?

time, fulfil the predictions of his servant, as related in the context. On Ahaz humbly refusing to ask any sign, it is immediately added, "Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son; and shall call his name Immanuel. Butter and honey shall he eat," &c. Both the divine and human nature of our Lord, as well as the miraculous conception, appear to be pointed out in the prophecy quoted here by the evangelist: He shall be called IMMANUEL; literally, THE STRONG GOD WITH US; so that we are to understand God with us to imply, God incarnated—God in human nature. This seems farther evident from the words of the prophet, verse 15: Butter and honey shall he eat—he shall be truly man—grow up and be nourished in a human natural way; which refers to his being WITH US, i. e., incarnated. To which the prophet adds, That he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good; or rather, According to his knowledge, led into, reprobating the evil, and choosing the good: this refers to him as God, and is the same idea given by this prophet, chap. liii. 11. Now this union of the divine and human nature is termed a sign or miracle, oth, i. e., something which exceeds the power of nature to produce. And this miraculous union was to be brought about in a miraculous way: Behold a virgin shall conceive; the word is very emphatic, haalmah, the virgin; the only one that ever was, or ever shall be, a mother in this way. But the Jews, and some called Christians, who have espoused their desperate cause, assert that "the word almah does not signify a virgin only; for it is applied Prov. xxx. 19, to signify a young married woman." I answer, that this latter text is no proof of the contrary doctrine: the words derech geber almah, the way of a man with a maid, cannot be proved to mean that for which it is produced.

The word almah comes from alam, to lie hid, be concealed; and we are told, that "virgins were so called, because they were concealed or closely kept up in their fathers' houses till the time of their marriage." This is not correct: see the case of Rebecca, Gen. xxiv. 43; that of Rachel, Gen. xxix. 6, 9; and see the case of Miriam, the sister of Moses, Exod. ii. 8, and also the Chaldean paraphrase on Lam. i. 4, where the virgins are represented as going out in the dance. And see also the whole history of Ruth. This being concealed, or kept at home, on which so much stress is laid, is purely fanciful; for we find that young unmarried women drew water, kept sheep, gleaned publicly in the fields, &c., &c., and the same works they perform among the Taroos to the present day. A virgin was called almah, literally and physically, because as a woman she had not been uncovered—she had not known man. This fully applies to the blessed virgin, see Luke i. 34. "How can this be, saying I know no man?" And this text throws much light on the subject before us. This also is in perfect agreement with the ancient prophecy, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the head of the serpent," Gen. iii. 15; for the person who was to destroy the work of the devil was to be the progeny of the woman, without any concurrence of the man. And hence the text in Genesis speaks as fully of the virgin state of the person from whom Christ, according to the flesh, should come, as that in the prophet, or this in the Evangelist. According to the original promise, there was to be a seed, a human being, who should destroy sin: but this seed or human being, must come from the woman ALONE; and no woman ALONE could produce such a human being without being a virgin. Hence, A virgin shall bear a son, is the very spirit and meaning of the original text, independently of the illustration given by the prophet; and the fact recorded by the evangelist is the proof of the whole. But how could that be a sign to Ahaz, which was to take place so many hundreds of years after? I answer, the meaning of the prophet is plain; not only Rezin and Pekah should be unsuccessful against Jerusalem, at that time, which was the fact; but Jerusalem, Judea, and the house of David should be both preserved, notwithstanding their depressed state, and the multitude of their adversaries, till the time should come when a VIRGIN should bear a son. This is a most remarkable circumstance—the house of David could never fail, till a virgin should conceive and bear a son—nor did it: but when that incredible and miraculous fact did take place, the kingdom and house of David became extinct! This is an irrefragable confutation of every argument a Jew can offer in vindication of his opposition to the gospel of Christ. Thus Moses, Isaiah, and Matthew concur; and facts the most unequivocal have confirmed the whole. Behold the wisdom and providence of God!

Notwithstanding what has been said above, it may be asked, In what sense could this name, Immanuel, be applied to Jesus Christ, if he be not truly and properly GOD? Could the Spirit of truth ever design that Christians should receive him as an angel or a mere man; and yet, in the very beginning of the Gospel History, apply a character to him which belongs only to the most high God? Surely no. In what sense, then, is Christ GOD WITH US? Jesus is called Immanuel, or God with us, in his incarnation; God united to our nature: God in man, God in man; God with us, by his continual protection; God with us, by the influence of his Holy Spirit, in the holy sacrament, in the preaching of his word, in private prayer. And God with us, through every action of our life, that we begin, continue, and end in his name. He is God with us, to comfort, enlighten, protect, and defend us, in every time of temptation and trial, in the hour of death, in the day of judgment; and God with us and in us, and we with and in him, to all eternity. [The criticism, both ancient and modern, on this difficult passage, fails to give complete satisfaction. Though possibly wrong in some details, Dr. Clarke has evidently realized the spirit of the passage.]

Verse 17. Even the king of Assyria.] Houbigant supposes these words to have been a marginal gloss, brought into the text by mistake; and so likewise Archbishop Secker. Besides their having no force or effect here, they do not join well in construction with the words preceding, as may be seen by the strange manner in which the ancient interpreters have taken them; and they very inelegantly forestal the mention of the king of Assyria, which comes in with great propriety in the 20th verse.

Verse 18. Hiss for the fly] See note on chap. v. 26. Egypt and—Assyria.] Sennacherib, Esarhaddon, Pharaoh-necho, and Nebuchadnezzar, who one after another desolated Judea.

Verse 20. The river] That is, the Euphrates; hanahar. So read the Septuagint and two MSS.

Shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired] To shave with the hired razor the head, the feet, and the beard, is an expression highly parabolical, to denote the utter devastation of the country from one end to the other; and the plundering of the people, from the highest to the lowest, by the Assyrians, whom God employed as his instrument to punish the Jews. Ahaz himself, in the first place, hired the king of Assyria to come to help him against the Syrians, by a present made to him of all the treasures of the temple, as well as his own. And God himself considered the great nations, whom he thus employed, as his mercenaries; and paid them their wages. Thus he paid Nebuchadnezzar for his service against Tyre, by the conquest of Egypt, Ezek. xxix. 18-20. The hairs of the head are those of the highest order in the state; those of the feet, or the lower parts, are the common people; the beard is the king, the high priest, the very supreme in dignity and majesty. The eastern people have always held the beard in the highest veneration, and have been extremely jealous of its honour. To pluck a man's beard is an instance of the greatest indignity that can be offered. See Isa. i. 6, and 2 Sam. x. 4, 5.

The remaining verses of this chapter, 21-25, contain an elegant and very expressive description of a country depopulated, and left to run wild, from its adjuncts and circumstances: the vineyards and cornfields, before well cultivated, now overrun with briars and thorns; much grass, so that the few cattle that are left, a young cow and two sheep, have their full range, and abundant pasture, so as to yield milk in plenty to the scanty family of the owner; the thinly scattered people living, not on corn, wine, and oil, the produce of cultivation, but on milk and honey, the gifts of nature; and the whole land given up to the wild beasts, so that the miserable inhabitants are forced to go out armed with bows and arrows, either to defend themselves against the wild beasts, or to supply themselves with necessary food by hunting.

CHAPTER VIII.

Prediction respecting the conquest of Syria and Israel by the Assyrians, 1-4. Israel, for rejecting the gentle stream of Shiloah, near Jerusalem, is threatened to be overflowed by the great river of Assyria, manifestly alluding by this strong figure, to the conquests of Tiglath-Pileser and Sennacherib over that kingdom, 5-7. The invasion of the kingdom of Judah by the Assyrians under Sennacherib foretold, 8. The prophet assures the Israelites and Syrians that their hostile attempts against Judah shall be frustrated, 9, 10. Exhortation not to be afraid of the wrath of man, but to fear the displeasure of God, 11-13. Judgments which shall overtake those who put no confidence in Jehovah, 14, 15. The prophet proceeds to warn his countrymen against idolatry, divination, and the like sinful practices, exhorting them to seek direction from the word of God, professing in a beautiful apostrophe that this was his own pious resolution. And to enforce this counsel, and strengthen their faith, he points to his children, whose symbolic names were signs or pledges of the divine promises, 16-20. Judgments of God against the finally impenitent, 21, 22.

MOREOVER the LORD said unto me, Take thee a great roll, and write in it with a man's pen concerning Maher-shalal-hash-baz.

2 And I took unto me faithful witnesses to record, Uria the priest, and Zechariah the son of Joberechiah.

3 And I went unto the prophetess: and she conceived, and bare a son. Then said the LORD to me, Call his name Maher-shalal-hash-baz.

4 For before the child shall have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother, the riches of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away before the king of Assyria.

5 The LORD spake also unto me again, saying,

Verse 1. Take thee a great roll] "A large mirror." Gil-layon is not a roll or volume: but may very well signify a polished tablet of metal, such as was anciently used for a mirror. The Chaldee paraphrast renders it by luach, a tablet, and the same word, though somewhat differently pointed, the Chaldee paraphrast and the rabbins render a mirror, chap. iii. 23. The mirrors of the Israelitish women were made of brass finely polished, Exod. xxxviii. 8, from which place it likewise appears that what they used were little hand mirrors which they carried with them even when they assembled at the door of the tabernacle. The prophet is commanded to take a mirror, or brazen polished tablet, large enough for him to engrave upon it in deep and lasting characters, with a workman's graving tool, the prophecy which he was to deliver. In this manner he was to record the prophecy of the destruction of Damascus and Samaria by the Assyrians; the subject and sum of which prophecy is here expressed with great brevity in four words, maher shalal hash baz; i. e., to hasten the spoil, to take quickly the prey; which are afterwards applied as the name of the prophet's son, who was made a sign of the speedy completion of it; maher-shalal-hash-baz; Haste-to-the-spoil, Quick-to-the-prey. And that it might be done with the greater solemnity, and to preclude all doubt of the real delivery of the prophecy before the event, he calls witnesses to attest the recording of it.

The prophet is commanded to take a great roll, and yet four words only are to be written in it. The great volume points out the land of Judea; and the few words the small number of inhabitants, after the ten tribes were carried into captivity.

The four words may be considered as the commission given to the Assyrians to destroy and spoil the cities.

Verse 4. For before the child] The prophecy was accomplished within three years; when Tiglath-Pileser, king of Assyria, went up against Damascus and took it, and carried the people of it captive to Kir, and slew Rezin, and also took the Reubenites and the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, and carried them captive to Assyria, 2 Kings xv. 29, xvi. 9, 1 Chron. v. 26.

Verse 6. Forasmuch as this people refuseth] The gentle waters of Shiloah, a small fountain and brook just without Jerusalem, which supplied a pool within the city for the use of the inhabitants, is an apt emblem of the state of the kingdom and house of David, much reduced in its apparent strength, yet supported by the blessing of God; and is finely contrasted with the waters of the Euphrates, great, rapid, and impetuous; the image of the Babylonian empire, which God threatens to bring down like a mighty flood upon all these apostates of both kingdoms, as a punishment for their manifold iniquities, and their contemptuous disregard of his promises. The brook and the river are put for the kingdoms to which they belong, and the different states of which respectively they most aptly represent.

Verse 8. He shall reach even to the neck] As when the waters come up to a man's neck, he is very near drowning (for a little increase of them would go over his head): so the king of Assyria coming up to Jerusalem was like a flood reaching to the neck,—the whole country was overflowed, and the capital was in imminent danger. Accordingly the Chaldee renders reaching to the neck by reaching to Jerusalem.

Verse 9. Associate yourselves] God by his prophet plainly declares to the confederate adversaries of Judah, and bids them regard and attend to his declaration, that all their efforts shall be in vain. The present reading, rou, is subject to many difficulties; I follow that of the Septuagint, deu, know ye this, that is give ear to it.

Verse 11. With a strong hand] That is, with a strong and powerful influence of the prophetic Spirit.

Verse 12. Say ye not, A confederacy] Both the reading and the sense of this word are doubtful. The Septuagint manifestly read kasa; for they render it by hard. The Syriac and Chaldee render it rebellion. How they came by hand, and instructed me that I should not walk in the way of this people, saying, 12 Say ye not, A confederacy, to all them to whom this people shall say, A confederacy; neither fear ye their fear, nor be afraid.

13 Sanctify the LORD of hosts himself; and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread.

14 And he shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel, for a gin and for a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

15 And many among them shall stumble, and fall, and be broken, and be snared, and be taken.

this sense of the word, or what they read in their copies, is not so clear. But the worst of it is, that neither of these readings or renderings gives any clear sense in this place. For why should God forbid his faithful servants to say with the unbelieving Jews, It is hard: or, There is a rebellion; or, as our translators render it, a confederacy? And how can this be called "walking in the way of this people?" ver. 11, which usually means, following their example, joining with them in religious worship. Or what confederacy do they mean? Archbishop Secker proposes the substitution of Kadosh for Keshet, which involves only the transposition of the two last letters of the original word; and reads thus: "Walk not in the way of this people; call not their idols holy, nor fear ye the object of their fear: but look up to JEHovah as your Holy one; and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread; and he shall be a holy Refuge unto you." Here there is a harmony and consistency running through the whole sentence; and the latter part naturally arises out of the former, and answers to it. [Delitzsch reads: "Call ye not conspiracy all that this people calls conspiracy; and what is feared by it fear ye not, neither think ye dreadful."]

Verse 14. And he shall be for a sanctuary] The word lachen, unto you, absolutely necessary, as I conceive, to the sense is lost in this place; it is preserved by the Vulgate, "et erit vobis in sanctificationem." The Septuagint have it in the singular number.

Verse 19. Should not a people seek] The Septuagint read: Should not a nation seek unto its God? Why should you seek unto the dead concerning the living? and this repetition of the verb seems necessary to the sense.

Verse 20. Because there is no light in them.] Shachar, as an adjective, frequently signifies dark, obscure; and the noun shachar signifies darkness, gloominess, Joel ii. 2, if we may judge by the context. "It is because there is no light in them," says our translation. If there be any sense in these words, it is not the sense of the original; which cannot justly be so translated. R. D. Kimchi says this was the form of an oath: "By the law and by the testimony such and such things are so." Now if they had sworn this falsely, it is because there is no light, no illumination, shachar, no scruple or conscience in them.

CHAPTER IX.

This chapter contains an illustrious prophecy of the Messiah. He is represented under the glorious figure of the sun, or light, rising on a benighted world, and diffusing joy and gladness wherever he sheds his beams, 1-3. His conquests are astonishing and miraculous, as in the day of Midian; and the peace which they procure is to be permanent, as denoted by the burning of all the implements of war, 4, 5. The person and character of this great Deliverer are then set forth in the most magnificent terms which the language of mankind could furnish, 6. The extent of his kingdom is declared to be universal, and the duration of it eternal, 7. The prophet foretels most awful calamities, which were ready to fall upon the Israelites on account of their manifold impieties, 8-21.

ring only in this place, is of very doubtful signification. In Syriac the word, as a noun, signifies a shoe, or a sandal, as a learned friend suggested to me some years ago. See Luke xv. 22; Acts xii. 8. I take it, therefore, to mean that part of the armour which covered the legs and feet; and I would render the two words in Latin by caliga caligati. The burning of heaps of armour, gathered from the field of battle, as an offering made to the god supposed to be the giver of victory, was a custom that prevailed among some heathen nations; and the Romans used it as an emblem of peace, which perfectly well suits with the design of the prophet in this place. And there are notices of some such practice among the Israelites, and other nations of the most early times. See Josh. xi. 6, and Nahum ii. 13. And the Psalmist employs this image to express complete victory, and the perfect establishment of peace, Ps. xli. 9.

Ezekiel, chap. xxxix. 8-10, in his bold manner, has carried this image to a degree of amplification which I think hardly any other of the Hebrew poets would have attempted.

The everlasting Father] "The Father of the everlasting age," or Abiad, the Father of eternity.

Prince of peace.] Sar shalom, the Prince of prosperity, the Giver of all blessings.

Verse 7. Of the increase] This is an illustrious prophecy of the incarnation of Christ, with an enumeration of those characters in which he stands most nearly related to mankind as their Saviour; and of others by which his infinite majesty and Godhead are shown. He shall appear as a child, born of a woman, born as a Jew, under the law, but not in the way of ordinary generation. He is a Son given—the human nature, in which the fullness of the Godhead was to dwell, being produced by the creative energy of the Holy Ghost in the womb of the Virgin. See Matt. i. 20, 21, 23, 25, and Luke i. 35, and Isai. vii. 14, and the notes on those passages. As being God manifested in the flesh, he was wonderful in his conception, birth, preaching, miracles, sufferings, death, resurrection, and ascension; wonderful in his person, and wonderful in his working. He is the Counsellor that expounds the law; shows its origin, nature, and claims; instructs; pleads for the guilty; and ever appears in the presence of God for men. He is the mighty God; God essentially and efficiently prevailing against his enemies, and destroying ours. He is the Father of eternity; the Origin and the inhabitant of Samaria; that say in the pride and stoutness of heart, 10 The bricks are fallen down, but we will build with hewn stones: the sycamores are cut down, but we will change them into cedars.

of all being, and the Cause of the existence, and particularly the Father of the spirits of all flesh. The Prince of peace—not only the Author of peace, and the Dispenser of peace, but also he that rules by peace, whose rule tends always to perfection, and produces prosperity. Of the increase of his government—this Prince has a government, for he has all power both in heaven and in earth; and his government increases—and is daily more and more extended, and will continue till all things are put under his feet. His kingdom is ordered—every act of government regulated according to wisdom and goodness; is established so securely as not to be overthrown; and administered in judgment and justice, so as to manifest his wisdom, righteousness, goodness, and truth. Reader, such is that Jesus who came into the world to save sinners! Trust in Him!

Verse 10. The bricks] The eastern bricks are only clay well moistened with water, and mixed with straw, and dried in the sun. These bricks are properly opposed to hewn stone, so greatly superior in beauty and durability. The sycamores, which, as Jerome on the place says, are timber of little worth, with equal propriety are opposed to the cedars. We meet with the same opposition of cedars to sycamores, 1 Kings x. 27, where Solomon is said to have made silver as the stones, and cedars as the sycamores in the vale for abundance. By this marshal, or figurative and sententious speech, they boast that they shall easily be able to repair their present losses, suffered perhaps by the first Assyrian invasion under Tiglath-Pileser; and to bring their affairs to a more flourishing condition than ever.

Verse 12. With open mouth.] Bechol peh, in every corner, in every part of their country, pursuing them to the remotest extremities, and the most retired parts.

Verse 18. For wickedness] Wickedness rageth like a fire, destroying and laying waste the nation; but it shall be its own destruction, by bringing down the fire of God's wrath, which shall burn up the briars and the thorns; that is, the wicked themselves. Briars and thorns are an image frequently applied in Scripture, when set on fire, to the rage of the wicked; violent, yet impotent, and of no long continuance. "They are extinct as the fire of thorns," Ps. cxlviii. 12. To the wicked themselves, as useless and unprofitable, proper objects of God's wrath, to be burned up, or driven away by the wind. "As thorns cut up they shall be consumed by the fire," Isai. xxxiii. 12. Both these ideas seem to be joined in Psalm lviii. 9.

The green and the dry is a proverbial expression, meaning all sorts of them, good and bad, great and small, &c. So Ezekiel, chap. xx. 47.

crute and an evildoer, and every mouth speaketh folly. ^bFor all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

18 For wickedness ^cburneth as the fire: it shall devour the briars and thorns, and shall kindle in the thickets of the forest, and they shall mount up like the lifting up of smoke.

arm," in connection with what follows, seems to make either an inconsistency, or an anticlimax; whereas by this correction the following verse becomes an elegant illustration of the foregoing.

CHAPTER X.

God's judgments against oppressive rulers, 1-4. The prophet foretels the invasion of Sennacherib, and the destruction of his army. That mighty monarch is represented as a rod in the hand of God to correct his people for their sins; and his ambitious purposes, contrary to his own intentions, are made subservient to the great designs of Providence, 5-11. Having accomplished this work, the Almighty takes account of his impious vauntings, 12-14; and threatens utter destruction to the small and great of his army, represented by the thorns, and the glory of the forest, 15-19. This leads the prophet to comfort his countrymen with the promise of this signal interposition of God in their favour, 20-27. Brief description of the march of Sennacherib towards Jerusalem, and of the alarm and terror which he spread every where as he hastened forward, 28-32. The spirit and rapidity of the description is admirably suited to the subject. The affrighted people are seen fleeing, and the eager invader pursuing; the cries of one city are heard by those of another; and groan swiftly succeeds to groan, till at last the rod is lifted over the last citadel. In this critical situation, however, the promise of a divine interposition is seasonably renewed. The scene instantly changes; the uplifted arm of this mighty conqueror is at once arrested and laid low by the hand of heaven; the forest of Lebanon (a figure by which the immense Assyrian host is elegantly pointed out) is hewn down by the axe of the divine vengeance; and the mind is equally pleased with the equity of the judgment, and the beauty and majesty of the description, 33, 34.

WOE unto them that ^adecree unrighteous decrees, and ^bthat write grievousness which they have prescribed;

2 To turn aside the needy from judgment, and to take away the right from the poor of my people, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless!

Verse 4. Without me] That is, without my aid: they shall be taken captive even by the captives, and shall be subdued even by the vanquished.

As the people had hitherto lived without God in worship and obedience; so they should now be without his help, and should perish in their transgressions.

Verse 5. O Assyrian] Here begins a new and distinct prophecy, continued to the end of the twelfth chapter; and it appears from ver. 9-11 of this chapter, that this prophecy was delivered after the taking of Samaria by Shalmaneser; which was in the sixth year of the reign of Hezekiah: and as the former part of it foretels the invasion of Sennacherib, and the destruction of his army, which makes the whole subject of this chapter, it must have been delivered before the fourteenth of the same reign.

word hu, the staff itself, in this place seems to embarrass the sentence. I omit it on the authority of the Alexandrine copy of the Septuagint: nine MSS. (two ancient), and one of my own, ancient, for umatteth hu, read mattehu, his staff.

Verse 15. No wood.—"Its master." I have here given the meaning, without attempting to keep to the expression of the original, lo ets, "the no-wood;" that which is not wood like itself, but of a quite different and superior nature. The Hebrews have a peculiar way of joining the negative particle lo to a noun, to signify in a strong manner a total negation of the thing expressed by the noun. So here lo ets means him who is far from being an inert piece of wood, but is an animated and active being; not an instrument, but an agent.

Verse 16. And under his glory.] That is, all that he could boast of as great and strong in his army, expressed after-7 *Howbeit he meaneth not so, neither doth his heart think so; but it is in his heart to destroy and cut off nations not a few.

8 *For he saith, Are not my princes altogether kings?

9 Is not Calno ^aas Carchemish? is not Hamath as Arpad? is not Samaria as ^cDamascus?

10 As my hand hath found the kingdoms of the idols, and whose graven images did excel them of Jerusalem and of Samaria;

11 Shall I not, as I have done unto Samaria and her idols, so do to Jerusalem and her idols?

12 Wherefore it shall come to pass, that when the Lord hath performed his whole work ^fupon Mount Zion and on Jerusalem, ^gI will ^hpunish the fruit ⁱof the stout heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of his high looks.

13 ^jFor he saith, By the strength of my hand I have done it, and by my wisdom; for I am prudent: and I have removed the bounds of the people, and have robbed their treasures, and I have put down the inhabitants ^klike a valiant man:

14 And ^lmy hand hath found as a nest the riches of the people: and as one gathereth eggs that are left, have I gathered all the earth; and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth, or peeped.

15 Shall ^mthe ax boast itself against him that heweth therewith? or shall the saw magnify itself against him that shaketh it? ⁿas if the rod should shake itself against them that lift it up, or as if the staff should lift up ^o*itself*, as if it were no wood.

16 Therefore shall the Lord, the Lord of hosts, send among his ^pfat ones leanness; and under his glory he shall kindle a burning like the burning of a fire.

17 And the light of Israel shall be for a fire, and his Holy One for a flame: ^qand it shall burn and devour his thorns and his briers in one day;

18 And shall consume the glory of his forest, and of ^rhis fruitful field, ^sboth soul and body: and they shall be as when a standard-bearer fainteth.

19 And the rest of the trees of his forest shall be ^tfew, that a child may write them.

20 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the remnant of Israel, and such as are escaped of the house of Jacob, ^ushall no more again stay upon him that smote them; but shall stay upon the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.

21 ^vThe remnant shall return, even the remnant of Jacob, unto the mighty God.

22 ^wFor though thy people Israel be as the sand of the sea, ^x*yet* a remnant ^yof them shall return: ^zthe consumption decreed shall overflow ^{aa}with righteousness.

23 ^{bb}For the Lord God of hosts shall make a consumption, even determined, in the midst of all the land.

24 Therefore thus saith the Lord God of hosts, O my people that dwellest in Zion, ^{cc}be not afraid of the Assyrian: he shall smite thee with a rod, ^{dd}and shall lift up his staff against thee, after the manner of ^{ee}Egypt.

25 ^{ff}For yet a very little while, ^{gg}and the indignation shall cease, and mine anger in their destruction.

26 And the Lord of hosts shall stir up ^{hh}a scourge for him according to the slaughter of ⁱⁱMidian at the rock of Oreb: and ^{jj}as his rod was upon the sea, so shall he lift it up ^{kk}after the manner of Egypt.

Verse 17. And it shall burn and devour his thorns] The briers and thorns are the common people; the glory of his forest are the nobles and those of highest rank and importance. See note on chap. ix. 17, and compare Ezek. xx. 47. The fire of God's wrath shall destroy them, both great and small; it shall consume them from the soul to the flesh; a proverbial expression; soul and body, as we say; ⁱ shall consume them entirely and altogether; and the few that escape shall be looked upon as having escaped from the most eminent danger; ^qas a firebrand plucked out of the fire," Amos iv. 11; ^rso as by fire, 1 Cor. iii. 15; as a man when a house is burning is forced to make his escape by running through the midst of the fire.

Verse 21. The remnant shall return—unto the mighty God.] El gibbor, the mighty or conquering God; the Messiah, the same person mentioned in ver. 6 of the preceding chapter.

Verse 22. For though thy people Israel] It is remarkable that neither the Septuagint, nor St. Paul, Rom. ix. 28, who, except in a few words of no great importance, follows them nearly in this place, nor any one of the ancient Versions, take any notice of the word shoteph, overflowing; which seems to give an idea not easily reconcilable with those with which it is here joined.

Some think that the words might be paraphrased thus: The determined destruction of the Jews shall overflow with righteousness (tsedakah), justification, the consequence of the gospel of Christ being preached and believed on in the world. After the destruction of Jerusalem this word or doctrine of the Lord had free course,—did run, and was glorified.

Verse 24. After the manner of Egypt.] "In the way of Egypt." I think there is a designed ambiguity in these words. Sennacherib, soon after his return from his Egypttian expedition, which, I imagine, took him up three years, invested Jerusalem. He is represented by the prophet as lifting up his rod in his march from Egypt, and threatening the people of God, as Pharaoh and the Egyptians had done when they pursued them to the Red Sea. But God in his turn will lift up his rod over the sea, as he did at that time in the way, or after the manner, of Egypt; and as Sennacherib has imitated the Egyptians in his threats, and come full of rage against them from the same quarter; so God will act over again the same part that he had taken formerly in Egypt, and overthrow their enemies in as signal a manner. It was all to be, both the attack and the deliverance, bederech, or kederech, as a MS. has it in each place, in the way, or after the manner, of Egypt.

Verse 26. And as his rod was upon the sea] The Jewish interpreters suppose here an ellipsis of ke, the particle of similitude, before mattehu, to be supplied from the line above; so that here are two similitudes, one comparing the destruction of the Assyrians to the slaughter of the Midianites at the rock of Oreb; the other to that of the Egyptians at the Red Sea.

Verse 28. He is come to Aith] A description of the march of Sennacherib's army approaching Jerusalem in order to invest it, and of the terror and confusion spreading and increasing through the several places as he advanced; expressed with great brevity, but finely diversified. The places here mentioned are all in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem; from ^{at} northward, to Nob westward of it; from which last place he might probably have a prospect of Mount Sion. Anathoth was within three Roman miles of Jerusalem, according to Eusebius, Jerome, and Josephus. Nob was probably still nearer. And it should seem from this passage of Isaiah that Sennacherib's army was destroyed near the latter of these places. In coming out of Egypt he might perhaps join the rest of his army at Ashdod, after the taking of that place, 27 And it shall come to pass in that day, that his burden shall be taken away from off thy shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck, and the yoke shall be destroyed because of the anointing.

28 He is come to Aiath, he is passed to Migron; at Michmash he hath laid up his carriages:

29 They are gone over the passage: they have taken up their lodging at Geba; Ramah is afraid; Gibeah of Saul is fled.

which happened about that time (see chap. xi.); and march from thence near the coast by Lachish and Libnah, which lay in his way from south to north, and both which he invested till he came to the north-west of Jerusalem, crossing over to the north of it, perhaps by Joppa and Lydda; or still more north through the plain of Esdraelon.

Verse 29. They are gone over the passage] "They have passed the strait." The strait here mentioned is that of Michmas, a very narrow passage between two sharp hills or rocks (see 1 Sam. xiv. 4, 5), where a great army might have been opposed with advantage by a very inferior force. The enemies having passed the strait without opposition, shows that all thoughts of making a stand in the open country were given up, and that their only resource was in the strength of the city.

31 Michmash is removed; the inhabitants of Gebim gather themselves to flee.

32 As yet shall he remain at Nob that day: he shall shake his hand against the mount of the daughter of Zion, the hill of Jerusalem.

33 Behold, the Lord, the Lord of hosts, shall lop the bough with terror: and the high ones of stature shall be hewn down, and the haughty shall be humbled.

34 And he shall cut down the thickets of the forest with iron, and Lebanon shall fall by a mighty one.

Their lodging] The sense seems necessarily to require that we read lamo, to them, instead of lanu, to us. These two words are in other places mistaken one for the other.

Verse 30. Cause it to be heard unto Laish, O poor Anathoth]. "Hearken unto her, O Laish; answer her, O Anathoth!" The prophet plainly alludes to the name of the place, and with peculiar propriety, if it had its name from its remarkable echo. Anathoth—Answers, replies; for the same reason that Bethany, beith anath, had its name, the house of echo; the remains of which are still shown in the valley, i. e., among the mountains.

Verse 34. Lebanon shall fall by a mighty one.] Beaddir, the angel of the Lord, who smote them. Others translate, "The high cedars of Lebanon shall fall:" but the king of Assyria is the person who shall be overthrown.

CHAPTER XI.

The Messiah represented as a slender twig, shooting up from the root of an old withered stem, which tender plant, so extremely weak in its first appearance, should nevertheless become fruitful and mighty, 1-4. Great equity of the Messiah's government, 5. Beautiful assemblages of images by which the great peace and happiness of his kingdom are set forth, 6-8. The extent of his dominion shall be ultimately that of the whole habitable globe, 9. The prophet, borrowing his imagery from the exodus from Egypt, predicts, with great majesty of language, the future restoration of the outcasts of Israel and the dispersed of Judah (viz., the whole of the twelve tribes of Israel) from their several dispersions, and also that blessed period when both Jews and Gentiles shall assemble under the banner of Jesus, and zealously unite in extending the limits of his kingdom, 10-16.

AND there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots:

2 And the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord;

3 And shall make him of quick understanding

Verse 4. With the rod of his mouth] For beshebet, by the rod, Houbigant reads beshebeth, by the blast of his mouth, from nashab, to blow. The conjecture is ingenious and probable; and seems to be confirmed by the Septuagint and Chaldee, who rendered it by the word of his mouth, which answers much better to the correction than to the present reading. Add to this, that the blast of his mouth, is perfectly parallel to the breath of his lips in the next line.

Verse 5. The girdle] All the ancient Versions, except that of Symmachus, have two different words for girdle in the two hemistichs. It is not probable that Isaiah would in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears:

4 But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.

have repeated aser, when a synonymous word so obvious as chagor occurred. The tautology seems to have arisen from the mistake of some transcriber. The meaning of this verse is, that a zeal for justice and truth shall make him active and strong in executing the great work which he shall undertake.

Verse 6. The wolf also shall, &c.] The idea of the renewal of the golden age, as it is called, is much the same in the Oriental writers with that of the Greeks and Romans:—the wild beasts grow tame; serpents and poisonous herbs become harmless; all is peace and harmony, plenty and happiness.

5 And * righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

6 * The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them.

7 And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.

8 And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the * cockatrice' den.

9 * They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for * the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea.

10 * And in that day * there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the * Gentiles seek: and * his rest shall be * glorious.

11 And it shall come to pass * in that day, that the LORD shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, * from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from

But the prophet on the same subject has the advantage, upon comparison, with the most elegant of the ancient poets. They fall far short of that beauty and elegance, and variety of imagery, with which Isaiah has set forth the very same ideas. The wolf and the leopard not only forbear to destroy the lamb and the kid, but even take their abode and lie down together with them. The calf, and the young lion, and the fatling, not only come together, but are led quietly in the same band, and that by a little child. The heifer and the she-bear not only feed together, but even lodge their young ones, for whom they used to be most jealously fearful, in the same place. All the serpent kind is so perfectly harmless, that the sucking infant and the newly weaned child puts his hand on the basilisk's den, and plays upon the hole of the asp. The lion not only abstains from preying on the weaker animals, but becomes tame and domestic, and feeds on straw like the ox. These are all beautiful circumstances, not one of which has been touched upon by the ancient poets.

Verse 8. The cockatrice' den.] This is supposed, both by the Targum and by Kimchi, to mean the pupil of this serpent's eye. "When," says Kimchi, "he is in the mouth of his den, in an obscure place, then his eyes sparkle exceedingly: the child, seeing this, and supposing it to be a piece of crystal, or precious stone, puts forth his hand to take it. What would be very dangerous at another time, shall be safe 12 And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together * the dispersed of Judah from the four * corners of the earth.

13 * The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off: Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim.

14 But they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the west; they shall spoil * them of the east together: * they * shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab; * and the children of Ammon * shall obey them.

15 And the LORD * shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian Sea; and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it in the seven streams, * and make men go over * dry-shod.

16 * And there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria; * like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

in the days of Messiah; for the serpent will not hurt the child."

Verse 10. A root of Jesse, which shall stand, &c.] The one hundred and tenth psalm is a good comment on this verse.

Verse 11. And it shall come to pass on that day] This part of the chapter contains a prophecy which certainly remains yet to be accomplished.

The islands of the sea.] The Roman and Turkish empires, says Kimchi.

Verse 15. The Lord—shall smite it in the seven streams] Here is a plain allusion to the passage of the Red Sea. And the Lord's shaking his hand over the river with his vehement wind, refers to a particular circumstance of the same miracle: for "he caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land," Exod. xiv. 21. The tongue; a very apposite and descriptive expression for a bay such as that of the Red Sea. It is used in the same sense, Josh. xv. 2, 5, xviii. 19. The Latins gave the same name to a narrow strip of land running into the sea. He shall smite the river in its seven streams. This has been supposed to refer to the Nile, because it falls into the Mediterranean Sea by seven mouths: but R. Kimchi understands it of the Euphrates, which is the opinion of some good judges. [Delitzsch renders it: "The Lord shall smite it (the Euphrates) into seven brooks."]

CHAPTER XII.

Prophetic hymn of praise for the great mercies vouchsafed to the children of Israel in their deliverance from the great Babylonish captivity, and for redemption by the Messiah, 1-8.

AND *in that day thou shalt say, O LORD, I will praise thee: though thou wast angry with me, thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortedst me.

2 Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid: for the LORD JEHOVAH is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation.

3 Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation,

* Ch. ii. 11.—^b Ps. lxxxiii. 18.—^c Exod. xv. 2.—^d John iv. 10. 14. vii. 37, 38.—^e 1 Chron. xvi. 8. Ps. cv. 1.—^f Or, proclaim his name.—^g Ps. cxlv. 4, 5, 6.—^h Ps. xxxiv. 3.—ⁱ Exod. xv. 1, 21. Ps. lxviii.

Verse 1. Though thou wast angry] The Hebrew phrase, to which the Septuagint and Vulgate have too closely adhered, is exactly the same with that of St. Paul, Rom. vi. 17: "But thanks be to God, that ye were the slaves of sin; but have obeyed from the heart;" that is, "that whereas, or though, ye were the slaves of sin, yet ye have now obeyed from the heart the doctrine on the model of which ye were formed."

Verse 2. The Lord JEHOVAH] The word Yah read here is probably a mistake; and arose originally from the custom of the Jewish scribes, who, when they found a line too short for the word, wrote as many letters as filled it, and then began the next line with the whole word. In writing the word Yehovah, the line might terminate with Yah, the two first letters; and then at the beginning of the next line the whole word Yehovah would be written. This might give rise to Yah Yehovah.

My song] The pronoun is here necessary; and it is added

4 And in that day shall ye say, * Praise the LORD, * call upon his name, * declare his doings among the people, make mention that his name is exalted.

by the Septuagint, Vulgate, and Syriac, who read zimrathi.

Verse 4. Call upon his name] Make him your Mediator, or call the people in his name. Preach him who is the Root of Jesse, and who stands as an ensign for the nations. Call on the people to believe in him; as in him alone salvation is to be found.

Verse 6. Thou inhabitant of Zion] Not only the Jewish people, to whom his word of salvation was to be sent first; but also all members of the church of Christ: as in them, and in his church, the Holy One of Israel dwells. St Paul speaking of the mystery which had been proclaimed among the Gentiles, sums it up in these words: "which is CHRIST IN YOU, the hope of glory; whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus;" Col. i. 27, 28. Well, therefore, may the inhabitant of Zion cry out and shout, and proclaim the greatness of her Redeemer.

CHAPTER XIII.

God mustereth the armies of his wrath against the inhabitants of Babylon, 1-6 The dreadful consequences of this visitation, and the terror and dismay of those who are the objects of it, 7-16. Verse 1. The burden of Babylon] The prophecy that foretells its destruction by the Medes and Persians: see the preceding observations.

Verse 2. Exalt the voice] The word lahem, "to them," which is of no use, and rather weakens the sentence, is omitted by an ancient MS., and the Vulgate.

Verse 3. I have commanded my sanctified ones] Mekud. dashi, the persons consecrated to this very purpose! Nothing can be plainer than that the verb kadash, "to make holy," signifies also to consecrate or appoint to a particular purpose. Bishop Lowth translates, "my enrolled warriors." This is the sense.

Verse 4. Of the battle] Cyrus's army was made up of many different nations. Jeremiah calls it an "assembly of great nations from the north country," chap. i. 9.

Verse 5. From the end of heaven] Kimchi says, Media,

5 They come from a far country, from the end of heaven, even the LORD, and the weapons of his indignation, to destroy the whole land.

6 Howl ye; for the day of the LORD is at hand; it shall come as a destruction from the Almighty.

7 Therefore shall all hands be faint, and every man's heart shall melt;

8 And they shall be afraid; pangs and sorrows shall take hold of them; they shall be in pain as a woman that travaileth: they shall be amazed one at another; their faces shall be as flames.

9 Behold, the day of the LORD cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land

"the end of heaven," in Scripture phrase, means, the EAST.

Verse 8. Pangs and sorrows shall take hold of them] The Septuagint, Syriac, and Chaldee read yochesun, instead of yochesun, which does not express the pronoun them, necessary to the sense.

Verse 10. For the stars of heaven] The Hebrew poets, to express happiness, prosperity, the instauration and advancement of states, kingdoms, and potentates, make use of images taken from the most striking parts of nature, from the heavenly bodies, from the sun, moon, and stars: which they describe as shining with increased splendour, and never setting. The moon becomes like the meridian sun, and the sun's light is augmented sevenfold (see Isa. xxx. 26); new heavens and a new earth are created, and a brighter age commences. On the contrary, the overflow and desolate: and he shall destroy ^a the sinners thereof out of it.

10 For the stars of heaven and the constellations thereof shall not give their light: the sun shall be ^b darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine.

11 And I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; ^c and I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible.

12 I will make a man more precious than fine gold; even a man than the golden wedge of Ophir.

13 ^d Therefore I will shake the heavens, and the earth shall remove out of her place, in the wrath of the LORD of hosts, and in ^e the day of his fierce anger.

14 And it shall be as the chased roe, and as a sheep that no man taketh up: ^f they shall every man turn to his own people, and flee every one into his own land.

15 Every one that is found shall be thrust through; and every one that is joined unto them shall fall by the sword.

16 Their children also shall be ^g dashed to pieces destruction of kingdoms is represented by opposite images. The stars are obscured, the moon withdraws her light, and the sun shines no more! The earth quakes, and the heavens tremble; and all things seem tending to their original chaos. See Joel ii. 10, iii. 15, 16; Amos viii. 9; Matt. xxiv. 29.

And the moon shall not cause her light to shine.] This in its further reference may belong to the Jewish polity, both in church and state, which should be totally eclipsed, and perhaps shine no more in its distinct state for ever.

Verse 11. I will punish the world] That is the Babylonish empire. So the universus orbis Romanus, for the Roman empire.

Verse 12. I will make a man more precious than fine gold—wedge of Ophir.] The Medes and Persians will not be satisfied with the spoils of the Babylonians. They seek either to destroy or enslave them; and they will accept no ransom for any man—either for enosh, the poor man, or for adam, the more honourable person. All must fall by the sword, or go into captivity together; for the Medes (ver. 17) regard not silver, and delight not in gold.

Verse 14. "And the remnant"] Here is plainly ^h defect in this sentence as it stands in the Hebrew text; the subject of the proposition is lost. What is it that shall be like a roe chased? The Septuagint supply it, the remnant.

They shall—turn] That is, the forces of the king of Babylon, destitute of their leader, and all his auxiliaries, collected from Asia Minor, and other distant countries, shall disperse, and flee to their respective homes.

Verse 15. Every one that is found] That is, none shall escape from the slaughter; neither they who flee singly, dispersed and in confusion; nor they who endeavour to make their retreat in a more regular manner, by forming compact bodies: they shall be equally cut off by the sword of the enemy.

Verse 17. Which shall not regard silver] That is, who shall not be induced, by large offers of gold and silver for ransom, to spare the lives of those whom they have subdued in battle; their rage and cruelty will get the better of all such motives.

Verse 18. Their bows also shall dash] Both Herodotus, and Xenophon, mention, that the Persians used large bows, and the latter says particularly that their bows were three cubits long, Anab. iv. They were celebrated for their before their eyes; their houses shall be spoiled, and their wives ravished.

17 ^a Behold, I will stir up the Medes against them, which shall not regard silver; and as for gold, they shall not delight in it.

18 Their bows also shall dash the young men to pieces; and they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; their eye shall not spare children.

19 ^b And Babylon, the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, shall be ^c as when God overthrew ^d Sodom and Gomorrah.

20 ^e It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation: neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there; neither shall the shepherds make their fold there.

21 ^f But ^g wild beasts of the desert shall lie there; and their houses shall be full of ^h doleful creatures; ⁱ and ^j owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there.

22 And ^k the wild beasts of the islands shall cry in their ^l desolate houses, and dragons in their pleasant palaces: ^m and her time is near to come, and her days shall not be prolonged.

archers, see chap. xxii. 6. Jer. xlix. 35. Probably their neighbours and allies, the Medes, dealt much in the same sort of arms. In Ps. xviii. 34, and Job xx. 24, mention is made of a bow of steel; if the Persian bows were of metal, we may easily conceive that with a metalline bow of three cubits' length, and proportionably strong, the soldiers might dash and slay the young men, the weaker and unresisting of the inhabitants (for they are joined with the fruit of the womb and the children) in the general carnage on taking the city.

Verse 19. And Babylon] The great city of Babylon was at this time rising to its height of glory, while the prophet Isaiah was repeatedly denouncing its utter destruction. From the first of Hezekiah to the first of Nebuchadnezzar, under whom it was brought to the highest degree of strength and splendour, are about one hundred and twenty years.

It was, according to the lowest account given of it by ancient historians, a regular square, forty-five miles in compass, inclosed by a wall two hundred feet high and fifty broad; in which there were a hundred gates of brass. Its principal ornaments were the temple of Belus, in the middle of which was a tower of eight stories of building, upon a base of a quarter of a mile square, a most magnificent palace and the famous hanging gardens, which were an artificial mountain, raised upon arches, and planted with trees of the largest as well as the most beautiful sorts.

Cyrus took the city by diverting the waters of the Euphrates, which ran through the midst of it, and entering the place at night by the dry channel. The river being never restored afterward to its proper course, overflowed the whole country, and made it little better than a great morass; this and the great slaughter of the inhabitants, with other bad consequences of the taking of the city, was the first step to the ruin of the place. The Persian monarchs ever regarded it with a jealous eye; they kept it under, and took care to prevent its recovering its former greatness. Jérôme says that in his time it was quite in ruins, and that the walls served only for the inclosure of a park or forest for the king's hunting. Modern travellers, who have endeavoured to find the remains of it, have given but a very unsatisfactory account of their success.

Verse 21. Satyrs] A kind of beast like to man, which is called marmoset, a monkey. [More probably, wild goats.]

CHAPTER XIV.

Deliverance of Israel from captivity, which shall follow the downfall of the great Babylonish empire, 1, 2. Triumphant ode or song of the children of Jacob, for the signal manifestation of divine vengeance against their oppressors, 3-23. Prophecy against the Assyrians, 24, 25. Certainty of the prophecy, and immutability of the divine counsels, 26, 27. Palestine severely threatened, 28-31. God shall establish Zion in these troublous times, 32.

FOR the LORD ^a will have mercy on Jacob, and ^b will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land: ^c and the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob.

2 And the people shall take them, ^d and bring them to their place: and the house of Israel shall possess them in the land of the LORD for servants and handmaids: and they shall take them captives, ^e whose captives they were; ^f and they shall rule over their oppressors.

3 And it shall come to pass in the day that the LORD shall give thee rest from thy sorrow, and from thy fear, and from the hard bondage wherein thou wast made to serve,

4 That thou ^g shalt take up this ^h proverb against the king of Babylon, and say, How hath the oppressor ceased! the ⁱ golden ^j city ceased!

5 The LORD hath broken ^k the staff of the wicked, and the sceptre of the rulers.

6 He who smote the people in wrath with ^l a continual stroke, he that ruled the nations in anger, is persecuted, and none hindereth.

7 The whole earth is at rest, and is quiet: they oreak forth into singing.

Verse 1. And will yet choose Israel] That is, will still regard Israel as his chosen people; however he may seem to desert them, by giving them up to their enemies, and scattering them among the nations. Judah is sometimes called Israel; see Ezek. xiii. 16; Mal. i. 1, ii. 11: but the name of Jacob and of Israel, used apparently with design in this place, each of which names includes the twelve tribes, and the other circumstances mentioned in this and the text verse, which did not in any complete sense accompany the return from the captivity of Babylon, seem to intimate that this whole prophecy extends its views beyond that event.

Verse 2. For servants and handmaids] Male and female slaves.

Verse 4. This proverb] Mashal. I take this to be the general name for poetic style among the Hebrews, including every sort of it, as ranging under one or other, or all of the characters, of sententious, figurative, and sublime; which are all contained in the original notion, or in the use and application of the word mashal. Parables or proverbs, such as those of Solomon, are always expressed in short, pointed sentences; frequently figurative, being formed on some comparison; generally forcible and authoritative, both in the matter and the form. And such in general is the style of the Hebrew poetry.

The Septuagint plainly consider the speech here introduced as a piece of poetry, and of that species of poetry which we call the elegiac: either from the subject, it being a poem on the fall and death of the king of Babylon, or from the form of the composition, which is of the longer sort of Hebrew verse, in which the Lamentations of Jeremiah are written.

The golden city ceased] Madhobah, which is here translated golden city, is a Chaldean word. Probably it means that golden coin or ingot which was given to the Babylonians by way of tribute. So the word is understood by the Vulgate, where it is rendered tributum; and by Montanus, who 8 ^m Yea, the fir trees rejoice at thee, and the cedars of Lebanon, saying, Since thou art laid down, no feller is come up against us.

9 ⁿ Hell ^o from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming: it stirreth up the dead for thee, even all the ^p chief ^q ones of the earth; it hath raised up from their thrones all the kings of the nations.

10 All they shall speak and say unto thee, Art thou also become weak as we? art thou become like unto us?

11 Thy pomp is brought down to the grave, and the noise of thy viols: the worm is spread under thee, and the worms cover thee.

12 ^r How art thou fallen from heaven, ^s O Lucifer, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations!

13 For thou hast said in thine heart, ^t I will ascend into heaven, ^u I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, ^v in the sides of the north.

14 I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; ^w I will be like the most High:

15 Yet thou ^x shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit.

translates aurea pensio, the golden pension. [Later critics understand the term as "the place of torture," which coincides better with the preceding clause.]

Verse 9. Hell from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee] That is, Nebuchadnezzar. "It (hell) hath raised up from their thrones all the kings of the earth; the ghosts (rephaim) of all the mighty ones, or goats (attudey), of the earth—all the oppressors of mankind." What a most terrible idea is here! Tyrannical kings who have oppressed and spoiled mankind, are here represented as enthroned in hell; and as taking a Satanic pleasure in seeing others of the same description enter those abodes of misery!

Verse 12. O Lucifer, son of the morning] The Versions in general agree in this translation, and render heilel as signifying Lucifer, the morning star, whether Jupiter or Venus; as these are both bringers of the morning light, or morning stars, annually in their turn. And although the context speaks explicitly concerning Nebuchadnezzar, yet this has been, I know not why, applied to the chief of the fallen angels, who is most incongruously denominated Lucifer, (the bringer of light!), an epithet as common to him as Satan and Devil. That the Holy Spirit by his prophets should call this arch-enemy of God and man the light-bringer, would be strange indeed. But the truth is the text speaks nothing at all concerning Satan nor his fall, nor the occasion of that fall, which many divines have with great confidence deduced from this text. Besides, I doubt much whether our translation be correct. Heilel, which we translate Lucifer, comes from yalal, yell, howl, or shriek, and should be translated, "Howl, son of the morning;" and so the Syriac has understood it; and for this meaning Michaelis contends. [But it is more likely that heilel, is from halal, to shine.]

Verse 14. I will ascend into heaven] I will get the empire of the whole world. I will exalt my throne above the stars of God—above the Israelites who are here termed the stars

16 They that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee, and consider thee, saying, Is this the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake kingdoms?

17 That made the world as a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof; that opened not the house of his prisoners.

18 All the kings of the nations, even all of them, lie in glory, every one in his own house.

19 But thou art cast out of thy grave like an abominable branch, and as the raiment of those that are slain, thrust through with a sword, that go down to the stones of the pit; as a carcase trodden under feet.

20 Thou shalt not be joined with them in burial, because thou hast destroyed thy land and slain thy people: the seed of evildoers shall never be renowned.

21 Prepare slaughter for his children for the iniquity of their fathers; that they do not rise, nor possess the land, nor fill the face of the world with cities.

22 For I will rise up against them, saith the LORD of hosts, and cut off from Babylon the name, and remnant, son, and nephew, saith the LORD.

23 I will also make it a possession for the bittern, and pools of water: and I will sweep it with the besom of destruction, saith the LORD of hosts.

of God. This chapter speaks not of the ambition and fall of Satan, but of the pride, arrogance, and fall of Nebuchadnezzar.

The mount of the congregation] It appears plainly from Exod. xxv. 22, and xxix. 42, 43, where God appoints the place of meeting with Moses, and promises to meet with him before the ark to commune with him, and to speak unto him; and to meet the children of Israel at the door of the tabernacle; that the tabernacle, and afterwards the door of the tabernacle, and Mount Zion (or Moriah, which is reckoned a part of Mount Zion), whereon it stood, was called the tabernacle, and the mount of convention or of appointment; not from the people's assembling there to perform the services of their religion (which is what our translation expresses by calling it the tabernacle of the congregation), but because God appointed that for the place where he himself would meet with Moses, and commune with him, and would meet with the people. Therefore har moed, the "mountain of the assembly," or ohel moed, the "tabernacle of the assembly," means the place appointed by God, where he would present himself; agreeably to which I render it in this place, the mount of the Divine Presence.

Verse 19. Like an abominable branch] That is, as an object of abomination and detestation; such as the tree is on which a malefactor has been hanged. "It is written," saith St. Paul, Gal. iii. 13, "Cursed is every man that hangeth on a tree," from Deut. xxi. 23. The Jews therefore held also as accursed and polluted the tree itself on which a malefactor had been executed, or on which he had been hanged after having been put to death by stoning.

Verse 20. Because thou hast destroyed thy land, &c.] Xenophon gives an instance of this king's wanton cruelty in killing the son of Gobrias on no other provocation than that in hunting, he struck a boar and a lion which the king had missed.

Verse 23. I will sweep it with the besom of destruction] Bematate. This, says Kimchi, is a Chaldee word: and it is worthy of remark that the prophet, writing to the Chaldeans, uses several words peculiar to their own language to point out the nature of the divine judgments, and the causes of them.

Verse 25. I will break the Assyrian—upon my mountains] The Assyrians and Babylonians are the same people, as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand:

25 That I will break the Assyrian in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot: then shall his yoke depart from off them, and his burden depart from off their shoulders.

26 This is the purpose that is purposed upon the whole earth: and this is the hand that is stretched out upon all the nations.

27 For the LORD of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul it? and his hand is stretched out, and who shall turn it back?

28 In the year that king Ahaz died was this burden.

29 Rejoice not thou, whole Palestina, because the rod of him that smote thee is broken: for out of the serpent's root shall come forth a cockatrice, and his fruit shall be a fiery flying serpent.

30 And the firstborn of the poor shall feed, and the needy shall lie down in safety: and I will kill thy root with famine, and he shall slay thy remnant.

31 Howl, O gate; cry, O city; thou, whole Palestina, art dissolved: for there shall come from the north a smoke, and none shall be alone in his appointed times.

32 What shall one then answer the messengers of the nation? that the LORD hath founded Zion, and the poor of his people shall trust in it.

31, 35.—2 Kings xvi. 20.—2 Chron. xxvi. 6.—¹ Or, adder.—2 Kings xviii. 8.—² Or, he shall not be alone.—³ Or, assemblies.—⁴ Ps. lxxxvii. 1, 5. cii. 16.—⁵ Zeph. iii. 12. Zech. xi. 1.—⁶ Or, betake themselves unto it.

Herod. i. 199, 200. The circumstance of this judgment being to be executed on God's mountains is of importance; it may mean the destruction of Sennacherib's army near Jerusalem, and have a still further view: compare Ezek. xxxix. 4; and see Lowth on this place of Isaiah.

Verse 28. In the year that king Ahaz died was this burden.] Uzziah had subdued the Philistines, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6, 7; but, taking advantage of the weak reign of Ahaz, they invaded Judea, and took, and held in possession, some cities in the southern part of the kingdom. On the death of Ahaz, Isaiah delivers this prophecy, threatening them with the destruction that Hezekiah, his son, and great-grandson of Uzziah, should bring upon them: which he effected; for "he smote the Philistines, even unto Gaza, and the borders thereof," 2 Kings xviii. 8. Uzziah, therefore, must be meant by the rod that smote them, and by the serpent from whom should spring the flying fiery serpent, ver. 29, that is, Hezekiah, a much more terrible enemy than even Uzziah had been.

I will kill] The Vulgate remedies the confusion of persons in the present text, by reading both the verbs in the first person.

Verse 31. There shall come from the north a smoke] That is, a cloud of dust raised by the march of Hezekiah's army against Philistia; which lay to the south-west from Jerusalem. A great dust raised has, at a distance, the appearance of smoke.

Verse 32. The messengers of the nation] The ambassadors of the neighbouring nations, that send to congratulate Hezekiah on his success; which in his answer he will ascribe to the protection of God. See 2 Chron. xxxii. 23.

The LORD hath founded Zion] Kimchi refers this to the state of Zion under Hezekiah, when the rest of the cities of Judea had been taken, and this only was left for a hope to the poor of God's people: and God so defended it that Rabshakeh could not prevail against it.

The true church of God is a place of safety; for as all its members are devoted to God, and walk in his testimonies, so they are continually defended and supported by him. In the congregations of his people, God dispenses his light and salvation; hence his poor or humble ones expect in his ordinances the blessings they need.

CHAPTER XV.

Prediction of very heavy calamities about to fall upon the Moabites, 1-9.

THE ^aburden of Moab. Because in the night ^bAr of Moab is laid waste and ^cbrought to silence; because in the night Kir of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence:

2 ^dHe is gone to Bajith, and to Dibon, the high places, to weep: Moab shall howl over Nebo, and over Medeba: ^eon all their heads shall be baldness, and every beard cut off.

3 In their streets they shall gird themselves with sackcloth: ^fon the tops of their houses, and in their streets, every one shall howl, ^gweeping abundantly.

4 And Heshbon shall cry, ^hand Elealeh: their voice shall be heard even unto Jahaz: therefore the armed soldiers of Moab shall cry out; his life shall be grievous unto him.

5 ⁱMy heart shall cry out for Moab: ^jhis fugitives shall flee unto Zoar, an ^kheifer of three years old: for ^lby the mounting up of Luhith with weeping shall they go it up; for in the way of Horonaim they shall raise up a cry of ^mdestruction.

6 For the waters ⁿof Nimrim shall be ^odesolate: for the hay is withered away, the grass faileth, there is no green thing.

7 Therefore the abundance they have gotten, and that which they have laid up, shall they carry away to the ^pbrook of the willows.

8 For the cry is gone round about the borders of Moab; the howling thereof unto Eglaim, and the howling thereof unto Beerelim.

9 For the waters of Dimon shall be full of blood: for I will bring ^qmore upon Dimon, ^rlions upon him that escapeth of Moab, and upon the remnant of the land.

Verse 1. Because in the night] That both these cities should be taken in the night is a circumstance somewhat unusual; but not so material as to deserve to be so strongly insisted upon. Vitringa, by his remark on this word, shows that he was dissatisfied with it in its plain and obvious meaning, and is forced to have recourse to a very hard metaphorical interpretation of it. Calmet conjectures, and I think it probable, that the true reading is keleil, as the night. There are many mistakes in the Hebrew text arising from the very great similitude of the letters beth, and caph, which in many MSS., and some printed editions, are hardly distinguishable.

Verse 2. He is gone to Bajith, and to Dibon] Atah hab-bayith, should be rendered, he is gone to the house, i. e., to their chief temple, where they practised idolatry. Dibon was the name of a tower, where also was an idolatrous temple; thither they went to weep and pray before their idols, that they might interpose and save them from their calamities.

On all their heads shall be baldness, &c.] Herodotus, ii. 36, speaks of it as a general practice among all men, except the Egyptians, to cut off their hair as a token of mourning. "Cut off thy hair, and cast it away," says Jeremiah, vii. 29, "and take up a lamentation." On every head. For roshair, read rosh. So the parallel place, Jer. xlviii. 37, and so three MSS., one ancient.

Cut off.] The printed editions, as well as the MSS., are divided on the reading of this word. Some have geduah, shorn, others geruah, diminished. The similitude of the letters daleth and resh has likewise occasioned many mistakes. In the present case, the sense is pretty much the same with either reading. The text of Jeremiah xlviii. 37 has the latter, diminished.

Verse 5. My heart shall cry out for Moab] For libbi, my heart, the Septuagint reads libbo, his heart, or leb; the Chaldee, libbo.

An heifer of three years old] Hebrew, a heifer three years old, in full strength. Bochart observes that in this kind of animals alone the voice of the female is deeper than that of the male; therefore the lowing of the heifer, rather than of the bullock, is chosen by the prophet, as the more proper image to express the mourning of Moab. But I must add that the expression here is very short and obscure; and the opinions of interpreters are various in regard to the meaning.

Verse 7. "Shall perish"] Abadu, or abadeh. This word seems to have been lost out of the text; it is supplied by the parallel place, Jer. xlviii. 36.

To the brook of the willows.] "To the valley of willows." That is, to Babylon.

Verse 9. The waters of Dimon] Some have Dibon, others have Ribon and Rimon. St. Jerome observes that the same town was called both Dibon and Dimon. The reading is therefore indifferent.

Upon him that escapeth of Moab, &c.] The reading of this verse is very doubtful; and the sense, in every way in which it can be read, very obscure.

CHAPTER XVI.

The distress of Moab pathetically described by the son of the prince, or ruler of the land, being forced to flee for his life through the desert, that he may escape to Judea; and the young women, like young birds scared from their nest, wade helpless through the fords of Arnon, the boundary of their country, to seek protection in some foreign land, 1, 2. The prophet addresses Sion, exhorting her to show mercy to her enemies in their distress, that her throne may be established in righteousness, 3-5. Exceeding great pride of Moab, 6. The terrible calamities about to fall upon Moab further described by the languishing of the vine, the ceasing of the vintage, the sound of the prophet's bowels quivering like a harp, &c., 7-13. Awful nearness of the full accomplishment of the prophecy, 14.

SEND ¹ye the lamb to the ruler of the land from ²Sela ³to the wilderness, unto the mount of the daughter of Zion.

² For it shall be, that, as a wandering bird ³cast out of the nest, so the daughters of Moab shall be at the fords of ⁴Arnon.

³ Take counsel, execute judgment; make thy shadow as the night in the midst of the noonday; hide the outcasts; bewray not him that wandereth.

⁴ Let mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab; be thou a covert to them from the face of the spoiler: for the ⁵extortioner is at an end, the spoiler ceaseth, ⁶the oppressors are consumed out of the land.

⁵ And in mercy ⁷shall the throne be ⁸established; and he shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle of David, ⁹judging, and seeking judgment, and hasting righteousness.

⁶ We have heard of the ¹⁰pride of Moab; he is very proud; even of his haughtiness, and his pride, and his wrath; ¹¹but his lies shall not be so.

⁸ For ¹⁶the fields of Heshbon languish, and ¹⁷the vine of Sibmah: the lords of the heathen have broken

¹⁸*2 Kings iii. 4.—¹⁹b2 Kings xiv. 7.—²⁰c Or, Petra.—²¹d Heb. a rock.—²²e Or, a nest forsaken.—²³f Num. xxi. 13.—²⁴g Heb. Bring.—²⁵h H-b. wringer.—²⁶i H-b. the treaders down.—²⁷j Dan. vii. 14, 27. Verse 1. Send ye the lamb, &c.] The two first verses describe the distress of Moab on the Assyrian invasion; in which even the son of the prince of the country is represented as forced to flee for his life through the desert, that he may escape to Judea; and the young women are driven forth like young birds cast out of the nest, and endeavouring to wade through the fords of the river Arnon. Perhaps there is not so much difficulty in this verse as appears at first view. "Send the lamb to the ruler of the land," may receive light from 2 Kings iii. 4, 5; "And Mesha, king of Moab, was a sheepmaster, and rendered unto the king of Israel one hundred thousand lambs with their wool, and one hundred thousand rams: but when Ahab was dead, the king of Moab rebelled against Israel." Now the prophet exhorts them to begin paying the tribute as formerly, that their punishment might be averted or mitigated.

Verse 3. Take counsel.] "Impart counsel." The Vulgate renders the verbs in the beginning of this verse in the singular number. The verbs throughout the verse are also in the feminine gender; agreeing with Zion, which I suppose to be understood.

Verse 4. Let mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab.] "Let the outcasts of Moab sojourn with thee, O Zion." Setting the points aside, this is by much the most obvious construction of the Hebrew, as well as most agreeable to the context, and the design of the prophet.

The oppressors.] Perhaps the Israelites, who in the time of Ahab invaded Judea, defeated his army, slaying one hundred and twenty thousand men, and brought the kingdom to the brink of destruction. Judah, being now in a more prosperous condition, is represented as able to receive and to protect the fugitive Moabites. And with those former times of distress the security and flourishing state of the kingdom under the government of Hezekiah is contrasted.

Verse 5. In mercy shall the throne be established.] May not this refer to the throne of Hezekiah? Here we have the character of such a king as cannot fail to be a blessing to the people. 1. "He sitteth on the throne in truth—He does not merely profess to be the father and protector of his people; but he is actually such. 2. He is judging. He is not a man of war or blood, who wastes his subjects' lives and treasures in contentions with neighbouring nations, in order to satisfy his ambition by the extension of his territory. On the contrary, his whole life is occupied in the distribution of justice. 3. He seeketh judgment. He seeks out the poor distressed ones who cannot make their way to him, and avenges them on their oppressors. 4. He hastens righteousness. He does not suffer any of the courts of justice to de-down the principal plants thereof, they are come even unto Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness: her branches are stretched out, they are gone over the sea.

⁹ Therefore ¹⁰I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer the vine of Sibmah: I will water thee with my tears, ¹¹O Heshbon, and Elealeh: for ¹²the shouting for thy summer fruits and for thy harvest is fallen.

¹¹ Wherefore ¹⁴my bowels shall sound like a harp for Moab, and mine inward parts for Kir-hareseth.

¹² And it shall come to pass, when it is seen that Moab is weary on ¹⁵the high place, that he shall come to his sanctuary to pray; but he shall not prevail.

¹³ This ¹⁶is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning Moab since that time.

¹⁴ But now the LORD hath spoken, saying, within three years, ¹⁷as the years of an hireling, and the glory of Moab shall be contemned, with all that great multitude; and the remnant shall be very small and ¹⁸feeble.

lay the determination of the causes brought before them; he so orders that the point in litigation be fairly, fully, and speedily heard; and then judgment pronounced. Delays in the execution of justice answer little end but the enriching of unprincipled lawyers.

Verse 6. We have heard of the pride of Moab.] Jeremiah in his forty-eighth chapter enlarges much on the pride of Moab, and their insolent behaviour towards the Jews.

Verse 7. For the foundations of Kir-hareseth.] A palpable mistake in this place is happily corrected by the parallel text of Jer. xlviii. 31, where, instead of asheshey, foundations or flagons, we read anshey, men. In the same place of Jeremiah, and in ver. 36, and here in ver. 11, the name of the city is Kirhares, not Kir-hareseth.

Verse 8. Languish.] "Are put to shame." Here the text of Jeremiah leaves us much at a loss, in a place that seems to be greatly corrupted.

Her branches are stretched out.] Compare Jer. xlviii. 32.

The meaning of this verse is, that the wines of Sibmah and Heshbon were greatly celebrated, and in high repute with all the great men and princes of that and the neighbouring countries; who indulged themselves even to intemperance in the use of them. So that their vines were so much in request as not only to be propagated all over the country of Moab to the sea of Sodom, but to have scions of them sent even beyond the sea into foreign countries.

Verse 9. With the weeping.] The Septuagint read kibeki, as with weeping, which I follow.

For thy summer fruits and for thy harvest is fallen.] In these few words there are two great mistakes, which the text of Jer. xviii. 32 rectifies. For ketsirech, it has betsirech; and for heidad, shoded; both which corrections the Chaldees in this place confirm. As to the first,

"Heshbon and Eleale, and the flowery dale of Sibmah, clad with vines," were never celebrated for their harvests; it was the vintage that suffered by the irruption of the enemy; and so read the Septuagint and Syriac. Heidad is the noisy acclamation of the treaders of the grapes. And see what sense this makes in the literal rendering of the Vulgate: "upon thy harvest the voice of the treaders rushes." The reading in Jer. xlviii. 32 is certainly right, shoded naphal, "the destroyer hath fallen." The shout of the treaders does not come in till the next verse; in which the text of Isaiah in its turn mends that of Jeremiah, xlviii. 38, where instead of the first heidad, "the shout," we ought undoubtedly to read, as here, haddorech, "the treaders."

Verse 10. Neither shall there be shouting.] The Septuagint read hishbeth, passive, and in the third person; rightly, for God is not the speaker in this place.

Verse 14. Within three years] It seems as if this prophecy had been delivered before, without any time specified for its fulfilment; but now the time is determined—"in three years, as the years of an hireling"—for, as a hireling counts even to a single day, and will not abide with his employer an hour beyond the time agreed on; so, in three years, even to a day, from the delivery of this prophecy, shall destruction come upon Moab. This is the import of the present text; but if we take keshalish, AS in three years, or in about three years time, the prophecy is not so definite.

CHAPTER XVII.

Judgments of God upon Damascus, 1-3; and upon Israel, 4-6. Good effects of these judgments on the small remnant or gleaning that should escape them, 7, 8. The same judgments represented in other but stronger terms, and imputed to irreligion and neglect of God, 9-11. The remaining verses are a distinct prophecy, a beautiful detached piece, worked up with the greatest elegance, sublimity, and propriety; and forming a noble description of the formidable invasion and sudden overthrow of Sennacherib, exactly suitable to the event, 12-14.

THE burden of Damascus. Behold, Damascus is taken away from being a city, and it shall be a ruinous heap.

2 The cities of Aroer are forsaken: they shall be for flocks, which shall lie down, and ^b none shall make them afraid.

3 The fortress also shall cease from Ephraim, and the kingdom from Damascus, and the remnant of Syria: they shall be as the glory of the children of Israel, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 And in that day it shall come to pass, that the glory of Jacob shall be made thin, and ^d the fatness of his flesh shall wax lean.

5 And it shall be as when the harvestman gathereth the corn, and reapeth the ears with his arm; and it shall be as he that gathereth ears in the valley of Rephaim.

6 Yet gleaning grapes shall be left in it, as the shaking of an olive tree, two or three berries in the top of the uppermost bough, four or five in the outmost fruitful branches thereof, saith the LORD God of Israel.

7 At that day shall a man ^a look to his Maker, and his eyes shall have respect to the Holy One of Israel.

8 And he shall not look to the altars, the work of his hands, neither shall respect that which his fingers have made, either the groves, or the ^b images.

9 In that day shall his strong cities be as a forsaken bough, and an uppermost branch, which they left because of the children of Israel: and there shall be desolation.

10 Because thou hast forgotten ¹ the God of thy salvation, and hast not been mindful of the rock of thy strength, therefore shalt thou plant pleasant plants, and shalt set it with strange slips:

11 In the day shalt thou make thy plant to grow,

^a Jer. xlix. 23. Amos i. 3. Zech. ix. 1. 2 Kings xvi. 9.—^b Jer. vii. 38.

^c Ch. vii. 16. viii. 4.—^d Ch. x. 16.—^e Jer. li. 33.—^f Ch. xxiv. 13.—^g Mic. vii. 7.—^h Or, sun images.—ⁱ Ps. lxxviii. 19.

Verse 1. The burden of Damascus.] If we credit Midrash, the Damascenes were the most extensive and flagrant of all idolaters. "There were in Damascus three hundred and sixty-five streets, in each of these was an idol, and each idol had his peculiar day of worship; so that the whole were worshipped in the course of the year." This, or any thing like this, was a sufficient reason for this city's destruction.

Verse 2. The cities of Aroer are forsaken] "The cities are deserted for ever." What has Aroer on the river Arnon to do with Damascus? and if there be another Aroer on the northern border of the tribe of Gad, this is not much more to the purpose. Besides, the cities of Aroer, if Aroer itself is a city, makes no good sense. The Septuagint, for aroer, read adey, ad, for ever, or for a long duration. The Chaldees takes the word for a verb from arah, translating it cherebu, "they shall be wasted." So that the reading is very doubtful. I follow the Septuagint as making the plainest sense. [There were two Aroers, Deut. ii. 36; Josh. xiii. 25. The use of the plural is collective, and represents the land to the east of the Jordan.]

Verse 3. The remnant of Syria] "The pride of Syria." For shear, "remnant," Houbigant reads seeth, "pride," answering, as the sentence seems evidently to require, to cabod, "the glory of Israel." The conjecture is so very probable that I venture to follow it.

Verse 4. In that day] That is, says Kimchi, the time when the ten tribes of Israel, which were the glory of Jacob, should be carried into captivity.

Verse 5. As when the harvestman gathereth] That is, the king of Assyria shall sweep away the whole body of the people, as the reaper strippeth off the whole crop of corn; and the remnant shall be no more in proportion than the scattered ears left to the gleaner. The valley of Rephaim near Jerusalem was celebrated for its plentiful harvest; it is here used poetically for any fruitful country.

Verse 8. The altars, the work of his hands] "The altars dedicated to the work of his hands." The construction of the words, and the meaning of the sentence, in this place, are not obvious; all the ancient Versions, and most of the modern, have mistaken it. The word masseh, "the work," stands in regimine with mizbechoth, "altars," not in opposition to it; it means the altars of the work of their hand; that is of the idols, which are the work of their hands.

Verse 9. As a forsaken bough, and an uppermost branch] No one has ever yet been able to make any tolerable sense of these words. The translation of the Septuagint has happily preserved what seems to be the true reading of the text, as it stood in the copies of their time; though the words are now transposed, either in the text or in their Version; "the Amorites and the Hivites." It is remarkable that many commentators, who never thought of admitting the reading of the Septuagint, understand the passage as referring to that very event which their Version expresses; so it is plain that nothing can be more suitable to the context. [The reading of the Septuagint is of doubtful authority. That of Delitzsch is better: "the ruins of the forest, and of the mountain top."]

Verse 10. Strange slips] The pleasant plants, and shoots from a foreign soil, are allegorical expressions for strange and idolatrous worship; vicious and abominable practices connected with it; reliance on human aid, and on alliances entered into with the neighbouring nations, especially Egypt; to all which the Israelites were greatly addicted, and in their expectations from which they should be grievously disappointed.

Verse 12. Woe to the multitude] The three last verses and in the morning shalt thou make thy seed to flourish: but the harvest shall be ^a a heap in the day of grief and of desperate sorrow.

12 Woe to the ^b multitude of many people, which make a noise ^c like the noise of the seas; and to the rushing of nations, that make a rushing like the rushing of ^d mighty waters!

of this chapter seem to have no relation to the foregoing prophecy, to which they are joined. It is a beautiful piece, standing singly and by itself: for neither has it any connection with what follows: whether it stands in its right place, or not, I cannot say. It is a noble description of the formidable invasion, and the sudden overthrow of Sennacherib; which is intimated in the strongest terms, and the most expressive images, exactly suitable to the event.

Verse 14. He is not.] For cinennu many MSS. have veinennu. This particle restores the sentence to its true

CHAPTER XVIII.

This chapter contains a very obscure prophecy; possibly designed to give the Jews, and perhaps the Egyptians, whose country is supposed to be meant, 1, 2, and with whom many Jews resided, an intimation of God's interposition in favour of Sion, 3, 4; and of his counsels in regard to the destruction of their common enemy, Sennacherib, whose vast army, just as he thought his projects ripe, and ready to be crowned with success, 5; should become a prey to the beasts of the field, and to the fowls of heaven, 6; and that Egypt should be grateful to God for the deliverance vouchsafed her, 7.

WOE ^a to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia: 2 That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters,

^a Ch. xx. 4, 5. Ezek. xxx. 4, 5, 9. Zeph. ii. 12, iii. 10.—^b Ver. 7.—^c Or, outspread and polished.—^d Or, a nation that stretch out, and Verse 1. Woe to the land] This interjection should be translated ho! for it is properly a particle of calling: Ho, land! Attend! Give ear!

Shadowing with wings] "The winged cymbal." I adopt this as the most probable of the many interpretations that have been given of these words. The Egyptian sistrum is expressed by a periphrasis; the Hebrews had no name for it in their language, not having in use the instrument itself. The cymbal they had was an instrument in its use and sound not much unlike the sistrum; and to distinguish it from the sistrum, they called it the cymbal with wings. The cymbal was a round hollow piece of metal, which, being struck against another, gave a ringing sound: the sistrum was a round instrument, consisting of a broad rim of metal, through which from side to side ran several loose laminae or small rods of metal, which being shaken, gave a like sound. These, projecting on each side, had somewhat the appearance of wings; or might be very properly expressed by the same word which the Hebrews used for wings, or for the extremity, or a part of any thing projecting. The sistrum is given in a medal of Adrian, as the proper attribute of Egypt.

If we translate shadowing with wings, it may allude to the multitude of its vessels, whose sails may be represented under the notion of wings. The second verse seems to support this interpretation. Vessels of bulrushes, gome, or rather the flag papyrus, so much celebrated as the substance on which people wrote in ancient times, and from which our paper is denominated. The sails might have been made of this flag: but whole canoes were constructed from it. [Both conjectures are somewhat far-fetched. The most likely interpretation is that of Delitzsch: "The buzzing wings," referring to the insects which swarm in Egypt and Ethiopia.]

Which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia] What are the rivers of Cush? whether the eastern branches of the lower Nile, the boundary of Egypt towards Arabia, or the parts of the upper Nile towards Ethiopia, it is not easy to determine.

Verse 2. In vessels of bulrushes] "In vessels of papyrus." This circumstance agrees perfectly well with Egypt. It is well known that the Egyptians commonly used on the Nile a light sort of ships, or boats made of the reed papyrus.

Go, ye swift messengers] By the swift messengers are meant, not any particular persons specially appointed to this office, but any of the usual conveyers of news whatsoever, travellers, merchants, and the like, the instruments and agents of common fame. These are ordered to publish this declaration by the prophet throughout Egypt, and to all the world; and to excite their attention to the promised visible interposition of God.

Scattered] "Stretched out in length." Egypt, that is, the fruitful part, exclusive of the deserts on each side, is one long vale, through the middle of which runs the Nile, bounded on each side to the east and west by a chain of mountains seven hundred and fifty miles in length; in breadth from one to two or three days' journey: even at the widest part of the Delta, from Pelusium to Alexandria, not above two hundred and fifty miles broad.

Peeled] Either relating to the practice of the Egyptian priests, who made their bodies smooth by shaving off their hair, or rather to their country's being made smooth, perfectly plain and level, by the overflowing of the Nile.

Meted out] It is generally referred to the frequent necessity of having recourse to mensuration in Egypt, in order to determine the boundaries after the inundations of the Nile; to which even the origin of the science of geometry is by some ascribed. [This is not a very likely interpretation.]

Trodden down] Supposed to allude to a peculiar method of tillage in use among the Egyptians. Both Herodotus and Diodorus say that when the Nile had retired within its banks, and the ground became somewhat dry, they sowed their land, and then sent in their cattle (their hogs, say the former) to tread in the seed; and without any further care expected the harvest.

The rivers have spoiled it] The word bazeu is generally taken to be an irregular form for bazezu, "have spoiled," as four MSS. have it in this place; and so most of the Versions, both ancient and modern, understand it.

A learned friend has suggested to me another explanation of the word. Baza, Syr., and beiza, Chald., signifies, "a breast;" agreeably to which the verb signifies to nourish. This would perfectly well suit with the Nile: whereas nothing can be more discordant than the idea of spoiling and plundering; for to the inundation of the Nile, Egypt owed everything; the fertility of the soil, and the very soil itself. [There is no need of any divergence from the meaning of the original word, which signifies to cleave or intersect.]

Verse 3. When he lifteth up an ensign] I take God to be the Agent in this verse; and that by the standard and the trumpet are meant the meteors, the thunder, the lightning, the storm, earthquake, and tempest, by which Sennacherib's army shall be destroyed, or by which at least the destruction of it shall be accompanied; as it is described in chap. x. 16, 17, xix. 6, and xxx. 30, 31. They are called, by a bold metaphor, the standard lifted up, and the trumpet sounded.

Verse 4. For so the Lord said unto me] The subject of 6 They shall be left together unto the fowls of the mountains, and to the beasts of the earth: and the fowls shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them.

7 In that time ^ashall the present be brought unto the LORD of hosts of a people ^bscattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the LORD of hosts, the mount Zion.

^aSee Ps. lxxviii. 31. lxxii. 10. Ch. xvi. 1. Zeph. iii. 10. Mal. i. 11.—^bOr, outspread and polished. See ver. 2.

the remaining part of this chapter is, that God would comfort and support his own people, though threatened with immediate destruction by the Assyrians; that Sennacherib's great designs and mighty efforts against them should be frustrated; and that his vast expectations should be rendered abortive, when he thought them mature, and just ready to be crowned with success; that the chief part of his army should be made a prey for the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air (for this is the meaning of the allegory continued through the fifth and sixth verses); and that Egypt, being delivered from his oppression, and avenged by the hand of God of the wrongs which she had suffered, should return thanks for the wonderful deliverance, both of herself and of the Jews, from this most powerful adversary.

Upon herbs] "After rain." "Aur here signifies rain, according to what is said, Job xxxv. 11: 'The cloud scatters his rain.'"—Kimchi. In which place of Job the Chaldee paraphrast does indeed explain aur by matereyh; and so again ver. 21, and chap. xxvi. 30. This meaning of the word seems to make the best sense in this place; it is to be wished that it were better supported.

In the heat of harvest.] For bechom, in the heat, fourteen MSS. (several ancient), the Septuagint, Syriac, Arabic, and Vulgate read beyom in the day.

Ver. 5. The flower] Heb. her blossom; nitszah, that is, the blossom of the vine, gephen, vine, understood, which is of the common gender. See Gen. xl. 10.

Verse 7. The present] The Egyptians were in alliance with the kingdom of Judah, and were fellow-sufferers with the Jews under the invasion of their common enemy Sennacherib; and so were very nearly interested in the great and miraculous deliverance of that kingdom, by the destruction of the Assyrian army. Upon which wonderful event it is said, 2 Chron. xxxii. 23, that "many brought gifts unto Jehovah to Jerusalem, and presents to Hezekiah, king of Judah; so that he was magnified of all nations from henceforth." It is not to be doubted, that among these the Egyptians distinguished themselves in their acknowledgments on this occasion.

CHAPTER XIX.

Prophecy concerning Egypt, in which her lamentable condition under the Babylonians, Persians, &c., is forcibly pointed out, 1-17. The true religion shall be propagated in Egypt; referring primarily to the great spread of Judaism in that country in the reign of the Ptolemies, and ultimately to its reception of the gospel in the latter days, 18-22. Profound peace between Egypt, Assyria, and Israel, and their blessed condition under the gospel, 23-25.

THE burden of Egypt. Behold, the Lord rideth upon a swift cloud, and shall come into Egypt: and the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence, and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it.

2 And I will set the Egyptians against the Egyptians: and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour; city against city, and kingdom against kingdom.

3 And the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof; and I will destroy the counsel thereof: and they shall seek to the idols, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards.

4 And the Egyptians will I give over into the hand of a cruel lord; and a fierce king shall rule over them, saith the Lord, the Lord of hosts.

5 And the waters shall fail from the sea, and the river shall be wasted and dried up.

6 And they shall turn the rivers far away; and the brooks of defence shall be emptied and dried up: the reeds and flags shall wither.

7 The paper reeds by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks, and every thing sown by the brooks, shall wither, be driven away, and be no more.

8 The fishers also shall mourn, and all they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament, and they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish.

9 Moreover they that work in fine flax, and they that weave networks, shall be confounded.

10 And they shall be broken in the purposes thereof, all that make sluices and ponds for fish.

Verse 1. The burden of Egypt.] That is, the prophet's declaration concerning Egypt.

Verse 3. They shall seek to the idols.] The import of the original words has already been given where they occur in the Pentateuch. See Deut. xviii. 10, &c.

Verse 4. A cruel lord.] Nebuchadnezzar in the first place, and afterwards the whole succession of Persian kings, who in general were hard masters, and grievously oppressed the country.

Verse 5. The river shall be wasted and dried up.] The Nile shall not overflow its banks; and if no inundation, the land must become barren.

Verse 6. Shall turn the rivers far away.] "Shall become putrid." This sense of the word, which Simonis gives in his Lexicon, from the meaning of it in Arabic, suits the place much better than any other interpretation hitherto given; and that the word in Hebrew had some such signification, is probable from 2 Chron. xxix. 19, where the Vulgate renders it by polluted, and the Targum, by profaned, and made abominable. The form of the verb here is very irregular; and the rabbins and grammarians seem to give no probable account of it.

Verse 8. The fishers also.] There was great plenty of fish in Egypt; see Numb. xi. 5. "The Nile," says Diodorus, lib. i., "abounds with incredible numbers of all sorts of fish." And much more the lakes.

Verse 9. They that work in fine flax.] Flax dressed on the heckle, or comb used for that purpose. The Vulgate uses the word pectentes, combing.

Verse 10. All that make sluices and ponds for fish.] This obscure line is rendered by different interpreters in very different manners. "And all they that make barley wine shall mourn, and be grieved in soul." [The rendering of Delitzsch is widely different: "all they that work for wages are troubled in mind."]

Verse 11. The counsel of the wise counsellors of Pharaoh is become brutish.] The sentence, as it now stands in the Hebrew, is imperfect: it wants the verb.

11 Surely the princes of Zoan are fools, the counsel of the wise counsellors of Pharaoh is become brutish: how say ye unto Pharaoh, I am the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings?

12 Where are they? where are thy wise men? and let them tell thee now, and let them know what the Lord of hosts hath purposed upon Egypt.

13 The princes of Zoan are become fools, the princes of Noph are deceived; they have also seduced Egypt, even they that are the stay of the tribes thereof.

14 The Lord hath mingled a perverse spirit in the midst thereof: and they have caused Egypt to err in every work thereof, as a drunken man staggeth in his vomit.

15 Neither shall there be any work for Egypt which the head or tail, branch or rush, may do.

16 In that day shall Egypt be like unto women: and it shall be afraid and fear because of the shaking of the hand of the Lord of hosts, which he shaketh over it.

17 And the land of Judah shall be a terror unto Egypt, every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself, because of the counsel of the Lord of hosts, which he hath determined against it.

18 In that day shall five cities in the land of Egypt speak the language of Canaan, and swear to the Lord of hosts; one shall be called, The city of destruction.

19 In that day shall there be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the Lord.

Verse 12. "Let them come"] Here too a word seems to have been left out of the text. After chachameyeha, thy wise men, two MSS., one ancient, add yibu, let them come; which, if we consider the form and construction of the sentence, has very much the appearance of being genuine; otherwise the connective conjunction at the beginning of the next member is not only superfluous but embarrassing.

Verse 15. The head or tail, branch or rush.] R. D. Kimchi says, there are some who suppose that these words mean the dragon's head and tail; and refer to all those who are conversant in astronomy, astrology, &c. [It is a proverbial expression, signifying the upper classes and the mob.]

Verse 17. And the land of Judah.] The threatening hand of God will be held out and shaken over Egypt, from the side of Judea; through which the Assyrians will march to invade it. It signifies that kind of terror that drives one to his wit's end, that causes him to reel like a drunken man, to be giddy through astonishment.

Verse 18. The city of destruction.] This passage is attended with much difficulty and obscurity. It is well known that Onias applied it to his own views, either to procure from the king of Egypt permission to build his temple in the Hieropolitane Nome, or to gain credit and authority to it when built; from the notion which he industriously propagated, that Isaiah had in this place prophesied of the building of such a temple. He pretended that the very place where it should be built was expressly named by the prophet, haheres, the city of the sun. This possibly may have been the original reading. The present text has haheres, the city of destruction; which some suppose to have been introduced into the text by the Jews of Palestine afterwards, to express their detestation of the place, being much offended with this schismatical temple in Egypt. But on the supposition that haheres is the true reading, others understand it differently. The word heres in Arabic signifies a lion; and Conrad Ikenius has written a dissertation to prove that the place here mentioned is not Heliopolis, as it is commonly supposed to be, but Leontopolis in the Heliopolitane Nome, as it is indeed called in the letter, whether real or pretended, of Onias to Ptolemy, which Josephus has inserted in his Jewish Antiquities, lib. xiii., c. 8. But, after all, I believe that neither Onias, Heliopolis, nor Leontopolis has anything to do with this subject.

20 And *it shall be for a sign and for a witness unto the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt: for they shall cry unto the LORD because of the oppressors, and he shall send them a Saviour, and a great one, and he shall deliver them.

21 And the LORD shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the LORD in that day, and ^b shall do sacrifice and oblation; yea, they shall vow a vow unto the LORD, and perform it.

I think the whole passage, from the 18th verse to the end of the chapter, to contain a general intimation of the future propagation of the knowledge of the true God of Egypt and Syria, under the successors of Alexander; and, in consequence of this propagation, of the early reception of the gospel in the same countries, when it should be published to the world.

Verse 23. Shall there be a highway] Under the latter kings of Persia, and under Alexander, Egypt, Judea, and Assyria, lived peaceably under the same government, and were on such friendly terms that there was a regular un-the LORD, and he shall be intreated of them, and shall heal them.

23 In that day ^c shall there be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria, and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians.

24 In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land:

25 Whom the LORD of hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed be Egypt my people, and Assyria ^d the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance.

interrupted intercourse between them, so that the Assyrian came into Egypt and the Egyptian into Syria, and Israel became the third, i. e., was in strict union with the other two; and was a blessing to both, as affording them some knowledge of the true God, ver. 24.

Verse 25. Blessed be Egypt—Assyria—and Israel] All these countries shall be converted to the Lord. Concerning Egypt, it was said, chap. xviii. 7, that it should bring gifts to the Lord at Jerusalem. Here it is predicted, ver. 19, that there shall be an altar to the Lord in Egypt itself; and that they, with the Assyrians, shall become the people of God with the Israelites. This remains partly to be fulfilled. These countries shall be all, and perhaps at no very distant time from this, converted to the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER XX.

The prophet Isaiah a sign to Egypt and Cush or Ethiopia, that the captives and exiles of these countries shall be indignantly treated by the king of Assyria, 1-6.

IN the year that ^a Tartan came unto Ashdod, (when Sargon the king of Assyria sent him,) and fought against Ashdod, and took it;

2 At the same time spake the LORD ^b by Isaiah the son of Amoz, saying, Go and loose the ^c sackcloth from off thy loins, and put off thy shoe from thy foot. And he did so, ^d walking naked and barefoot.

3 And the LORD said, Like as my servant Isaiah hath walked naked and barefoot three years ^e for a sign and wonder upon Egypt and upon Ethiopia;

4 So shall the king of Assyria lead away ^f the Egyptians prisoners, and the Ethiopians captives, young and old, naked and barefoot, ^g even with their buttocks uncovered, to the ^h shame of Egypt.

5 ⁱ And they shall be afraid and ashamed of Ethiopia their expectation, and of Egypt their glory.

6 And the inhabitant of this ^j isle shall say in that day, Behold, such is our expectation, whither we flee for help to be delivered from the king of Assyria: and how shall we escape?

fore, that the prophet was ordered to walk so for three days to denote the accomplishment of the event in three years; a day for a year, according to the prophetic rule, Num. xiv. 34; Ezek. iv. 6. It is most likely that Isaiah's walking naked and barefoot was done in a vision; as was probably that of the prophet Hosea taking a wife of whoredoms. None of these things can well be taken literally.

CHAPTER XXI.

Prediction of the taking of Babylon by the Medes and Persians at the time of a great festival, 1-9. Short application of the prophecy to the Jews, partly in the person of God, and partly in his own, 10. Obscure prophecy respecting Dumah, 11, 12. Prophecy concerning the Arabians to be fulfilled in a very short time after its delivery, 13-17.

THE burden of the desert of the sea. As whirlwinds in the south pass through; so it cometh from the desert, from a terrible land.

2 A grievous vision is declared unto me; the treacherous dealer dealeth treacherously, and the spoiler spoileth. Go up, O Elam: besiege, O Media; all the sighing thereof have I made to cease.

3 Therefore are my loins filled with pain: pangs have taken hold upon me, as the pangs of a woman that travaileth: I was bowed down at the hearing of it; I was dismayed at the seeing of it.

4 My heart panted, fearfulness affrighted me: the night of my pleasure hath he turned into fear unto me.

5 Prepare the table, watch in the watch-tower, eat, drink: arise, ye princes, and anoint the shield.

6 For thus hath the Lord said unto me, Go, set a watchman, let him declare what he seeth.

7 And he saw a chariot with a couple of horsemen, a chariot of asses, and a chariot of camels; and he hearkened diligently with much heed:

8 And he cried, A lion: My lord, I stand continually upon the watchtower in the daytime, and I am set in my ward whole nights:

9 And, behold, here cometh a chariot of men, with a couple of horsemen. And he answered and said, Verse 1. The desert of the sea.] This plainly means Babylon, which is the subject of the prophecy. The country about Babylon, and especially below it towards the sea, was a great flat morass, overflowed by the Euphrates and Tigris. It became habitable by being drained by the many canals that were made in it.

As whirlwinds in the south.] The most vehement storms to which Judah was subject came from the desert country to the south of it. Job xxxvii. 9; Job i. 19.

Verse 2. The treacherous dealer dealeth treacherously, and the spoiler spoileth.] "The plunderer is plundered, and the destroyer is destroyed."

All the sighing thereof have I made to cease.] Heb. "Her sighing; that is, the sighing caused by her."

Verse 5. Prepare the table.] In Hebrew the verbs are in the infinitive mood absolute, as in Ezek. i. 14: "And the animals ran and returned, ratso veshed, like the appearance of the lightning;" just as the Latins say, currete et reverti, for currebant et revertebantur.

Arise, ye princes, and anoint the shield.] Kimchi observes that several of the rabbins understood this of Belshazzar's impious feast and death. The king of a people is termed the shield, because he is their defence. The command, Anoint the shield, is the same with Anoint a new king. Belshazzar being now suddenly slain, while they were all eating and drinking, he advises the princes, whose business it was to make speed and anoint another in his stead.

Verse 7. And he saw a chariot, &c.] This passage is extremely obscure from the ambiguity of the term, recheb, which is used three times, and which signifies a chariot, or any other vehicle, or the rider in it; or a rider on a horse, or any other animal; or a company of chariots, or riders. The prophet may possibly mean a cavalry in two parts, with two sorts of riders: riders on asses or mules, and riders on camels; or led on by two riders, one on an ass, and one on a camel. However, so far it is pretty clear, that Darius and Cyrus, the Medes and the Persians, are intended to be distinguished by the two riders on the two sorts of cattle.

Verse 8. And he cried, a lion.] The present reading aryeh, a lion, is so unintelligible, and the mistake so obvious, that I make no doubt that the true reading is haroeh, the seer; as the Syriac translator manifestly found it in his copy, who renders it by duka, a watchman.

Verse 10. O my threshing.] The image of threshing is

* Babylon is fallen, is fallen; and all the graven images of her gods he hath broken unto the ground.

10 O my threshing, and the corn of my floor: that which I have heard of the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, have I declared unto you.

11 The burden of Dumah. He calleth to me out of Scir, Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?

12 The watchman said, The morning cometh, and also the night: if ye will inquire, inquire ye: return, come.

13 The burden upon Arabia. In the forest in Arabia shall ye lodge, O ye travelling companies of Dedanim.

14 The inhabitants of the land of Tema brought water to him that was thirsty, they prevented with their bread him that fled.

15 For they fled from the swords, from the drawn sword, and from the bent bow, and from the grievousness of war.

16 For thus hath the Lord said unto me, Within a year, according to the years of an hireling, and all the glory of Kedar shall fail:

17 And the residue of the number of archers, the mighty men of the children of Kedar, shall be diminished: for the Lord God of Israel hath spoken it.

frequently used by the Hebrew poets, with great elegance and force, to express the punishment of the wicked and the trial of the good, or the utter dispersion and destruction of God's enemies.

Our translators have taken the liberty of using the word threshing in a passive sense, to express the object or matter that is threshed; in which I have followed them, not being able to express it more properly, without departing too much from the form and letter of the original. "Son of my floor," Ileb. It is an idiom of the Hebrew language to call the effect, the object, the adjunct, any thing that belongs in almost any way to another, the son of it. "O my threshing." The prophet abruptly breaks off the speech of God; and instead of continuing it in the form in which he had begun, and in the person of God, "This I declare unto you by my prophet," he changes the form of address, and adds, in his own person, "This I declare unto you from God."

Verse 11. The burden of Dumah.] This prophecy, from the uncertainty of the occasion on which it was uttered, and from the brevity of the expression, is extremely obscure. The Edomites as well as the Jews were subdued by the Babylonians. They inquire of the prophet how long their subjection is to last: he intimates that the Jews should be delivered from their captivity; not so the Edomites. Thus far the interpretation seems to carry with it some degree of probability. What the meaning of the last line may be, I cannot pretend to divine. In this difficulty the Hebrew MSS. give no assistance. The MSS. of the Septuagint, and the fragments of the other Greek Versions, give some variations, but no light.

Verse 13. The burden upon Arabia.] This title is of doubtful authority. In the first place, because it is not in many of the MSS. of the Septuagint. Secondly, from the singularity of the phraseology; for massa is generally prefixed to its object without a preposition, as massa babel; and never but in this place with the preposition beth. Besides, as the word baarab occurs at the very beginning of the prophecy itself, the first word but one, it is much to be suspected that some one, taking it for a proper name and the object of the prophecy, might note it as such by the words massa baarab written in the margin, which he might easily transfer to the text.

Verse 14. The land of Tema.] Probably the inhabitants of Tema might be involved in the same calamity with their brethren and neighbours of Kedar, and not in a condition to give them assistance, and to relieve them, in their flight before the enemy, with bread and water. To bring forth bread and water is an instance of common humanity in such cases of distress; especially in those desert countries in which the common necessities of life, more particularly water, are not easily to be met with or procured. Moses forbids the Ammonite and Moabite to be admitted into the congregation of the Lord to the tenth generation. One reason which he gives for this reprobation is "because they met them not with bread and water in the way, when they came forth out of Egypt," Deut. xxiii. 4.

Verse 17. The archers, the mighty men of the children of Kedar] The strong men of the bow, the most excellent archers.

For the Lord—hath spoken it.] Observe that the word naam, to pronounce, to declare, is the solemn word appropriated to the delivering of prophecies: "Behold, I am against the prophets, saith (naam, pronounce, eth) JEHOVAH, who use their tongues, vaiyinamu neum, and solemnly pronounce, He hath pronounced it." Jer. xxiii. 81. What God says shall most assuredly come to pass; he cannot be deceived.

CHAPTER XXII.

Prophecy concerning Jerusalem, 1-14. Sentence against Shebna, who was over the household, 15-19. Prophecy concerning Eliakim, the son of Hilkiah, 20, 21. From Eliakim, Isaiah (agreeably to the mode universally adopted in the prophetic writings, of making the things then present, or which were shortly to be accomplished, types or representations of things to be fulfilled upon a larger scale in distant futurity) makes a transition to the Messiah, of whom Eliakim was a type, to whom the words will best apply, and to whom some passages in the prophecy must be solely restrained, 20-24. The sentence against Shebna again confirmed, 25.

THE burden of the valley of vision. What aileth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the housetops?

2 Thou that art full of stirs, a tumultuous city, ^a a joyous city: thy slain men are not slain with the sword, nor dead in battle.

3 All thy rulers are fled together, they are bound ^b by the archers: all that are found in thee are bound together, which have fled from far.

4 Therefore, said I, Look away from me; ^c I ^d will weep bitterly, labour not to comfort me, because of the spoiling of the daughter of my people.

5 ^e For it is a day of trouble, and of treading down, and of perplexity ^f by the Lord God of hosts in the valley of vision, breaking down the walls, and of crying to the mountains.

Verse 1. Art—gone up to the house-tops] The houses in the East were in ancient times, as they are still, generally, built in one and the same uniform manner. The roof or top of the house is always flat, covered with broad stones, or a strong plaster of terrace, and guarded on every side with a low parapet wall; see Deut. xxii. 8. The terrace is frequented as much as any part of the house. On this, as the season favours, they walk, they eat, they sleep, they transact business (1 Sam. ix. 25), they perform their devotions, Acts x. 9. The house is built with a court within, into which chiefly the windows open: those that open to the street are so obstructed with lattice-work that no one either without or within can see through them. Whenever, therefore, any thing is to be seen or heard in the streets, any public spectacle, any alarm of a public nature, every one immediately goes up to the housetop to satisfy his curiosity. In the same manner, when any one has occasion to make any thing public, the readiest and most effectual way of doing it is to proclaim it from the house-tops to the people in the streets. Matt. x. 27. The people running all to the tops of their houses gives a lively image of a sudden general alarm.

Verse 3. All thy rulers—are bound by the archers] There seems to be somewhat of an inconsistency in the sense according to the present reading. If the leaders were bound, uservu, how could they flee away? for their being bound, according to the obvious construction and course of the sentence, is a circumstance prior to their flight. I therefore follow Houbigant, who reads huseru, remoti sunt, "they are gone off."

6 ^a And Elam bare the quiver with chariots of men and horsemen, and ^b Kir ^c uncovered the shield.

7 And it shall come to pass, that ^d thy choicest valleys shall be full of chariots, and the horsemen shall set themselves in array ^e at the gate.

Verse 6. Chariots of men] It is not easy to say what recheb adam, a chariot of men, can mean. It seems by the form of the sentence, which consists of three members, the first and the third mentioning a particular people, that the second should do so likewise. I readily adopt the correction of Houbigant, aram, Syria, instead of adam, man; which seems to me extremely probable. Kir was a city belonging to the Medes. The Medes were subject to the Assyrians in Hezekiah's time (see 2 Kings xvi. 9, and xvii. 6); and so perhaps might Elam (the Persians) likewise be, or auxiliaries to them.

Verse 8. The armour] "The arsenal." Built by Solomon within the city, and called the house of the forest of Lebanon; probably from the great quantity of cedar from Lebanon which was employed in the building. See 1 Kings vii. 2, 3.

Verse 9. Ye gathered together the waters] There were two pools in or near Jerusalem, supplied by springs: the upper pool, or the old pool, supplied by the spring called Gihon, 2 Chron. xxxii. 30, towards the higher part of the city, near Sion, or the city of David, and the lower pool, probably supplied by Siloam, towards the lower part. When Hezekiah was threatened with a siege by Sennacherib, he stopped up all the waters of the fountains without the city; and brought them into the city by a conduit, or subterranean passage cut through the rock; those of the old pool, to the place where he had a double wall, so that the pool was between the two walls. This he did in order to distress the enemy, and to supply the city during the siege.

15 Thus saith the Lord GOD of hosts, Go, get thee unto this treasurer, even unto * Shebna, * which is over the house, and say, Author and Disposer of this visitation, the invasion with which he now threatens you. The very same expressions are applied to God, and upon the same occasion, chap. xxxvii. 26.

Verse 13. Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we shall die. This has been the language of all those who have sought their portion in this life, since the foundation of the world.

Verse 14. It was revealed in mine ears Vitringa translates it, Revelatus est in auribus meis JEHOVAH, "JEHOVAH hath revealed it in mine ears ;" and refers to 1 Sam. ii. 27, iii. 21 : but the construction in those places is different, and there is no speech of God added ; which here seems to want something more than the verb nigleh to introduce it. Compare chap. v. 9, where the text is still more imperfect.

Verse 15. Go—unto Shebna. The following prophecy concerning Shebna seems to have very little relation to the foregoing, except that it might have been delivered about the same time ; and Shebna might be a principal person among those whose luxury and profaneness is severely reprehended by the prophet in the conclusion of that prophecy, ver. 11-14.

Shebna the scribe, mentioned in the history of Hezekiah, chap. xxxvii., seems to have been a different person from this Shebna, the treasurer or steward of the household, to whom this prophecy relates. The Eliakim, here mentioned was probably the person who, at the time of Sennacherib's invasion, was actually treasurer, the son of Hilkiah. If so, this prophecy was delivered, as the preceding (which makes the former part of the chapter) plainly was, some time before the invasion of Sennacherib. As to the rest, history affords us no information.

Verse 16. A sepulchre on high—in a rock It has been observed before, on chap. xiv., that persons of high rank in Judea, and in most parts of the East, were generally buried in large sepulchral vaults, hewn out in the rock for the use of themselves and their families. The vanity of Shebna is set forth by his being so studious and careful to have his sepulchre on high—in a lofty vault ; and that probably in a high situation, that it might be more conspicuous. Hezekiah was buried, lemalah, in the chiefest, says our translation ; rather, in the highest part of the sepulchres of the sons of David, to do him the more honour, 2 Chron. xxxii. 38.

Verse 17. Cover thee. That is, thy face. This was the condition of mourners in general, and particularly of condemned persons. See Esther vi. 12, vii. 8.

19 And I will drive thee from thy station, and from thy state shall he pull thee down.

20 And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will call my servant * Eliakim the son of Hilkiah :

21 And I will clothe him with thy robe, and strengthen him with thy girdle, and I will commit thy government into his hand : and he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah.

22 And the key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder ; so he shall * open, and none shall shut ; and he shall shut, and none shall open.

23 And I will fasten him as * a nail in a sure place ; and he shall be for a glorious throne to his father's house.

24 And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house, the offspring and the issue, all vessels of small quantity, from the vessels of cups, even to all the * vessels of flagons.

25 In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, shall the * nail that is fastened in the sure place be removed, and be cut down, and fall ; and the burden that was upon it shall be cut off : for the LORD hath spoken it.

Verse 22. And the key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder As the robe and the baldric, mentioned in the preceding verse, were the ensigns of power and authority, so likewise was the key the mark of office, either sacred or civil. This mark of office was likewise among the Greeks, as here in Isaiah, borne on the shoulder. To comprehend how the key could be borne on the shoulder it will be necessary to say something of the form of it : but without entering into a long disquisition, and a great deal of obscure learning, concerning the locks and keys of the ancients, it will be sufficient to observe, that one sort of keys, and that probably the most ancient, was of considerable magnitude, and as to the shape, very much bent and crooked. But was it not the representation of a key, either cut out in cloth and sewed on the shoulder of the garment, or embroidered on that part of the garment itself ? The idea of a huge key of a gate, in any kind of metal, laid across the shoulder, is to me very ridiculous.

In allusion to the image of the key as the ensign of power, the unlimited extent of that power is expressed with great clearness as well as force by the sole and exclusive authority to open and shut. Our Saviour, therefore, has upon a similar occasion made use of a like manner of expression, Matt. xvi. 19 ; and in Rev. iii. 7 has applied to himself the very words of the prophet.

Verse 23. A nail In ancient times, and in the eastern countries, as the way of life, so the houses, were much more simple than ours at present. They had not that quantity and variety of furniture, nor those accommodations of all sorts, with which we abound. It was convenient and even necessary for them, and it made an essential part in the building of an house, to furnish the inside of the several apartments with sets of spikes, nails, or large pegs, upon which to dispose of and hang up the several moveables and utensils in common use, and proper to the apartment. These spikes they worked into the walls at the first erection of them, the walls being of such materials that they could not bear their being driven in afterwards ; and they were contrived so as to strengthen the walls by binding the parts together, as well as to serve for convenience.

A glorious throne That is, his father's house and all his own family shall be gloriously seated, shall flourish in honour and prosperity ; and shall depend upon him, and be supported by him.

Verse 24. All the glory One considerable part of the magnificence of the eastern princes consisted in the great quantity of gold and silver vessels which they had for various uses. 1 Kings x. 21.

Vessels of flagons. Nebalim seems to mean earthen vessels of common use, brittle, and of little value (see Lam. iv. 2, Jer. xlviii. 12), in opposition to aganoth, goblets of gold and silver used in the sacrifices. Exodus xxiv. 6. Verse 25. The nail that is fastened] This must be understood of Shebna, as a repetition and confirmation of the sentence above denounced against him.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Prophecy denouncing the destruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar, delivered upwards of one hundred and twenty years before its accomplishment, at a period when the Tyrians were in great prosperity, and the Babylonians in abject subjection to the Assyrian empire; and, consequently, when an event of so great magnitude was improbable in the highest degree, 1-14. Tyre shall recover its splendour at the termination of seventy years, the days of one king, or kingdom, by which must be meant the time allotted for the duration of the Babylonish empire, as otherwise the prophecy cannot be accommodated to the event, 15-17. Supposed reference to the early conversion of Tyre to Christianity, 18.

THE burden of Tyre. Howl, ye ships of Tarshish; for it is laid waste, so that there is no house, no entering in: ^b from the land of Chittim it is revealed to them.

2 Be still, ye inhabitants of the isle; thou whom the merchants of Zidon, that pass over the sea, have replenished.

3 And by great waters the seed of Sihor, the harvest of the river, is her revenue; and she is a mart of nations.

4 Be thou ashamed, O Zidon: for the sea hath spoken, even the strength of the sea, saying, I travail not, nor bring forth children, neither do I nourish up young men, nor bring up virgins.

5 As at the report concerning Egypt, so shall they be sorely pained at the report of Tyre.

6 Pass ye over to Tarshish; howl, ye inhabitants of the isle.

7 Is this your joyous city, whose antiquity is of ancient days? her own feet shall carry her afar off to sojourn.

8 Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth?

9 The Lord of hosts hath purposed it, to stain the pride of all glory, and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth.

10 Pass through thy land as a river, O daughter of Tarshish: there is no more strength.

11 He stretched out his hand over the sea, he shook the kingdoms: the Lord hath given a commandment against the merchant city, to destroy the strong holds thereof.

12 And he said, Thou shalt no more rejoice, O thou oppressed virgin, daughter of Zidon: arise, pass over to Chittim; there also shalt thou have no rest.

Verse 1. The burden of Tyre] Tyre, a city on the coast of Syria, about lat. 32° N. was built two thousand seven hundred and sixty years before Christ. There were two cities of this name; one on the continent, and the other on an island, about half a mile from the shore; the city on the island was about four miles in circumference. Old Tyre resisted Nebuchadnezzar for thirteen years; then the inhabitants carried, so to speak, the city to the forementioned island, ver. 4. This new city held out against Alexander the Great for seven months; who, in order to take it, was obliged to fill up the channel which separated it from the mainland. In A.D. 1289 it was totally destroyed by the sultan of Egypt; and now contains only a few huts, in which about fifty or sixty wretched families exist. This desolation was foretold by this prophet and by Ezekiel, one thousand nine hundred years before it took place!

Howl, ye ships of Tarshish] This prophecy denounces the destruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar. It opens with an address to the Tyrian negotiators and sailors at Tarshish, a place which, in the course of their trade, they greatly frequented. The news of the destruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar is said to be brought to them from Chittim, the islands and coasts of the Mediterranean; "for the Tyrians," says Jerome on ver. 6, "when they saw they had no other means of escaping, fled in their ships, and took refuge in Carthage, and in the islands of the Ionian and Ægean sea."

Verse 2. Be still] Silence is a mark of grief and consternation. See chap. xlvii. 5. Jeremiah has finely expressed this image.

Verse 3. The seed of Sihor] The Nile is called here Sichor, as it is Jer. ii. 18, and 1 Chron. xiii. 5. It had this name from the blackness of its waters, charged with the mud which it brings down from Ethiopia when it overflows.

12.—¹ Heb. to pollute.—² Heb. girdle.—³ Or, concerning a merchantman.—⁴ Heb. Canaan.—⁵ Or, strengths.—⁶ Rev. xviii. 22.—⁷ Ver. 1.

Egypt, by its extraordinary fertility, caused by the overflowing of the Nile, supplied the neighbouring nations with corn, by which branch of trade the Tyrians gained great wealth.

Verse 4. Be thou ashamed, O Zidon] Tyre is called, ver. 12, the daughter of Sidon. "The Sidonians," says Justin, xviii. 3, "when their city was taken by the king of Ascalon, betook themselves to their ships, and landed, and built Tyre." Sidon, as the mother city is supposed to be deeply affected with the calamity of her daughter.

Verse 7. Whose antiquity is of ancient days] Justin, in the passage above quoted, had dated the building of Tyre at a certain number of years before the taking of Troy; but the number is lost in the present copies. Tyre, though not so old as Sidon, was yet of very high antiquity; it was a strong city even in the time of Joshua. It is called "the city of the fortress of Sor," Josh. xix. 29. Interpreters raise difficulties in regard to this passage, and will not allow it to have been so ancient; with what good reason I do not see, for it is called by the same name, "the fortress of Sor," in the history of David, 2 Sam. xxiv. 7, and the circumstances of the history determine the place to be the very same.

Her own feet shall carry her afar off to sojourn.] This may belong to the new or insular Tyre; her own feet, that is, her own inhabitants, shall carry her—shall transport the city, from the continent to the island. Merachok does not always signify a great distance, but distance or interval in general; for in Josh. iii. 4 rachok is used to express the space between the camp and the ark, which we know to have been only two thousand cubits. Some refer the sojourning afar off to the extent of the commercial voyages undertaken by the Tyrians and their foreign connexions.

Verse 10. O daughter of Tarshish] Tyre is called the daughter of Tarshish; perhaps because, Tyre being ruined, was not, till the Assyrian founded it for *them that dwell in the wilderness: they set up the towers thereof, they raised up the palaces thereof; and he brought it to ruin.

14^b Howl, ye ships of Tarshish: for your strength in laid waste.

15 And it shall come to pass in that day, that Tyre shall be forgotten seventy years, according to the days of one king: after the end of seventy years *shall Tyre sing as an harlot.

16 Take an harp, go about the city, thou harlot that hast been forgotten; make sweet melody, sing

^a Ps. lxxii. 9.—^b Vor. 1. Ezek. xxvii. 25, 30.—^c Heb. it shall be unto Tyre as the song of an harlot.

Tarshish was become the superior city, and might be considered as the metropolis of the Tyrian people; or rather because of the close connexion and perpetual intercourse between them, according to that latitude of signification in which the Hebrews use the words son and daughter to express any sort of conjunction and dependance whatever. Mezach, a girdle, which collects, binds, and keeps together the loose raiment, when applied to a river, may mean a mound, mole, or artificial dam, which contains the waters, and prevents them from spreading abroad. A city taken by siege and destroyed, whose walls are demolished, whose policy is dissolved, whose wealth is dissipated, whose people is scattered over the wide country, is compared to a river whose banks are broken down, and whose waters, let loose and overflowing all the neighbouring plains, are wasted and lost. ["The girdle is the supremacy of Tyre, which has hitherto restrained all independent action on the part of the colony."]

Verse 13. Behold the land of the Chaldeans] This verse is extremely obscure; the obscurity arises from the ambiguity of the agents, which belong to the verbs, and of the objects expressed by the pronouns; from the change of number of the verbs, and of gender in the pronouns. The MSS. give us no assistance, and the ancient Versions very little.

Verse 14. Howl, ye ships] The prophet Ezekiel has enlarged upon this part of the same subject with great force and elegance. Ezek. xxvi. 15-18.

Verse 15. According to the days of one king] That is, of one kingdom; See Dan. vii. 17, viii. 20. Nebuchadnezzar began his conquests in the first year of his reign; from thence to the taking of Babylon by Cyrus are seventy years, at which time the nations subdued by Nebuchadnezzar were to be many songs, that thou mayest be remembered.

17 And it shall come to pass after the end of seventy years, that the LORD will visit Tyre, and she shall turn to her hire, and *shall commit fornication with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth.

18 And her merchandise and her hire *shall be holiness to the LORD: it shall not be treasured nor laid up; for her merchandise shall be for them that dwell before the LORD, to eat sufficiently, and for 'durable clothing.

^a Rev. xvii. 2.—^b Zech. xiv. 20, 21.—^c Heb. old.

restored to liberty. These seventy years limit the duration of the Babylonish monarchy. Tyre was taken by him towards the middle of that period; so did not serve the king of Babylon during the whole period, but only for the remaining part of it. This seems to be the meaning of Isaiah; the days allotted to the one king or kingdom, are seventy years; Tyre, with the rest of the conquered nations, shall continue in a state of subjection and desolation to the end of that period. Not from the beginning and through the whole of the period; for, by being one of the latest conquests, the duration of that state of subjection in regard to her, was not much more than half of it. "All these nations," saith Jeremiah, xxv. 11, "shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years." Some of them were conquered sooner, some later; but the end of this period was the common term for the deliverance of them all.

Verse 17. After the end of seventy years] Tyre, after its destruction by Nebuchadnezzar, recovered, as it is here foretold, its ancient trade, wealth, and grandeur; as it did likewise after a second destruction by Alexander. It became Christian early with the rest of the neighbouring countries. St. Paul himself found many Christians there, Acts xxi. 4. It suffered much in the Diocletian persecution. It was an archbishopric under the patriarchate of Jerusalem, with fourteen bishoprics under its jurisdiction. It continued Christian till it was taken by the Saracens in 639; was recovered by the Christians in 1124; but in 1280 was conquered by the Mamelukes, and afterwards taken from them by the Turks in 1517. Since that time it has sunk into utter decay; is now a mere ruin, a bare rock, "a place to spread nets upon," as the prophet Ezekiel foretold it should be, chap. xxvi. 14.

Dreadful judgments impending over the people of God, 1-4. Particular enumeration of the horrid impieties which provoked the divine vengeance, 5, 6. Great political wretchedness of the transgressors, 7-12. The calamities shall be so great that only a small remnant shall be left in the land, as it were the gleanings of the vintage, 13. The rest, scattered over the different countries, spread there the knowledge of God, 14-18. Strong figures by which the great distress and long captivity of the transgressors are set forth, 17-22. 3 The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the LORD hath spoken this word.

4 The earth mourneth and fadeth away, the world languisheth and fadeth away, ^athe haughty people of the earth do languish.

5 ^bThe earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant.

6 Therefore hath ^cthe curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate; therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left.

7 ^dThe new wine mourneth, the vine languisheth, all the merryhearted do sigh.

8 The mirth ^eof tabrets ceaseth, the noise of them that rejoice endeth, the joy of the harp ceaseth.

9 They shall not drink wine with a song; strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it.

10 The city of confusion is broken down: every house is shut up, that no man may come in,

11 There is a crying for wine in the streets; all joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone.

12 In the city is left desolation, and the gate is smitten with destruction.

13 When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, there shall be as the shaking of an olive tree, and as the gleaning grapes when the vintage is done.

14 They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the LORD, they shall cry aloud from the sea.

escaped out of these calamities. The great distresses brought upon Israel and Judah drove the people away, and dispersed them all over the neighbouring countries: they fled to Egypt, to Asia Minor, to the islands and the coasts of Greece. They were to be found in great numbers in most of the principal cities of these countries. Alexandria was in a great measure peopled by them. They had synagogues for their worship in many places, and were greatly instrumental in propagating the knowledge of the true God among these heathen nations, and preparing them for the reception of Christianity. This is what the prophet seems to mean by the celebration of the name of JEHOVAH in the waters, in the distant coasts, and in the uttermost parts of the land.

Verse 15. In the isles of the sea. For beurim, in the valleys, I suppose we ought to read beayim, in the isles, which is in a great degree justified by the repetition of the word in the next member of the sentence, with the addition of haiyam, the sea, to vary the phrase, exactly in the manner of the prophet.

Verse 16. But I said. The prophet speaks in the person of the inhabitants of the land still remaining there, who should be pursued by divine vengeance, and suffer repeated distresses from the inroads and depredations of their powerful enemies.

My leanness, my leanness. Or, my secret; so the Vulgate, Montanus, and others. Rasan has this meaning in Chaldee; but in Hebrew it signifies to make lean, to waste. 17 ^eFear, and the pit, and the ^fsnare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

19 ⁱThe earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly.

20 The earth shall ^jreel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall ^kpunish the host of the high ones that are on high, ^land the kings of the earth upon the earth.

22 And they shall be gathered together, ^mas prisoners are gathered in the ⁿpit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be ^ovisited.

Verse 17. Fear, and the pit. If they escape one calamity, another shall overtake them, Amos v. 19. The images are taken from the different methods of hunting and taking wild beasts, which were anciently in use. The terror was a line strung with feathers of all colours, which fluttering in the air scared and frightened the beasts into the toils, or into the pit which was prepared for them. The pit or pitfall, fovea; digged deep in the ground, and covered over with green boughs, turf, &c., in order to deceive them, that they might fall into it unawares. The snare, or toils, a series of nets, inclosing at first a great space of ground, in which the wild beasts were known to be; and then drawn in by degrees into a narrower compass, till they were at last closely shut up, and entangled in them.

Verse 20. Like a cottage. See note on chap. i. 8.

Verse 21. On high—upon the earth. That is the ecclesiastical and civil policy of the Jews, which shall be destroyed. The nation shall continue in a state of depression and dereliction for a long time. The image seems to be taken from the practice of the great monarchs of that time; who, when they had thrown their wretched captives into a dungeon, never gave themselves the trouble of inquiring about them; but let them lie a long time in that miserable condition, wholly destitute of relief, and disregarded. God shall at length revisit and restore his people in the last age; and then the kingdom of God shall be established in such perfection, as wholly to obscure and eclipse the glory of the temporary, typical, preparative kingdom now subsisting.

CHAPTER XXV.

The short glance which the prophet gave at the promised restoration of the people of God and the Messiah's kingdom, in the close of the preceding chapter, makes him break out into a rapturous song of praise in this, where, although he alludes to temporal mercies, such as the destruction of the cities which had been at war with Zion, the ruin of Moab, and other signal interpositions of Divine Providence in behalf of the Jews; yet he is evidently impressed with a more lively sense of future and much higher blessings under the gospel dispensation, in the plenitude of its revelation, of which the temporal deliverances vouchsafed at various times to the primitive kingdoms of Israel and Judah were the prototypes, 1-5. These blessings are described under the figure of a feast made for all nations, 6; the removing of a veil from their faces, 7; the total extinction of the empire of death by the resurrection from the dead, the exclusion of all sorrow, and the final overthrow of all the enemies of the people of God, 8-12.

O LORD, thou art my God; ^aI will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; ^bfor thou hast done wonderful things; ^cthy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth.

2 For thou hast made ^da of a city an heap; of a defenced city a ruin: a palace of strangers to be no city; it shall never be built.

3 Therefore shall the strong people ^eglorify thee, the city of the terrible nations shall fear thee.

4 For thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress, ^fa refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat, when the blast of the terrible ones is as a storm against the wall.

5 Thou shalt bring down the noise of strangers, as the heat in a dry place; even the heat with the shadow of a cloud: the branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low.

6 And in ^gthis mountain shall ^hthe LORD of hosts make unto ⁱall people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined.

Verse 1. Thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth. That is, All thy past declaration by the prophets shall be fulfilled in their proper time.

Verse 2. A city] Nineveh, Babylon, Ar, Moab, or any other strong fortress possessed by the enemies of the people of God.

A palace of strangers] For zarim, strangers, MS. Bodl. and another read zedim, the proud: so likewise the Septuagint. Another MS. reads tsarim, adversaries; which also makes a good sense. But zarim, strangers, and zedim, the proud, are often confounded by the great similitude of the letters daleth and resh.

Verse 5. Of strangers] The same mistake here as in ver. 2; see the note there.

The heat with the shadow of a cloud] "As a thick cloud interposing tempers the heat of the sun on the burnt soil; so shalt thou, by the interposition of thy power, bring low and abate the tumult of the proud, and the triumph of the formidable."

Verse 6. In this mountain] Zion, at Jerusalem. In his church.

Shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast] Salvation by Jesus Christ. A feast is a proper and usual expression of joy in consequence of victory, or any other great success. The feast here spoken of is to be celebrated on Mount Zion; and all people, without distinction, are to be invited to it. This can be no other than the celebration of the establishment of Christ's kingdom, which is frequently represented in the gospel under the image of a feast; Matt. viii. 11. See also Luke xiv. 16; xxiv. 29, 30. This sense is fully confirmed by the concomitants of this feast expressed in the next verse; the removing of the veil from the face of the nations, and the abolition of death: the first of which is obviously and clearly explained of the preaching of the gospel; and the second must mean the blessing of immortality procured for us by Christ, "who hath abolished death, and through death hath destroyed him that had the power of death."

Of wines on the lees] The word used to express the lees in the original signifies the preservers; because they preserve the strength and flavour of the wine.

Verse 7. The face of the covering cast over all people] "The covering that covered the face of all the peoples." He will unveil all the Mosaic ritual, and show by his apostles that it referred to, and was accomplished in, the sacrificial offering of Jesus Christ.

Verse 8. He will swallow up death] He, by the grace of God, will taste death for every man. Heb. ii. 9. Probably, swallow up death, and taste death, in both these verses, refer to the same thing: Jesus dying instead of a guilty world. These forms of speech may refer to the punishment of certain criminals; they were obliged to drink a cup of poison. That cup which every criminal in the world must have drunk, Jesus Christ drank for them; and thus he swallowed up death: but as he rose again from the dead, complete victory was gained.

As in the Arabic countries a covering was put over the face of him who was condemned to suffer death, it is probable that the words in ver. 7 may refer to this. The whole world was condemned to death, and about to be led out to execution, when the gracious Lord interposed, and by a glorious sacrifice, procured a general pardon.

Verse 9. It shall be said] They shall say, i. e. the Jews and the Gentiles—Lo, this [Jesus Christ] is our God: we have waited for him, according to the predictions of the prophets. We have expected him, and we have not been disappointed; therefore will we be glad, and rejoice in his salvation.

Verse 10. Shall the hand of the Lord rest? "The hand of JEHOVAH shall give rest."

As straw is trodden down.] "This is spoken in reference to the mode of threshing in Palestine, and various other Asiatic provinces. Because of the scarcity of meadow land and hay, they make chopped straw for the cattle. They have large wheels studded over with iron teeth or nails, by which, on the out-of-door threshing-floors, they pound and reduce the straw into chaff. As, therefore, the straw is reduced to chaff by bringing the iron-shod wheel over it; so shall Moab be bruised by the power of God, that nothing whole shall remain."

For the dunghill.] "Under the wheels of the car." For madmenah, the Septuagint, Syriac, and Vulgate read mercabah, which I have followed. See Joshua xv. 31, compared with xix. 5, where there is a mistake very nearly the same.

Verse 11. As he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim.] There is great obscurity in this place: some understand God as the agent; others, Moab. I have chosen the latter sense, as I cannot conceive that the stretching out of the hands of a swimmer in swimming can be any illustration of the action of God stretching out his hands over Moab to destroy it. Bekirbo, in the midst of him, means that this destruction shall be open, and exposed to the view of all: the neighbouring nations shall plainly see him struggling against it, as a man in the midst of the deep waters exerts all his efforts, by swimming, to save himself from drowning.

CHAPTER XXVI.

This chapter, like the foregoing, is a song of praise, in which thanksgivings for temporal and spiritual mercies are beautifully mingled, though the latter still predominate. Even the sublime and evangelical doctrine of the resurrection seems here to be hinted at, and made to typify the deliverance of the people of God from a state of the lowest misery; the captivity, the general dispersion, or both. This hymn too, like the preceding, is beautifully diversified by the frequent change of speakers. It opens with a chorus of the church celebrating the protection vouchsafed by God to his people; and the happiness of the righteous, whom he guards, contrasted with the misery of the wicked, whom he punishes, 1-7. To this succeeds their own pious resolution of obeying, trusting, and delighting in God, 8. Here the prophet breaks in, in his own person, eagerly catching the last words of the chorus, which were perfectly in unison with the feelings of his own soul, and which he beautifully repeats, as one musical instrument reverberates the sound of another on the same key with it. He makes likewise a suitable response to what had been said on the judgments of God, and observes their different effects on the good and the bad; improving the one, and hardening the other, 9-11. After this, a chorus of Jews express their gratitude to God for past deliverances, make confession of their sins, and supplicate his power, which they had been long expecting, 12-18. To this God makes a gracious reply, promising deliverance that should be as life from the dead, 19. And the Prophet (apparently alluding to the command of Moses to the Israelites, when the destroying angel was to go through the land of Egypt) concludes with exhorting his people to patience and resignation, till God sends the deliverance he has promised, 20, 21.

IN "that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah; We have a strong city; ^bsalvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks.

Verse 9. When thy judgments, &c.] It would be better to read, When thy judgments were in the earth, the inhabitants of the world have learned righteousness. Men seldom seek God in prosperity; they are apt to rest in an earthly portion; but God in mercy embitters this by adversity; then there is a general cry after him as our chief, solid, and only permanent good.

lowest depression is explained by images plainly taken from the resurrection of the dead. In the same manner the prophet Ezekiel represents the restoration of the Jewish nation from a state of utter dissolution by the restoring of the dry bones to life, exhibited to him in a vision, chap. xxxvii., which is directly thus applied and explained, ver. 11-13. And this deliverance is expressed with a manifest opposition to what is here said above, ver. 14., of the great lords and tyrants under whom they had groaned:—

"They are dead, they shall not live;

They are deceased tyrants, they shall not rise:" that they should be destroyed utterly, and should never be restored to their former power and glory. It appears from hence, that the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead was at that time a popular and common doctrine; for an image which is assumed in order to express or represent any thing in the way of allegory or metaphor, whether poetical or prophetic, must be an image commonly known and understood; otherwise it will not answer the purpose for which it is assumed.

Kimchi refers these words to the days of the Messiah, and says, "Then many of the saints shall rise from the Thy dead men shall live—with my dead body shall they arise.] This seems very express.

Verse 20. Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers] An exhortation to patience and resignation under oppression, with a confident expectation of deliverance by the power of God manifestly to be exerted in the destruction of the oppressor. It seems to be an allusion to the command of Moses to the Israelites, when the destroying angel was to go through the land of Egypt, "not to go out at the doors of their houses until the morning," Exod. xii. 22. Exod. xiv. 13, 14.

Verse 21. The earth also shall disclose her blood] Crimes of cruelty and oppression, which have passed away from the eyes of men, God will bring into judgment, and exact punishment for them. O what a reckoning will the kingdoms of the earth have with God, for the torrents of blood which they have shed for the gratification of the lust of power and ambition! Who shall live when he doeth this?

CHAPTER XXVII.

Destruction of the enemies of the church, 1. God's care of his vineyard, 2-11. Prosperity of the descendants of Abraham in the latter days, 12, 13.

Verse 1. Leviathan] The animals here mentioned seem to be the crocodile, rigid, by the stiffness of the backbone, so that he cannot readily turn himself when he pursues his prey; hence the easiest way of escaping from him is by making frequent and short turnings: the serpent or dragon, flexible and winding, which coils himself up in a circular form: and the sea-monster or whale. These are used allegorically, without doubt, for great potentates, enemies, and persecutors of the people of God: but to specify the particular persons or states designed by the prophet under these images, is a matter of great difficulty, and comes not necessarily within the design of these notes.

Verse 2. Sing ye unto her] Bishop Lowth translates this, Sing ye a responsive song; and says that anah, to answer, signifies occasionally to sing responsively; and that this mode of singing was frequently practised among the ancient Hebrews.

This, indeed, was the ancient method of singing in various nations. The song was divided into distinct portions, and the singers sang alternately. There is a fine specimen of this in the song of Deborah and Barak; and also in the Idylls of Theocritus, and the Eclogues of Virgil.

This kind of singing was properly a dialogue in verse, sung to a particular tune, or in the mode which is now termed recitativo.

A vineyard of red wine.] The redder the wine, the more it was valued, says Kimchi.

Verse 4. Fury is not in me] For chemah, anger, the Septuagint and Syriac read chomah, wall. The vineyard wishes for a wall and a fence of thorns—human strength and protection (as the Jews were too apt to apply to their powerful neighbours for assistance, and to trust to the shadow of Egypt): JEHOVAH replies, that this would not avail her, nor defend her against his wrath. He counsels her, therefore, to betake herself to his protection. On which she entreats him to make peace with her.

Who would set the briers and thorns against me] "Q that I had a fence of the thorn and brier."

Verse 10. There shall the calf feed] That is, the king of Egypt, says Kimchi.

Verse 11. The boughs thereof] That is, the boughs of the vineyard, referring still to the subject of the dialogue above.

The scarcity of fuel, especially wood, in most parts of the East is so great, that they supply it with every thing capable 11 When the boughs thereof are withered, they shall be broken off: the women come, and set them on fire: for * it is a people of no understanding: therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and * he that formed them will shew them no favour.

12 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall beat off from the channel of the river unto the stream of Egypt, and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel.

13 * And it shall come to pass in that day, * that the great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, and shall worship the LORD in the holy mount at Jerusalem.

of burning; cow-dung dried, roots, parings of fruit, withered stalks of herbs and flowers; see Matt. vi. 21-30. "If a man abide not in me," saith our Lord, "he is cast forth as a branch and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned," John xv. 6. They employed women and children to gather these things, and they laid them up in store for use. The dressing and pruning their vines afforded a good supply of the last sort of fuel; but the prophet says that the vines themselves of the beloved vineyard shall be blasted, withered, and broken, and the women shall come and gather them up, and carry away the whole of them to make their fires for domestic uses.

Verse 12. The channel of the river] The river Sabbation, beyond which the Israelites were carried captive.

Verse 13. The great trumpet shall be blown] Does not this refer to the time spoken of by our Lord, Matt. xxiv. 31? In this prophet there are several predictions relative to the conversion of Egypt to the true faith, which have not yet been fulfilled, and which must be fulfilled, for the truth of God cannot fail. Should Egypt ever fully establish its independence, it is most likely that the gospel of Christ would have a speedy entrance into it; and, according to these prophecies, a wide and permanent diffusion. At present the Mohammedan power is a genuine antichrist. This also the Lord will remove in due time.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

This chapter begins with a denunciation of the approaching ruin of the Israelites by Shalmaneser, whose power is compared to a tempest or flood, and his keenness to the avidity with which one plucks and swallows the grape that is soonest ripe, 1-4. It then turns to the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who were to continue a kingdom after the final captivity of their brethren; and gives first a favourable prognostication of their affairs under Hezekiah, 5, 6; but soon changes to reproaches and threatenings for their intemperance and their profaneness, 7, 8. They are introduced as not only scornfully rejecting, but also mocking and ridiculing, the instructions of the prophet, 9, 10. To this God immediately retorts in terms alluding to their own mocking, but differently applied, 11-13. The prophet then addresses these scoffers, 14; who considered themselves as perfectly secure from every evil, 15; and assures them that there was no method under heaven but one, by which they could be saved, 16; that every other vain resource should fail in the day of visitation, 17, 18. He then further adds, that the judgments of God were particularly levelled against them; and that all the means to which they trusted for warding them off should be to no purpose, 19, 20; as the Almighty, who, on account of his patience and long-suffering, is amiably described as unacquainted with punishing, had nevertheless determined to punish them, 21, 22. The prophet then concludes with a beautiful parable in explanation and defence of God's dealing with his people, 23-29.

WOE to "the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim, whose "glorious beauty is a fading flower, which are on the head of the fat valleys of them that are "overcome with wine!

2 Behold, the Lord hath a mighty and strong one, "which as a tempest of hail and a destroying storm, as a flood of mighty waters overflowing, shall cast down to the earth with the hand.

3 "The crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim, shall be trodden "under feet:

4 And "the glorious beauty, which is on the head of the fat valley, shall be a fading flower, and as the hasty fruit before the summer; which when he that looketh upon it seeth, while it is yet in his hand he "catcheth it up.

5 In that day shall the Lord of hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people.

6 And for a spirit of judgment to him that sitteth in judgment, and for strength to them that turn the battle to the gate.

7 But they also "have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way; "the priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink; they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision, they stumble in judgment.

8 For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean.

Verse 1. Woe to the crown of pride] By the crown of pride, &c., Samaria is primarily understood. The city, beautifully situated on the top of a round hill and surrounded immediately with a rich valley and a circle of other hills beyond it, suggested the idea of a chaplet or wreath of flowers worn upon their heads on occasions of festivity, expressed by the proud crown and the fading flower of the drunkards.

Verse 4. The hasty fruit before the summer] The image was very obvious to the inhabitants of Judea and the neighbouring countries, and is frequently applied by the prophets to express a desirable object; by none more elegantly than by Hosea chap. ix. 10.

Which when he that looketh upon it seeth] For yireh, which with haroe makes a miserable tautology, read; by a transposition of a letter, yoreh, plucketh; a happy conjecture of Houbigant. The image expresses in the strongest manner the great ease with which the Assyrians shall take the city and the whole kingdom, and the avidity with which they shall seize the rich prey without resistance.

Verse 5. In that day] Thus far the prophecy relates to the Israelites, and manifestly denounces their approaching destruction by Shalmaneser. Here it turns to the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, the remnant of God's people who were to continue a kingdom after the final captivity of the Israelites. It begins with a favourable prognostication of their affairs under Hezekiah; but soon changes to reproofs and threatenings for their intemperance, disobedience, and profaneness.

Verse 6. The battle to the gate] That is, who pursue the fleeing enemy even to the very gates of their own city. 2 Sam. xi. 23; also 1 Sam. xvii. 52.

Verse 9. Whom shall he teach knowledge?] The scoffers mentioned below, ver. 14, are here introduced as uttering their sententious speeches; they treat God's method of dealing with them, and warning them by his prophets, with contempt and derision. What, say they, doth he treat us as mere infants just weaned? doth he teach us like little children, perpetually inculcating the same elementary lessons, the mere rudiments of knowledge; precept after precept, line after line, here and there, by little and little? imitating at the same time, and ridiculing, in ver. 10, the concise pro-

9 "Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand "doctrine? them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts.

10 For precept "must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little:

11 For with "stammering "lips and another tongue "will he speak to this people.

12 To whom he said, This is the rest wherewith ye may cause the weary to rest; and this is the refreshing: yet they would not hear.

13 But the word of the Lord was unto them precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little; that they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken.

14 Wherefore hear the word of the Lord, ye scornful men, that rule this people which is in Jerusalem.

15 Because ye have said, We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us: "for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves:

16 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation "a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste.

phetical manner. God, by his prophet, retorts upon them with great severity their own contemptuous mockery, turning it to a sense quite different from what they intended. Yes, saith he, it shall be in fact as you say; ye shall be taught by a strange tongue and a stammering lip; in a strange country; ye shall be carried into captivity by a people whose language shall be unintelligible to you, and which ye shall be forced to learn like children. And my dealing with you shall be according to your own words: it shall be command upon command for your punishment; it shall be line upon line, stretched over you to mark your destruction (compare 2 Kings xxi. 13); it shall come upon you at different times, and by different degrees, till the judgments, with which from time to time I have threatened you, shall have their full accomplishment.

Verse 10. For precept must be upon precept] The original is remarkably abrupt and sententious.

Verse 12. This is the rest] The sense of this verse is: God had warned them by his prophets that their safety and security, their deliverance from their present calamities and from the apprehensions of still greater approaching, depended wholly on their trust in God, their faith and obedience; but they rejected this gracious warning with contempt and mockery.

Verse 15. A covenant with death] To be in covenant with, is a kind of proverbial expression to denote perfect security from evil and mischief of any sort. Job v. 23; Hos. ii. 19.

We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement] Asinu chozek, we have made a vision, we have had an interview, struck a bargain, and settled all preliminaries. So they had made a covenant with hell by diabolic sacrifice, carathnu berith, "We have cut the covenant sacrifice." Thus, it is intimated, these bad people made an agreement with sheol, with demons, with whom they had an interview; i.e., meeting them in the covenant sacrifice! To such a pitch had the Israelitish idolatry reached at that time!

Verse 16. Behold, I lay in Zion] See the notes on the parallel places in the margin. It most undoubtedly belongs to Jesus Christ alone; and his application of it to himself even the Jews could not contest.

17 Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet: and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding place.

18 And your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it.

19 From the time that it goeth forth it shall take you: for morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night: and it shall be a vexation only to understand the report.

20 For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it: and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it.

21 For the LORD shall rise up as in Mount Perazim, he shall be wroth as in the valley of Gibeon, that he may do his work, his strange work; and bring to pass his act, his strange act.

22 Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong: for I have heard from the Lord God of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth.

23 Give ye ear, and hear my voice; hearken, and hear my speech.

24 Doth the plowman plow all day to sow? doth he open and break the clods of his ground?

25 When he hath made plain the face thereof, doth he not cast abroad the fitches, and scatter the cummin, and cast in the principal wheat, and the appointed barley, and the rye in their place?

26 For his God doth instruct him to discretion, and doth teach him.

27 For the fitches are not threshed with a threshing instrument, neither is a cart wheel turned about upon the cummin; but the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod.

28 Bread corn is bruised; because he will not ever be threshing it, nor break it with the wheel of his cart, nor bruise it with his horsemen.

29 This also cometh forth from the LORD of hosts, which is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working.

Verse 18. Your covenant with death shall be disannulled] See Jer. xxxiii. 21, where the very same phrase is used.

Verse 20. For the bed is shorter] A mashal or proverbial saying, the meaning of which is, that they will find all means of defence and protection insufficient to secure them, and cover them from the evils coming upon them.

Verse 23. Give ye ear, and hear my voice] The foregoing discourse, consisting of severe reproofs, and threatenings of dreadful judgments impending on the Jews for their vices, and their profane contempt of God's warnings by his messengers, the prophet concludes with an explanation and defence of God's method of dealing with his people in an elegant parable of allegory; in which he employs a variety of images, all taken from the science of agriculture. As the husbandman uses various methods in preparing his land, and adapting it to the several kinds of seeds to be sown, with a due observation of times and seasons; and when he hath gathered in his harvest, employs methods as various in separating the corn from the straw and the chaff by different instruments, according to the nature of the different sorts of grain; so God, with unerring wisdom, and with strict justice, instructs, admonishes, and corrects his people; chastises and punishes them in various ways, as the exigence of the case requires; now more moderately, now more severely; always tempering justice with mercy; in order to reclaim the wicked, to improve the good, and, finally, to separate the one from the other.

Verse 26. For his God doth instruct him] All nations have agreed in attributing agriculture, the most useful and the most necessary of all sciences, to the invention and to the suggestion of their deities.

Verses 27, 28. Four methods of threshing are here mentioned, by different instruments; the flail, the drag, the wain, and the treading of the cattle. The staff or flail was used for the infirmitia semina, says Jerome, the grain that was too tender to be treated in the other methods. The drag consisted of a sort of strong planks, made rough at the bottom with hard stones or iron; it was drawn by horses or oxen over the corn sheaves spread on the floor, the driver sitting upon it. The wain was much like the former; but had wheels with iron teeth, or edges like a saw.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Distress of Ariel, or Jerusalem, on Sennacherib's invasion, with manifest allusion, however, to the still greater distress which it suffered from the Romans, 1-4. Disappointment and fall of Sennacherib described in terms, like the event, the most awful and terrible, 5-8. Stupidity and hypocrisy of the Jews, 9-16. Rejection of the Jews, and calling of the Gentiles, 17. The chapter concludes by a recurrence to the favourite topics of the prophet, viz., the great extension of the Messiah's kingdom in the latter days, and the future restoration of Israel, 18-24.

WOE to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt! add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices.

* Or, O Ariel, that is, the Son of God.—^a Ezek. xliii. 15, 16.

Verse 1. Ariel] That Jerusalem is here called by this name is very certain; but the reason of this name, and the meaning of it as applied to Jerusalem, is very obscure and doubtful.

From Ezekiel xliii. 15, we learn that Ari-el was the name of the altar of burnt-offerings, put here for the city itself in which that altar was. In the second verse it is said, I will

2 Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow: and it shall be unto me as Ariel.

* Or, of the city.—^a 2 Sam. v. 9.—^b Heb. cut off the heads.

distress Ari-el, and it shall be unto me as Ari-el. The first Ari-el here seems to mean Jerusalem, which should be distressed by the Assyrians: the second Ari-el seems to mean the altar of burnt-offerings. But why is it said, "Ari-el shall be unto me as Ari-el?" As the altar of burnt-offerings was surrounded daily by the victims which were offered; so the walls of Jerusalem shall be surrounded by the dead

8 And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee.

4 And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, * out of the ground, and thy speech shall ^b whisper out of the dust.

5 Moreover the multitude of thy ^c strangers shall be like small dust, and the multitude of the terrible ones shall be ^d as chaff that passeth away: yea, it shall be ^e at an instant suddenly.

6 'Thou shalt be visited of the LORD of hosts with thunder, and with earthquake, and great noise, with storm and tempest, and the flame of devouring fire.

7 * And the multitude of all the nations that fight against Ariel, even all that fight against her and her munition, and that distress her, shall be ^f as a dream of a night vision.

8 'It shall even be as when an hungry man dreameth, and, behold, he eateth; but he awaketh, and his soul is empty: or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and, behold, he drinketh; but he awaketh, and, behold, he is faint, and his soul hath appetite: so shall the multitude of all the nations be, that fight against Mount Zion.

9 Stay yourselves, and wonder; ^g cry ye out, and cry: ^h they are drunken, ⁱ but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.

10 For ^j the LORD hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath ^k closed your eyes: the prophets and your ^l rulers, ^m the seers hath he covered.

11 And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a ⁿ book ^o that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: ^p and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed.

12 And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I am not learned.

13 Wherefore the LORD said, 'Forasmuch as this people draw near ^q me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by ^r the precept of men:

14 * Therefore, behold, ^s I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: ^t for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.

15 * Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the LORD, and their works are in the dark, and ^u they say, "Who seeth us? and who knoweth us?"

16 Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay: for shall the ^v work say of him that made it, He made me not? or shall ~~the~~ thing framed say of him that framed it, He had no understanding?

17 Is it not yet a very little while, and ^w Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest?

18 And ^x in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.

19 * The meek also ^y shall increase their joy in the LORD, and ^z the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.

20 For the terrible one is brought to nought, and ^{aa} the scorner is consumed, and all that ^{ab} watch for iniquity are cut off:

21 That make a man an offender for a word, and ^{ac} lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just ^{ad} for a thing of nought.

22 Therefore thus saith the LORD, ^{ae} "who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale.

23 But when he seeth his children, ^{af} the work of mine hands, in the midst of him, they shall sanctify my name, and sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel.

24 They ^{ag} also that erred in spirit ^{ah} shall come to understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine.

bodies of those who had rebelled against the Lord, and who should be victims to his justice.

Add ye year to year] Ironically. Go on year after year, keep your solemn feasts; yet know, that God will punish you for your hypocritical worship, consisting of mere form destitute of true piety. Probably delivered at the time of some great feast, when they were thus employed.

Verse 2. There shall be heaviness and sorrow] Instead of your present joy and festivity.

And it shall be unto me as Ariel.] That is, it shall be the seat of the fire of God; which shall issue from thence to consume his enemies. See note on ver. 1. Or, perhaps, all on flame; as it was when taken by the Chaldeans; or covered with carcases and blood, as when taken by the Romans: an intimation of which more distant events, though not immediate subjects of the prophecy, may perhaps be given in this obscure passage.

Verse 4. And thy speech shall be low out of the dust] That the souls of the dead uttered a feeble stridulous sound, very different from the natural human voice, was a popular notion among the heathens as well as among the Jews. From these arts of the necromancers the popular notion seems to have arisen, that the ghost's voice was a weak, stridulous, almost inarticulate sort of sound, very different from the speech of the living.

Verse 5. The multitude of thy strangers] "The multitude of the proud." For saranyich, thy strangers, read sedim, the proud, according to the Septuagint. See note on chap. xxv. 2.

The fifth, sixth, and seventh verses contain an admirable description of the destruction of Sennacherib's army, with a beautiful variety of the most expressive and sublime images: perhaps more adapted to show the greatness, the suddenness, and horror of the event, than the means and manner by which it was effected. Compare chap. xxx. 30-33.

Verse 7. As a dream] This is the beginning of the comparison, which is pursued and applied in the next verse. Sennacherib and his mighty army are not compared to a dream because of their sudden disappearance; but the disappointment of their eager hopes is compared to what happens to a hungry and thirsty man, when he awakes from a dream in which fancy had presented to him meat and drink in abundance, and finds it nothing but a vain illusion. The comparison is elegant and beautiful in the highest degree, well wrought up, and perfectly suited to the end proposed. The image is extremely natural, but not obvious: it appeals to our inward feelings, not to our outward senses; and is applied to an event in its concomitant circumstances exactly similar, but in its nature totally different.

Verse 9. Stay yourselves, and wonder] Hithmahmehu, go on what-wha-whaling, in a state of mental indetermination, till the overflowing scourge take you away. See the note on Pa. cxix. 60. [li. 21.

They are drunken, but not with wine] See note on chap.

Verse 17. And Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field] "Ere Lebanon become like Carmel." A mašhal, or proverbial saying, expressing any great revolution of things; and, when respecting two subjects, an entire reciprocal change: explained here by some interpreters, I think with great probability, as having its principal view beyond the revolutions then near at hand, to the rejection of the Jews, and the calling of the Gentiles. Carmel stands here opposed to Lebanon, and therefore is to be taken as a proper name.

Verse 21. Him that reproveth in the gate] "Him that pleaded in the gate."

Verse 22. Who redeemed Abraham] As God redeemed Abraham from among idolaters and workers of iniquity, so will he redeem those who hear the words of the Book, and are humbled before him, ver. 18, 19.

Concerning the house of Jacob—"The God of the house of Jacob"] I read El, as a noun, not a preposition: the parallel line favours this sense; and there is no address to the house of Jacob to justify the other.

CHAPTER XXX.

The Jews reproved for their reliance on Egypt, 1-7. Threatened for their obstinate adherence to this alliance, 8-17. Images the most elegant and lofty by which the intense gloriousness of Messiah's reign at the period when all Israel shall be added to the church is beautifully set forth, 18-26. Dreadful fall of Sennacherib's army, an event most manifestly typical of the terrible and sudden overthrow of Antichrist; as, unless this typical reference be admitted, no possible connexion can be imagined between the stupendous events which took place in Hezekiah's reign, and the very remote and inconceivably more glorious displays of divine vengeance and mercy in the days of the Messiah, 27-33.

WOE to the rebellious children, saith the LORD, "that take counsel, but not of me; and that cover with a covering, but not of my spirit, ^b that they may add sin to sin:

2 "That walk to go down into Egypt, and ^d have not asked at my mouth; to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow of Egypt!

3 "Therefore shall the strength of Pharaoh be your shame, and the trust in the shadow of Egypt your confusion.

4 For his princes were at ' Zoan, and his ambassadors came to Hanes.

5 "They were all ashamed of a people that could not profit them, nor be an help nor profit, but a shame, and also a reproach.

6 "The burden of the beasts of the south: into the land of trouble and anguish, from whence come the young and old lion, ^a the viper and fiery flying serpent, they will carry their riches upon the shoulders of young asses, and their treasures upon the bunches of camels, to a people that shall not profit them.

Verse 1. And that cover with a covering] Heb. "Who pour out a libation." Sacrifice and libation were ceremonies constantly used, in ancient times by most nations in the ratifying of covenants: a libation therefore is used for a covenant. This seems to be the most easy explication of the Hebrew phrase, and it has the authority of the Septuagint.

Verse 4. Hanes.] Six MSS. of Kennicott's, and perhaps six others, with four of De Rossi's, read chinnam, in vain, for Hanes; and so also the Septuagint, who read likewise, yagau, laboured, for yaggu, arrived at.

Verse 6. The burden] Massa seems here to be taken in its proper sense; the load, not the oracle. The same subject is continued; and there seems to be no place here for a new title to a distinct prophecy.

Does not burden of the beasts of the South, in this place relate to the presents sent by Hoshea king of Israel to the South—to Egypt, which lay south of Judea, to engage the Egyptians to succour him against the king of Assyria?

8 Now go, ^a write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for ^a the time to come for ever and ever:

9 That ^a this is a rebellious people, lying children, children that will not hear the law of the LORD:

10 ^a Which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophecy not unto us right things, ^a speak unto us smooth things, prophecy deceits:

11 Get you out of the way, turn aside out of the path, cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us.

12 Wherefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, Because ye despise this word, and trust in ^a oppression and perverseness, and stay thereon:

13 Therefore this iniquity shall be to you ^a as a breach ready to fall, swelling out in a high wall, whose breaking ^a cometh suddenly at an instant.

14 And ^a he shall break it as the breaking of ^a the potters' vessel that is broken in pieces; he shall not spare: so that there shall not be found in the bursting ^a of it a sherd to take fire from the hearth, or to take water withal out of the pit.

15 For thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel; ^a In returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength: ^a and ye would not.

16 But ye said, No; for we will flee upon horses;

Into the land of trouble and anguish] The same deserts are here spoken of which the Israelites passed through when they came out of Egypt, which Moses describes, Deut. viii. 15, as "that great and terrible wilderness wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought; where there was no water." And which was designed to be a kind of barrier between them and Egypt, of which the Lord had said, "Ye shall henceforth return no more that way." Deut. xvii. 16.

Verse 7. Their strength is to sit still.] "Rahab the Inactive." The two last words, hem shabeth, joined into one, make the participle phel hammeshabbeth. I find the learned professor Doederlein, in his version of Isaiah, and note in this place, has given the same conjecture; which he speaks of as having been formerly published by him. A concurrence of different persons in the same conjecture adds to it a greater degree of probability.

Verse 18. Swelling out in a high wall] It has been observed before, that the buildings of Asia generally consist of therefore shall ye flee: and, We will ride upon the swift; therefore shall they that pursue you be swift.

17 *One thousand shall flee at the rebuke of one; at the rebuke of five shall ye flee: till ye be left as a beacon upon the top of a mountain, and as an ensign on an hill.

18 And therefore will the LORD wait, that he may be gracious unto you, and therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you: for the LORD is a God of judgment: ^b blessed are all they that wait for him.

19 For the people ^a shall dwell in Zion at Jerusalem: thou shalt weep no more: he will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when he shall hear it, he will answer thee.

20 And though the LORD give you ^a the bread of adversity, and the water of ^a affliction, yet shall not thy ^a teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers:

21 And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye ^a turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left.

22 ^a Ye shall defile also the covering of ^a thy graven images of silver, and the ornament of thy molten images of gold: thou shalt ^a cast them away as a menstruous cloth: ^a thou shalt say unto it, Get thee hence.

23 ^a Then shall he give the rain of thy seed, that thou shalt sow the ground withal; and bread of the increase of the earth, and it shall be fat and plenteous: in that day shall thy cattle feed in large pastures.

little better than what we call mud walls. These walls being made of earth often cleave from top to bottom. This shows clearly how obvious and expressive the image is. The Psalmist has in the same manner made use of it, to express sudden and utter destruction. Ps. lxxii. 4.

Verse 17. At the rebuke of five shall ye flee] In the second line of this verse a word is manifestly omitted, which should answer to one thousand in the first. The word is rebabab, as I am persuaded any one will be convinced, who will compare the following passages with this place. Deut. xxxii. 30. Lev. xxvi. 8.

Verse 19. For the people shall dwell in Zion] The word holy, lost out of the text, but happily supplied by the Septuagint, clears up the sense, otherwise extremely obscure. When the rest of the cities of the land were taken by the king of Assyria, Zion was preserved, and all that were in it.

Thou shalt weep no more] Thou shalt implore him with weeping.] The negative particle lo is not acknowledged by the Septuagint.

Verse 22. Ye shall defile] Ye shall treat as defiled.] The very prohibition of Moses, Deut. vii. 25, only thrown out of the prose into the poetical form.

Verse 26. Shall be sevenfold] The text adds, as the light of seven days, ^a a manifest gloss, taken in from the margin; it is not in most of the copies of the Septuagint. It interrupts the rhythmical construction, and obscures the sense by a false, or at least an unnecessary, interpretation.

By moon, sun, light, are to be understood the abundance of spiritual and temporal felicity, with which God should bless them in the days of the Messiah, which should be sevenfold, i. e., vastly exceed all that they had ever before possessed.

tain, and upon every ^a high hill, rivers and streams of waters in the day of the great slaughter, when the towers fall.

26 Moreover ^a the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days, in the day that the LORD bindeth up the breach of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wound.

27 Behold, the name of the LORD cometh from far, burning with his anger, ^a and the burden thereof is ^a heavy: his lips are full of indignation, and his tongue as a devouring fire:

28 And ^a his breath, as an overflowing stream, ^a shall reach to the midst of the neck, to sift the nations with the sieve of vanity: and there shall be ^a a bridle in the jaws of the people, causing them to err.

29 Ye shall have a song, as in the night ^a when a holy solemnity is kept; and gladness of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe to come into the ^a mountain of the LORD, to the ^a mighty One of Israel.

30 ^a And the LORD shall cause ^a his glorious voice to be heard, and shall show the lighting down of his arm, with the indignation of his anger, and with the flame of a devouring fire, with scattering, and tempest, ^b and hailstones.

31 For ^a through the voice of the LORD shall the Assyrian be beaten down, ^a which smote with a rod.

32 And ^a in every place where the grounded staff shall pass, which the LORD shall ^a lay upon him, it shall be with tabrets and harps: and in battles of ^a shaking will he fight ^a with it.

33 ^a For Tophet is ordained ^a of old; yea, for the king it is prepared; he hath made it deep and large; the pile thereof is fire and much wood: the breath of the LORD, like a stream of brimstone, doth kindle it.

Verse 27. And the burden thereof is heavy] And the flame raged violently.] Massaah; this word seems to be rightly rendered in our translation, the flame, Judg. xx. 38, 40, &c.; a sign of fire, Jer. vi. 1; called properly masseeth, an elevation, from its tending upwards.

Verse 28. To sift the nations with the sieve of vanity] The Vulgate seems to be the only one of the ancient interpreters who has explained rightly the sense; but he has dropped the image: to reduce the nations to nothing.

There shall be a bridle in the jaws] A metaphor taken from a headstrong, unruly horse: the bridle checks, restrains, and directs him. What the true God does in restraining sinners, has been also attributed to the false gods of the heathen.

Verse 30. The Lord shall cause his glorious voice to be heard] Kimchi understands this of the great destruction of the Assyrian host by the angel of the Lord.

Verse 32. The grounded staff] For musadah, the grounded staff, of which no one yet has been able to make any tolerable sense, Le Clerc conjectured musarah, of correction (see Prov. xxii. 15); and so it is in two MSS. (one of them ancient), and seems to be so in the Bodleian MS. The Syriac has—the taming rod, or rod of subjection.

With tabrets and harps] With every demonstration of joy and thanksgiving for the destruction of the enemy in so wonderful a manner: with hymns of praise, accompanied with musical instruments.

Verse 33. For Tophet is ordained] Tophet is a valley very near to Jerusalem, to the south-east, called also the valley of Hinnom or Gehenna; where the Canaanites, and afterwards the Israelites, sacrificed their children, by making them pass through the fire, that is, by burning them in the fire, &c.

Moloch, as some suppose. It is therefore used for a place of punishment by fire; and by our blessed Saviour in the gospel for hell-fire, as the Jews themselves had applied it. Here the place where the Assyrian army was destroyed is called Tophet by a metonymy, probably at a greater distance from Jerusalem, and quite on the opposite side of it.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Jews again reproved for their confidence in Egypt, finely contrasted with their neglect of the power and protection of God, 1-8. Deliverance and protection are, notwithstanding, promised, expressed by two similes; the first remarkably lofty and poetical, the latter singularly beautiful and tender, 4, 5. Exhortation to repentance, joined with the prediction of a more reformed period, 6, 7. This chapter concludes, like the preceding, with a prophecy of the fall of Sennacherib, 8, 9.

WOE to them ^a that go down to Egypt for help; and ^b stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong: but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, ^c neither seek the LORD!

2 Yet he also is wise, and will bring evil, and ^d will not ^e call back his words: but will arise against the house of the evil doers, and against the help of them that work iniquity.

3 Now the Egyptians are ^f men, and not God; and their horses flesh, and not spirit. When the LORD shall stretch out his hand, both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they all shall fail together.

4 For thus hath the LORD spoken unto me, ^g Like as the lion, and the young lion roaring on his prey, when a multitude of shepherds is called forth against him, he will not be afraid of their voice, nor abase himself for the ^h noise of them: ⁱ so shall the LORD of hosts come down to fight for Mount Zion, and for the hill thereof.

5 ^j As birds flying, so will the LORD of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending ^k also he will deliver it; and passing over he will preserve it.

6 Turn ye unto him from whom the children of Israel have ^l deeply revolted.

7 For in that day every man shall ^m cast away his idols of silver, and ⁿ his idols of gold, which your own hands have made unto you for ^o a sin.

8 Then shall the Assyrian ^p fall with the sword, not of a mighty man; and the sword, not of a mean man, shall devour him: but he shall flee ^q from the sword, and his young men shall be ^r discomfited.

9 And ^s he ^t shall pass over to ^u his strong hold for fear, and his princes shall be afraid of the ensign, saith the LORD, whose fire is in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem.

Verse 1. Woe to them that go down to Egypt] This is a reproof to the Israelites for forming an alliance with the Egyptians, and not trusting in the Lord.

Verse 8. He that helpeth (the Egyptians) shall fall, and he that is holpen (the Israelites) shall fall down—together.

Verse 5. Passing over] The generality of interpreters observe in this place an allusion to the deliverance which God vouchsafed to his people when he destroyed the first-born of the Egyptians, and exempted those of the Israelites sojourning among them by a peculiar interposition. The same word is made use of here which is used upon that occasion, and which gave the name to the feast which was instituted in commemoration of that deliverance, pesach. But the difficulty is to reconcile the commonly received meaning of that word with the circumstances of the similitude here used to illustrate the deliverance represented as parallel to the deliverance in Egypt.

The common notion of God's passage over the houses of the Israelites is, that in going through the land of Egypt to smite the first-born, seeing the blood on the door of the houses of the Israelites, he passed over, or skipped, those houses, and forbore to smite them. But that this is not the true notion of the thing, will be plain from considering the words of the sacred historian, where he describes very explicitly the action: "For JEHOVAH will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood on the lintels and on the two side posts, JEHOVAH will spring forward over (or before) the door, upasach Jehovah al happethach, and will not suffer the destroyer to come into your houses to smite you." Exod. xii. 23. Here are manifestly two distinct agents, with which the notion of passing over is not consistent, for that supposes but one agent. The two agents are the destroying angel passing through to smite every house, and JEHOVAH the Protector keeping pace with him; and who, seeing the door of the Israelite marked with the blood, the token prescribed, leaps forward, throws himself with a sudden motion in the way, opposes the destroying angel, and covers and protects that house against the destroying angel, nor suffers him to smite it. In this way of considering the action, the beautiful similitude of the bird protecting her young, answers exactly to the application by the allusion to the deliverance in Egypt. As the mother bird spreads her wings to cover her young, throws herself before them, and opposes the rapacious bird that assaults them, so shall JEHOVAH protect, as with a shield, Jerusalem from the enemy, protecting and delivering, springing forward and rescuing her.

30. — See 2 Kings xix. 35, 36. Ch. xxxvii. 36. — ^a Or, for fear of the sword. — ^b Or, tributary. — ^c Heb. for melting or tribute. — ^d Ch. xxxvii. 37. — ^e Deut. xii. 25, in the margin. — ^f Heb. his rock shall pass away for fear. — ^g Or, his strength.

Verse 6. Have deeply revolted.] All the ancient Versions read taamiku, in the second person, instead of heemiku, they have deeply revolted, &c.

Verse 7. Which your own hands have made unto you for a sin.] The construction of the word chet, sin, in this place is not easy. The learned professor Schroeder, makes it to be in regimine with yedeychem, as an epithet, your sinful hands. The Septuagint render the pronoun in the third person, their hands.

Verse 8. Then shall the Assyrian fall, &c.] Because he was to be discomfited by the angel of the Lord, destroying in his camp, in one night, upwards of one hundred and eighty thousand men; and Sennacherib himself fell by the hands of the princes, his own sons. Not mighty men, for they were not soldiers; not mean men, for they were princes.

CHAPTER XXXII.

*Prophecy of great prosperity under Hezekiah; but, in its highest sense, applicable to Christ, 1-8. Description of * impending calamities, 9-14. Rejection of the Jews, and calling of the Gentiles, 15. The future prosperity of the church, 16-20.*

BEHOLD, a *king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.

2 And a man shall be as an hiding-place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

3 And the eyes of them that see shall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear shall hear.

4 The heart also of the rash shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly.

5 The vile person shall be no more called liberal, nor the churl said to be bountiful.

6 For the vile person will speak villany, and his heart will work iniquity, to practise hypocrisy, and to utter error against the Lord, to make empty the soul of the hungry, and he will cause the drink of the thirsty to fail.

7 The instruments also of the churl are evil: he deviseth wicked devices to destroy the poor with lying words, even when the needy speaketh right.

8 But the liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand.

9 Rise up, ye women that are at ease; hear my voice, ye careless daughters; give ear unto my speech.

10 Many days and years shall ye be troubled,

Verse 1. Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness] If king Hezekiah were a type of Christ, then this prophecy may refer to his time; but otherwise it seems to have Hezekiah primarily in view. It is evident, however, that in the fullest sense these words cannot be applied to any man; God alone can do all that is promised here.

Verse 2. As the shadow of a great rock] The shadow of a great projecting rock is the most refreshing that is possible in a hot country, not only as most perfectly excluding the rays of the sun, but also as having in itself a natural coolness, which it reflects and communicates to every thing about it.

Verse 3. And the eyes of them that see shall not be dim] "And him the eyes of those that see shall regard." For velo, and not, Le Clerc reads velo, and to him, of which mistake the Masoretes acknowledge there are fifteen instances; and many more are reckoned by others. The removal of the negative restores to the verb its true and usual sense.

Verse 5. The vile person shall no more be called liberal] The different epithets here employed require minute explanation.

The vile person—nabal, the pampered, fattened, brainless fellow, who eats to live, and lives to eat; who will scarcely part with any thing, and that which he does give he gives with an evil eye and a grudging heart.

Liberal—nadib; the generous, openhearted, princely man, who lives only to get and to do good.

The churl—kilas, the avaricious man; he who starves himself amidst his plenty, and will not take the necessities of life for fear of lessening his stock.

Bountiful—shoa, he who is abundantly rich; who rejoices in his plenty, and deals out to the distressed with a liberal hand.

ye careless women: for the vintage shall fail, the gathering shall not come.

11 Tremble, ye women that are at ease; be troubled, ye careless ones; strip you, and make you bare, and gird sackcloth upon your loins.

12 They shall lament for the teats, for the pleasant fields, for the fruitful vine.

13 Upon the land of my people shall come up thorns and briers; yea, upon all the houses of joy in the joyous city:

14 Because the palaces shall be forsaken; the multitude of the city shall be left; the forts and towers shall be for dens for ever, a joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks;

15 Until the spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest.

16 Then judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and righteousness remain in the fruitful field.

17 And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever.

18 And my people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in sure dwellings, and in quiet resting places;

19 When it shall hail, coming down on the forest; and the city shall be low in a low place.

20 Blessed are ye that sow beside all waters, that send forth thither the feet of the ox and the ass.

Verse 6. The vile person will speak villany] A sort of proverbial saying.

Against the Lord] For El, two MSS. read al, more properly; but both are of nearly the same meaning.

Verse 7. The instruments also of the churl are evil] His machinations, his designs. The paronomasia, which the prophet frequently deals in, suggested this expression veche-lai kelai. The first word is expressed with some variety in the MSS.

To destroy the poor with lying words] A word seems to have been lost here, and two others to have suffered a small alteration, which has made the sentence very obscure. The Septuagint have happily retained the rendering of the lost word, and restored the sentence in all its parts: "And disperse the words of the poor in judgment."

Verse 11. Gird sackcloth] Sak, sackcloth, a word necessary to the sense, is here lost, but preserved by the Septuagint. [The word is involved in the verb, which means to gird with sackcloth.]

Tremble—be troubled—strip you] These are infinitives, but [because of the idiom] are to be taken in an imperative sense.

Verse 12. They shall lament—for the pleasant fields] "Mourn ye for the pleasant field."

Verse 13. Shall come up thorns and briers] The description of impending distress which begins at ver. 18 belongs to other times than that of Sennacherib's invasion, from which they were so soon delivered. It must at least extend to the ruin of the country and city by the Chaldeans. And the promise of blessings which follows was not fulfilled under the Mosaic dispensation; they belong to the kingdom of Messiah. Compare ver. 15 with chap. xxix. 17, and see the note there.

Verse 14. The forts] "Ophel." It was a part of Mount Zion, rising higher than the rest, at the eastern extremity, near to the temple, a little to the south of it; called by Micah, chap. iv. 8, "Ophel of the daughter of Zion." It was naturally strong by its situation; and had a wall of its own, by which it was separated from the rest of Zion.

Verse 17. The work of righteousness] Righteousness works and produces peace.

The effect of righteousness] Abodath, the culture. Righteousness, cultivated by peace, produces tranquillity of mind and permanent security. Reader, hast thou the principle? If so, dost thou cultivate it? If thou dost, thou hast peace of conscience, joy in the Holy Ghost, and a sure and certain hope of everlasting life.

Verse 19. The city shall be low in a low place.] The city—probably Nineveh or Babylon: but this verse is very obscure.

Verse 20. That sow beside all waters] "Rice can never be too much watered. It grows in the water, and the fields where it is sown resemble marshes rather than fields cultivated by ploughing. Although it be covered by water six or seven feet deep, yet it raises its stalk above it; and this grows long in proportion to the depth of the water by which the field is inundated."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

This chapter contains the sequel of the prophecy respecting Sennacherib. The prophet addresses himself to the Assyrian monarch, 1-4. The mercy and power of God acknowledged by the Jews, 5, 6. Distress and despair of the Jews at the approach of Sennacherib, 7-9. Gracious promise of deliverance, 10-13. Dreadful apprehensions of the wicked, and security of the righteous, 14-17. The security of the Jews under the reign of Hezekiah, and the wretched condition of Sennacherib and his army, 18-24.

WOE to thee * that spoilest, and thou wast not spoiled; and dealest treacherously, and they dealt not treacherously with thee! * when thou shalt cease to spoil, thou shalt be spoiled; and when thou shalt make an end to deal treacherously, they shall deal treacherously with thee.

2 O LORD, be gracious unto us; * we have waited for thee: be thou their arm every morning, our salvation also in the time of trouble.

3 At the noise of the tumult the people fled; at the lifting up of thyself the nations were scattered.

4 And your spoil shall be gathered like the gathering of the caterpillar: as the running to and fro of locusts shall he run upon them.

5 * The LORD is exalted; for he dwelleth on high: he hath filled Zion with judgment and righteousness.

6 And wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times, and strength of * salvation: the fear of the LORD is his treasure.

7 Behold, their * valiant ones shall cry without: * the ambassadors of peace shall weep bitterly.

8 * The highways lie waste, the wayfaring man ceaseth: * he hath broken the covenant, he hath despised the cities, he regardeth no man.

9 * The earth mourneth and languisheth: Lebanon is ashamed and * hewn down: Sharon is like a wilderness; and Bashan and Carmel shake off their fruits.

10 * Now will I rise, saith the LORD; now will I be exalted; now will I lift up myself.

11 * Ye shall conceive chaff, ye shall bring forth stubble: your breath, as fire, shall devour you.

12 And the people shall be as the burnings of lime: * as thorns cut up shall they be burned in the fire.

13 Hear, * ye that are far off, what I have done; and, ye that are near, acknowledge my might.

14 The sinners in Zion are afraid; fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrites. Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?

15 He that * walketh * righteousness, and speaketh * uprightly; he that despiseth the gain of * oppressions, that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of * blood, and * shutteth his eyes from seeing evil;

16 He shall dwell on * high: his place of defence shall be the munitions of rocks: bread shall be given him; his waters shall be sure.

17 Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty: they shall behold * the land that is very far off.

18 Thine heart shall meditate terror. * Where is the scribe? where is the * receiver? where is he that counted the towers?

Verse 2. Be thou their arm every morning] For zeroam, their arm, the Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate read zeroemu, our arm, in the first person of the pronoun, not the third.

The prophet is here praying against the enemies of God's people; and yet this part of the prayer seems to be in their behalf: but from the above authorities it appears that our arm is the true reading.

Verse 3. At the noise of the tumult] "From thy terrible voice."

Verse 7. Their valiant ones shall cry without] Three MSS. read erelim, that is, lions of God, or strong lions. So they called valiant men heroes; which appellation the Arabians and Persians still use.

The word erellam, which we translate valiant ones, is very difficult; no man knows what it means. Kimchi supposes that it is the name of the an. The Vulgate, and my old MS., translate it seers; and most of the Versions understand it in this way.

Verse 14. The sinners in Zion are afraid] Zion has been generally considered as a type of the church of God. Now all the members of God's church should be holy, and given to good works; sinners in Zion, therefore, are portentous beings! but, alas, where are they not?

Verse 15. That stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood] "Who stoppeth his ears to the proposal of bloodshed."

Verse 18. Where is the scribe?] The person appointed by the king of Assyria to estimate their number and property in reference to their being heavily taxed.

Where is the receiver?] Or he who was to have collected this tribute.

19 ^aThou shalt not see a fierce people, ^ba people of deeper speech than thou canst perceive; of a ^cstammering tongue, that thou canst not understand.

20 ^dLook upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see ^eJerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; ^fnot one of ^gthe stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken.

21 But there the glorious LORD will be unto us a place ^hof broad rivers and streams: wherein shall

Where is he that counted the towers? [That is, the commander of the enemy's forces, who surveyed the fortifications of the city, and took an account of the height, strength, and situation of the walls and towers, that he might know where to make the assault with the greatest advantage.]

Verse 20. Look upon Zion—"Thou shalt see Zion" [For chazeh, "see," read techezeh, "thou shalt see," with the Chaldean.—Houbigant. At the end of this verse we find in the Masoretic Bibles this note, chatsi hassepher, "the middle of the book," that is, the middle of the book of Isaiah.]

Verse 21. The glorious Lord] "The glorious name of JEHOVAH." I take shem for a noun, with the Septuagint and Syriac. See Ps. xx. 1. Prov. xviii. 10.

Verse 23. Thy tacklings are loosed] Here the Assyrians are represented under the figure of a ship wrecked by a violent storm; and the people on the beach, young, old, feeble, and diseased, gathering the spoil without any to hinder them. [The allusion is probably to Jerusalem, and compares her in her weakness to the days of promised glory.]

Their mast] For tornam, "their mast," the Syriac reads torneycha, "thy mast;" the Septuagint and Vulgate, tornecha, "thy mast is fallen aside."

Verse 24. And the inhabitant shall not say] This verse is somewhat obscure. The meaning of it seems to be, that the army of Sennacherib shall by the stroke of God be reduced to so shattered and so weak a condition, that the Jews shall fall upon the remains of them, and plunder them without resistance; that the most infirm and disabled of the go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby.

22 For the LORD is our judge, the LORD is our ⁱlaw-giver, ^jthe LORD is our king; he will save us.

23 ^kThy tacklings are loosed; they could not well strengthen their mast, they could not spread the sail: then is the prey of a great spoil divided; the lame take the prey.

24 And the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: ^lthe people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity.

[Heb. statute-maker.—^kPs. lxxxix. 18.—^lOr, They have forsaken thy tacklings.—^mJer. i. 20.]

people of Jerusalem shall come in for their share of the spoil; the lame shall seize the prey; even the sick and the diseased shall throw aside their infirmities, and recover strength enough to hasten to the general plunder.

The last line of the verse is parallel to the first, and expresses the same sense in other words. Sickness being considered as a visitation from God, and a punishment of sin; the forgiveness of sin is equivalent to the removal of a disease. Thus the Psalmist:—Ps. ciii. 8.

That this prophecy was exactly fulfilled, I think we may gather from the history of this great event given by the prophet himself. It is plain that Hezekiah, by his treaty with Sennacherib, by which he agreed to pay him three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold, had stripped himself of his whole treasure. He not only gave him all the silver and gold that was in his own treasury and in that of the temple, but was even forced to cut off the gold from the doors of the temple and from the pillars, with which he had himself overlaid them, to satisfy the demands of the king of Assyria; but after the destruction of the Assyrian army, we find that he "had exceeding much riches, and that he made himself treasures for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones," &c. 2 Chron. xxxii. 27. He was so rich, that out of pride and vanity he displayed his wealth to the ambassadors from Babylon. This cannot be otherwise accounted for, than by the prodigious spoil that was taken on the destruction of the Assyrian army.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The prophet earnestly exhorts all nations to attend to the communication which he has received from Jehovah, as the matter is of the highest importance, and of universal concern, 1. The wrath of God is denounced against all the nations that had provoked to anger the Defender of the cause of Zion, 2, 3. Great crowd of images, by which the final overthrow and utter extermination of every thing that opposes the spread of true religion in the earth are forcibly and majestically set forth; images so very bold and expressive as to render it impossible, without doing great violence to symbolical language, to restrain their import to the calamities which befell the Edomites in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, or in that of any other potentate, or even to the calamities which the enemies of the church have yet suffered since the delivery of the prophecy. Edom must therefore be a type of Antichrist, the last grand adversary of the people of God; and consequently this most awful prophecy, in its ultimate signification, remains to be accomplished, 4-15. The churches of God, at the period of the consummation, commanded to consult the book of Jehovah, and note the exact fulfilment of these terrible predictions in their minutest details. Not one jot or tittle relative even to the circumstances shadowed forth by the impure animals shall be found to fail; for what the mouth of the Lord has declared necessary to satisfy the divine justice, His Spirit will accomplish, 16, 17.

COME ^anear, ye nations, to hear; and hear-ken, ye people: ^blet the earth hear, and ^call that is therein; the world, and all things that come forth of it.

2 For the indignation of the LORD is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies: he hath utterly destroyed them, he hath delivered them to the slaughter.

3 Their slain also shall be cast out, and ^dtheir stink shall come up out of their carcases, and the mountains shall be melted with their blood.

4 And ^eall the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll: ^fand all their host shall fall down as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a ^gfalling fig from the fig-tree.

5 ^hFor my sword shall be bathed in heaven: behold, ⁱit shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse, to judgment.

6 The sword of the LORD is filled with blood, it is made fat with fatness, and with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the kidneys of rams: for ^jthe LORD hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea.

7 And the ^kunicorns shall come down with them, and the bullocks with the bulls; and their land shall be ^lsoaked with blood, and their dust made fat with fatness.

8 For it is the day of the LORD's ^mvengeance, and the year of recompences for the controversy of Zion.

9 ⁿAnd the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch.

Verse 5. For my sword shall be bathed in heaven] There seems to be some impropriety in this, according to the present reading; which forestals, and expresses not in its proper place, what belongs to the next verse: for the sword of JEHOVAH was not to be bathed or glutted with blood in the heavens, but in Botsera and the land of Edom. In the heavens it was only prepared for slaughter. To remedy this Archbishop Secker proposes to read, for bashshamayim, bedamim; referring to Jer. xvi. 10. But even this is premature, and not in its proper place. The Chaldees for rivvethah, has tithgalli, shall be revealed or disclosed: perhaps he read teraeh or nirathah. Whatever reading, different I presume from the present, he might find in his copy, I follow the sense which he has given of it.

Verse 6. The Lord hath a sacrifice] Ezekiel, chap. xxxix. 16, 17, has manifestly intimated this place of Isaiah.

The sublime author of the revelation, chap. xix. 17, 18, has taken this image from Ezekiel, rather than from Isaiah.

Verse 7. The unicorns shall come down] The reem Bochart thinks to be a species of wild goat in the deserts of Arabia. It seems generally to mean the rhinoceros.

Verse 8. The year of recompences for the controversy of Zion.] "The year of recompence to the defender of the cause of Zion."

Verse 11. The cormorant] Kaath, the pelican, from the root ki, to vomit, because it is said she swallows shell fish, and when the heat of her stomach has killed the fish, she 10 It shall not be quenched night nor day; ^athe smoke thereof shall go up for ever: ^bfrom generation to generation it shall lie waste; none shall pass through it for ever and ever.

11 ^cBut the ^dcormorant and the bittern shall possess it; the owl also and the raven shall dwell in it: and ^ehe shall stretch out upon it the line of confusion, and the stones of emptiness.

12 They shall call the nobles thereof to the kingdom, but none shall be there, and all her princes shall be nothing.

13 And ^fthorns shall come up in her palaces, nettles and brambles in the fortresses thereof: and ^git shall be an habitation of dragons, and a court for ^howls.

14 ⁱThe wild beasts of the desert shall also meet with ^jthe wild beasts of the island, and the satyr shall cry to his fellow; the ^kscreech owl also shall rest there, and find for herself a place of rest.

15 There shall the great owl make her nest, and lay, and hatch, and gather under her shadow: there shall the vultures also be gathered, every one with her mate.

16 Seek ye out of ^lthe book of the LORD and read; no one of these shall fail, none shall want her mate, for my mouth it hath commanded, and his spirit it hath gathered them.

17 And he hath cast the lot for them, and his hand hath divided it unto them by line: they shall possess it for ever, from generation to generation shall they dwell therein.

vomits the shells, takes out the dead fish, and eats them. The bittern] Kippod, the hedge-hog, or porcupine.

The owl] Yanshoph, the bittern, from nashaph, to blow, because of the blowing noise it makes, almost like the lowing of an ox.

The line of confusion, and the stones of emptiness.] "The plummet of emptiness over her scorched plains." The word choreyph, joined to the 12th verse, embarrasses it, and makes it inexplicable. At least I do not know that any one has yet made out the construction, or given any tolerable explanation of it. I join it to the 11th verse, and supply a letter or two, which seem to have been lost. [This is a very doubtful escape from a difficult construction.]

Verse 13. A court for owls.] Yaanaah the ostrich, from anah, to cry, because of the noise it makes.

Verse 14. The wild beasts of the desert] Tsivim, the mountain cats. [Probably martens.]

Wild beasts of the island] Aiyim, the jackals.

The satyr] Seir, the hairy one, probably the he-goat.

The screech owl] Lilit, the night-bird, the night-raven, nyctcorax, from layil, or lailah, the night.

Verse 15. The great owl] Kippoz, the darter, a serpent so called because of its suddenly leaping up or darting on its prey. Probably the mongos or schneumon may be intended. [The arrow-snake.]

The vultures] Daiyoth, the black vultures.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Flourishing state of the church of God consequent to the awful judgments predicted in the preceding chapter. The images employed in the description are so very consolatory and sublime as to oblige us to extend their fulfilment to that period of the gospel dispensation when Messiah shall take unto himself his great power and reign. The fifth and sixth verses were literally accomplished by our Saviour and his apostles: but that the miracles wrought in the first century were not the only import of the language used by the prophet, is sufficiently plain from the context. They, therefore, have a farther application; and are contemporary with, or rather a consequence of, the judgments of God upon the enemies of the church in the latter days; and so relate to the greater influence and extension of the Christian faith, the conversion of the Jews, their restoration to their own land, and the second advent of Christ. Much of the imagery of this chapter seems to have been borrowed from the exodus from Egypt: but it is greatly enlivened by the life, sentiments, and passions ascribed to inanimate objects; all nature being represented as rejoicing with the people of God in consequence of their deliverance; and administering in such an unusual manner to their relief and comfort, as to induce some commentators to extend the meaning of the prophecy to the blessedness of the saints in heaven, 1-10.

THE wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose.

2^b It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God.

3^c Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees.

4 Say to them that are of a^d fearful heart, Be strong, fear not; behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you.

5 Then the^e eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.

6 Then shall the^f lame man leap as an hart, and the^g tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall^h waters break out, and streams in the desert.

7 And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water: inⁱ the habitation of dragons, where each lay, shall be^k grass with reeds and rushes.

8 And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called, The way of holiness; ^lthe unclean shall not pass over it; ^mbut it shall be for those: the way-faring men, though fools, shall not err therein.

9ⁿ No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there:

10 And the^o ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and^p sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

Verse 1. Shall be glad] Probably the true reading is, "The wilderness and the dry place shall be glad." Not for them.

Verse 2. Rejoice even with joy and singing] "The well-watered plain of Jordan shall also rejoice." For veranen, the Septuagint read yarden, "the deserts of Jordan."

Verse 7. The parched ground] Sharab; this word is Arabic, as well as Hebrew, expressing in both languages the same thing, the glowing sandy plain, which in the hot countries at a distance has the appearance of water.

Verse 8. And an highway] The word vederech is by mistake added to the first member of the sentence from the beginning of the following member. Sixteen MSS. of Dr. Kennicott's, seven ancient, and two of De Rossi's, have it but once; so likewise the Syriac, Septuagint, and Arabic.

But it shall be for those] "But he himself shall be with them, walking in the way." That is, God; see ver. 4. Our old English Versions translated the place to this purpose; our last translators were misled by the authority of the Jews, who have absurdly made a division of the verses in the midst of the sentence, thereby destroying the construction and the sense. [The proposed amendment is of doubtful value.]

Verse 9. The redeemed shall walk there] Those whose forfeited inheritances are brought back by the kinsman, goel, the nearest of kin to the family. This has been considered by all orthodox divines as referring to the incarnation of our Lord, and his sacrificial offering.

Verse 10. The ransomed] Those for whom a price was paid down to redeem them from bondage and death.

Sighing shall flee away] Never was a sorrowful accent better expressed than in this strong guttural word, an-ach-ah; nearly the same with the Irish in their funeral wailings, och-och-on.

The chapter shows that no impurity should be tolerated in the church of God; for as that is the mystical body of Christ, it should be like himself, without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Sennacherib, king of Assyria, comes against Judah and takes all the fenced cities, 1. He afterwards sends a great host against Jerusalem; and his general Rabshakeh delivers an insulting and blasphemous message to Hezekiah, 2-20. Hezekiah and his people are greatly afflicted at the words of Rabshakeh, 21, 22.

NOW *it came to pass in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah, that Sennacherib king of Assyria came up against all the defenced cities of Judah, and took them.

2 And the king of Assyria sent Rabshakeh from Lachish to Jerusalem unto king Hezekiah with a great army. And he stood by the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field.

3 Then came forth unto him Eliakim, Hilkiah's son, which was over the house, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah, Asaph's son, the recorder.

4 * And Rabshakeh said unto them, Say ye now to Hezekiah, Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, What confidence is this wherein thou trustest?

5 I say, sayest thou, (but they are but * vain words) * I have counsel and strength for war: now on whom dost thou trust, that thou rebellest against me?

6 Lo, thou trustest in the * staff of this broken reed, on Egypt; whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all that trust in him.

7 But if thou say to me, We trust in the LORD our God: is it not he, whose high places and whose altars Hezekiah hath taken away, and said to Judah and to Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar?

8 Now therefore give * pledges, I pray thee, to my master the king of Assyria, and I will give thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.

9 How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

10 And am I now come up without the LORD against this land to destroy it? the LORD said unto me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.

11 Then said Eliakim and Shebna and Joah unto Rabshakeh, Speak, I pray thee, unto thy servants in the Syrian language; for we understand it: and speak not to us in the Jews' language, in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

* 2 Kings xviii. 17, 18. 2 Chron. xxxii. 1.—^b Or, secretary.—^c 2 Kings xviii. 19, &c.—^d Heb. a word of lips.—^e Or, but counsel and strength are for the war.—^f Ezek. xxix. 6, 7.—^g Or, hostages.—^h Or,

Verse 3. Then came forth unto him] Before these words the other copy, 2 Kings xviii. 18, adds, "And they demanded audience of the king."

Verse 5. I say] Fourteen MSS. (three ancient) of Ken- nicott's and De Rossi's have it in the second person, amarta; and so the other copy, 2 Kings, xviii. 20.

But they are but vain words] Debar sephathayim, a word of the lips. Thou dost talk about counsels, but thou hast none; about strength, but there is none with thee.

Verse 6. The staff of this broken reed] A weakened faithless ally.

On Egypt] The Bodl. MS. adds melech, the king of Egypt; and so perhaps the Chaldee might read.

It will go into his hand, and pierce it] Will take subsidy after subsidy, and do nothing for it.

Verse 7. But if thou say] Two ancient MSS. have tomeru in the plural number: so likewise the Septuagint, Chaldee, and the other copy, 2 Kings xviii. 22.

Verse 10. Am I now come up without the Lord] Probably some apostate Israelitish priest might have encouraged the king of Assyria by telling him that JEROVAH had given him a commission against Jerusalem.

12 But Rabshakeh said, Hath my master sent me to thy master and to thee to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men that sit upon the wall, that they may eat their own dung, and drink their own piss with you?

13 Then Rabshakeh stood, and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and said, Hear ye the words of the great king, the king of Assyria.

14 Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you: for he shall not be able to deliver you.

15 Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us: this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

16 Hearken not to Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, ^a Make ^a an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me: ^a and eat ye every one of his vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his own cistern;

17 Until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards.

18 Beware lest Hezekiah persuade you, saying, The LORD will deliver us. Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

19 Where are the gods of Hamath and Arphad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim? and have they delivered Samaria out of my hand?

20 Who are they among all the gods of these lands, that have delivered their land out of my hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of my hand?

21 But they held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king's commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

22 Then came Eliakim, the son of Hilkiah, that was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah, the son of Asaph, the recorder, to Hezekiah with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rabshakeh.

Seek my favour by a present.—^a Heb. Make with me a blessing.—^b Zech. iii. 10.

Verse 12. That they may eat their own dung] Leechol, that they may eat, as our translation literally renders it. But the Syriac reads meechol, that they may not eat, perhaps rightly.

Verse 16. Make an agreement] Berachah, make a blessing with me; i.e., Give me a ransom for the city, and I will not destroy it; give me the yearly tribute thou hast promised.

Verse 17. And vineyards] The other copy, 2 Kings xviii. 32, adds here, "A land of oil-olive, and of honey; that ye may live, and not die: and hearken not unto Hezekiah when he seduceth you."

Verse 19. Where are the gods] For other matters relative to this chapter, see the notes on 2 Kings xviii. 18, &c.

Of Sepharvaim] The other copy, 2 Kings xviii. 34, adds, of "Henah and Ivah."

Have they delivered] The copulative is not expressed here by the Septuagint, Syriac, Vulgate, and three MSS.; nor is it in any other copy.

Verse 21. But they held their peace] The word haam, the people, is supplied from the other copy, and is authorised by a MS.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Hezekiah is greatly distressed, and sends to Isaiah the prophet to pray for him, 1-4. Isaiah returns a comfortable answer, and predicts the destruction of the king of Assyria, and his army, 5-7. Sennacherib, hearing that his kingdom was invaded by the Ethiopians, sends a terrible letter to Hezekiah, to induce him to surrender, 9-13. Hezekiah goes to the temple, spreads the letter before the Lord, and makes a most affecting prayer, 14-20. Isaiah is sent to him to assure him that his prayer is heard; that Jerusalem shall be delivered; and that the Assyrians shall be destroyed, 21-25. That very night a messenger of God slays one hundred and eighty-five thousand Assyrians, 36. Sennacherib returns to Nineveh, and is slain by his own sons, 37, 38.

AND it came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard it, that he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD.

2 And he sent Eliakim, who was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests covered with sackcloth, unto Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz.

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and of blasphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

4 It may be the LORD thy God will hear the words of Rabshakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God, and will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that is left.

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6 And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say unto your master, Thus saith the LORD, Be not afraid of the words that thou hast heard, where-with the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

8 So Rabshakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

9 And he heard say concerning Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, He is come forth to make war with thee. And when he heard it, he sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, Let not thy God, in whom thou trustest, deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be given into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands by destroying them utterly; and shalt thou be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed, as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of Eden which were in Telassar?

13 Where is the king of Hamath, and the king of Arphad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah?

14 And Hezekiah received the letter from the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up unto the house of the LORD, and spread it before the LORD.

15 And Hezekiah prayed unto the LORD, saying,

16 O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, that dwellest between the cherubims, thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth: thou hast made heaven and earth.

17 Incline thine ear, O LORD, and hear; open thine eyes, O LORD, and see: and hear all the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent to reproach the living God.

18 Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations, and their countries.

19 And have cast their gods into the fire: for they were no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone: therefore they have destroyed them.

20 Now therefore, O LORD our God, save us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the LORD, even thou only.

* Jer. xlix. 23.—^f Dan. ix. 18.—^g Heb. lands.—^h Heb. given.

Verse 6. Thus shall ye say] "Thus shall ye (explicitly, earnestly, and positively) say." The paragogic nun deepens and increases the sense.

Verse 7. I will send a blast] I believe ruach means here a pestilential wind, such as the Arabs call simoom, that instantly suffocates both man and beast; and is what is termed "the angel of the Lord," God's messenger of death to the Assyrians, ver. 36.

Verse 8. Rabshakeh returned] From chap. xxxvi. 2, we learn that the king of Assyria had sent Rabshakeh from Lachish to Jerusalem; now it is likely that Rabshakeh had besieged that place, and that the king of Assyria had taken his station before this city, and dispatched Rabshakeh against Jerusalem. But, as in the verse above it is said, "he had departed from Lachish," probably he had been obliged to raise the siege, and sat down before Libnah, which promised an easier conquest.

Verse 9. He heard say concerning Tirhakah king of Ethiopia] When he heard that Tirhakah king of Ethiopia had come out against him, then he sent that blasphemous manifesto which is contained in ver. 10-13, to terrify Hezekiah into submission.

He sent messengers] The word vaiyishma, "and he heard," which occurs the second time in this verse, is repeated by mistake from the beginning of the verse. It is a mere tautology, and embarrasses the sense. The true reading instead of it is, vayesheb, "and he returned," which the Septuagint read in this place, and which is preserved in the other copy, 2 Kings xix. 9: "He returned and sent," that is, according to the Hebrew idiom, "he sent again."

Verse 18. The nations] Haratsoth, "the lands;" instead of this word, which destroys the sense, ten of Kennicott's and five of De Rossi's MSS. have here goyim, "nations;" which is undoubtedly the true reading, being preserved also in the other copy; 2 Kings xix. 17.

Verse 20. Save us] The suppling particle, na, is supplied here from eighteen MSS., three ancient, of Dr. Kennicott, and ten of De Rossi, and from the other copy; 2 Kings xix. 19.

That thou art the Lord, even thou only] The word Elohim, "God," is lost here in the Hebrew text, but preserved in the other copy; 2 Kings xix. 19. The Syriac and Septuagint seem here to have had in their copies Elohim, instead of Yehovah.

Verse 21. Then Isaiah—sent unto Hezekiah] The Syriac

21 Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent unto Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Whereas thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria:

22 This is the word which the LORD hath spoken concerning him; The virgin, the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

23 Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against the Holy One of Israel.

24 By thy servants hast thou reproached the Lord, and hast said, By the multitude of my chariots am I come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon; and I will cut down the tall cedars thereof, and the choice fir trees thereof: and I will enter into the height of his border, and the forest of his Carmel.

25 I have digged, and drunk water; and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of the besieged places.

26 Hast thou not heard long ago, how I have done it; and of ancient times, that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to lay waste defenced cities into ruinous heaps.

27 Therefore their inhabitants were of small power, they were dismayed and confounded: they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as the grass on the housetops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.

28 But I know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

29 Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult, is come up into mine ears, therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

30 And this shall be a sign unto thee, Ye shall eat this year such as groweth of itself; and the second year that which springeth of the same: and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruit thereof.

31 And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward:

32 For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of Mount Zion: the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

33 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shields, nor cast a bank against it.

34 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.

35 For I will defend this city to save it for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

36 Then the angel of the LORD went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred and fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.

37 So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh.

38 And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword; and they escaped into the land of Armenia: and Esar-haddon his son reigned in his stead.

and Septuagint understand and render the verb passively, was sent.

Whereas thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib] "Thy prayer unto me concerning Sennacherib—I have heard," Shamati; this word, necessary to the sense, is lost in this place out of the Hebrew text. The Septuagint and Syriac found it in their copies; and it is preserved in the other copy; 2 Kings xix. 20.

Verse 23. Against the Holy One of Israel.] For el, to, the other copy has al, against, rather more properly.

Verse 24. By thy servants] The text has abdeycha, thy servants; but the true reading seems to be malacheycha, thy messengers, as in the other copy, 2 Kings xix. 23; and as the Septuagint and Syriac found it in their copies in this place.

I will enter into the height of his border] The text has marom, the height, which seems to have been taken by mistake from the line but one above. Two MSS. have here malon, the lodge or retreat; which is the word in the other copy, 2 Kings xix. 23, and I think is the true reading.

The forest of his Carmel.] The forest and his fruitful field; that is, I will possess myself of the whole country.

Verse 25. Water] The word sarim, strange, lost out of the Hebrew text in this place, is supplied from the other copy.

With the sole of my feet] With my infantry. All the rivers of the besieged places] The principal cities of Egypt, the scene of his late exploits, were chiefly defended by deep moats, canals, or large lakes, made by labour and art, with which they were surrounded.

Verse 26. Lay waste defenced cities into ruinous heaps.] Gallim nitstsim. It is not easy to give a satisfactory account of these two words, which have greatly embarrassed all the interpreters, ancient and modern. For gallim I read goyim, as the Septuagint do in this place. The word nitstsim the Vulgate renders in this place compugnantium; in the parallel place, 2 Kings xix. 25, pugnantium; and the Septuagint fighting, warlike. This rendering is as well authorized as any other that I know of; and, with the reading of the Septuagint, perfectly clears up the construction.

Verse 27. Corn blasted] Shedemah, parched: it does not appear that there is any good authority for this word. The true reading seems to be shedephah, blasted, as it is in six MSS. (two ancient) here, and in the other copy.

Verse 29. Will I put my hook in thy nose] Just as at this day they put a ring into the nose of the bear, the buffalo, and other wild beasts, to lead them, and to govern them when they are unruly.

Verse 36. Then the angel] Before "the angel," the other copy, 2 Kings xix. 35, adds, "it came to pass the same night, that"

The prophet Hosea, chap. i. 7, has given a plain prediction of this miraculous deliverance of the kingdom of Judah.

Verse 38. His sons smote him] What an awful punishment of his blasphemy! Who can harden his neck against God, and be successful? God does not lightly pass by blasphemy against himself, his government, his word, his Son, or his people. Let the profligate take care!

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Account of Hezekiah's dangerous sickness and miraculous recovery, 1-9. Tender and beautiful song of thanksgiving, in which this pious king breathed out the sentiments of a grateful heart, when his life was, as it were, restored. This ode may be adapted to other cases; and will always afford profit and pleasure to those who are not void of feeling and piety, 10-22.

IN ^athose days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz came unto him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, ^bSet ^cthine house in order: for thou shalt die, and not live.

2 Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed unto the LORD,

3 And said, ^dRemember now, O LORD, I beseech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept ^esore.

4 Then came the word of the LORD to Isaiah, saying,

5 Go, and say to Hezekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years.

6 And I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria: and ^fI will defend this city.

7 And this shall be ^ga sign unto thee from the LORD, that the LORD will do this thing that he hath spoken;

8 Behold, I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the ^hsun dial of Ahaz, ten degrees backward. So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down.

9 The writing of Hezekiah king of Judah, when he had been sick, and was recovered of his sickness:

10 I said in the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave: I am deprived of the residue of my years.

11 I said, I shall not see the LORD, even the LORD, ⁱin the land of the living: I shall behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world.

Verse 1. In those days] The reader is requested to consult the notes on 2 Kings xx. in reference to the principal parts of this chapter.

Verse 2. Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall] The furniture of an eastern divan, or chamber, either for the reception of company or for private use, consists chiefly of carpets spread on the floor in the middle; and of sofas, or couches, ranged on one or more sides of the room, on a part raised somewhat above the floor. On these they repose themselves in the day, and sleep at night. We are to suppose Hezekiah's couch placed in the corner; in which, turning on either side, he must turn his face to the wall; by which he would withdraw himself from those who were attending upon him in his apartment, in order to address his private prayer to God.

Verse 6. I will defend this city.] The other copy, 2 Kings xx. 6, adds: "for mine own sake, and for the sake of David my servant;" and the sentence seems somewhat abrupt without it.

Verse 8. Which is gone down] "By which the sun is gone down." For bashshemesh, the Septuagint, Syriac, and Chaldees read hashshemesh. In the history of this miracle in the book of Kings (2 Kings xx. 9-11), there is no mention at all made of the sun, but only of the going backward of 12 ^jMine age is departed, and is removed from me as a shepherd's tent: I have cut off like a weaver my life: he will cut me off ^kwith pining sickness; from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me.

13 I reckoned till morning, that, as a lion, so will he break all my bones: from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me.

14 Like a crane or a swallow, so did I chatter: ^lI did mourn as a dove: mine eyes fail with looking upward: O LORD, I am oppressed; ^mundertake for me.

15 What shall I say? he hath both spoken unto me, and himself hath done it: I shall go softly ⁿall my years ^oin the bitterness of my soul.

17 Behold, ^pfor peace I had great bitterness: but ^qthou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption: for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back.

18 For ^rthe grave cannot praise thee, death can not celebrate thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth.

19 The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day: ^sthe father to the children shall make known thy truth.

20 The LORD was ready to save me: therefore we will sing my songs ^tto the stringed instruments all the days of our life in the house of the LORD.

21 For ^uIsaiah had said, Let them take a lump of figs, and lay it for a plaister upon the boil, and he shall recover.

the shadow; which might be effected by a supernatural refraction.

Verse 9. The writing of Hezekiah] Here the book of Kings deserts us, the song of Hezekiah not being inserted in it.

Verse 12. Mine age—is removed from me as a shepherd's tent] Roi is put for roeh, say the rabbins; but much more probably is written imperfectly for roim, shepherds.

I shall be removed from this state to another, as a shepherd removes his tent from one place to another for the sake of his flock. Is not this a strong intimation of his belief in a future state?

I reckoned till morning, &c.] "I roared until the morning like the lion." For shvritthi, the Chaldee has nihameth; I read shaagti, the proper term for the roaring of a lion; often applied to the deep groaning of men in sickness. See Ps. xxii., xxxii. 3, xxxviii. 9, Job iii. 24.

Verse 14. Undertake for me.] The sense of the word is established by Gen. xxvi. 20: "He called the name of the well eseh, because they strove with him:" hithasseku, equivalent to yaribu, at the beginning of the verse.

Verse 16. By these things men live] "For this cause shall it be declared." One MS. has ubechol, and in all; two others vechol, and all, and ten MSS. have bahem, in them, in the masculine gender.

Taking this as in the common Version, we may observe it is not an unfrequent case, that afflictions, and especially such as tend to a speedy death, become the means, not only of saving the soul, but also of lengthening the life.

Verse 17. For peace I had great bitterness] "My anguish is changed into ease." Paronomasia; a figure which the prophet frequently admits. I do not always note it, because it cannot ever be preserved in the translation, and the sense seldom depends upon it. But here it perfectly clears up the great obscurity of the passage.

Thou hast in love to my soul] Chashakta, "thou hast lovingly embraced" or kissed "my soul out of the pit of corruption."

Verse 21. Let them take a lump of figs, &c.] God, in effecting this miraculous cure, was pleased to order the use of means not improper for that end.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The Babylonish monarch sends letters of congratulation and a present to Hezekiah, on account of his recovery from his late dangerous illness, 1. The king of Judah shows the messengers of Merodach-baladan all the treasures of his house and kingdom, 2. The prophet takes occasion from this ostentatious display of the king to predict the captivity of the royal family, and of the people, by the Babylonians, 3-8.

AT that time Merodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and a present to Hezekiah: for he had heard that he had been sick, and was recovered.

2 And Hezekiah was glad of them, and shewed them the house of his ^a precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his ^a armour, ^c and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not.

3 Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from a far country unto me, even from Babylon.

4 Then said he, What have they seen in thine

Verse 1. At that time Merodach-baladan] This name is variously written in the MSS., Berodach, Medorach, Medarech, and Medurach.

"And ambassadors"] The Septuagint add here, and ambassadors; which word seems to be necessary to the sense, though omitted in the Hebrew text both here and in the other copy, 2 Kings xx. 12.

Verse 6. To Babylon] This prediction was fulfilled about one hundred and fifty years after it was spoken: see Dan. i. 2, 3-7. What a proof of Divine omniscience!

Verse 8. Then said Hezekiah] The nature of Hezekiah's crime, and his humiliation on the message of God to him by 5 Then said Isaiah to Hezekiah, Hear the word of the Lord of hosts:

6 Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried to Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the Lord.

7 And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and ^a they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

8 Then said Hezekiah to Isaiah, ^b Good is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken. He said moreover, For there shall be peace and truth in my days.

the prophet, is more expressly declared by the author of the book of the Chronicles: 2 Chron. xxxii. 25, 26, 30, 31.

There shall be peace and truth in my days.] I rather think these words should be understood as an humble inquiry of the king, addressed to the prophet. "Shall there be prosperity, shalom, and truth in my days?—Shall I escape the evil which thou predictest? Understood otherwise, they manifest a pitiful unconcern both for his own family and for the nation. "So I be well, I care not how it may go with others." This is the view I have taken of the passage in 2 Kings xxi. 19.

CHAPTER XL.

In this chapter the prophet opens the subject respecting the restoration of the Church with great force and elegance; declaring God's command to his messengers the prophets to comfort his people in their captivity, and to impart to them the glad tidings that the time of favour and deliverance was at hand, 1, 2. Immediately a harbinger is introduced giving orders, as usual in the march of eastern monarchs, to remove every obstacle, and to prepare the way for their return to their own land, 3-5. The same words, however, the New Testament Scriptures authorize us to refer to the opening of the gospel dispensation. Accordingly, this subject, coming once in view, is principally attended to in the sequel. Of this the prophet gives us sufficient notice by introducing a voice commanding another proclamation, which calls off our attention from all temporary, fading things to the spiritual and eternal things of the gospel, 6-11. And to remove every obstacle in the way of the prophecy in either sense, or perhaps to give a further display of the character of the Redeemer, he enlarges on the power and wisdom of God, as the Creator and Disposer of all things. It is impossible to read this description of God, the most sublime that ever was penned, without being struck with inexpressible reverence, and self-abasement. The contrast between the great Jehovah and every thing reputed great in this world, how admirably imagined, how exquisitely finished! What atoms and inanities are they all before HIM who sitteth on the circle of the immense heavens, and views the potentates of the earth in the light of grasshoppers,—those poor insects that wander over the barren heath for sustenance, spend the day in continual chirpings, and take up their humble lodging at night on a blade of grass! 12-26. The prophet concludes with a most comfortable application of the whole, by showing that all this infinite power and unsearchable wisdom is unweariedly and everlastingly engaged in strengthening, comforting, and saving his people, 27-31.

COMFORT ye, comfort ye, my people, saith your God.

2 Speak ye ^acomfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her ^bwarfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: ^cfor she hath received of the LORD's hand double for all her sins.

3 ^dThe voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, ^ePrepare ye the way of the LORD, ^fmake straight in the desert a highway for our God.

4 Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: ^gand the crooked shall be made ^hstraight, and the rough places ⁱplain:

5 And the ^jglory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.

6 The voice said, Cry. And he said, What shall I cry? ^kAll flesh is grass, and all the goodness thereof is as the flower of the field:

7 The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: because the ^lspirit of the LORD bloweth upon it: surely the people is grass.

8 The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the ^mword of our God shall stand for ever.

Verse 1. Comfort ye, comfort ye] “The whole of this prophecy,” says Kimchi, “belongs to the days of the Messiah.”

Verse 2. Double for all her sins.] It does not seem reconcileable to our notions of the divine justice, which always punishes less than our iniquities deserve, to suppose that God had punished the sins of the Jews in double proportion; and it is more agreeable to the tenor of this consolatory message to understand it as a promise of ample recompence for the effects of past displeasure, on the reconciliation of God to his returning people. To express this sense of the passage, which the words of the original will very well bear, it was necessary to add a word or two in the version to supply the elliptical expression of the Hebrew.

Verse 3. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness] The idea is taken from the practice of eastern monarchs, who, whenever they entered upon an expedition or took a journey, especially through deserts and unpractised countries, sent harbingers before them to prepare all things for their passage, and pioneers to open the passes, to level the ways, and to remove all impediments. The officers appointed to superintend such preparations the Latins call stratores.

Verse 4. Crooked] The word akob is very generally rendered crooked: but this sense of the word seems not to be supported by any good authority.

Verse 5. “The salvation of our God.”] These words are added here by the Septuagint: The sentence is abrupt without them, the verb wanting its object; and I think it is genuine. Our English translation has supplied the word it, which is equivalent to this addition, from the Septuagint.

Verse 6. The voice said, Cry] The prophet opens the subject with great clearness and elegance: he declares at once God's command to his messengers (his prophets, as the Chaldee rightly explains it), to comfort his people in captivity, to impart to them the joyful tidings, that their punishment has now satisfied the divine justice, and the time of reconciliation and favour is at hand. He then introduces a harbinger giving orders to prepare the way for God, leading his people from Babylon, as he did formerly from Egypt, through the wilderness; to remove all obstacles, and to clear the way for their passage. He then introduces a voice commanding him to make a solemn proclamation. And what is the import of it? that the people—the flesh, is of a vain temporary nature; that all its glory fadeth, and is soon gone; but that the word of God endureth for ever.

Verse 7. Because the spirit of the Lord] Ruach Yehovah, a wind of JEHOVAH, is a Hebraism, meaning no more than a strong wind. It is well known that a hot wind in the east destroys every green thing.

Verse 9. O Zion, that bringest good tidings] That the true construction of the sentence is that which makes Zion the receiver, not the publisher, of the glad tidings, which latter has been the most prevailing interpretation, will, I think, very clearly appear, if we rightly consider the image itself, and the custom and common practice from which it is taken.

Verse 10. His reward is with him, and his work before him.] That is, the reward and the recompence which he bestows, and which he will pay to his faithful servants; this he has ready at hand with him, and holds it out before him, to encourage those who trust in him, and wait for him.

Verse 11. Shall gently lead those that are with young.] A beautiful image, expressing, with the utmost propriety as well as elegance, the tender attention of the shepherd to his flock. That the greatest care in driving the cattle in regard to the dams and their young was necessary, appears clearly from Jacob's apology to his brother Esau, Gen. xxxiii. 13.

and are counted as the small dust of the balance: behold, he taketh up the isles as a very little thing.

16 And Lebanon is not sufficient to burn, nor the beasts thereof sufficient for a burnt-offering.

17 All nations before him are as ^anothing; and ^bthey are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity.

18 To whom then will ye liken God? or what likeness will ye compare unto him?

19 ^aThe workman melteth a graven image, and the goldsmith spreadeth it over with gold, and casteth silver chains.

20 He that ^ais so impoverished that he hath no oblation chooseth a tree that will not rot; he seeketh unto him a cunning workman ^bto prepare a graven image that shall not be moved.

21 ^aHave ye not known? have ye not heard? hath it not been told you from the beginning? have ye not understood from the foundations of the earth?

22 ^aIt is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers; that ^bstretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in:

23 That bringeth the ^bprinces to nothing; he maketh the judges of the earth as vanity.

24 Yea, they shall not be planted; yea, they shall not be sown; yea, their stock shall not take root in the earth: and he shall also blow upon them, and they shall wither, and the whirlwind shall take them away as stubble.

25 ^aTo whom then will ye liken me, or shall I be equal? saith the Holy One.

26 Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their hosts by number: ^bhe calleth them all by names by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power; not one faileth.

27 Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, My way is hid from the Lord, and my judgment is passed over from my God?

28 Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? ^athere is no searching of his understanding.

29 He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength.

30 Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall:

31 But they that wait upon the Lord ^ashall ^brenew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.

Verse 16. And Lebanon is not sufficient] The image is beautiful and uncommon.

Does not the prophet mean here that all the burnt-offerings and sacrifices that could be offered were insufficient to atone for sin? That the nations were as nothing before him, not merely because of his immensity, but because of their insufficiency to make any atonement by their oblations for the iniquities which they had committed? Therefore the Redeemer was to come to Zion, &c.

Verse 19. And casteth silver chains.] "And forgeth for its chains of silver."

Verse 20. Chooseth a tree that will not rot] For what? To make a god out of it! The rich we find made theirs of gold and silver; the poor man was obliged to put up with a wooden god! From the words "he that hath no oblation chooseth a tree," we may learn that the gold and silver necessary to make the graven image was first dedicated, and then formed into a god! How stupid is idolatry! Strange that these people did not perceive that there could be no help in these molten and wooden idols!

Verse 22. As a curtain] It is usual in the summer season in the East, and upon all occasions when a large company is to be received, to have the court sheltered from heat or inclemency of the weather by a velum, umbrella, or veil, as I shall call it; which being expanded on ropes from one side of the parapet wall to the other, may be folded or unfolded at pleasure.

Verse 26. Lift up your eyes on high] The rabbins say, He who is capable of meditating on the revolutions of the heavenly bodies, and does not meditate on them, is not worthy to have his name mentioned among men.

Verse 31. They shall mount up with wings as eagles—"They shall put forth fresh feathers like the moulting eagle." It has been a common and popular opinion that the eagle lives and retains his vigour to a great age; and that, beyond the common lot of other birds, he moults in his old age, and renews his feathers, and with them his youth.

CHAPTER XLI.

The prophet, having intimated the deliverance from Babylon, and the still greater redemption couched under it, resumes the subject. He begins with the divine vocation of Abraham, the root of the Israelitish family, and his successful exploits against the idolaters, 1-7. He then recurs to the Babylonish captivity, and encourages the seed of Abraham, the friend of God, not to fear, as all their enemies would be ultimately subdued under them, 8-16; and every thing furnished necessary to refresh and comfort them in their passage homewards through the desert, 17-20. The prophet then takes occasion to celebrate the prescience of God, from his knowledge of events so very distant, as instanced in the prediction concerning the messenger of glad tidings which should be given to Jerusalem to deliver her from all her enemies; and challenges the idols of the heathen to produce the like proof of their pretended divinity, 21-27. But they are all vanity, and accursed are they that choose them, 28, 29.

KEEP ^asilence before me, O islands; and let the people renew their strength: let them come near; then let them speak: let us come near together to judgment.

2 Who raised up ^bthe righteous man ^cfrom the east, called him to his foot, ^dgave the nations before him, and made him rule over kings? he gave them as the dust to his sword, and us driven stubble to his bow.

3 He pursued them, and passed ^esafely; even by the way that he had not gone with his feet.

4 ^fWho hath wrought and done it, calling the generations from the beginning? I the LORD, the ^gfirst, and with the last; I am he.

5 The isles saw it, and feared; the ends of the earth were afraid, drew near, and came.

6 ^hThey helped every one his neighbour; and every one said to his brother, ⁱBe of good courage.

7 ^jSo the carpenter encouraged the ^kgoldsmith, and he that smootheneth with the hammer ^lhim that smote the anvil, ^msaying, It is ready for the soldering: and he fastened it with nails, ⁿthat it should not be moved.

8 But thou, Israel, art my servant, Jacob whom I have ^ochosen, the seed of Abraham my ^pfriend.

9 Thou whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant; I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away.

10 ^qFear thou not; ^rfor I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.

Verse 1. Keep silence before me, O islands] For hacharishu, be silent, the Septuagint certainly read in their copy hachadishu, be renewed; which is parallel and synonymous with yechalephu coach, "recover their strength;" that is, their strength of mind, their powers of reason; that they may overcome those prejudices by which they have been so long held enslaved to idolatry.

Verse 2. The righteous man] Interpreters are divided in ascertaining this person; some explain it of Abraham, others of Cyrus. I rather think that the former is meant; because the character of the righteous man, or righteousness, agrees better with Abraham than with Cyrus. Besides, immediately after the description of the success given by God to Abraham and his posterity (who, I presume, are to be taken into the account), the idolaters are introduced as greatly alarmed at this event. Abraham was called out of the east; and his posterity were introduced into the land of Canaan, in order to destroy the idolaters of that country, and they were established there on purpose to stand as a barrier against the idolatry then prevailing, and threatening to overrun the whole face of the earth. Cyrus, though not properly an idolater or worshipper of images, yet had nothing in his character to cause such an alarm among the idolaters, ver. 5-7. [The balance of evidence is in favour of Cyrus.]

He gave them as the dust to his sword] The image is strong and beautiful; it is often made use of by the sacred poets; see Ps. i. 4, xxxv. 5; Job xxi. 18, and by Isaiah himself in other places, chap. xvii. 18, xxix. 5. But there is great difficulty in making out the construction.

Verse 8. And passed safely] "He passeth in safety." The preposition seems to have been omitted in the text by mistake; the Septuagint and Vulgate seem to have had it in their copies.

Verse 4. Who hath wrought and done it] A word is here lost out of the text. It is supplied by an ancient MS., ellen, "these things;" by the Septuagint, the Vulgate, and the Chaldees.

11 Behold, all they that were incensed against thee shall be ^aashamed and confounded: they shall be as nothing; and ^bthey that strive with thee shall perish.

12 Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them, even ^cthem that contended with thee: ^dthey that war against thee shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought.

13 For I the LORD thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, ^eFear not; I will help thee.

14 Fear not, thou worm Jacob, and ye ^fmen of Israel; I will help thee, saith the LORD, and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel.

15 Behold, ^gI will make thee a new sharp threshing instrument having ^hteeth: thou shalt thresh the mountains, and beat them small, and shalt make the hills as chaff.

16 Thou shalt ⁱfan them, and the wind shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them: and thou shalt rejoice in the LORD, and ^jshalt glory in the Holy One of Israel.

17 When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the LORD will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them.

18 I will open ^krivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys: I will make the ^lwilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water.

19 I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah tree, and the myrtle, and the oil tree; I will set in the desert the fir tree, and the pine, and the box tree together:

Verse 9. And called thee from the chief men thereof] Atail meatsileyha, signifies the arm, acilla, ala; and is used like canaph, "the wing," for any thing extended from the extremity of another, or joined on to it. It is here parallel with and synonymous to mikkatsoth, "from the ends," in the preceding member.

Verse 10. Be not dismayed] "AND be not dismayed." The vah is added by twenty-one of Dr. Kennicott's MSS., thirty of De Rossi's, and one of my own, and three editions. It makes the sense more complete.

Verse 14. Fear not, thou worm Jacob] In a rabbinical commentary on the five books of Moses, it is asked, Why are the Israelites called a worm? To signify, that as the worm does not smite, that is, gnaw the cedars, but with its mouth which is very tender, yet it nevertheless destroys the hard wood; so all the strength of the Israelites is in prayer, by which they smite the wicked of this world, though stronger like the cedars, to which they are compared, Ezek. xxxi. 3.

Verse 15. A new sharp threshing instrument having teeth] See note on chap. xviii. 27, 28.

Thou shalt thresh the mountains] Mountains and hills are here used metaphorically for the kings and princes of the Gentiles.

Verse 19. I will plant in the wilderness the cedar] This expresses the relief afforded to them, fainting with heat in their journey through that hot country, destitute of shelter, by causing shady trees, and those of the tallest and most beautiful kinds, to spring up for their defence.

The oil tree] This is not to be understood the olive tree, for the olive is distinguished, Neh. viii. 15; but it means the pine or fir, from which pitch is extracted. [Or the oleaster.]

Verse 20. And consider] The verb yasimu, without leb added, cannot signify to apply the heart, or to attend to a thing, as Houbigant has observed; he therefore reads yanhshemu, they shall wonder. The conjecture is ingenious; but it is much more probable that the word leb is lost out of the text; for all the ancient Versions render the phrase to the same sense, as if it were fully expressed.

Verse 21. Bring forth your strong reasons] "Let your idols come forward which you consider to be so very strong." I prefer this to all other interpretations of this place. The false gods are called upon to come forth and appear in person; and to give evident demonstration of their foreknowledge and power by foretelling future events, and exerting their power in doing good or evil.

Verse 25. I have raised up one from the north] "That is," says Kimchi, "the Messiah. The king of Assyria placed the ten tribes in Chalach and Chabar by the river Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes, 2 Kings xvii. 6, which lands lie northerly and easterly." [This refers too to Cyrus, who, as being of Median extraction, came from the North as well as the East, Persia.]

Verse 27. The first shall say to Zion, Behold, behold them] This verse is somewhat obscure by the transposition of the parts of the sentence, and the peculiar manner in which it is divided into two parallel lines. The verb at the end of the sentence belongs to both parts; and the phrase, Behold, they are here! is parallel to the messenger of glad tidings; and stands like it, as the accusative case to the verb. The following paraphrase will explain the form and the sense of it: "I first, by my prophets, give notice of these events, saying, Behold, they are at hand! and I give to Jerusalem a messenger of glad tidings."

CHAPTER XLII.

The prophet sets forth the meekness of Messiah's character, and the extent and blessings of his kingdom, particularly among the Gentiles, 1-9. In consequence of this he calls on the whole creation to join him in one song of praise to God, 10-12. After which he seems again to glance at the deliverance, from the captivity; although the words may full as well apply to the deliverance vouchsafed to the church; to the overthrow of her most powerful enemies; and to the prevalency of true religion over idolatry and error, 13-17. The prophet then reproves the Jews for their blindness and infidelity in rejecting the Messiah, and gives intimations of those judgments which their guilt would draw on them, 18-25.

BEHOLD * my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul ^b delighteth: ^c I have put my Spirit upon him; he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles.

Verse 1. Behold my servant, whom I uphold] Echmach bo, on whom I lean. Alluding to the custom of kings leaning on the arm of their most beloved and faithful servant. All, both Jews and Christians, agree, that the seven first verses of this chapter belong to Christ. Now, as they are evidently a continuation of the prophecy in the preceding chapter, that prophecy cannot belong to Cyrus, but to Christ.

He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles] The word mishpat, judgment, like tsedakah, righteousness, is taken in a great latitude of signification. It means rule, form, order, model, plan; rule of right, or of religion; an ordinance, institution; judicial process, cause, trial, sentence, condemnation, acquittal, deliverance, mercy, &c. It certainly means in this place the law to be published by Messiah, the institution of the gospel.

Verse 6. A covenant of the people] For am, two MSS. of Dr. Kennicott's, and of my own, read alam, the covenant of the age to come, or the everlasting covenant; which seems to give a clearer and better sense. But I think the word berith, here, should not be translated covenant, but covenant sacrifice, which meaning it often has; and undoubtedly in this place. This gives a still stronger and clearer sense.

4 He shall not fail nor be *discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth: * and the isles shall wait for his law.

5 Thus saith God the LORD, * he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; * he that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it; * he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein:

6 * I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, * and give thee for a covenant of the people, for * a light of the Gentiles;

7 * To open the blind eyes, to * bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in * darkness out of the prison house.

8 I am the LORD: that is my name: and my * glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images.

9 Behold, the former things are come to pass, and new things do I declare: before they spring forth I tell you of them.

10 * Sing unto the LORD a new song, and his praise from the end of the earth, * ye that go down to the sea, and * all that is therein; the isles, and the inhabitants thereof.

11 Let the wilderness and the cities thereof lift up their voice, the villages that Kedar doth inhabit: let the inhabitants of the rock sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains.

12 Let them give glory unto the LORD, and declare his praise in the islands.

13 The LORD shall go forth as a mighty man, he shall stir up jealousy like a man of war: he shall cry, * yea, roar; he * shall prevail against his enemies.

14 I have long time holden my peace; I have been still, and refrained myself: now will I cry like a travailing woman; I will destroy and * devour at once.

15 I will make waste mountains and hills, and dry up all their herbs; and I will make the rivers islands, and I will dry up the pools.

16 And I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known: I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things * straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them.

17 They shall be * turned back, they shall be greatly ashamed, that trust in graven images, that say to the molten images, Ye are our gods.

18 Hear, ye deaf; and look, ye blind, that ye may see.

19 * Who is blind, but my servant? or deaf, as my messenger that I sent? who is blind as he that is perfect, and blind as the LORD's servant?

20 Seeing many things, * but thou observest not; opening the ears, but he heareth not.

21 The LORD is well pleased for his righteousness' sake; he will magnify the law, and make * it honourable.

22 But this is a people robbed and spoiled; * they are all of them snared in holes, and they are hid in prison houses: they are for a prey, and none delivereth; for * a spoil, and none saith, Restore.

23 Who among you will give ear to this? who will hearken and hear * for the time to come?

24 Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? did not the LORD, he against whom we have sinned? for they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient unto his law.

25 Therefore he hath poured upon him the fury of his anger, and the strength of battle; * and it hath set him on fire round about, * yet he knew not; and as it burned him, yet he laid it not to heart.

Verse 7. To open the blind eyes] In this verse the prophet seems to set forth the spiritual redemption, under images borrowed from the temporal deliverance.

Verse 8. I am the Lord] Ani Yehovah. This is the famous tetragrammaton, or name of four letters, which we write Jehovah, Yehovah, Yehveh, Yevah, Jhuh, Javah, &c. The letters are Y H U H. The Jews never pronounce it, and the true pronunciation is utterly unknown.

That is my name] A name peculiar to myself.

Verse 10. Ye that go down to the sea] This seems not to belong to this place; it does not well consist with what follows, "and the fulness thereof." They that go down upon the sea means navigators, sailors, traders, such as do business in great waters; an idea much too confined for the prophet, who means the sea in general, as it is used by the Hebrews, for the distant nations, the islands, the dwellers on the seacoasts all over the world. I suspect that some transcriber had the 28th verse of Psalm cvii. running in his head, yoreday haiyam boonyoth, and wrote in this place yoreday haiyam instead of yiram haiyam, or yari, or yaran; "let the sea roar, or shout, or exult."

Verse 11. Let the wilderness] The most uncultivated countries, and the most rude and uncivilized people, shall confess and celebrate with thanksgiving the blessing of the knowledge of God graciously imparted to them. By the desert is meant Arabia Deserta; by the rocky country, Arabia Petraea; by the mountains, probably those celebrated ones, Paran, Horeb, Sinai, in the same country; to which also belonged Kedar, a clan of Arabians, dwelling for the most part in tents; but there were others of them who inhabited or frequented cities and villages, as may be collected from this place of the prophet.

The inhabitants of the rock] They who dwell in fortified places. The Vulgate has habitatores Petrae, "the inhabitants of Arabia Petraea." Those who make the rock Jesus Christ, the inhabitants of the rock, true believers in him; the singing, rejoicing for the salvation they have received; abuse and disgrace the passage and the pulpit.

Verse 14. I have been still] "Shall I keep silence for ever."

Verse 16. Will I do unto them] Asilem. This word, so written as it is in the text, means "thou wilt do," in the second person. The Masoretes have indeed pointed it for the first person; but the yod in the last syllable is absolutely necessary to distinguish the first person; and so it is written in forty MSS., asithim.

Verse 19. As my messenger that I sent] "As he to whom I have sent my messengers."

As he that is perfect] "As he who is perfectly instructed." See note on chap. xlii. 2.

And blind as the Lord's servant] For veivver, and blind, we must read vecheresh, and deaf. The mistake is palpable, and the correction self-evident, and admissible though there had been no authority for it.

Verse 21. He will magnify the law] "He hath exalted his own praise." For torah, the law, the Septuagint read todah, praise.

Verse 25. It hath set him on fire round about] So thoroughly hardened are the Jewish people, that they are represented as being in a house on fire, and even scorched with the flames, without perceiving their danger, or feeling that they are hurt! What a picture of mental induration! and this is their state to the present day. But by whom shall Jacob arise? for in this sense he is small indeed.

Many efforts have been made to christianise them, but without effect; and is this to be wondered at, while we tell them how great they are, how learned, how wise, how much we owe to them, that they are still the peculiar people of God,

&c. &c. ? If all this be true, what can they gain by becoming Christians ? Whereas a more stupid, proud, hardened, ignorant people, can scarcely be found in the civilized world, and they are most grossly ignorant of their own Scriptures.

CHAPTER XLIII.

Prediction of that blessed period when God should gather the posterity of Abraham, with tender care, from their several dispersions in every quarter under heaven, and bring them safely to their own land, 1-7. Struck with astonishment at so clear a display of an event so very remote, the prophet again challenges all the blinded nations and their idols to produce an instance of such foreknowledge, 8, 9; and intimates that the Jews should remain (as at this day) a singular monument to witness the truth of the prediction, till it should at length be fulfilled by the irresistible power of God, 10-13. He then returns to the nearer deliverance—that from the captivity of Babylon, 14, 15; with which, however, he immediately connects another deliverance described by allusions to that from Egypt, but represented as much more wonderful than that; a character which will not at all apply to the deliverance from Babylon, and must therefore be understood of the restoration from the mystical Babylon, 16-18. On this occasion the prophet, with peculiar elegance, and by a very strong poetic figure, represents the tender care of God in comforting and refreshing his people on their way through the desert, to be so great as to make even the wild beasts haunting those parched places so sensible of the blessing of those copious streams thus provided by him, as to join their hissing and howling notes with one consent to praise God, 19-21. This leads to a beautiful contrast of the ingratitude of the Jews, and a vindication of God's dealings with regard to them, 22-28.

BUT now thus saith the LORD *that created thee, O Jacob, ^b and he that formed thee, O Israel, Fear not: ^c for I have redeemed thee, ^d I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine.

2 * When thou passest through the waters, ^e I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou ^f walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee.

3 For I am the LORD thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy Saviour: ^h I gave Egypt for thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee.

4 Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable, and I have loved thee: therefore will I give men for thee, and people for thy ⁱ life.

5 ^j Fear not: for I am with thee: I will bring thy seed from the east, and gather thee from the west;

6 I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth;

7 ^k Even every one that is ^l called by my name: for ^m I have created him for my glory, ⁿ I have formed him; yea, I have made him.

8 ^o Bring forth the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears.

9 Let all the nations be gathered together, and let the people be assembled: ^p who among them can declare this, and shew us former things? let them bring forth their witnesses, that they may be justified: or let them hear, and say, ^q It is truth.

10 ^r Ye are my witnesses, saith the LORD, ^s and my servant whom I have chosen; that ye may know and believe me, and understand that I am he: ^t before me there was ^u no God formed, neither shall there be after me.

11 I, even I, ^v am the LORD; and beside me there is no saviour.

12, I have declared, and have saved, and I have shewed, when ^w there was no ^x strange god among you: ^y therefore ye are my witnesses, saith the LORD, that I am God.

Verse 1. I have called thee by thy name] But it seems from the seventh verse, and from the thing itself, that we should read "I have called thee by my name;" for this form of speech often occurs—the other never.

Verse 3. I gave Egypt for thy ransom] This is commonly supposed to refer to the time of Sennacherib's invasion; who, when he was just ready to fall on Jerusalem, soon after entering Judea, was providentially diverted from that design, and turned his arms against the Egyptians, and their allies the Cushan Arabians, with their neighbours the Sabeans, probably joined with them under Tirhakah. See chap. xx. and chap. xxxvii. 9. Or as there are some reasonable objections to this opinion, perhaps it may mean more generally that God has often saved his people at the expense of other nations, whom he had, as it were in their stead, given up to destruction.

Verse 7. Every one that is called by my name] All who worship the true God, and are obedient to his laws.

I have created him] I have produced him out of nothing.

I have formed him] I have given him that particular form and shape which are best suited to his station in life.

I have made him] I have adapted him to the accomplishment of my counsels and designs.

Verse 8. Bring forth the blind people that have eyes] I understand this of the Gentiles, as the verse following, not of the Jews. Their natural faculties, if they had made a proper use of them, must have led them to the knowledge of the being and attributes of the one true God; "for his eternal power and Godhead," if well attended to, are clearly seen in his works (Rom. i. 20), and would have preserved them from running into the folly and absurdity of worshipping idols. They are here challenged to produce the evidence of the power and foreknowledge of their idol gods; and the Jews are just afterwards, ver. 10, appealed to as witnesses for God in this cause, therefore these latter cannot here be meant by the people blind with eyes and deaf with ears.

Verse 10. Ye (the Israelites) are my witnesses—and my 13 *Yea, before the day was I am he; and there is none that can deliver out of my hand: I will work, and who shall let it?

14 Thus saith the LORD, your Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; For your sake I have sent to Babylon, and have brought down all their nobles, and the Chaldeans, whose cry is in the ships.

15 I am the LORD, your Holy One, the Creator of Israel, your King.

16 Thus saith the LORD, which maketh a way in the sea, and a path in the mighty waters;

17 Which bringeth forth the chariot and horse, the army and the power; they shall lie down together, they shall not rise: they are extinct, they are quenched as tow.

18 Remember ye not the former things, neither consider the things of old.

19 Behold, I will do a new thing; now it shall spring forth; shall ye not know it? I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert.

20 The beast of the field shall honour me, the dragons and the owls: because I give waters in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen.

servant (the prophet) whom I have chosen, that whatever has been said before concerning Sennacherib has been literally fulfilled. The prophet had predicted it; the Israelites saw it accomplished.

Before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me.] This is a most difficult place. Was there a time when God was not? No! Yet he says, before me. Will there be a time in which God will not exist? No! Yet he says, after me. Are not all those words to be referred to his creation? Before me, no god created any thing, nor was there any thing pre-existent but myself. And after me, i. e., after my creation, such as now exists, there shall be no other class of beings formed. This mode of interpretation frees the passages from all embarrassment, and the context perfectly agrees with it.

Verse 12. I have declared, and have saved.] My prophets have always predicted your deliverances before they took place; and I have fulfilled their words to the uttermost.

Verse 14. The Chaldeans, whose cry is in the ships.] "The Chaldeans exulting in their ships." Babylon was very advantageously situated both in respect to commerce, and as a naval power. We are not to wonder that in later times we hear little of the commerce and naval power of Babylon; for, after the taking of the city by Cyrus, the Euphrates was not only rendered less fit for navigation by being on that occasion diverted from its course and left to spread over the whole country; but the Persian monarchs, residing in their own country, to prevent any invasion by sea on that part of their empire, purposely obstructed the navigation of both the rivers, by raising dams across the channel, and making artificial falls in them, that no vessel of any size or force could possibly come up. Alexander began to restore the navigation of the rivers by demolishing the cataracts upon the Tigris as far up as Seleucia, but he did not live to finish his great designs; those upon the Euphrates still continued.

The prophet therefore might very justly speak of the Chaldeans as glorying in their naval power in his time; though afterwards they had no foundation for making any such boast.

Verse 19. Behold I will do a new thing] At ver. 16, the prophet had referred to the deliverance from Egypt and the passage through the Red Sea; here he promises that the same power shall be employed in their redemption and return from the Babylonian captivity. This was to be a new prodigy.

21 *This people have I formed for myself; they shall shew forth my praise.

22 But thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of me, O Israel.

23 Thou hast not brought me the small cattle of thy burnt-offerings, neither hast thou honoured me with thy sacrifices. I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense.

24 Thou hast bought me no sweet cane with money, neither hast thou filled me with the fat of thy sacrifices: but thou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities.

25 I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins.

26 Put me in remembrance: let us plead together: declare thou, that thou mayest be justified.

27 Thy first father hath sinned, and thy teachers have transgressed against me.

28 Therefore I have profaned the princes of the sanctuary, and have given Jacob to the curse, and Israel to reproaches.

Verse 20. The beast of the field shall honour me] The image is elegant and highly poetical. God will give such an abundant miraculous supply of water to his people traversing the dry desert in their return to their country, that even the wild beasts, the serpents, the ostriches, and other animals that haunt those arid regions, shall be sensible of the blessing, and shall break forth into thanksgiving and praises to him for the unusual refreshment which they receive from his so plentifully watering the sandy wastes of Arabia Deserta, for the benefit of his people passing through them.

Verse 22. But thou hast not called upon me] The emphasis of this and the following parts of the sentence, on which the sense depends, is laid on the words ME, on MY ACCOUNT, &c. The Jews were diligent in performing the external services of religion; in offering prayers, incense, sacrifices, oblations; but their prayers were not offered with faith; and their oblations were made more frequently to their idols than to the God of their fathers. The Hebrew idiom excludes with a general negative, in a comparative sense, one of two objects opposed to one another: thus, "I will have mercy, and not sacrifice," Hos. vi. 6. "For I spoke not to your fathers, nor commanded them, concerning burnt-offerings or sacrifices; but this thing I commanded them, saying, Obey my voice," Jer. vii. 22, 23.

But thou hast been weary of me, O Israel.] "Neither on my account hast thou laboured, O Israel."

Verse 25. I, even I, am he] The original is extremely abrupt: "I, I, He." Is there any mystery in this form? Does it refer to a plurality of persons in the Godhead?

For mine own sake] In the pardon of sin God can draw no reason but from his own infinite goodness.

Verse 27. Thy first father hath sinned] "How can ye say that ye have not sinned, seeing your first father, Adam, sinned; and man hath sin impressed on him through natural generation?"

Verse 28. I have profaned the princes of the sanctuary] "Thy princes have profaned my sanctuary." So the Syriac and Septuagint.

To reproaches.] No national crimes have ever equalled those of the Jewish nation, for no nation ever had such privileges to neglect, despise, sin against. When shall this severity of God towards this people have an end? Whenever, with one heart, they turn to him, and receive the doctrine of the Lord Jesus; and not till then.

CHAPTER XLIV.

This chapter, besides promises of redemption, of the effusion of the spirit, and success of the gospel, 1-5, sets forth, in a very sublime manner, the supreme power and foreknowledge, and absolute eternity, of the One true God; and exposes the folly and absurdity of idolatry with admirable force and elegance, 6-20. And to show that the knowledge of future events belongs only to Jehovah, whom all creation is again called to adore for the deliverance and reconciliation granted to his people, 21-23, the prophet concludes with setting in a very strong point of view the absolute impotence of every thing considered great and insurmountable in the sight of men, when standing in the way of the divine counsel; and mentions the future deliverer of the Jewish nation expressly by name, nearly two hundred years before his birth, 24-28.

YET now hear, * O Jacob my servant; and Israel, whom I have chosen :

2 Thus saith the LORD that made thee, and formed thee from the womb, which will help thee; Fear not, O Jacob, my servant; and thou, * Jesurun, whom I have chosen.

3 For I will ^a pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring :

4 And they shall spring up as among the grass, as willows by the water courses.

5 One shall say, I am the LORD's; and another shall call himself by the name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe with his hand unto the LORD, and surname himself by the name of Israel.

6 Thus saith the LORD the King of Israel, * and his Redeemer the LORD of hosts; ' I am the first, and I am the last; and beside me there is no God.

7 And * who, as I, shall call, and shall declare it, and set it in order for me, since I appointed the ancient people? and the things that are coming, and shall come, let them shew unto them.

8 Fear ye not, neither be afraid : ^a have not I told thee from that time, and have declared it? ' ye are even my witnesses. Is there a God beside me? yea, ^b there is no God; I know not any.

9 ' They that make a graven image are all of them vanity; and their ^c delectable things shall not profit; and they are their own witnesses: " they see not, nor know; that they may be ashamed.

10 Who hath formed a God, or molten a graven image ^d that is profitable for nothing?

11 Behold, all his fellows shall be ^e ashamed; and the workmen, they are of men: let them all be gathered together, let them stand up; yet they shall fear, and they shall be ashamed together.

12 ' The smith * with the tongs both worketh in the coals, and fashioneth it with hammers, and worketh it with the strength of his arms: yea, he is hungry, and his strength faileth: he drinketh no water, and is faint.

13 The carpenter stretcheth out his rule; he marketh it out with a line; he fitteth it with planes, and he marketh it out with the compass, and maketh it after the figure of a man, according to the beauty of a man: that it may remain in the house.

14 He heweth him down cedars, and taketh the cypress and the oak, which he * strengtheneth for himself among the trees of the forest: he planteth an ash, and the ruin doth nourish it.

15 Then shall it be for a man to burn: for he will take thereof, and warm himself; yea, he kindleth it, and baketh bread; yea, he maketh a god, and worshippeth it; he maketh it a graven image, and falleth down thereto.

16 He burneth part thereof in the fire; with part thereof he eateth flesh; he roasteth roast, and is satisfied: yea, he warmeth himself, and saith, Aha, I am warm, I have seen the fire:

Verse 2. Jesurun] Jeshurun means Israel. This name was given to that people by Moses, Deut. xxxii. 15, xxxiii. 5, 26. The most probable account of it seems to be that in which the Jewish commentators agree; namely, that it is derived from yashar, and signifies upright. In the same manner, Israel, as a people, is called meshullam, perfect, chap. xlii. 19. They were taught of God, and abundantly furnished with the means of zealitude and perfection in his service and worship.

Verse 5. Shall call himself] " Shall be called." Another shall subscribe with his hand unto the Lord] " And another shall write upon his hand, I belong to God."—Sept. But the repetition of the same phrase without any variation is not elegant. However, they seem to have understood it rightly, as an allusion to the marks, which were made by punctures rendered indelible, by fire or by staining, upon the hand or some other part of the body, signifying the state or character of the person, and to whom he belonged. The slave was marked with the name of his master; the soldier, of his commander; the idolater, with the name or ensign of his god.

Verse 7. Let them shew unto them.] The Septuagint read lachem, unto you; which is preferable to the reading of the text.

Verses 9, 10. That they may be ashamed. Who hath formed a god] The Bodleian MS., one of the first extant for its antiquity and authority, instead of mi, at the beginning of the tenth verse, has hi, which greatly clears up the construction of a very obscure passage. The Septuagint likewise closely connect in construction the end of ver. 9 with the beginning of ver. 10; and wholly omit the interrogative mi, which embarrasses the sentence: " But they shall be confounded that make a god: and they who engrave unprofitable things;" agreeably to the reading of the MS. above mentioned.

Verse 11. And the workmen, they are of men] I do not know that any one has ever yet interpreted these words to any tolerably good sense. The Vulgate, and our translators, have rendered them very fairly, as they are written and pointed in the text: " And the workmen they are of men." Out of which the commentators have not been able to extract any thing worthy of the prophet. I presume that adam, may signify erubuit, to be red through shame, as well as from any other cause: though I cannot produce any example of it in that particular sense. [Bishop Lowth's criticism here is without value. The authorised version is clear enough.]

Verse 12. The smith with the tongs, &c.] The sacred writers are generally large and eloquent upon the subject of idolatry; they treat it with great severity, and set forth the absurdity of it in the strongest light. But this passage of Isaiah, ver. 12-20, far exceeds any thing that ever was written upon the subject, in force of argument, energy of expression, and elegance of composition.

17 And the residue thereof he maketh a god, even his graven image: he falleth down unto it, and worshippeth it; and prayeth unto it, and saith, Deliver me; for thou art my god.

18 * They have not known nor understood: for ^b he hath ^c shut their eyes, that they cannot see; and their hearts, that they cannot understand.

19 And none ^d considereth ^e in his heart, neither is there knowledge nor understanding to say, I have burned part of it in the fire; yea, also I have baked bread upon the coals thereof; I have roasted flesh, and eaten it; and shall I make the residue thereof an abomination? shall I fall down to ^f the stock of a tree?

20 He feedeth on ashes: ^g a deceived heart hath turned him aside, that he cannot deliver his soul, nor say, Is there not a lie in my right hand?

21 Remember these, O Jacob and Israel; for ^h thou art my servant: I have formed thee; thou art my servant: O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of me.

22 ⁱ I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins: return unto me: for ^j I have redeemed thee.

From the tenth to the seventeenth verse a most beautiful strain of irony is carried on against idolatry. And we may naturally think that every idolater, who either read or heard it, must have been for ever ashamed of his own devices.

Verse 17. He falleth down unto it] There were four forms of adoration used among the Hebrews: 1. HIŠTAC-HAVAH, The prostration of the whole body. 2. KADAD, The bowing of the head. 3. CARA, The bending of the upper part of the body down to the knees. 4. BARACH, Bowing the knee, or kneeling.

Verse 20. He feedeth on ashes] He feedeth on that which affordeth no nourishment; a proverbial expression for using ineffectual means, and bestowing labour to no purpose.

Verse 22. I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and as a cloud, thy sins] Probably Isaiah alludes to the smoke rising up from the sin-offering, dispersed speedily by the wind, and rendered invisible. He who offered his sacrifice aright was as sure that the sin for which he offered it was blotted out, as that the smoke of the sacrifice

23 * Sing, O ye heavens; for the Lord hath done it: shout, ye lower parts of the earth: break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: for the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel.

24 Thus saith the Lord, ¹ thy Redeemer, and ^m he that formed thee from the womb, I am the Lord that maketh all things; ⁿ that stretcheth forth the heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself;

25 That ^o frustrateth the tokens ^p of the liars, and maketh diviners mad; that turneth wise men backward, ^q and maketh their knowledge foolish;

26 * That confirmeth the word of his servant, and performeth the counsel of his messengers; that saith to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be inhabited; and to the cities of Judah, Ye shall be built, and I will raise up the ^r decayed places thereof:

was dispersed by the wind, and was no longer discernible.

Verse 27. That saith to the deep, Be dry] Cyrus took Babylon by laying the bed of the Euphrates dry, and leading his army into the city by night through the empty channel of the river. This remarkable circumstance, in which the event so exactly corresponded with the prophecy, was also noted by Jeremiah, chap. 1. 38, li. 36.

Verse 28. That saith of Cyrus, He is my shepherd] There is a remarkable beauty and propriety in this verse.

1. Cyrus is called God's Shepherd. Shepherd was an epithet which Cyrus took to himself; and what he gave to all good kings.

2. This Cyrus should say to the temple: "Thy foundation shall be laid." Not—thou shalt be built. The fact is, only the foundation was laid in the days of Cyrus, the Ammonites having prevented the building; nor was it resumed till the second year of Darius, one of his successors. There is often a precision in the expressions of the prophets which is as honourable to truth, as it is unnoticed by careless readers.

CHAPTER XLV.

Prophecy concerning Cyrus, the first king of the Persians. Every obstruction shall be removed out of his way, and the treasures taken from his enemies shall be immense, 1-3. To whom, and on what account, Cyrus was indebted for his wonderful success, 4-6. The prophet refutes the absurd opinion of the Persians, that there were two supreme beings, an evil and a good one, represented by light and darkness, here declared to be only the operation of the ONE true God, 7; and makes a transition to the still greater work of God displayed in the dispensation of the gospel, 8. Great impiety of those who call in question the mysterious providence of God towards his children, 9-12. The remaining part of this chapter, interspersed with strictures on the absurdity of idolatry and some allusions to the dark lying oracles of the heathens, may partly refer to the deliverance begun by Cyrus, but chiefly to the salvation by the Messiah, which, it is declared, shall be of universal extent and everlasting duration, 13-25.

THUS saith the LORD to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose ^aright hand I ^bhave holden, ^cto subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut;

2 I will go before thee, ^dand make the crooked places straight: ^eI will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron:

3 And I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places, ^fthat thou mayest know that I, the LORD, which ^gcall thee by thy name, am the God of Israel.

4 For ^hJacob my servant's sake, and Israel mine elect, I have even called thee by thy name: I have surnamed thee, though thou hast ⁱnot known me.

Verse 1. Loose the loins of kings] Xenophon gives the following list of the nations conquered by Cyrus: the Syrians, Assyrians, Arabians, Cappadocians, both the Phrygians, Lydians, Carians, Phoenicians, Babylonians. He moreover reigned over the Bactrians, Indians, Cilicians, the Sace, Paphlagonians, and Mariandyni. All these kingdoms, he acknowledges, in his decree for the restoration of the Jews, to have been given to him by JEHOVAH, the God of heaven. Ezra, i. 2.

To open before him the two leaved gates, &c.] The gates of Babylon within the city leading from the streets to the river were providentially left open, when Cyrus's forces entered the city in the night through the channel of the river, in the general disorder occasioned by the great feast which was then celebrated; otherwise says Herodotus, i. 191, the Persians would have been shut up in the bed of the river, and taken as in a net, and all destroyed. And the gates of the palace were opened imprudently by the king's orders, to inquire what was the cause of the tumult without; when the two parties under Gobrias and Gadatas rushed in, got possession of the palace, and slew the king.

Verse 2. The crooked places] For hadurim, crooked places, a word not easily accounted for in this place, the Septuagint read hararim, the mountains. The divine protection that attended Cyrus, and rendered his expedition against Babylon easy and prosperous, is finely expressed by God's going before him, and making the mountains level.

The gates of brass] Abydenus says, that the wall of Babylon had brazen gates. And Herodotus, more particularly: "In the wall all round there are a hundred gates, all of brass; and so in like manner are the sides and the lintels." The gates likewise within the city, opening to the river from the several streets, were of brass; as were those also of the temple of Belus.

Verse 3. I will give thee the treasures of darkness] Sardes and Babylon, when taken by Cyrus, were the wealthiest cities in the world. Croesus, celebrated beyond all the kings of that age for his riches, gave up his treasures to Cyrus, with an exact account in writing of the whole, containing the particulars with which each wagon was loaded when they were carried away; and they were delivered to Cyrus at the palace of Babylon.

Treasures of darkness may refer to the custom of burying their jewels and money under the ground in their house floors, fearing robbers.

Verse 7. I form the light, and create darkness] It was the great principle of the Magian religion, which prevailed in Persia in the time of Cyrus, and in which probably he was educated, that there are two supreme, co-eternal, and independent causes, always acting in opposition one to the other; one the author of all good, the other of all evil. The good 7 I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and ^acreate evil: I the LORD do all these things.

8 ^bDrop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness: let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together; I the LORD have created it.

9 Woe unto him that striveth with ^chis Maker! Let the potsherd strive with the potsherd of the earth. ^dShall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? or thy work, He hath no hands?

10 Woe unto him that saith unto his father, What begetteth thou? or to the woman, What hast thou brought forth?

11 Thus saith the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker, Ask me of things to come concerning ^emy sons, and concerning ^fthe work of my hands command ye me.

12 ^gI have made the earth, and ^hcreated man upon it: I, even my hands, have stretched out the being they called LIGHT; the evil being DARKNESS. That when LIGHT had the ascendant, then good and happiness prevailed among men; when DARKNESS had the superiority, then evil and misery abounded. An opinion that contradicts the clearest evidence of our reason, which plainly leads us to the acknowledgment of one only Supreme Being, infinitely good as well as powerful.

There were, however, some among the Persians whose sentiments were more moderate as to this matter; who held the evil principle to be in some measure subordinate to the good; and that the former would at length be wholly subdued by the latter.

I make peace, and create evil] Evil is here evidently put for war and its attendant miseries. I will procure peace for the Israelites, and destroy Babylon by war. I form light, and create darkness. Now, as darkness is only the privation of light, so the evil of war is the privation of peace.

Verse 8. Drop down, ye heavens] The eighty-fifth psalm is a very elegant ode on the same subject with this part of Isaiah's prophecies, the restoration of Judah from captivity; and is, in the most beautiful part of it, a manifest imitation of this passage of the prophet.

These images of the dew and the rain descending from heaven and making the earth fruitful, employed by the prophet, and some of those nearly of the same kind which are used by the Psalmist, may perhaps be primarily understood as designed to set forth in a splendid manner the happy state of God's people restored to their country, and flourishing in peace and plenty, in piety, and virtue; but justice and salvation, mercy and truth, righteousness and peace, and glory dwelling in the land, cannot with any sort of propriety, in the one or the other, be interpreted as the consequences of that event; they must mean the blessings of the great redemption by Messiah.

Let the earth open, &c.] Jonathan, in his Targum, refers this to the resurrection of the dead; the earth shall be opened, and the dead shall revive. A plain proof that the ancient Jews believed in a future state, and acknowledged the resurrection of the dead.

Verse 9. Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker] The prophet answers or prevents the objections and cavils of the unbelieving Jews, disposed to murmur against God, and to arraign the wisdom and justice of his dispensations in regard to them; in permitting them to be oppressed by their enemies and in promising them deliverance instead of preventing their captivity. St. Paul has borrowed the image, and has applied it to the like purpose with equal force and elegance: Rom. ix. 20, 21.

Verse 13. I have raised him up] This evidently refers to Cyrus, and to what he did for the Jews; and informs us by whom he was excited to do it.

13 ^b I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will ^c direct all his ways: he shall ^d build my city, and he shall let go my captives, ^e not for price nor reward, saith the LORD of hosts.

14 Thus saith the LORD, 'The labour of Egypt, and merchandise of Ethiopia and of the Sabeans, men of stature, shall come over unto thee, and they shall be thine: they shall come after thee; ^a in chains they shall come over, and they shall fall down unto thee, they shall make supplication unto thee, saying, ^b Surely God is in thee; and ^c there is none else, there is no God.

15 Verily thou art a God ^d that hidest thyself, O God of Israel, the Saviour.

16 They shall be ashamed, and also confounded, all of them: they shall go to confusion together that are ^k makers of idols.

17 ^l But Israel shall be saved in the LORD with an everlasting salvation: ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end.

18 For thus saith the LORD ^m that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: ⁿ I am the LORD; and there is none else.

Verse 14. The labour of Egypt] This seems to relate to the future admission of the Gentiles into the Church of God. Compare Ps. lxxviii. 32, lxxii. 10; chap. lx. 6-9. And perhaps these particular nations may be named, by a metonymy common in all poetry, for powerful and wealthy nations in general.

The Sabeans, men of stature] That the Sabeans were of a more majestic appearance than common, is particularly remarked by Agatharchides, an ancient Greek historian. So also the Septuagint understand it, rendering it "tall men." And the same phrase anshey middah, is used for persons of extraordinary stature, Num. xiii. 32, and 1 Chron. xx. 6.

Verse 15. Verily thou art a God that hidest thyself] At present, from the nations of the world.

O God of Israel, the Saviour.] While thou revealest thyself to the Israelites and savest them.

Verse 16. They shall be ashamed] The reader cannot but observe the sudden transition from the solemn adoration of the secret and mysterious nature of God's counsels in regard to his people, to the spirited denunciation of the confusion of idolaters, and the final destruction of idolatry; contrasted with the salvation of Israel, not from temporal captivity, but the eternal salvation by the Messiah, strongly marked by the repetition and augmentation of the phrase, to the ages of eternity.

Verse 19. I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth] In opposition to the manner in which the heathen 19 I have not spoken in ^a secret, in a dark place of the earth: I said not unto the seed of Jacob, Seek ye me in vain: ^b I the LORD speak righteousness, I declare things that are right.

20 Assemble yourselves and come; draw near together, ye that are escaped of the nations: ^c they have no knowledge that set up the wood of their graven image, and pray unto a god that cannot save.

21 Tell ye, and bring them near; yea, let them take counsel together: ^d who hath declared this from ancient time? ^e who hath told it from that time? have not I the LORD? ^f and there is no God else beside me; a just God and a Saviour; there is none beside me.

22 ^g Look unto me, and be ye saved, ^h all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else.

23 ⁱ I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, That unto me every ^j knee shall bow, ^k every tongue shall swear.

24 ^l Surely, shall one say, In the LORD have I ^m righteousness ⁿ and strength: even to him shall men come; and ^o all that are incensed against him shall be ashamed.

oracles gave their answers, which were generally delivered from some deep and obscure cavern.

I the Lord speak righteousness, I declare things that are right.] This also is said in opposition to the false and ambiguous answers given by the heathen oracles, of which there are many noted examples; none more so than that of the answer given to Croesus when he marched against Cyrus, which was: If Croesus march against Cyrus, he shall overthrow a great empire: he, supposing that this promised him success, fought, and lost his own, while he expected to destroy that of his enemy. Here the quack demon took refuge in his designed ambiguity. He predicted the destruction of a great empire, but did not say which it was; and therefore he was safe, howsoever the case fell out. Not one of the predictions of God's prophets is conceived in this way.

Verse 22. Look unto me, and be ye saved, &c.] This verse and the following contain a plain prediction of the universal spread of the knowledge of God through Christ; and so the Targum appears to have understood it; see Rom. xiv. 11, Phil. ii. 10.

Verse 24. Surely, shall one say, In the Lord have I righteousness and strength] Probably these are the words of Cyrus, who acknowledged that all his success came from Jehovah. And this sentiment is in effect contained in his decree or proclamation, Ezra i. 2: "Thus saith Cyrus, king of Persia, The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth," &c.

CHAPTER XLVI.

The idols of Babylon represented as so far from being able to bear the burden of their votaries, that they themselves are borne by beasts of burden into captivity, 1, 2. This beautifully contrasted with the tender care of God, in bearing his people from first to last in his arms, and delivering them from their distress, 3, 4. The prophet then, with his usual force and elegance, goes on to show the folly of idolatry, and the utter inability of idols, 5-7. From which he passes with great ease to the contemplation of the attributes and perfections of the true God, 8-10. Particularly that prescience which foretold the deliverance of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, with all its leading circumstances; and also that very remote event of which it is the type in the days of the Messiah, 11-13.

BEL * boweth down, Nebo stoopeth, their idols were upon the beasts, and upon the cattle: your carriages were heavy loaden; ^b they are a burden to the weary beast.

2 They stoop, they bow down together; they could not deliver the burden, ^c but ^d themselves are gone into captivity.

3 Hearken unto me, O house of Jacob, and all the remnant of the house of Israel, ^e which are borne by me from the belly, which are carried from the womb:

4 And even to your old age ^f I am he; and even to hoar hairs ^g will I carry you: I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver you.

5 ^h To whom will ye liken me, and make me equal, and compare me, that we may be like?

6 ⁱ They lavish gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the balance, and hire a goldsmith; and he maketh it a god: they fall down, yea, they worship.

7 ^j They bear him upon the shoulder, they carry him, and set him in his place, and he standeth; from his place shall he not remove: yea, ^k one shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer, nor save him out of his trouble.

8 Remember this, and shew yourselves men: ^l bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors.

9 ^m Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and ⁿ there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me;

10 ^o Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, ^p My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure:

11 Calling a ravenous bird ^q from the east, ^r the man ^s that executeth my counsel from a far country: yea, ^t I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it.

12 Harken unto me, ye ^u stout-hearted, ^v that are far from righteousness:

Verse 1. Your carriages were heavy loaden] "Their burdens are heavy."

Verse 2. They could not deliver the burden] That is, their worshippers, who ought to have been borne by them. See the two next verses. The Chaldee and Syriac Versions render it in effect to the same purpose, those that bear them, meaning their worshippers; but how they can render massa in an active sense, I do not understand.

Verse 3. Which are borne by me from the belly] The prophet very ingeniously, and with great force, contrasts the power of God, and his tender goodness effectually exerted towards his people, with the inability of the false gods of the heathen. He like an indulgent father had carried his people in his arms, "as a man carrieth his son," Dent. i. 31. He had protected them, and delivered them from their distresses; whereas the idols of the heathen are forced to be carried about themselves, and removed from place to place, with great labour and fatigue, by their worshippers; nor can they answer, or deliver their votaries, when they cry unto them.

Moses, expostulating with God on the weight of the charge laid upon him as leader of his people, expresses that charge under the same image of a parent's carrying his children, in very strong terms: Numb. xi. 12.

Verse 7. They bear him upon the shoulder—and set him in his place] This is the way in which the Hindoos carry their gods; and indeed so exact a picture is this of the idolatrous procession of this people, that the prophet might almost be supposed to have been sitting among the Hindoos when he delivered this prophecy.

Verse 8. Show yourselves men] This word is rather of doubtful derivation and signification. It occurs only in this place: and some of the ancient interpreters seem to have had something different in their copies. The Vulgate read take shame to yourselves; the Syriac, consider with yourselves; the Septuagint, groan or mourn within yourselves.

Verse 11. Calling a ravenous bird from the east] A very proper emblem for Cyrus, as in other respects, so particularly because the ensign of Cyrus was a golden eagle, the very word ayil, which the prophet uses here, expressed as near as may be in Greek letters.

Verse 12. Harken unto me, ye stout-hearted] This is an address to the Babylonians, stubbornly bent on the practice of injustice towards the Israelites.

CHAPTER XLVII.

The destruction of Babylon is denounced by a beautiful selection of circumstances, in which her prosperity is contrasted with her adverse condition. She is represented as a tender and delicate female reduced to the work and abject condition of a slave, and bereaved of every consolation, 1-4. And that on account of her cruelty, particularly to God's people, her pride, voluptuousness, sorceries, and incantations, 5-11. The folly of these last practices elegantly exposed by the prophet, 12-15. It is worthy of observation that almost all the imagery of this chapter is applied in the book of the Revelation (in nearly the same words) to the antitype of the illustrious capital of the Chaldean empire, viz., Babylon the GREAT.

COME ^adown, and ^bsit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon, sit on the ground: there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate.

2 ^cTake the millstones, and grind meal: uncover thy locks, make bare the leg, uncover the thigh, pass over the rivers.

3 ^dThy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy shame shall be seen: ^eI will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man.

4 As for ^four redeemer, the Lord of hosts is his name, the Holy One of Israel.

5 Sit thou ^gsilent, and get thee into darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans: ^hfor thou shalt no more be called, The lady of kingdoms.

6 ⁱI was wroth with my people, ^jI have polluted mine inheritance, and given them into thine hand: thou didst shew them no mercy; ^kupon the ancient hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke.

7 And thou saidst, I shall be ^la lady for ever: so ^mthat thou didst not ⁿlay these things to thy heart, ^oneither didst remember the latter end of it.

8 Therefore hear now this, thou that art given to pleasures, that dwellest carelessly, that sayest in thine heart, ^pI am, and none else beside me; ^qI shall not sit as a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children:

9 But ^rthese two things shall come to thee ^sin a moment in one day, the loss of children, and widow.

Verse 2. Take the millstones, and grind meal] It was the work of slaves to grind corn. They used hand-mills: water-mills were not invented till a little before the time of Augustus; wind-mills not until long after. It was not only the work of slaves, but the hardest work; and often inflicted upon them as a severe punishment.

To grind in the mill, to be scourged, to be put in the stocks, were punishments for slaves. Hence a delinquent was said to be a man worthy of the mill. The tread-mill, now in use in England, is a revival of this ancient usage. But in the East, grinding was the work of the female slaves. And it is the same to this day. The words denote that state of captivity to which the Babylonians should be reduced.

Make bare the leg, uncover the thigh] This is repeatedly seen in Bengal, where there are few bridges; and both sexes, having neither shoes nor stockings, truss up their loose garments, and walk across, where the waters are not deep.

Verse 3. I will not meet thee as a man.] "Neither will I suffer man to intercede with me."

Verse 4. Our Redeemer.] Here a chorus breaks in upon the midst of the subject, with a change of construction, as well as sentiment, from the longer to the shorter kind of verse, for one distich only; after which the former subject and style are resumed.

Verse 6. I was wroth with my people] God, in the course of his providence, makes use of great conquerors and tyrants as his instruments to execute his judgments in the earth; he employs one wicked nation to scourge another. The hood: they shall come upon thee in their perfection ^afor the multitude of thy sorceries, and for the great abundance of thine enchantments.

11 Therefore shall evil come upon thee; thou shalt not know ^ffrom whence it riseth: and mischief shall fall upon thee; thou shalt not be able to ^gput it off: and ^hdesolation shall come upon thee suddenly, which thou shalt not know.

12 Stand now with thine enchantments, and with the multitude of thy sorceries, wherein thou hast laboured from thy youth; if so be thou shalt be able to profit, if so be thou mayest prevail.

13 ⁱThou art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels. Let now ^{jj}the ^{kk}astrologers, the stargazers, ^{ll}the monthly prognosticators, stand up, and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee.

14 Behold, they shall be ^{mm}as stubble; the fire shall burn them; they shall not deliver ⁿⁿthemselves from the power of the flame: there shall not be a coal to warm at, nor fire to sit before it.

inflicter of the punishment may perhaps be as culpable as the sufferer; and may add to his guilt by indulging his cruelty in executing God's justice. When he has fulfilled the work to which the divine vengeance has ordained him, he will become himself the object of it; see chap. x. 5-12.

Verse 9. These two things shall come to thee in a moment] That is, suddenly. Belshazzar was slain; thus the city became metaphorically a widow, the husband—the governor of it, being slain. In the time in which the king was slain, the Medes and Persians took the city, and slew many of its inhabitants, see Dan. v. 30, 31. When Darius took the city, he is said to have crucified three thousand of its principal inhabitants.

In their perfection] Instead of bethummam, "in their perfection," as our translation renders it, the Septuagint and Syriac read, in the copies from which they translated, pithom, suddenly; parallel to rega, in a moment, in the preceding alternate member of the sentence. The concurrent testimony of the Septuagint and Syriac, favoured by the context, may be safely opposed to the authority of the present text.

For the multitude] "Notwithstanding the multitude." For this sense of the particle, see Numb. xiv. 11.

Verse 15. To his quarter] Leebro. Expositors give no very good account of this word in this place. In a MS. it was at first leabdo, to his servant or work, which is probably the true reading. The sense however is pretty much the same with the common interpretation. "Every one shall turn aside to his own business; none shall deliver thee."

CHAPTER XLVIII.

The Jews reproved for their obstinate attachment to idols, notwithstanding their experience of the divine providence over them; and of the divine prescience that revealed by the prophets the most remarkable events which concerned them, that they should not have the least pretext for ascribing any portion of their success to their idols,

1-8. The Almighty, after bringing them to the furnace for their perverseness, asserts his glorious sovereignty, and repeats his gracious promises of deliverance and consolation, 9-11. Prophecy concerning that individual (Cyrus) who shall be an instrument in the hand of God of executing his will on Babylon, and his power on the Chaldeans; and the idols of the people are again challenged to give a like proof of their foreknowledge, 12-16. Tender and passionate exclamation of Jehovah respecting the hardened condition of the Jewish nation, to which the very pathetic exclamation of the divine Saviour when he wept over Jerusalem may be considered a striking parallel, 17-19. Notwithstanding the repeated provocations of the house of Israel, Jehovah will again be merciful to them. They are commanded to escape from Babylon; and God's gracious favour towards them is beautifully represented by images borrowed from the exodus from Egypt, 20, 21. Certain perdition of the finally impenitent, 22. It will be proper here to remark that many passages in this chapter, and indeed the general strain of these prophecies, have a plain aspect to a restoration of the church in the latter days upon a scale much greater than the world has yet witnessed, when the very violent fall of Babylon the Great mentioned in the Revelation, of which the Chaldean capital was an expressive type, shall introduce by a most tremendous political convulsion (Rev. xvi. 17-21) that glorious epoch of the gospel, which forms so conspicuous a part of the prophecies of the Old Testament, and has been a subject of the prayers of all saints in all ages.

HEAR ye this, O house of Jacob, which are called by the name of Israel, and ^a come forth out of the waters of Judah, ^b which swear by the name of the LORD, and make mention of the God of Israel, ^c but not in truth, nor in righteousness.

2 For they call themselves ^d of the holy city, and ^e stay themselves upon the God of Israel; The LORD of hosts is his name.

3 ^f I have declared the former things from the beginning; and they went forth out of my mouth, and I shewed them; I did them suddenly, ^g and they came to pass.

4 Because I knew that thou art ^h obstinate, and ⁱ thy neck is an iron sinew, and thy brow brass:

5 ^j I have even from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass I shewed it thee: lest thou shouldst say, Mine idol hath done them, and my graven image, and my molten image, hath commanded them.

6 Thou hast heard, see all this; and will not ye declare it? I have shewed thee new things from this time, even hidden things, and thou didst not know them.

Verse 9. And for my praise] I read ulemaan tehivlathi. The word lemaan, though not absolutely necessary here, for it may be understood as supplied from the preceding member, yet seems to have been removed from hence to ver. 11; where it is redundant, and where it is not repeated in the Septuagint, Syriac, and a MS.

Verse 10. I have chosen thee] For becharticha, "I have chosen thee," a MS. has bechanticha, "I have tried thee."

I cannot think becheseph, WITH silver, is the true reading: kecheseph LIKE silver, as the Vulgate evidently read it, I suppose to have been the original reading, though no MS. yet found supports this word. The meaning of the verse seems to be this: I have purified you, but not as silver is purified; for when it is purified, no dross of any kind is left behind. Had I done this with you, I should have consumed you altogether; but I have put you in the crucible of affliction, in captivity, that you may acknowledge your sins, and turn unto me.

Verse 11. For how should my name be polluted] The word shemi, my name, is dropped out of the text; it is supplied by a MS. and by the Septuagint. The Syriac and Vulgate get over the difficulty, by making the verb in the first person; that I may not be blasphemed.

Verse 14. The Lord hath loved him: he will do his pleasure on Babylon] That is, Cyrus; so Synnachus has well rendered it: "He whom the Lord hath loved will perform his will."

Verse 16. Come ye near unto me] After the word kirbu, "draw near," a MS. adds goyim, "O ye nations;" which, as this and the two preceding verses are plainly addressed to the idolatrous nations, reproaching their gods as unable to predict future events, is probably genuine.

—Origen cont. Cels. lib. i. I have kept to the order of the words of the original, on purpose that the ambiguity, which Origen remarks in the Version of the Septuagint, and which is the same in the Hebrew, might still remain; and the sense which he gives to it, be offered to the reader's judgment, which is wholly excluded in our translation.

CHAPTER XLIX.

In this chapter the Messiah is introduced, declaring the full extent of his commission, which is not only to be Saviour to the Jews, but also to the Gentiles. The power and efficacy of his word is represented by apt images; the ill success of his ministry among the Jews is intimated, and the great success of the gospel among the Gentiles, 1-12. But the prophet, then casting his eye on the happy, though distant period of Israel's restoration, makes a beautiful apostrophe to the whole creation to shout forth the praises of God on the prospect of this remarkable favour, 13. The tender mercies of God to his people, with the prosperity of the church in general, and the final overthrow of all its enemies, make the subject of the remaining verses, 14-26.

LISTEN, ^a O isles, unto me; and hearken, ye people, from far; ^b The Lord hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name.

2 And he hath made ^c my mouth like a sharp sword; ^d in the shadow of his hand hath he hid me, and made me ^e a polished shaft; in his quiver hath he hid me;

3 And said unto me, 'Thou art my servant, O Israel, ^f in whom I will be glorified.

4 ^g Then I said, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought, and in vain: yet

Verse 1. Listen, O isles, unto me] The character and office of the Messiah was exhibited in general terms at the beginning of chap. xlii.; but here he is introduced in person, declaring the full extent of his commission, which is not only to restore the Israelites, and reconcile them to their Lord and Father, from whom they had so often revolted, but to be a light to lighten the Gentiles, to call them to the knowledge and obedience of the true God, and to bring them to be one church together with the Israelites, and to partake with them of the same common salvation procured for all by the great Redeemer and Reconciler of man to God.

Verse 2. And he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword] The servant of God, who speaks in the former part of this surely my judgment is with the Lord, and ⁱ my work with my God.

5 And now, saith the Lord ^j that formed me from the womb to be his servant, to bring Jacob again to him, ^k Though Israel ^l be not gathered, yet shall I be glorious in the eyes of the Lord, and my God shall be my strength.

6 And he said, ^m It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the ⁿ preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a ^o light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth.

chapter, must be the Messiah. If any part of this character can, in any sense, belong to the prophet, yet in some parts it must belong exclusively to Christ; and in all parts to him in a much fuller and more proper sense. Isaiah's mission was to the Jews, not to the distant nations, to whom the speaker in this place addresses himself. "He hath made my mouth a sharp sword;" "to reprove the wicked, and to denounce unto them punishment," says Jarchi, understanding it of Isaiah. But how much better does it suit him who is represented as having "a sharp two-edged sword going out of his mouth," Rev. i. 16; who is himself the word of God; which word is "quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword;" Heb. iv. 12. 8 Thus saith the LORD, *In an acceptable time have I heard thee, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee: and I will preserve thee, *and give thee for a covenant of the people, to ^c establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages;

9 That thou mayest *say to the prisoners, Go forth; to them that are in darkness, Shew yourselves. They shall feed in the ways, and their pastures shall be in all high places.

10 They shall not ^d hunger nor thirst; ^e neither shall the heat nor sun smite them: for he that hath mercy on them ^f shall lead them, even by the springs of water shall he guide them.

11 *And I will make all my mountains a way, and my highways shall be exalted.

ment of God, "long laid up in store with him, and sealed up among his treasures," is at last revealed and produced by his power, and under his protection, to execute his great and holy purposes. He is compared to a polished shaft stored in his quiver for use in his due time. The polished shaft denotes the same efficacious word which is before represented by the sharp sword. The doctrine of the gospel pierces the hearts of its hearers, "bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." The metaphor of the sword and the arrow, applied to powerful speech, is bold, yet just.

This person, who is (ver. 8) called Israel, cannot in any sense be Isaiah. That name, in its original design and full import, can only belong to him who contended powerfully with God in behalf of mankind, and prevailed, Gen. xxxii. 28. I have my doubts whether sometimes Isaiah, sometimes Cyrus, and sometimes the Messiah, be not intended in this chapter; the former shadowing out the latter, of whom, in certain respects, they may be considered the types. The literal sense should be sought out first; this is of the utmost importance both in reading and interpreting the oracles of God.

Verse 12. Behold, these shall come from far.] Babylon was far and east; Sinim, Pelusians, to the south.

The land of Sinim.] Sin signifies a bush, and sinim, bushes, woods, &c. Probably this means that the land where several of the lost Jews dwell is a woodland. The ten tribes are gone, no one knows whither. On the slave coast of Africa, some Jewish rites appear among the people, and all the males are circumcised. The whole of this land, as it appears from the coast, may be emphatically called erets sinim, the land of bushes, as it is all covered with woods, as far as the eye can reach. Many of the Indians in North America, which is also a woodland, have a great profusion of rites, apparently in their basis Jewish. Is it not possible that the descendants of the ten lost tribes are among those 17 Thy children shall make haste; *thy destroyers and they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee.

18 *Lift up thine eyes round about, and behold: all these gather themselves together, and come to thee. As I live, saith the LORD, thou shalt surely clothe thee with them all, *as with an ornament, and bind them on thee, as a bride doth.

19 For thy waste and thy desolate places, and the land of thy destruction, *shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants, and they that swallowed thee up shall be far away.

20 *The children which thou shalt have, *after thou hast lost the other, shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me: give place to me that I may dwell.

21 Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? and who hath brought up those? Behold, I was left alone; these, where had they been?

22 *Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people: and they shall bring thy sons in their *arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders.

23 *And kings shall be thy ^{bb} nursing fathers, and their ^{cc} queens thy nursing mothers: they shall bow down to thee with their face toward the earth, and ^{dd} lick up the dust of thy feet; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD: for ^{ee} they shall not be ashamed that wait for me.

in America, or among those in Africa, whom European nations think they have a right to enslave? It is of those lost tribes that the twenty-first verse speaks: "And these, where had they been?" [Most of the commentators now endorse the opinion of Gesenius, that the land of Sinim is China.]

Verse 16. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands.] This is certainly an allusion to some practice, common among the Jews at that time, of making marks on their hands or arms by punctures on the skin, with some sort of sign or representation of the city or temple, to show their affection and zeal for it. They had a method of making such punctures indelible by fire, or by staining. See note on chap. xlv. 5.

Verse 17. Shall go forth of thee.] "Shall become thine offspring." The phrase is frequently used in this sense: see chap. xi. 1; Mic. v. 2; Nah. i. 11. The accession of the Gentiles to the church of God is considered as an addition made to the number of the family and children of Zion; see ver. 21, 22, and chap. lx. 4. The common rendering, "shall go forth of thee, or depart from thee" is very flat, after their zeal had been expressed by "shall become thy builders;" and as the opposition is kept up in one part of the sentence, one has reason to expect it in the other, which should be parallel to it.

Verse 18. Bind them on thee, as a bride doeth.] The end of the sentence is manifestly imperfect. Does a bride bind her children, or her new subjects, about her? Zion clothes herself with her children, as a bride clothes herself, — with what? some other thing certainly. The Septuagint help us out in this difficulty, and supply the lost word: as a bride, her ornaments.

Verse 23. With their face toward the earth.] It is well known that expressions of submission, homage, and reverence always have been and are still carried to a great degree of of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered: for I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children.

extravagance in the eastern countries. When Joseph's brethren were introduced to him, "they bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth," Gen. xlii. 6. The kings of Persia never admitted any one to their presence without exacting this act of adoration; for that was the proper term for it.

These expressions therefore of the prophet are only general poetical images, taken from the manners of the country, to denote great respect and reverence: and such splendid poetical images, which frequently occur in the prophetic writings, were intended only as general amplifications of the subject, not as predictions to be understood and fulfilled precisely according to the letter. For the different kinds of adoration in the East, see the note on chap. xiv. 17.

Verse 24. Shall the prey be taken from the mighty] These two last verses contain a glorious promise of deliverance to the persecuted church of Christ from the terrible one—Satan, and all his representatives and viceregents, persecuting antichristian rulers. They shall at last cease from destroying the church of God, and destroy one another.

CHAPTER L

In this chapter God vindicates his dealings with his people, whose alienation is owing to themselves. 1. And, by allusion to the temporal deliverances connected with the drying up of the Red Sea and the Euphrates, asserts his power to save, 2, 3; namely, by the obedience and sufferings of the Messiah, 4-6; who was at length to prove victorious over all his enemies, 7-9. The two last verses exhort to faith and trust in God in the most disconsolate circumstances; with a denunciation of vengeance on those who should trust to their own devices, 10, 11.

THUS saith the LORD, Where is *the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away? or which of my ^bcreditors is it to whom I have sold you? Behold, for your iniquities ^chave ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away.

2 Wherefore, when I came, was there no man? ^dwhen I called, was there none to answer? ^eIs my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem? or have I no power to deliver? behold, ^fat my rebuke I ^gdry up the sea, I make the ^hrivers a wilderness: ⁱtheir fish stinketh, because there is no water, and dieth for thirst.

3 ^jI clothe the heavens with blackness, ^kand I make sackcloth their covering.

Verse 1. Thus saith the Lord] This chapter has been understood of the prophet himself; but it certainly speaks more clearly about Jesus of Nazareth than of Isaiah, the son of Amos.

Where is the bill] Husbands, through moroseness or levity of temper, often sent bills of divorcement to their wives on slight occasions, as they were permitted to do by the law of Moses, Deut. xxiv. 1. And fathers, being oppressed with debt, often sold their children, which they might do for a time, till the year of release, Exod. xxi. 7. That this was frequently practised, appears from many passages of Scripture, and that the persons and the liberty of the children were answerable for the debts of the father. The widow, 2 Kings iv. 1, complains "that the creditor is come to take unto him her two sons to be bondmen." And so in the parable, Matt. xviii. 25.

Verse 6. And my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair] The greatest indignity that could possibly be offered.

I hid not my face from shame and spitting.] Another instance of the utmost contempt and detestation. It was ordered by the law of Moses as a severe punishment, carrying with it a lasting disgrace; Deut. xxv. 9. See Job xxx.

6 ^cI gave my back to the smiters, and ^dmy cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting.

10, and Numb. xxii. 14. It so evidently appears that in eastern countries spitting has ever been an expression of the utmost detestation, that the learned doubt whether in the passages of Scripture above quoted any thing more is meant than spitting,—not in the face, which perhaps the words do not necessarily imply,—but only in the presence of the person affronted. But in this place it certainly means spitting in the face; so it is understood in St. Luke, where our Lord plainly refers to this prophecy: xviii. 31, 32, which was in fact fulfilled; "and some began to spit on him," Mark xiv. 65, xv. 19. If spitting in a person's presence was such an indignity, how much more spitting in his face?

Verse 7. Therefore have I set my face like a flint] The prophet Ezekiel, chap. iii. 8, 9, has expressed this with great force in his bold and vehement manner.

Verse 10. Who is among you that feareth the Lord] I believe this passage has been generally, if not dangerously misunderstood. It has been quoted, and preached upon, to prove that "a man might conscientiously fear God, and be obedient to the words of the law and the prophets; obey the voice of his servant—of Jesus Christ himself, that is, be sincerely and regularly obedient to the moral law and the coun-mands of our blessed Lord, and yet walk in darkness and have no light, no sense of God's approbation, and no evidence of the safety of his state." This is utterly impossible; for Jesus hath said, "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." If there be some religious persons who, under the influence of morbid melancholy, are continually writing bitter things against themselves, the word of God should not be bent down to their state. There are other modes of spiritual and scriptural comfort. But does not the text speak of such a case? The text contains two questions, to each of which a particular answer is given:

Q. 1. "Who is there among you that feareth JEHOVAH?"

Ans. Let him hearken unto the voice of his servant.

Q. 2. Who that walketh in darkness and hath no light?"

Ans. Let him trust in the name of Jehovah;

And lean himself (prop himself) upon his God."

Now, a man awakened to a sense of his sin and misery, may have a dread of JEHOVAH, and tremble at his word; and what should such a person do? Why he should hear what God's servant saith: Come unto me all ye who labour and are heavy laden; and I will give you rest." There may be a sincere penitent, walking in darkness, having no light of salvation; for this is the case of all when they first begin to turn to God. What should such do? They should trust, believe on, the Lord Jesus, who died for them, and lean upon his all-sufficient merits for the light of salvation which God has promised.

the name of the LORD, and stay upon his God.

11 Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks: walk in the light of your fire, and in the sparks that ye have kindled. ^a This shall ye have of mine hand; ye shall lie down in sorrow.

^a 2 Chron. xx. 20. Ps. x. 7.—^b John ix. 19.—^c Ps. xvi. 4.

[Verse 11. Ye that kindle a fire] The fire of their own kindling, by the light of which they walk with security and satisfaction, is an image designed to express, in general, human devices and mere worldly policy, exclusive of faith and trust in God; which, though they flatter themselves for a while with pleasing expectations and some appearance of success, shall in the end turn to the confusion of the authors.

[That compass yourselves about with sparks] There are others who are widely different from those already described. Without faith, repentance, or a holy life, they are bold in their professed confidence in God—presumptuous in their trust in the mercy of God; and, while destitute of all preparation for and right to the kingdom of heaven, would think it criminal to doubt their final salvation! Living in this way, what can they have at the hand of God but an endless bed of sorrow! Ye shall lie down in sorrow.

But there is a general sense, and accordant to the design of the prophecy, in which these words may be understood and paraphrased: Behold, all ye that kindle a fire—provoke war and contention; compass yourselves about with sparks—stirring up seditions and rebellions: walk in the light of your fire—go on in your lust of power and restless ambition. Ye shall lie down in sorrow—it will turn to your own perdition. This seems to refer to the restless spirit of the Jews, always stirring up confusion and strife; rebelling against and provoking the Romans, till at last their city was taken, their temple burnt to the ground, and upwards of a million of themselves destroyed, and the rest led into captivity.

CHAPTER LI.

The prophet exhorts the children of Abraham to trust in the Lord; and briefly, but beautifully, describes the great blessedness which should be the consequence, 1-3. Then, turning to the Gentiles, encourages them to look for a portion in the same salvation, 4, 5; the everlasting duration of which is majestically described, 6. And as it is everlasting, so it is sure to the righteous, notwithstanding all the machinations of their enemies, 7-8. The faithful, then, with exultation and joy, lift their voices, reminding God of his wondrous works of old, which encourage them to look now for the like glorious accomplishment of these promises, 9-11. In answer to this the Divinity is introduced comforting them under their trials, and telling them that the deliverer was already on his way to save and to establish them, 12-16. On this the prophet turns to Jerusalem to comfort and congratulate her on so joyful a prospect. She is represented, by a bold image, as a person lying in the streets, under the intoxicating effects of the cup of the divine wrath, without a single person from among her own people appointed to give her consolation, and trodden under the feet of her enemies; but, in the time allotted by the divine providence, the cup of trembling shall be taken out of her hand, and put into that of her oppressors; and she shall drink it no more again for ever, 17-22.

For ammi, my people, the Bodleian MS. and another read ammin, ye peoples; and for leumi, my nation, the Bodleian MS. and eight others (two of them ancient), and four of De Rossi's, read leummim, ye nations; and so the Syriac in both words. The difference is very material; for in this case the address is made, not to the Jews, but to the Gentiles, as in all reason it ought to be; for this and the two following verses express the call of the Gentiles, the islands, or the distant lands on the coasts of the Mediterranean and other seas. It is also to be observed that God found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody.

4 Hearken unto me, my people; and give ear unto me, O my nation: ^afor a law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest ^bfor a light of the people.

5 ^cMy righteousness is near; my salvation is gone forth, ^dand mine arms shall judge the people: ^ethe isles shall wait upon me, and ^fon mine arm shall they trust.

6 ^gLift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath: for ^hthe heavens shall vanish away like smoke, ⁱand the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner: but my salvation shall be for ever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished.

7 ^jHearken unto me, ye that know righteousness, the people ^kin whose heart is my law; ^lfear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings.

8 For ^mthe moth shall eat them up like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool: but my ⁿrighteousness shall be for ever, and my salvation from generation to generation.

9 ^oAwake, awake, ^pput on strength, O arm of the LORD; awake, ^qas in the ancient days, in the generations of old. ^rArt thou not it that hath cut ^sRahab, and wounded the ^tdragon?

10 Art thou not it which hath ^udried the sea, the waters of the great deep; that hath made the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over?

11 Therefore ^vthe redeemed of the LORD shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their head: they shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away.

12 I, even I, am he ^wthat comforteth you: who art thou, that thou shouldst be afraid ^xof a man that shall die, and of the son of man which shall be made ^yas grass;

13 And forgettest the LORD thy Maker, ^zthat hath stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth; and hast feared continually every day because of the fury of the oppressor, as if he ^{aa}were ready to destroy? ^{ab}and where is the fury of the oppressor?

14 The captive exile hasteneth that he may be loosed, ^{bb}and that he should not die in the pit, nor that his bread should fail.

15 But I am the LORD thy God, that ^{cc}divided the sea, whose waves roared: The LORD of hosts is his name.

16 And ^{dd}I have put my words in thy mouth, and ^{ee}I have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand, ^{ff}that I may plant the heavens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and say unto Zion, Thou art my people.

17 ^{gg}Awake, awake, stand up, O Jerusalem, which ^{hh}hast drunk at the hand of the LORD the cup of his fury; ⁱⁱthou hast drunken the dregs of the cup of trembling, and wrung them out.

18 There is none to guide her among all the sons whom she hath brought forth; neither is there any that taketh her by the hand of all the sons that she hath brought up.

19 ^{jj}These two things ^{kk}are come unto thee; who shall be sorry for thee? desolation, and ^{ll}destruction, and the famine, and the sword: ^{mm}by whom shall I comfort thee?

20 ⁿⁿThy sons have fainted, they lie at the head of all the streets, as a wild bull in a net: they are full of the fury of the LORD, the rebuke of thy God.

21 Therefore hear now this, thou afflicted, and drunken, ^{oo}but not with wine.

22 Thus saith thy Lord the LORD, and thy God ^{pp}that pleadeth the cause of his people, Behold I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, even the dregs of the cup of my fury; thou shalt no more drink it again:

23 But ^{qq}I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee; which have ^{rr}said to thy soul, Bow down, that we may go over: and thou hast laid thy body as the ground, and as the street, to them that went over.

in no other place calls his people leummi, my nation. A law shall proceed from me] The new law, the gospel of our Lord Jesus.

Verse 5. My righteousness is near] The word tsedek, righteousness, is used in such a great latitude of signification, for justice, truth, faithfulness, goodness, mercy, deliverance, salvation, &c., that it is not easy sometimes to give the precise meaning of it without much circumlocution; it means here the faithful completion of God's promises to deliver his people.

Verse 6. My salvation shall be for ever] Aben Ezra says, From this verse divines have learnt the immortality of the soul. Men shall perish as the earth does, because they are formed from it; but they who are filled with the salvation of God shall remain for ever.

Verse 14. The captive exile hasteneth that he may be loosed] "He marcheth on with speed, who cometh to set free the captive." Cyrus, if understood of the temporal redemption from the captivity of Babylon; in the spiritual sense, the Messiah, who comes to open the prison to them that are bound.

Verse 17. The cup of trembling] This may allude to the ancient custom of taking off criminals by a cup of poison. Socrates is well known to have been sentenced by the Areopagus to drink a cup of the juice of hemlock, which occasioned his death.

Verse 19. These two things—desolation, and destruction, and the famine, and the sword] That is, desolation by famine, and destruction by the sword, taking the terms alternately; of which form of construction see other examples.

The bold image of the cup of God's wrath, often employed by the sacred writers (see note on chap. i. 22), is nowhere handled with greater force and sublimity than in this passage of Isaiah, ver. 17-23. Jerusalem is represented in person as staggering under the effects of it, destitute of that assistance which she might expect from her children; not one of them being able to support or to lead her. They, abject and amazed, lie at the head of every street, overwhelmed with the greatness of their distress; like the oryx entangled in a net, in vain struggling to rend it, and extricate himself. This is poetry of the first order, sublimity of the highest character.

Verse 23. Which have said to thy soul, Bow down.] "Who say to thee, Bow down thy body." A very strong and most expressive description of the insolent pride of eastern conquerors; which, though it may seem greatly exaggerated, yet hardly exceeds the strict truth, see Josh. x. 24, and Judg. i. 7.

CHAPTER LII.

Jerusalem, in manifest allusion to the strong figure employed in the close of the preceding chapter, is represented as fallen asleep in the dust, and in that helpless state bound by her enemies. The prophet, with all the ardour natural to one who had such joyful news to communicate, bids her awake, arise, put on her best attire (holiness to the Lord), and ascend her lofty seat; and then he delivers the message he had in charge, a very consolatory part of which was, that "no more should enter into her the uncircumcised and the polluted," 1-6. Awakening from her stupefaction, Jerusalem sees the messenger of such joyful tidings on the eminence from which he spied the coming deliverance. She expresses, in beautiful terms, her joy at the news, repeating with peculiar elegance the words of the crier, 7. The rapturous intelligence, that Jehovah was returning to resume his residence on his holy mountain, immediately spreads to others on the watch, who all join in the glad acclamation, 8; and, in the ardour of their joy, they call to the very ruins of Jerusalem to sing along with them, because Jehovah maketh bare his holy arm in the sight of all the nations, and all the ends of the earth are about to see the salvation of Israel's God, 9, 10. To complete the deliverance, they are commanded to march in triumph out of Babylon, earnestly exhorted to have nothing to do with any of her abominations, and assured that Jehovah will guide them in all their way, 11-12. The prophet then passes to the procuring of this great blessedness to the house of Israel in particular, and to the world in general, viz., the humiliation, sufferings, death, burial, resurrection, and ascension of Jesus Christ; a very celebrated and clear prophecy, which takes up the remainder of this and the whole of the following chapter.

AWAKE, ^aawake; put on thy strength, garments, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, ^bthe holy city: for ^chenceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised ^dand the unclean.

2 ^e Shake thyself from the dust; arise, and sit down, O Jerusalem: ^floose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion.

3 For thus saith the LORD, ^gYe have sold yourselves for nought; and ye shall be redeemed without money.

4 For thus saith the Lord God, My people went down aforetime into ^hEgypt to sojourn there; and the Assyrian oppressed them without cause.

Verse 1. The uncircumcised and the unclean. Christians have turned many passages of the prophets against the Jews; and it is not to be wondered at, that in support of their obstinate and hopeless cause, they should press a prophecy into their service, and make it speak against the Christians. This Kimchi does in this place; for he says, by the uncircumcised, the Christians are meant; and by the unclean, the Turks.

Verse 2. Sit down, O Jerusalem. "Ascend thy lofty seat, O Jerusalem." The literal rendering here is, according to our English translation, "arise, sit;" on which a very learned person remarks: "So the old versions. But sitting is an expression of mourning in Scripture and the ancients; and doth not well agree with the rising just before." It does not indeed agree, according to our ideas; but, considered in an oriental light, it is perfectly consistent. The common manner of sitting in the eastern countries is upon the ground or the floor with the legs crossed. The people of better condition have the floors of their chambers or divans covered with carpets for this purpose; and round the chamber broad couches, raised a little above the floor, spread with mattresses handsomely covered, which are called sofas. When sitting is spoken of as a posture of more than ordinary state, it is quite of a different kind; and means sitting on high, on a chair of state or throne called the musnud; for which a foot-stool was necessary, both in order that the person might raise himself up to it, and for supporting the legs when he was placed in it.

Verse 6. Therefore my people shall know The word lachen, occurring the second time in this verse, seems to be repeated by mistake. It has no force nor emphasis as a repetition; it only embarrasses the construction and the sense.

I am he that doth speak "I am he, JEHOVAH, that promised." The addition of JEHOVAH seems to be right in consequence of what was said in the preceding line, "My people shall know my name."

5 Now therefore, what have I here, saith the LORD, that my people is taken away for nought? they that rule over them make them to howl, saith the LORD; and my name continually every day is ⁱblasphemed.

6 Therefore my people shall know my name: therefore they shall know in that day that I am he that doth speak: behold, it is I.

7 ^jHow beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, ^kThy God reigneth!

8 Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the Verse 7. How beautiful The watchmen discover afar off, on the mountains, the messenger bringing the expected and much-wished-for news of the deliverance from the Babylonish captivity. They immediately spread the joyful tidings, ver. 8, and with a loud voice proclaim that JEHOVAH is returning to Zion, to resume his residence on his holy mountain, which for some time he seemed to have deserted.

From the use made of this by our Lord and the apostles, we may rest assured that the preachers of the gospel are particularly intended. Mountains are put for the whole land of Judea, where the gospel was first preached. There seems to be an allusion to a battle fought, and the messengers coming to announce the victory, which was so decisive that a peace was the consequence, and the king's throne established in the land.

There appear to have been two sorts of messengers among the Jews: one sort always employed to bring evil tidings; the other to bring good. The names also and persons of these different messengers appear to have been well known; so that at a distance they could tell, from seeing the messenger, what sort of tidings he was bringing. See a case in point, 2 Sam. xviii. 19-27.

Verse 8. Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice There is a difficulty in the construction of this place which, I think, none of the ancient Versions or modern interpreters have cleared up satisfactorily. Rendered word for word it stands thus: "The voice of thy watchmen: they lift up their voice." The sense of the first member, considered as elliptical, is variously supplied by various expositors; by none, as it seems to me, in any way that is easy and natural. I am persuaded there is a mistake in the present text, and that the true reading is, all thy watchmen, instead of the voice of thy watchmen.

They shall see eye to eye May not this be applied to the prophets and apostles; the one predicting, and the other discovering in the prediction the truth of the prophecy. The voice together shall they sing : for they shall see eye to eye, when the LORD shall bring again Zion.

9 Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem : * for the LORD hath comforted his people, ^b he hath redeemed Jerusalem.

meaning of both Testaments is best understood by bringing them face to face.

When the Lord shall bring again Zion.] “When JEHOVAH returneth to Zion.” God is considered as having deserted his people during the captivity ; and at the restoration, as returning himself with them to Zion, his former habitation. See Ps. lx. 1, Isa. xl. 9, and note.

Verse 11. Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence] The prophet Jeremiah seems to have had his eye on this passage of Isaiah, and to have applied it to a subject directly opposite.

Verse 13. My servant shall deal prudently] Yaskil, shall prosper, or act prosperously. The subject of Isaiah's prophecy, from the fortieth chapter inclusive, has hitherto been, in general, the deliverance of the people of God. This includes in it three distinct parts ; which, however, have a close connexion with one another ; that is, 1. The deliverance of the Jews from the captivity of Babylon ; 2. The deliverance of the Gentiles from their miserable state of ignorance and idolatry ; and 3. The deliverance of mankind from the captivity of sin and death. These three subjects are subordinate to one another ; and the two latter are shadowed out under the image of the former. They are covered by it as by a veil ; which however is transparent, and suffers them to appear through it. Cyrus is expressly named as the immediate agent of God in effecting the first deliverance. A greater person is spoken of as the Agent who is to effect the two latter deliverances, called the servant, the elect of God, in whom his soul delighteth ; Israel, in whom God will be glorified. Now these three subjects have a very near relation to one another ; for as the Agent who was to effect the two latter deliverances,—that is, the Messiah,—was to be born a Jew, with particular limitations of time, family, and other circumstances ; the first deliverance was necessary in the order of providence, and according to the determinate counsel of God, to the accomplishment of the two latter deliverances ; and the second deliverance was necessary to the third, or rather was involved in it, and made an essential part of it. This being the case, Isaiah has not treated the three subjects as quite distinct and separate in a methodical and orderly manner, like a philosopher or a logician, but has flight : ^h for the LORD will go before you ; and ⁱ the God of Israel will ^j be your rereward.

13 Behold, ^k my servant shall ^l deal prudently, ^m he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high.

14 As many were astonished at thee ; his ⁿ visage was so marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men.

15 ^o So shall he sprinkle many nations ; ^p the kings shall shut their mouths at him : for that ^q which had not been told them shall they see ; and that which they had not heard shall they consider.

taken them in their connective view. He has handled them as a prophet and a poet ; he has allegorized the former, and under the image of it has shadowed out the two latter ; he has thrown them all together, has mixed one with another, has passed from this to that with rapid transitions, and has painted the whole with the strongest and boldest imagery.

Verse 14. His visage was so marred more than any man] Most interpreters understand this of the indignities offered to our blessed Lord ; but Kimchi gives it another turn, and says, “It means the Jewish people who are considered by most nations as having an appearance different from all the people of the earth.” Poor Jews ! they have in general a very disagreeable look, partly affected, and partly through neglect of neatness and cleanliness. However this may be, it should never be forgotten that the greatest men that ever flourished as kings, judges, magistrates, lawgivers, heroes, and poets, were of Jewish extraction. Isaiah was a Jew ; so was Paul ; and so was Jesus of Nazareth.

Verse 15. So shall he sprinkle many nations] I retain the common rendering, though I am by no means satisfied with it. Bishop Chandler says, “that to sprinkle is used for to surprise and astonish, as people are that have much water thrown upon them. And this sense is followed by the Septuagint. This is ingenious, but rather too refined.”

Does not sprinkling the nations refer to the conversion and baptism of the Gentiles ? Many nations shall become proselytes to his religion.

Kings shall shut their mouths at him] His gospel shall so prevail that all opposition shall be finally overcome ; and kings and potentates shall be overwhelmed with confusion, and become speechless before the doctrines of his truth. When they hear these declared they shall attentively consider them, and their conviction of their truth shall be the consequence.

For that which had not been told them] The mystery of the gospel so long concealed. See Rom. xv. 21 ; xvi. 25.

Shall they see] With the eyes of their faith ; God enlightening both organ and object.

And that which they had not heard] The redemption of the world by Jesus Christ ; the conversion of the Gentiles, and making them one flock with the converted Jews.

CHAPTER LIII.

This chapter foretels the sufferings of the Messiah, the end for which he was to die, and the advantages resulting to mankind from that illustrious event. It begins with a complaint of the infidelity of the Jews, 1 ; the offence they took at his mean and humble appearance, 2 ; and the contempt with which they treated him, 3. The prophet then shows that the Messiah was to suffer for sins not his own ; but that our iniquities were laid on him, and the punishment of them exacted of him, which is the meritorious cause of our obtaining pardon and salvation, 4-6. He shows the meekness and placid submission with which he suffered a violent and unjust death, with the circumstances of his dying with the wicked, and being buried with the great, 7-9 ; and that, in consequence of his atonement, death, resurrection, and intercession, he should procure pardon and salvation to the multitudes, insure increasing prosperity to his church, and ultimately triumph over all his foes, 10, 11. This chapter contains a beautiful summary of the most peculiar and distinguishing doctrines of Christianity.

WHO hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

2 For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

3 He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not.

4 Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

5 But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

6 All we like sheep have gone astray; we have

Verse 1. Who hath believed our report? The report of the prophets, of John the Baptist, and Christ's own report of himself. The Jews did not receive the report, and for this reason he was not manifested to them as the promised Messiah. "He came unto his own, but his own received him not." Before the FATHER he grew up as a tender plant; but to the JEWS he was as a root out of a dry ground.

Verse 2. For he shall grow up [Supposes something to have preceded; as it might be asked, what or who shall "grow up before him," &c. As the translation now stands, no correct answer can be given to this question. The translation then is wrong, the connexion broken, and the sense obscured. Zera, translated the arm, from the root zara. 1. To sow, or plant; also seed, &c. 2. The limb which reaches from the shoulder to the hand, called the arm; or more properly beginning at the shoulder and ending at the elbow. The translator has given the wrong sense of the word. It would be very improper to say, the arm of the Lord shall grow up before him; but by taking the word in its former sense, the connexion and metaphor would be restored, and the true sense given to the text. Zera signifies, not only the seed of the herbs, but children, offspring, or posterity. The same word we find Gen. iii. 15, where CHRIST is the Seed promised. See also Gen. xxii. 17, 18, xxvi. 4, xxviii. 14. Hence the SEED of the woman, the SEED promised to the patriarchs is, according to Isaiah, the Seed of the Lord, the Child born, and the Son given; and according to St. John, "the Son of God, the only-begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." Zera then, in this place, should be understood to mean JESUS CHRIST, and him alone. To speak here of the manifestation of the arm or power of God would be irregular; but to suppose the text to speak of the manifestation of Jesus Christ would be very proper, as the whole of the chapter is written concerning him; particularly his humiliation and sufferings, and the reception he should meet with from the Jewish nation.

He hath no form nor comeliness [He hath no form, nor any beauty, that we should regard him; nor is his countenance such that we should desire him.] Symmachus; the only one of the ancients that has translated it rightly.

Verse 3. We hid as it were our faces from him [As one that hideth his face from us.] Mourners covered up the lower part of their faces, and their heads, 2 Sam. xv. 30; Ezek. xiv. 17; and lepers were commanded by the law, Lev. xii. 45, to cover their upper lip. [The idiom of the Hebrew language is best illustrated by the authorized version.]

Verse 5. The chastisement of our peace [The chastisement by which our peace is effected.] Twenty-one MSS. and six editions have the words fully and regularly expressed, sholomeynu; "our pacification"; that by which we are brought into a state of peace and favour with God.

Verse 6. The iniquity of us all [For avon "iniquity," the ancient interpreters read avonoth, "iniquities," plural; turned every one to his own way; and the LORD hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.

7 He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

8 He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken.

9 And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth.

10 Yet it pleased the LORD to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the LORD shall prosper in his hand.

*Heb. hath made the iniquities of us all to meet on him.—Matt. xxvi. 63. xxvii. 12, 14. Mark xiv. 61. xv. 5. 1 Pet. ii. 23.—Acts viii. 32.—Or, He was taken away by distress and judgment: but, &c.—Dan. ix. 26.—Heb. was the stroke upon him.—Matt. xxvii. 57, 58, 60.—Heb. deaths.—1 Pet. ii. 22. 1 John iii. 5.—Or, when his soul shall make an offering.—1 Cor. v. 21. 1 Pet. ii. 24.—Rom. vi. 9. and so the Vulgate in MS. Blanchini. And the Lord hath caused to meet in him the iniquities of us all. He was the subject on which all the rays collected on the focal point fell. These fiery rays, which should have fallen on all mankind, diverged from divine justice to the east, west, north, and south, were deflected from them, and converged in him. So the Lord hath caused to meet in him the punishment due to the iniquities of ALL.

Verse 8. And who shall declare his generation [And his manner of life who would declare.] It is said in the Mishna, that before any one was punished for a capital crime, proclamation was made before the prisoner by the public crier, in these words: "Whosoever knows anything of this man's innocence, let him come and declare it." On which passage the Gemara of Babylon adds, that "before the death of Jesus this proclamation was made for forty days; but no defence could be found."

Now it is plain from the history of the four Evangelists, that in the trial and condemnation of Jesus no such rule was observed; though, according to the account of the Mishna, it must have been in practice at that time, no proclamation was made for any person to bear witness to the innocence and character of Jesus; nor did any one voluntarily step forth to give his attestation to it. And our Saviour seems to refer to such a custom, and to claim the benefits of it, by his answer to the high-priest, when he asked him of his disciples and of his doctrine. John xvii. 20, 21. This, therefore, was one remarkable instance of hardship and injustice, among others predicted by the prophet, which our Saviour underwent in his trial and sufferings.

St. Paul likewise, in similar circumstances, standing before the judgment-seat of Festus, seems to complain of the same unjust treatment; that no one was called, or would appear, to vindicate his character. Acts xxvi. 4, 5.

Verse 9. With the rich in his death [With the rich man was his tomb.]

The exact completion of this prophecy will be fully shown by the several circumstances of the burial of Jesus, collected from the accounts of the evangelists.

It has been supposed that kibro, his grave, and bemethaiv, in his death, may have been transposed, as also the prefix be originally placed before reshaim, the wicked. Thus:—

Yes, his death was appointed among the wicked;

And with a rich man, his tomb.

By these alterations it is supposed the text would be freed from all embarrassment.

When thou shalt make his soul [If his soul shall make] agreeable to some copies of the Septuagint; likewise the Syriac.

When thou shalt make his soul an offering [The word nephesh, soul, is frequently used in Hebrew to signify life. Throughout the New Testament the salvation of men is uniformly attributed to the death of Christ.

Verse 11. Shall my righteous servant justify—“Shall my servant justify?” Three MSS. (two of them ancient) omit the word tsaddik; it seems to be only an imperfect repetition, by mistake, of the preceding word. It makes a solecism in this place; for according to the constant usage of the Hebrew language, the adjective, in a phrase of this kind, ought to follow the substantive; and tsaddik abdi, in Heb.

Verse 12. He bare the sin of many] Rabbim, the multitudes, the many that were made sinners by the offences of one; i. e., the whole human race; for all have sinned—all have fallen; and for all that have fallen, Jesus Christ died. The rabbim of the prophet answers to Rom. v. 15, 19.

He made intercession for the transgressors.] This was literally fulfilled at his death, Luke xxiii. 34. And to make intercession for transgressors is one part of his mediatorial office. Heb. vii. 25, and ix. 24.

In this chapter the incarnation, preaching, humiliation, rejection, sufferings, death, atonement, resurrection, and mediation of Jesus Christ are all predicted, together with the prevalence of his gospel, and the extension of his kingdom through all ages.

CHAPTER LIV.

Some suppose this chapter to have been addressed to the Gentiles; some, to the Jewish church, and some, to the Christian, in its first stage. On comparing the different parts of it, particularly the seventh and eighth verses, with the remainder, the most obvious import of the prophecy will be that which refers it to the future conversion of the Jews, and to the increase and prosperity of that nation, when reconciled to God after their long rejection, when their glory and security will far surpass what they were formerly in their most favoured state, 1-17.

SING, O barren, thou that didst not bear; ^abreak forth into singing, and cry aloud, ^bthou that didst not travail with child: for ^cmore are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD.

3 For thou shalt break forth on the right ^ehand and on the left; ^fand thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.

4 Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed: neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame: for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more.

Verse 1. Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear] The church of God under the Old Testament, confined within the narrow bounds of the Jewish nation, and still more so in respect of the very small number of true believers, and which sometimes seemed to be deserted of God, her husband, is the barren woman that did not bear, and was desolate. She is exhorted to rejoice and to express her joy in the strongest manner, on the reconciliation of her husband (see ver. 6), and on the accession of the Gentiles to her family. The understanding the latter word as meaning the same with the former, which they both make use of. See Ps. xxx. 5, xxxv. 20, in the Septuagint, where they render rega, by anger.

Verse 8. I hid my face from thee for a moment] The word rega is omitted by the Septuagint, Syriac, and two MSS. of Kennicott's, and two of De Rossi's. It seems to embarrass rather than to help the sentence.

Verse 11. Behold, I will lay thy stones] These seem to be general images to express beauty, magnificence, purity, 16 Behold I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the waster to destroy.

strength, and solidity, agreeably to the ideas of the eastern nations; and to never have been intended to be strictly scrutinized, or minutely and particularly explained, as if they had each of them some precise, moral, or spiritual meaning. Compare also Rev. xxi. 18-21.

Verse 15. Shall fall for thy sake.] "Shall come over to thy side." For yipal, twenty-eight MSS. (eight ancient) have yipal, in its more common form. For the meaning of the word in this place, see Jer. xxxvii. 18.

CHAPTER LV.

This chapter first displays the fulness, freeness, excellence, and everlasting nature of the blessings of the gospel, and foretels again the enlargement of Messiah's kingdom, 1-5. This view leads the prophet to exhort all to seize the precious opportunity of sharing in such blessings, which were not, however, to be expected without repentance and reformation, 6, 7. And as the things now and formerly predicted were so great as to appear incredible, the prophet points to the omnipotence of God, who would infallibly accomplish his word, and bring about those glorious deliverances which he had promised; the happy effects of which are again set forth by images beautiful and poetical in the highest degree, 8-13.

HO, ^aevery one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; ^bcome ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price.

2 Wherefore do ye ^cspend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness.

3 Incline your ear, and ^dcome unto me: hear, and your soul shall live: ^eand I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the ^fsure mercies of David.

4 Behold, I have given him ^gfor a witness to the people, ^ha leader and commander to the people.

Verse 1. Ho, every one that thirsteth] "Water," says Kimchi, "it is a metaphor for the law and wisdom: as the world cannot subsist without water, so it is impossible that it can subsist without wisdom. The law is also compared to wine and milk: to wine because wine rejoiceth the heart, Ps. xix. 8. It is compared also to milk, because milk is the subsistence of the child; so are the words of the law the nourishment of his soul who walks in the divine teaching, and grows up under it.

zealously attached to a doctrine from which your souls derive neither comfort or nourishment?

Verse 6. Seek ye the Lord while he may be found] David Kimchi gives the true sense of this passage: "Seek ye the Lord, because he may be found: call upon him because he is near. Repent before ye die, for after death there is no conversion of the soul."

Verse 9. For as the heavens are higher] I am persuaded that caph, the particle of comparison, is lost in this place, from the likeness of the particle ki, immediately preceding it. And this remark is confirmed by all the ancient Versions, which express it; and by Ps. ciii. 11, which is almost the same.

Verse 12. The mountains and the hills] These are highly poetical images to express a happy state attended with joy and exultation.

Verse 13. Instead of the thorn] These are general poetical images, expressing a great and happy change for the better. The wilderness turned into a paradise, Lebanon into Carmel: the desert of the Gentiles watered with the heavenly snow and rain, which fail not to have their due effect, and become fruitful in piety and righteousness: or, as the Chaldees give the moral sense of the emblem, "instead of the wicked shall arise the just; and instead of sinners, such as fear to sin." Compare chap. xxxv. 1, 2; xli. 19.

CHAPTER LVI.

Whoever would partake of the blessings of the gospel is required to be holy in all manner of life and conversation. And he that will be so is declared to be accepted according to this gracious dispensation, the blessings of which are large as the human race, without any respect to persons or to nations, 1-8. At the ninth verse begins a different subject, or new section of prophecy. It opens with calling on the enemies of the Jews (the Chaldeans, or perhaps the Romans), as beasts of prey against them, for the sins of their rulers, teachers, and other profane people among them, whose guilt drew down judgments on the nation, 9-12.

THUS saith the LORD, Keep ye ^a judgment, and do justice: ^bfor my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed.

2 Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that layeth hold on it; ^cthat keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil.

3 Neither let ^dthe son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch say, Behold, I am a dry tree.

4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my sabbaths, and choose the things that please me, and take hold of my covenant;

5 Even unto them will I give in ^emine house and within my walls a place ^fand a name better than of sons and of daughters: I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off.

6 Also the sons of the stranger, that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant;

7 Even them will I ^gbring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my house of prayer: ^htheir burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted upon mine altar; for ⁱmine house shall be called an house of prayer ^jfor all people.

8 The LORD God ^kwhich gathereth the outcasts of Israel saith, ^lYet will I gather others to him, ^mbeside those that are gathered unto him.

Verse 2. That keepeth the sabbath from polluting it] Kimchi has an excellent note here. "The sabbath is sanctified when it is distinguished in dignity; and separated from other days. 1. As to the body, in meat, drink, and clean clothing. 2. As to the soul, that it be empty of worldly occupations, and be busily employed in the words of the law and wisdom, and in meditation on the works of the Lord. The rabbins say, "Jerusalem had never been destroyed, had not the sabbaths been profaned in it."

Verse 6. The sons of the stranger] The Gentiles.

That join themselves to the Lord] Who shall enter into the Christian covenant by baptism and faith in Christ, as the Jews and proselytes did by circumcision.

To serve him] To live according to the gospel, and ever do that which is right in the sight of the Lord.

To love the name of the Lord] The name of JESUS, the Christ, the Saviour of sinners, the Anointed of God, and the Giver of the Holy Spirit to his followers.

To be his servants] To worship no other God but JEHOVAH, and to trust in none for salvation but his CHRIST.

That keepeth the sabbath] That observes it as a type of the rest that remains for the people of God.

And taketh hold of my covenant] "Of my covenant sacrifice;" as without this he can do nothing good; and without it nothing can be acceptable to the infinite majesty of the Most High.

Verse 7. Shall be accepted] A word is here lost out of the text: it is supplied from the Septuagint, yikyu, "they shall be."

9 ^a All ye beasts of the field, come to devour, yea, all ye beasts in the forest.

10 His watchmen are ^b blind: they are all ignorant, ^c they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; ^d sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber.

Verse 9. All ye beasts of the field] Here manifestly begins a new section. The prophet in the foregoing chapters, having comforted the faithful Jews with many great promises of God's favour to be extended to them, in the restoration of their ruined state, and in the enlargement of his church by the admission of the Gentiles; here on a sudden makes a transition to the more disagreeable part of the prospect, and to a sharp reproof of the wicked and unbelievers; and especially of the negligent and faithless governors and teachers, of the idolaters and hypocrites, who would still draw down his judgments upon the nation. Probably having in view the destruction of their city and polity by the Chaldeans, and perhaps by the Romans.

Verse 10. His watchmen are blind] Kimchi observes, "The flock is intrusted to the care of these watchmen. The wild beasts come; these dogs bark not; and the wild beasts devour the flock. Thus they do not profit the flock. Yea, they injure it: for the owner trusts in them, that they will watch and be faithful; but they are not. These are the false teachers and careless shepherds."

^h never have enough, and they are shepherds that cannot understand: they all look to their own way, every one for his gain, from his quarter.

Dumb dogs, they cannot bark] See note on chap. lxii. 6. Sleeping] "Dreamers." This seems to be the meaning of this word, which occurs only in this place.

Verse 11. Greedy dogs] Insatiably feeding themselves with the fat, and clothing themselves with the wool, while the flock is scattered, ravaged, and starved! O what an abundance of these dumb and greedy dogs are there found hanging on and prowling about the flock of Christ! How can any careless, avaricious, hireling minister read this without agitation and dismay!

Verse 12. I will fetch wine] The spirit of this epicurean sentiment is this: Let us indulge ourselves in the present time to the utmost, and instead of any gloomy forebodings of the future, let us expect nothing but increasing hilarity for every day we shall live.

CHAPTER LVII.

After mentioning the removal of righteous persons as an awful symptom of the approach of divine judgments, 1, 2, the prophet goes on to charge the nation in general with idolatry, and with courting the unprofitable alliance of idolatrous kings, 3-12. In opposition to such vain confidence, the prophet enjoins trust in God, with whom the penitent and humble are sure to find acceptance, and from whom they should obtain temporal and spiritual deliverances, 13-19. Awful condition of the wicked and finally impenitent, 20-21.

THE righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart; and ^a merciful ^b men are taken away, ^c none considering that the righteous is taken away ^d from the evil to come.

2 He shall ^e enter into peace: they shall rest ^f in their beds, each one walking ^g in his uprightness.

Verse 1. The righteous perisheth] There is an emphasis here which seems intended to point out a particular person. See below. Perisheth—As the root abad signifies the straying of cattle, their passing away from one pasture to another, I feel inclined to follow the grammatical meaning of the word "perish," perero. So the Vulgate, justus perit, from per, BY or THROUGH, and eo, to GO. In his death the righteous man may be said to have passed through life, and to have passed by men, i. e., gone or passed before them into the eternal world.

There are very few places in Isaiah where Jesus Christ is not intended; and I am inclined to think that He is intended here, THAT JUST ONE; and perhaps Stephen had this place in view, when he thus charged the Jews, "Ye denied that HOLY and JUST ONE," Acts iii. 14. That his death was not laid to heart by the wicked Jewish people, needs no proof. [This interpretation, which is derived from Bishop Lowth cannot be sustained.]

tongue? are ye not children of transgression, ⁱ a seed of falsehood,

5 Enflaming yourselves ^j with idols ^k under every green tree, ^l slaying the children in the valleys under the cliffs of the rocks?

Merciful men] If the first refers to Christ, this may well refer to the apostles, and to others of the primitive Christians, who were taken away, some by death and martyrdom, and others by a providential escape from the city that they knew was devoted to destruction.

The evil to come] That destruction which was to come upon this disobedient people by the Romans.

Verse 2. He shall enter into peace] "He shall go in peace;" the same sense is expressed at large and in full terms, Gen. xv. 15: "and thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace."

They shall rest in their beds each one walking in his uprightness] This obscure sentence is reduced to a perfectly good sense, and easy construction, by an ingenious remark of Dr. Derell. He reads yannach al mishcabo tam, "the perfect man shall rest in his bed." Two MSS. (one of them ancient) have yannach, singular; and so the Vulgate renders it, "he shall rest." To follow on my application of this to set *thy bed: even thither wentest thou up to offer sacrifice.

8 Behind the doors also and the posts hast thou set up thy remembrance: for thou hast discovered thyself to another than me, and art gone up; thou hast enlarged thy bed, and ^bmade thee a covenant with them; ^cthou lovedst their bed ^dwhere thou sawest it.

9 And *thou ^ewentest to the king with ointment, and didst increase thy perfumes, and didst send thy messengers far off, and didst debase thyself even unto hell.

11 And ^hof whom hast thou been afraid or feared, that thou hast lied, and hast not remembered me, nor laid it to thy heart? ⁱI have not I held my peace even of old, and thou fearest me not?

12 I will declare thy righteousness, and thy works; for they shall not profit thee.

13 When thou criest, let thy companies deliver thee; but the wind shall carry them all away; vanity shall take them: but he that putteth his trust in me shall possess the land, and shall inherit my holy mountain;

our Lord:—HE, the JUST ONE, shall enter into peace—the peaceable, prosperous possession of the glorious mediatorial kingdom. They shall rest upon their beds—the hand of wrong and oppression can reach these persecuted followers of Christ no more.

The bed must signify the grave; the walking in uprightness after death, the conscious existence of the happy spirit, and its eternal progression in happiness and perfection; nechocho, straight before him; proceeding into the unlimited extent of eternal glory increasing in happiness, and increasing in perfection.

It has been often remarked that, previously to the execution of God's judgments upon a wicked place, he has removed good men from it, that they might not suffer with the wicked. When great and good men are removed by death, or otherwise, from any place, the remaining inhabitants have much cause to tremble.

Verse 6. Among the smooth stones of the stream] The Jews were extremely addicted to the practice of many superstitious and idolatrous rites, which the prophet here inveighs against with great vehemence. Of the worship of rude stones consecrated there are many testimonies of the ancients. Kimchi says: "When they found a beautiful polished stone in a brook or river, they paid divine adoration to it." This idolatry is still prevalent among the Hindoos.

Verse 8. Behind the doors also and the posts hast thou set up thy remembrance] That is, the image of their tutelary gods, or something dedicated to them; in direct opposition to the law of God, which commanded them to write upon the door-posts of their house, and upon their gates, the words of God's law. Deut. vi. 9; xi. 20. If they chose for them such a situation as more private, it was in defiance of a particular curse denounced in the law against the man, who should make a graven or a molten image, and put in a secret place. Deut. xxvii. 15. [Recent commentators adopt a different view of this passage. The remembrance behind the door signifies the hiding away of the reminders of God.]

Verse 9. And thou wentest to the king with ointment]

14 And shall say, *Cast ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way, take up the stumblingblock out of the way of my people.

15 For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, ^awhose name is Holy; ^b"I dwell in the high and holy place, ^cwith him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, ^dto revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.

16 *For I will not contend for ever, neither will I be always wroth: for the spirit should fail before me, and the souls ^ewhich I have made.

17 For the iniquity of ^fhis covetousness was I wroth, and smote him: ^g"I hid me, and was wroth, ^hand he went on ⁱfrowardly in the way of his heart.

18 I have seen his ways, and ^jwill heal him: I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him and to ^khis mourners.

19 I create ^lthe fruit of the lips; Peace, peace ^mto him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the LORD; and I will heal him.

20 *But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt.

21 *There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked.

That is the king of Assyria, or Egypt. Hosea, chap. xii. 1, reproaches the Israelites for the same practice. It is well known, that in all parts of the East, whoever visits a great person must carry him a present. Hence shur, to visit a person, is equivalent to making him a present; and teshurah signifies a present made on such occasions; as our translators have rightly rendered it, 1 Sam. ix. 7.

Verse 11. Even of old] "And winked." For umeolam, which makes no good sense or construction in this place, twenty-three MSS. (seven Ancient) and three editions have matim, "as if not seeing," Vulgate. See Ps. x. 1. The truth of this reading admits of no doubt.

Verse 14. And shall say] "Then will I say." They are the words of God, as it is plain from the conclusion of the verse; my people, ammi.

Verse 16. For the spirit] Ruach, the animal of life. And the souls] Neshamoth, the immortal spirits. The Targum understands this of the resurrection. I will restore the souls of the dead, i. e., to their bodies.

Verse 17. For the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth] "Because of his iniquity for a short time was I wroth." For btsa, I read betsa, a little while, from betsa, he cut off; as the Septuagint read and render it, "a certain short space."

Verse 18. I have seen his ways] Probably these verses refer to the restoration of the Jews from captivity.

Verse 19. I create the fruit of the lips] "The sacrifice of praise," saith St. Paul, Heb. xiii. 15, "is the fruit of the lips." God creates this fruit of the lips. God creates this fruit of the lips, by giving new subject and cause of thanksgiving by his mercies conferred on those among his people, who acknowledge and bewail their transgressions and return to him. The great subject of thanksgiving is peace—reconciliation and pardon, offered to them that are nigh, and to them that are afar off; not only to the Jew, but also to the Gentile, as St. Paul more than once applies those terms, Eph. ii. 13, 17.

Peace to him that is far off—"That is, to the penitent and to him that is near, i. e., the righteous."

CHAPTER LVIII.

This elegant chapter contains a severe reproof of the Jews on account of their vices, particularly their hypocrisy in practising and relying on outward ceremonies, such as fasting and bodily humiliation, without true repentance, 1-5. It then lays down a clear and comprehensive summary of the duties they owed to their fellow-creatures, 6, 7. Large promises of happiness and prosperity are likewise annexed to the performance of these duties in a variety of the most beautiful and striking images, 8-12. Great temporal and spiritual blessedness of those who keep holy the sabbath-day, 13, 14.

CRY ^aaloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins.

2 Yet they seek me daily, and delight to know my ways, as a nation that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinance of their God: they ask of me the ordinances of justice; they take delight in approaching to God.

3 ^bWherefore have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not? wherefore have we ^cafflicted our soul, and thou takest no knowledge? Behold, in the day of your fast ye find pleasure, and exact all your ^dlabours.*

4 ^eBehold, ye fast for strife and debate, and to smite with the fist of wickedness: ^fye shall not fast as ye do this day, to make your voice to be heard on high.

5 Is it ^gsuch a fast that I have chosen? ^ha ⁱday for a man to afflict his soul? is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, and ^kto spread sackcloth and ashes under him? wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the LORD?

6 Is not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, ^lto undo ^mthe heavy burdens, and ⁿto let the ^ooppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke?

7 Is it not ^pto deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are ^qcast out to thy house? ^rwhen thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and that thou hide not thyself from ^sthine own flesh?

Verse 1. Cry aloud, spare not] Never was a louder cry against the hypocrisy, nor a more cutting reproof of the wickedness, of a people professing a national established religion, having all the forms of godliness without a particle of its power. This chapter has been often appointed to be read on political fast days for the success of wars carried on for—God knows what purposes, and originating in—God knows what motives. Politically speaking, was ever any thing more injudicious?

Verse 3. In the day of your fast ye find pleasure] Fast days are generally called holidays, and holidays are days of idleness and pleasure. In numberless cases, the fast is turned into a feast.

And exact all your labours] Some disregard the most sacred fast, and will oblige their servant to work all day long; others use fast days for the purpose of settling their accounts, posting up their books, and drawing out their bills to be ready to collect their debts. These are sneaking hypocrites; the others are daringly irreligious.

Verse 4. Ye fast for strife and debate] How often is this the case! A whole nation are called to fast to implore God's blessing on wars carried on for the purposes of wrath and ambition.

To smite with the fist of wickedness: ye shall not fast as ye do this day] To smite with the fist the poor. Where-

8 ^tThen shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness shall go before thee; ^uthe glory of the LORD ^vshall be thy rereward.

9 Then shalt thou call, and the LORD shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am. If thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke, the putting forth of the finger, and ^wspeaking vanity;

10 And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noon day:

11 And the LORD shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in ^xdrought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters ^yfail not.

12 And they that shall be of thee ^zshall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in.

13 If ^{aa}thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the LORD, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words;

14 ^{bb}Then shalt thou delight thyself in the LORD; and I will cause thee to ^{cc}ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father; ^{dd}for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.

fore fast ye unto me in this manner?" I follow the version of the Septuagint, which gives a much better sense than the present reading of the Hebrew.

Verse 7. Deal thy bread to the hungry] But this thou canst not do, if thou eat it thyself. When a man fasts, suppose he do it through a religious motive, he should give the food of that day, from which he abstains, to the poor and hungry, who, in the course of providence, are called to sustain many involuntary fasts, besides suffering general privations. Woe to him who saves a day's victuals by his religious fast! He should either give them or their value in money to the poor.

Verse 8. And thine health shall spring forth speedily] "And the scar of thy wounds shall be speedily removed." Aquila's Version, as reported by Jerome, with which agrees that of the Chaldee.

Verse 10. And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry] "To draw out thy soul to the hungry," as our translators rightly enough express the present Hebrew text, is an obscure phrase, and without example in any other place. To draw out the soul in relieving the poor, is to do it, not of constraint or necessity, but cheerfully, and is both nervous and elegant. His soul pities and his hand gives.

Verse 13. If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath] The meaning of this seems to be, that they should be careful not to take their pleasure on the sabbath day, by paying visits, and taking country jaunts; not going, as Kimchi interprets it, more than a sabbath day's journey, which was only two thousand cubits beyond the city's suburbs. How vilely is this rule transgressed by the inhabitants of this land! They seem to think that the sabbath was made only for their recreation!

Nor speaking thine own words] It is necessary to add some epithet to make out the sense; the Septuagint say, angry words; the Chaldee, words of violence. If any such epithet is lost here, the safest way is to supply it by the prophet's own expression, ver. 9, vedabar aven, vain words; that is, profane, impious, injurious, &c.

Verse 14. Then shalt thou delight thyself] If all fasts and religious observances be carried on in the spirit and manner recommended above, God's blessing will attend every ordinance. But in public fasts, prescribed not in the Book of God, but by the rulers of nations in general, (very unfit persons), care should be taken that the cause is good, and that God's blessing may be safely implored on it.

CHAPTER LIX.

This chapter contains a more general reproof of the wickedness of the Jews, 1-8. After this they are represented as confessing their sins, and deploring the unhappy consequences of them, 9-15. On this act of humiliation God, ever ready to pardon the penitent, promises that he will have mercy on them; that the Redeemer will come, mighty to save; and that he will deliver his people, subdue his enemies, and establish a new and everlasting covenant, 16-21.

BEHOLD, the LORD's hand is not ^ashort-ened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear:

2 But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins ^bhave hid his face from you, that he will not hear.

3 For ^cyour hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness.

4 None calleth for justice, nor ^dany pleadeth for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; ^ethey conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity.

5 They hatch ^f"cockatrice" eggs, and weave the spider's web: he that cateth of their eggs dieth, and ^gthat which is crushed breaketh out into a viper.

6 ^hTheir webs shall not become garments, neither shall they cover themselves with their works: their works ⁱare works of iniquity, and the act of violence ^jis in their hands.

7 ^kTheir feet run to evil, and they make haste to shed innocent blood: their thoughts ^lare thoughts of iniquity; wasting and ^mdestruction ⁿare in their paths.

8 The way of peace they know not; and ^othere is

^a Num. xi. 23. Ch. i. 2.—^b Or, have made him hide.—^c Ch. i. 15.—^d Job xv. 35. Ps. vii. 14.—^e Or, adders.—^f Or, that which is sprinkled is as if there broke out a viper.—^g Job viii. 14, 15.—^h Prov.

Verse 4. They conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity.] There is a curious propriety in this mode of expression: a thought or purpose is compared to conception; a word or act, which is the consequence of it, to the birth of a child. From the third to the fifteenth verse inclusive may be considered a true statement of the then moral state of the Jewish people; and that they were, in the most proper sense of the word, guilty of the iniquities with which they are charged.

Verse 10. We stumble at noon day as in the night] "We stumble at midday, as in the twilight." I adopt here an emendation of Houbigant, nisgegah, instead of the second, negasheshah, the repetition of which has a poverty and inequality extremely unworthy of the prophet, and unlike his manner. The mistake is of long standing, being prior to all the ancient Versions. It was a very easy and obvious mistake, and I have little doubt of our having recovered the true reading in this ingenious correction.

Verse 16. And wondered that there was no intercessor] no judgment in their goings: ^athey have made them crooked paths: whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace.

9 Therefore is judgment far from us, neither doth justice overtake us: ^bwe wait for light, but behold obscurity; for brightness, ^cbut we walk in darkness.

10 ^dWe grope for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if ^ewe had no eyes: we stumble at noon day as in the night; ^fwe are in desolate places as dead men.

11 We roar all like bears, and ^gmourn sore like doves: we look for judgment, but ^hthere is none; for salvation, but it is far off from us.

12 For our transgressions are multiplied before thee, and our sins testify against us: for our transgressions are with us; and ⁱas for our iniquities, we know them:

13 In transgressing and lying against the LORD, and departing away from our God, speaking oppression and revolt, conceiving and uttering ^jfrom the heart words of falsehood.

14 And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter.

This and the following verses some of the most eminent rabbins understand as spoken of the Messiah.

Verse 17. For clothing] Two sorts of armour are mentioned: a breast-plate and a helmet, to bring righteousness and salvation to those who fear him; and the garments of vengeance and the cloak of zeal for the destruction of all those who finally oppose him, and reject his gospel.

Verse 18. According to their deeds, accordingly he will repay] The former part of this verse, as it stands at present in the Hebrew text, seems to me to be very imperfect, and absolutely unintelligible. However, I hope the case here is not quite desperate; the Chaldee leads us very fairly to the correction of the text, which is both corrupted and defective. The paraphrase runs thus: "The Lord of retribution, he will render recompence."

Verse 19. When the enemy shall come in like a flood] This all the Rabbins refer to the coming of the Messiah. If ye see a generation which endures much tribulation, (say they) expect him, according to what is written.

15 Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil ^a maketh himself a prey: and the Lord saw it, and ^b it displeased him that there was no judgment.

16 ^c And he saw that there was no man, and ^d wondered that there was no intercessor: ^e therefore his arm brought salvation unto him; and his righteousness, it sustained him.

17 ^f For he put on righteousness as a breastplate, and an helmet of salvation upon his head; and he put on the garments of vengeance for clothing, and was clad with zeal as a cloke.

18 ^g According to their ^h deeds, accordingly he will repay, fury to his adversaries, recompence to his enemies; to the islands he will repay recompence.

Kimchi says, he that was the standard-bearer always began the battle by first smiting at the enemy. Here then the Spirit of the Lord is the standard-bearer, and strikes the first blow. They who go against sin and Satan with the Holy Spirit at their head, are sure to win the day.

Verse 21. My Spirit that is upon thee] This seems to be an address to the Messiah; Kimchi says it is to the prophet, informing him that the spirit of prophecy should be given to all Israelites in the days of the Messiah, as it was then given to him, i. e., to the prophet.

19 ⁱ So shall they fear the name of the Lord from the west, and his glory from the rising of the sun. When the enemy shall come in ^j like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall ^k lift up a standard against him.

20 And ^l the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord.

21 ^m As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord; My Spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever.

And my words which I have put in thy mouth] Whatsoever Jesus spoke was the word and mind of God himself; and must, as such, be implicitly received.

Nor out of the mouth of thy seed] The same doctrine, which Jesus preached, all his faithful ministers preach; and his seed—genuine Christians, who are all born of God, believe; and they shall continue, and the doctrines remain in the seed's seed through all generations—for ever and ever. This is God's covenant, ordered in all things and sure.

CHAPTER LX.

The glorious prospect displayed in this chapter seems to have elevated the prophet even above his usual majesty. The subject is the very flourishing condition of the church of Jesus Christ at that period of the gospel dispensation when both Jews and Gentiles shall become one fold under one Shepherd. The imagery employed is of the most consolatory and magnificent description. This blessed state of the world shall follow a time of gross darkness, 1, 2. The universal diffusion of vital godliness beautifully set forth by a great variety of images, 3-14. The everlasting duration and spotless purity of this kingdom of Christ, 15-21. A time appointed in the counsels of Jehovah for the commencement of this happy period; and when this time arrives, the particulars of the prophecy shall have a speedy accomplishment, 22.

ARISE, ^a shine; ^b for thy light is come, and ^c the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee.

2 For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee.

3 And the ^d Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.

4 ^e Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: all they gather themselves together, ^f they come to thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side.

Verse 1. Arise] Call upon God through Christ, for his salvation; and, Shine] Or, be illuminated; for till thou arise and call upon God, thou wilt never receive true light.

For thy light is come] The Messiah is at the door; who, while he is a light to lighten the Gentiles, will be the glory—the effulgence, of his people Israel.

Verse 2. Darkness shall cover the earth] This is the state of the Gentile people.

Verse 3. And the Gentiles shall come] This has been in some sort already fulfilled. The Gentiles have received the light of the gospel from the land of Judea, and the Gentile kings have embraced that gospel; so that many nations of the earth are full of the doctrine of Christ.

Verse 4. Shall be nursed at thy side] It is the general custom in the East to carry their children astride upon the hip with the arm round their body.

Verse 7. The rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee] Vitrings on the place understands their ministering, and ascending or going up on the altar, as offering themselves voluntarily: "They, waiting for no priest, go and freely offer themselves to the glory and sanctification of the sacred name." This gives a very elegant and poetical turn to the image. It was a general notion that prevailed with 9 Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, "to bring thy sons from far, "their silver and their gold with them, "unto the name of the LORD thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, "because he hath glorified thee.

10 And "the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, "and their kings shall minister unto thee: for "in my wrath I smote thee, "but in my favour have I had mercy on thee.

11 Therefore thy gates "shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the "forces of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought.

12 "For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted.

13 "The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make "the place of my feet glorious.

21 "Thy people also shall be all righteous: "they shall inherit the land for ever, "the branch of my planting, "the work of my hands, that I may be glorified.

The glory of Lebanon] That is, the cedar.
Verse 19. Neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee] This line, as it stands in the present text, seems to be defective. The Septuagint and Chaldee both express the night, which is almost necessary to answer to day in the preceding line, as well as to perfect the sense here. I therefore think that we ought, upon the authority of the Septuagint and Chaldee, to read either velailah, and by night, instead of ulenogah, and for brightness; or ulenogah ballailah, adding the word ballailah, by night.

Verse 22. I the Lord will hasten it in his time.] There is a time set for the fulfilment of this prophecy: that time must come before it begins to take place; but when it does begin, the whole will be performed in a short space. It is not, therefore, the time determined for the event that shall be hastened, but all the circumstances of the event, all the parts of the prediction shall be speedily completed.

sacrificers among the heathen, that the victim's being brought without reluctance to the altar was a good omen; and the contrary a bad one. It was an omen of dreadful portent when the victim fled away from the altar. [There is, however, no foundation in the original, for the above criticism.]

Verse 9. The ships of Tarshish first] The ships of Tarshish as at the first: that is, as they brought gold and silver in the days of Solomon.

Verse 13. And I will make the place of my feet glorious.] The temple of Jerusalem was called the house of God, and the place of his rest or residence. The visible symbolical appearance of God, called by the Jews the shechinal, was in the most holy place, between the wings of the cherubim, above the ark. This is considered as the throne of God, presiding as King over the Jewish state; and as a footstool is a necessary appendage to a throne (see note on chap. lii. 2), the ark is considered as the footstool of God, and is so called, Ps. xcix. 5, 1 Chron. xxviii. 2.

CHAPTER LXI.

The subject of the preceding chapter is continued in this; and to give it the greater solemnity, the Messiah is introduced describing his character and office, and confirming the large promises made before, 1-9. The Messiah of this the Jewish church is introduced, praising God for the honour done her by her restoration to favour, and by the accession of the Gentiles, which is beautifully described by allusions to the rich pontifical dress of the high priest; a happy similitude to express the ornaments of a restored nation and of a renewed mind, 10. Certainty of the prophecy illustrated by a figure drawn from the vegetable kingdom, 11.

THE "Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the LORD ^b hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me ^c to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim ^d liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound;

2 "To proclaim the acceptable year of the LORD, and ^e the day of vengeance of our God; ^f to comfort all that mourn;

3 To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, ^h to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, ⁱ the planting of the LORD, ^j that he might be glorified.

4 And they shall ^k build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations.

5 And ^l strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the alien shall be your plowmen and your vinedressers.

6 "But ye shall be named the Priests of the LORD: men shall call you the Ministers of our God:

Verse 1. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me] In most of Isaiah's prophecies there is a primary and secondary sense, or a remote subject illustrated by one that is near. The deliverance of the Jews from their captivity in Babylon is constantly used to shadow forth the salvation of men by Jesus Christ. Even the prophet himself is a typical person, and is sometimes intended to represent the great Saviour. It is evident from Luke iv. 18 that this is a prophecy of our blessed Lord and his preaching; and yet it is as evident that it primarily refers to Isaiah preaching the glad tidings of deliverance to the Jews.

The opening of the prison] "Perfect liberty." Not merely opening of prisons, but every kind of liberty—complete redemption.

The proclaiming of perfect liberty to the bound, and the year of acceptance with JEHOVAH, is a manifest allusion to the proclaiming of the year of jubilee by sound of trumpet. See Lev. xxv. 9, &c. This was a year of general release of debts and obligations, of bondmen and bondwomen, of lands and possessions which had been sold from the families and tribes to which they belonged. Our Saviour, by applying this text to himself (Luke iv. 18, 19), a text so manifestly relating to the institution above mentioned, plainly declares the typical design of that institution.

Verse 3. To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion] "To impart gladness to the mourners of Zion." A word necessary to the sense is certainly lost in this place, of which the ancient Versions have preserved no traces.

Beauty for ashes] In times of mourning the Jews put on sackcloth, or coarse and sordid raiment, and spread dust and ashes on their heads; on the contrary, splendid clothing and ointment poured on the head were the signs of joy. "Feign thyself to be a mourner," says Joab to the woman of Tekoah, "and put on now mourning apparel, and anoint not thyself with oil," 2 Sam. xiv. 2.

Trees of righteousness] Heb. oaks of righteousness or truth; that is, such as by their flourishing condition should show that they were indeed "the scion of God's planting,

"ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves.

7 "For your shame ye shall have double; and for confusion they shall rejoice in their portion: therefore in their land they shall possess the double: everlasting joy shall be unto them.

8 For ^a I the LORD love judgment, ^b I hate robbery for burnt-offering; and I will direct their work in truth, ^c and I will make an everlasting covenant with them.

9 And their seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people: all that see them shall acknowledge them, ^d that they are the seed which the LORD hath blessed.

10 "I will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for ^e he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, ^f as a bridegroom ^g decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels.

11 For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; so the Lord God will cause ^h righteousness, and ⁱ praise to spring forth before all the nations.

and the work of his hands;" under which images, in the preceding chapter, ver. 21, the true servants of God, in a highly improved state of the church, were represented; that is, says Vitringa on that place, "commendable for the strength of their faith, their durability, and firmness."

Verse 4. The desolations of many generations] It seems that these words cannot refer to the Jews in the Babylonish captivity, for they were not there many generations; but it may refer to their dispersions and state of ruin since the advent of our Lord; and consequently this may be a promise of the restoration of the Jewish people.

Verse 5. Strangers shall—feed your flocks] Gentiles shall first preach to you the salvation of Christ, and feed with divine knowledge the Jewish congregations.

Verse 9. Their seed shall be known among the Gentiles] Both Jews and Gentiles are to make but one fold under one shepherd, Christ Jesus. But still, notwithstanding this, they may retain their peculiarity and national distinction; so that though they are known to be Christians, yet they shall appear to be converted Jews. After their conversion to Christianity, this will necessarily be the case for a long time. Strange nations are not so speedily amalgamated, as to lose their peculiar cast of features, and other national distinctions.

Verse 10. I will greatly rejoice in the Lord] These may be the words of the Jews now converted, and brought into the church of Christ, and with the Gentiles made fellow-heirs of the blessings of the new covenant.

As a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments] An allusion to the magnificent dress of the high-priest, when performing his functions; and particularly to the mitre, and crown or plate of gold on the front of it, Exod. xxix. 6. The bonnet or mitre of the priests also was made, as Moses expresses it, "for glory and for beauty," Exod. xxviii. 40. It is difficult to give its full force to the prophet's metaphor in another language. The version of Aquila and Symmachus comes nearest to it: "as a bridegroom decked with a priestly crown."

CHAPTER LXII.

The prophet opens this chapter with ardent prayers that the happy period of reconciliation just now promised, and here again foretold, may be hastened, 1-5. He then calls upon the faithful, particularly the priests and Levites, to join him, urging the promises, and even the oath, of Jehovah, as the foundation of their request, 6-9. And, relying on this oath, he goes on to speak of the general restoration promised, as already performing; and calls to the people to march forth, and to the various nations among whom they are dispersed to prepare the way for them, as God had caused the order for their return to be universally proclaimed, 10-12.

FOR Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake * I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth.

2 ^b And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory: * and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name.

3 Thou shalt also be ^a a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God.

4 * Thou shalt no more be termed ^c 'Forsaken'; neither shall thy land any more be termed ^d 'Desolate': but thou shalt be called ^e 'Hephzi-bah, and thy land ^f 'Beulah': for the Lord delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married.

5 For as a young man marrieth a virgin, so shall thy sons marry thee: and ^g as the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so ^h shall thy God rejoice over thee.

6 ⁱ I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night: ^j ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence,

7 And give him no ^k rest, till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem ^l a praise in the earth.

8 The Lord hath sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength, ^m Surely I will no more ⁿ give thy corn to be meat for thine enemies; and the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine, for the which thou hast laboured:

9 But they that have gathered it shall eat it, and praise the Lord; and they that have brought it together shall drink it ^o in the courts of my holiness.

10 Go through, go through the gates; ^p prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; ^q lift up a standard for the people.

11 Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, ^r Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his ^s reward is with him, and his ^t work before him.

12 And they shall call them, The holy people, The redeemed of the Lord: and thou shalt be called, Sought out, A city ^u not forsaken.

Verse 1. For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace] These are the words of JEHOVAH declaring his purpose relative to the events predicted in the preceding chapter.

Verse 2. Thou shalt be called by a new name] Viz., CHRISTIAN—or, as in the fourth verse, chephzi bah, "my delight is in her"—because she has now received that command, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; HEAR HIM."

Verse 4. Thy land Beulah] Beulah, married. In the prophets, a desolate land is represented under the notion of a widow; an inhabited land, under that of a married woman, who has both a husband and children.

Verse 6. Ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence] The image in this place is taken from the temple service; in which there was appointed a constant watch, day and night, by the Levites: and among them this seems to have belonged particularly to the singers, see 1 Chron. ix. 33. Now the watches in the East, even to this day, are performed by a loud cry from time to time of the watchmen, to mark the time, and that very frequently, and in order to show that they themselves are constantly attentive to their duty. Hence the watchmen are said by the prophet, chap. iii. 8, to lift up their voice; and here they are commanded, not to keep silence; and the greatest reproach to them is, that they are dumb dogs; they cannot bark; dreamers; sluggards, loving to slumber, chap. lvi. 10. Is not this clause an address to the ministers of Christ, to continue in supplication for the conversion of the Jewish people? Kimchi seems to think that the watchmen are the interceding angels!

Verse 9. But they that have gathered it shall eat it, and praise the Lord] This and the following line have reference to the law of Moses. Deut. xii. 17 18. Lev. xix. 23-25. This clearly explains the force of the expressions, "shall praise JEHOVAH," and "shall drink it in my sacred courts."

Verse 11. Behold, his reward] This reward he carries as it were in his hand. His work is before him—he perfectly knows what is to be done; and is perfectly able to do it. He will do what God should do, and what man cannot do; and men should be workers with him. Let no man fear that the promise shall not be fulfilled on account of its difficulty, its greatness, the hindrances in the way, or the unworthiness of the person to whom it is made. It is God's work; he is able to do it, and as willing as he is able.

Verse 12. They shall call them—These characteristics seem to be put in their inverted order.—1. God will not forsake them. 2. They shall be sought out. 3. They shall be redeemed. And 4. Be in consequence a holy people. 1. When God calls, it is a proof that he has not forsaken. 2. When he seeks, it is a proof he is waiting to be gracious. 3. When the atonement is exhibited, all things are then ready. 4. And when that is received, holiness of heart and life is then to be kept continually in view, as this is the genuine work of God's spirit; and without holiness none shall see the Lord.

CHAPTER LXIII.

The prophet (or rather the church he represents) sees the great Deliverer, long promised and expected, making his appearance, after having crushed his enemies, like grapes in the wine-vat. The comparison suggests a lively idea of the wrath of Omnipotence, which its unhappy objects can no more resist than the grapes can resist the treader. Indeed, there is so much pathos, energy, and sublimity in this remarkable passage, as hardly any thing can be conceived to exceed. The period to which it refers must be the same with that predicted in the nineteenth chapter of the Revelation, some parts of which are expressed in the same terms with this, and plainly enough refer to the very sudden and total overthrow of Antichrist, and of all his adherents and auxiliaries, of which the destruction of Babylon, the capital of Chaldea, and of Bozra, the chief city of the Edomites, was the prototype, 1-6. At the seventh verse commences a penitential confession and supplication of the Jews, as uttered in their present dispersion, 7-19.

WHO is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is "glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save.

2 Wherefore ^a art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the winefat?

3 I have "trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment.

4 For the ^a day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come.

5 ^a And I looked, and 'there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore mine own ^a arm brought salvation unto me; and my fury, it upheld me.

6 And I will tread down the people in mine anger, and ^a make them drunk in my fury, and I will bring down their strength to the earth.

7 I will mention the "loving-kindnesses of the LORD, and the praises of the LORD, according to all that the LORD hath bestowed on us, and the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his mercies, and according to the multitude of his loving-kindnesses.

Verse 1. Who is this that cometh from Edom] Probably both Edom and Bozrah are only figurative expressions, to point out the place in which God should discomfit his enemies. Edom signifies red, and Bozrah, a vintage.

I that speak in righteousness] A MS. has hammered abber, with the demonstrative article added with greater force and emphasis: The announcer of righteousness.

Verse 3. And of the people there was none with me] I was wholly abandoned by them: but a good meaning is, No man has had any part in making the atonement; it is entirely the work of the Messiah alone. No created being could have any part in a sacrifice that was to be of infinite merit.

Verse 7. I will mention the loving-kindnesses of the Lord] The prophet connects the preceding mercies of God to the Jews with the present prospect he has of their redemption by the Messiah; thus making a circle in which eternal goodness revolves. The remaining part of this chapter, with the whole chapter following, contains a penitential confession and supplication of the Israelites in their present state of dispersion, in which they have so long marvellously subsisted, and still continue to subsist, as a people: cast out of their country; without any proper form of civil polity or religious worship; their temple destroyed, their city desolated and lost to them, and their whole nation scattered over the face of the earth, apparently deserted and cast off by the God of their fathers, as no longer his peculiar people.

The whole passage is in the elegiac form, pathetic and elegant; but it has suffered much in our present copy by the mistakes of transcribers.

Verses 8, 9. So he was their Saviour.] I have followed the translation of the Septuagint in the latter part of the eighth, and the former part of the ninth verse; which agree with the present text, a little differently divided, as to the members of the sentence. "And he was salvation to them in all their tribulation; neither an ambassador nor an angel, but himself saved them." An angel of his presence means an angel of superior order, in immediate attendance upon God. So the angel of the Lord says to Zacharias, "I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God," Luke i. 19. The presence of JEHOVAH, Exod. xxxiii. 14, 15, and the angel, Exod. xxxiii. 20, 21, is JEHOVAH himself; here an angel of his presence is opposed to JEHOVAH himself, as an angel is in the following passages of the same book of Exodus. After their idolatrous worshipping of the golden calf, "when God had said to Moses, I will send an angel before thee—I will not go up in the midst of thee—the people mourned," Exod. xxxiii. 2-4. God afterwards comforts Moses, by saying, "My presence (that is, I myself in person, and not by an angel) will go with thee," ver. 14. "I myself will go before thee," as the Septuagint render it.

Verses 13, 14. That led them through the deep—As a beast goeth down into the valley] In both these verses there is an allusion to the Israelites going through the Red Sea, in the bottom of which they found no more inconvenience than a horse would in running in the desert, where there was neither stone nor mud; nor a beast in the valley, where all was plain and smooth.

Verse 17. Why hast thou made us to err? A mere Hebraism, for why hast thou permitted us to err. So Lead us not into temptation; do not suffer us to fall into that to which we are tempted.

Verse 18. The people of thy holiness have possessed it but a little while] The difficulty of the construction in this place is acknowledged on all hands. I believe there is some mistake in the text; and here the Septuagint helps us out; they had in their copy har, mountain, instead of an, people, the mountain of the Holy One. "Not only have our enemies taken possession of Mount Zion, and trodden down thy sanctuary; even far worse than this has befallen us; thou hast long since utterly cast us off, and dost not consider us as thy peculiar people."

CHAPTER LXIV.

The whole of this chapter, which is very pathetic and tender, may be considered as a formulary of prayer and humiliation intended for the Jews in order to their conversion, 1-12.

OH that thou wouldst *rend the heavens, that thou wouldst come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence!

2 As when the melting fire burneth, the fire causeth the waters to boil, to make thy name known to thine adversaries, that the nations may tremble at thy presence!

3 When thou didst terrible things which we looked not for, thou camest down, the mountains flowed down at thy presence.

4 For since the beginning of the world *men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him.

5 Thou meetest him that rejoiceth *and worketh righteousness, those that remember thee in thy ways: behold, thou art wroth; for we have sinned: in those is continuance, and we shall be saved.

6 But we are all as an unclean thing,* and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we all do fade as a leaf: and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away.

7 And there is none that calleth upon thy name, that stirreth up himself to take hold of thee: for thou hast hid thy face from us, and hast consumed us, because of our iniquities.

8 But now, O LORD, thou art our Father; we are the clay,* and thou our potter; and we all are the work of thy hand.

9 Be not wroth very sore, O LORD, neither remember iniquity for ever: behold, see, we beseech thee, we are all thy people.

10 Thy holy cities are a wilderness, Zion is a wilderness, Jerusalem a desolation.

11 Our holy and our beautiful house, where our fathers praised thee, is burned up with fire: and all our pleasant things are laid waste.

12 Wilt thou refrain thyself for these things, O LORD? wilt thou hold thy peace, and afflict us very sore?

Verse 1. Oh that thou wouldst rend the heavens] This seems to allude to the wonderful manifestation of God upon Mount Sinai.

Verse 2. As when the melting fire burneth] I am inclined to think that the text is much corrupted in this place. The Septuagint and Syriac agree exactly together in rendering this line by, "As the wax melteth before the fire," which can by no means be reconciled with the present text.

Verse 4. For since the beginning of the world men have not heard] St. Paul is generally supposed to have quoted this passage of Isaiah, 1 Cor. ii. 9; and Clemens Romanus in his first epistle has made the same quotation, very nearly in the same words with the apostle. But the citation is so very different from the Hebrew text and the version of the Septuagint, that it seems very difficult, if not impossible, to hand, as Job ix. 4.—^a Ch. lxiii. 16.—^b Ch. xxix. 16. xlv. 9. Jer. xviii. 6. Rom. ix. 20, 21.—^c Eph. ii. 10.—^d Ps. lxxiv. 1, 2. lxxix. 8. ^e Ps. lxxix. 13.—^f Ps. lxxix. 1. Ch. iii. 8. reconcile them by any literal emendation, without going beyond the bounds of temperate criticism.

Verse 5. In those is continuance, and we shall be saved] I am fully persuaded that these words as they stand in the present Hebrew text are utterly unintelligible; there is no doubt of the meaning of each word separately; but put together they make no sense at all. I conclude therefore, that the copy has suffered by mistakes of transcribers in this place.

Verse 8. But, now, O Lord, thou art our Father] How very affectionate is the complaint in this and the following verses! But how does the distress increase, when they recollect the desolations of the temple, and ruin of public worship, ver. 11: "Our holy and beautiful house, where our fathers praised thee, is burnt up with fire," &c.

CHAPTER LXV.

We have here a vindication of God's dealings with the Jews, 1, 2. To this end the prophet points out their great hypocrisy, and gives a particular enumeration of their dreadful abominations, many of which were committed under the specious guise of sanctity, 3-5. For their horrid impieties (recorded in writing before Jehovah) the wrath of God shall certainly come upon them to the uttermost; a prediction which was exactly fulfilled in the first and second centuries in the reigns of the Roman emperors Vespasian, Titus, and Hadrian, when the whole Jewish polity was dissolved, and the people dispersed all over the world, 6-7. Though God had rejected the Jews, and called the Gentiles, who sought him not (Rom. ix. 24-26), yet a remnant from among the former shall be preserved, to whom he will in due time make good all his promises, 8-10. Denunciation of divine vengeance against those idolaters who set in order a table for Gad, and fill out a libation to Meni, ancient idolatries which, from the context, and from the chronological order of the events predicted, have a plain reference to the idolatries practised by Antichrist under the guise of Christianity, 11, 12. Dreadful fate which awaits these gross idolaters beautifully contrasted with the great blessedness reserved for the righteous, 13-16. Future restoration of the posterity of Jacob, and the happy state of the world in general from that most glorious epoch, represented by the strong figure of the creation of new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness, and into which no distress shall be permitted to enter, 17-19. In this new state of things the term of human life shall be greatly protracted, and shall possess none of that uncertainty which attaches to it in "the heavens and the earth which are now." This is elegantly illustrated by the longevity of a tree; manifestly, alluding to the oak or cedar of Lebanon, some individuals of which are known to have lived from seven to ten centuries, 20-23. Beautiful figures shadowing forth the profound peace and harmony of the church of Jesus Christ, which shall immediately follow the total overthrow of Antichrist; with a most gracious promise that the great chain of Omnipotence shall be put upon every adversary, so that none will be able any longer to hurt and destroy in all God's holy mountain, 24, 25.

I AM sought of them that asked not for me; I am found of them that sought me not: I said, Behold me, behold me, unto a nation that was not called by my name.

2 I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people, which walketh in a way that was not good, after their own thoughts;

3 A people that provoketh me to anger continually to my face; that sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon altars of brick;

4 Which remain among the graves, and lodge in the monuments; which eat swine's flesh,

Verse 3. That sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon altars of brick] These are instances of heathenish superstition, and idolatrous practices, to which the Jews were immoderately addicted before the Babylonish captivity. The heathen worshipped their idols in groves; whereas God, in opposition to this species of idolatry, commanded his people, when they should come into the promised land, to destroy all the places wherein the Canaanites had served their gods, and in particular to burn their groves with fire, Deut. xii. 2, 3. These apostate Jews sacrificed upon altars built of bricks; in opposition to the command of God in regard to his altar, which was to be of unhewn stone, Exod. xx. 25. Or it means, perhaps, that they sacrificed upon the roofs of their houses, which were always flat, and paved with brick, or tile, or plaster of terrace. An instance of this idolatrous practice we find in 2 Kings xxiii. 12. See also Zeph. i. 5.

Verse 4. Which remain among the graves] "For the purpose of evoking the dead. They lodged in desert places that demons might appear to them; for demons do appear in such places, to those who do believe in them."—Kimchi.

Which eat swine's flesh] This was expressly forbidden by the law, Lev. xi. 7, but among the heathen was in principal request in their sacrifices and feasts. Antiochus Epiphanes compelled the Jews to eat swine's flesh, as a full proof of their renouncing their religion, 2 Mac. vi. 18 and vii. 1. "And the broth of abominable meats," for lustrations, magical arts, and other superstitious and abominable practices.

I will—recompense into their bosom.] The bosom is the place where the Asiatics have their pockets, and not in their skirts like the inhabitants of the West. Their loose flowing garments have scarcely any thing analogous to skirts.

Verse 8. A blessing is in it] The Hebrews call all things which serve for food berachah, "a blessing." On this verse Kimchi remarks: "As the cluster of grapes contains, besides the juice, the bark, and the kernels, so the Israelites have, besides the just, sinners among them. Now as the cluster must not be destroyed, because there is a blessing—a nutritive part, in it; so Israel shall not be destroyed because there are righteous persons in it. But as the bark and kernels are thrown away when the wine is pressed out, so shall the sinners be purged away from among the just, and on their return from exile shall not be permitted to enter into the land of Israel." Ezek. xx. 38.

Verse 10. Sharon—and the valley of Achor] Two of the most fertile parts of Judaea; famous for their rich pastures; the former to the west, not far from Joppa; the latter north of Jericho, near Gilgal.

Verse 11. That prepare a table for that troop] "Who set in order a table for Gad." The disquisitions and conjectures of the learned concerning Gad and Meni are infinite in the cluster, and one saith, Destroy it not; for a blessing is in it: so will I do for my servants' sakes, that I may not destroy them all.

9 And I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains: and mine b elect shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there.

10 And c Sharon shall be a fold of flocks, and d the valley of Achor a place for the herds to lie down in, for my people that have sought me.

11 But ye are they that forsake the LORD, that forget e my holy mountain, that prepare f a table for that g troop, and that furnish the drink-offering unto that h number.

12 Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: i because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and did choose j that wherein I delighted not.

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry: behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty: behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed:

14 Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart, but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and k shall howl for l vexation of spirit.

15 And ye shall leave your name m for a curse unto my n chosen: for the Lord God shall slay thee, and o call his servants by another name:

16 p That he who blesseth himself in the earth shall bless himself in the God of truth; and q he that sweareth in the earth shall swear by the God of truth; because the former troubles are forgotten, and because they are hid from mine eyes.

17 For, behold, I create r new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor s come into mind.

18 But be ye glad and rejoice for ever t in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy.

19 And u I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people; and the v voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying.

20 There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days: for the child shall die an hundred years old; w but the sinner x being an hundred years old shall be accursed.

21 And y they shall build houses, and inhabit z them; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them.

22 They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant, and another eat: for a as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and b mine elect c shall long enjoy the work of their hands.

23 They shall not labour in vain, d nor bring forth for trouble; for e they are the seed of the blessed of the LORD, and their offspring with them.

24 And it shall come to pass, that f before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear.

25 The g wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock: h and dust i shall be the serpent's meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the LORD.

Verse 22. They shall not build, and another inhabit] The reverse of the curse denounced on the disobedient, Deut. xviii. 30.

For as the days of a tree] It is commonly supposed that the oak, one of the most long-lived of the trees, lasts about a thousand years; being five hundred years growing to full perfection, and as many decaying: which seems to be a moderate and probable computation.

Verse 23. They shall not labour in vain] The Septuagint is beautiful: My chosen shall not labour in vain, neither shall they beget children for the curse: for the seed is blessed of the Lord, and their posterity with them.

Verse 24. Before they call I will answer] I will give them all they crave for, and more than they can desire.

and uncertain: perhaps the most probable may be, that Gad means good fortune, and Meni the moon.

Jerome, on the place, gives an account of this idolatrous practice of the apostate Jews, of making a feast for these pretended deities.

Verse 12. Therefore will I number you] Referring to Meni, which signifies number. "Rabbi Eliezer said to his disciples, Turn to God one day before you die. His disciples said, How can a man know the day of his death? He answered, Therefore it is necessary that you should turn to God to-day, for possibly ye may die to-morrow."

Verse 17. I create new heavens and a new earth] This has been variously understood. Some Jews and some Christians understood it literally. God shall change the state of the atmosphere, and render the earth more fruitful. Some refer it to what they call the Millennium; others, to a glorious state of religion; others, to the re-erection of the earth after it shall have been destroyed by fire. I think it refers to the full conversion of the Jews ultimately; and primarily to the deliverance from the Babylonish captivity.

Verse 19. The voice of weeping, &c.] "Because of untimely deaths, shall no more be heard in thee; for natural death shall not happen till men be full of days; as it is written, ver. 20: There shall be no more thence an infant of days, i. e., the people shall live to three or five hundred years of

CHAPTER LXVI.

This chapter treats of the same subject with the foregoing. God, by his prophet, tells the Jews, who valued themselves much on their temple and pompous worship, that the Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands; and that no outward rites of worship, while the worshippers are idolatrous and impure, can please him who looketh at the heart, 1-3. This leads to a threatening of vengeance for their guilt, alluding to their making void the law of God by their abominable traditions, their rejection of Christ, persecution of his followers, and consequent destruction by the Romans. But as the Jewish ritual and people shadow forth the system of Christianity and its professors; so in the prophetic writings, the idolatries of the Jews are frequently put for the idolatries afterwards practised by those bearing the Christian name. Consequently, if we would have the plenitude of meaning in this section of prophecy, which the very context requires, we must look through the type into the antitype, viz., the very gross idolatries practised by the members of Antichrist, the pompous heap of human inventions and traditions with which they have encumbered the Christian system, their most dreadful persecution of Christ's spiritual and true worshippers, and the awful judgments which shall overtake them in the great and terrible day of the Lord, 4-6. The mighty and sudden increase of the church of Jesus Christ at the period of Antichrist's fall represented by the very strong figure of Sion being delivered of a manchild before the time of her travail, the meaning of which symbol the prophet immediately subjoins in a series of interrogations for the sake of greater force and emphasis, 7-9. Wonderful prosperity and unspeakable blessedness of the world when the posterity of Jacob, with the fulness of the Gentiles, shall be assembled to Messiah's standard, 10-14. All the wicked of the earth shall be gathered together to the battle of that great day of God Almighty, and the slain of Jehovah shall be many, 15-18. Manner of the future restoration of the Israelites from their dispersions throughout the habitable globe, 19-21. Perpetuity of this new economy of grace to the house of Israel, 22. Righteousness shall be universally diffused in the earth; and the memory of those who have transgressed against the Lord shall be had in continual abhorrence, 23, 24. Thus this great prophet, after tracing the events of time, seems at length to have terminated his views in eternity, where all revolutions cease, where the blessedness of the righteous shall be unchangeable as the new heavens, and the misery of the wicked as the fire that shall not be quenched.

THUS saith the LORD, "The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest?"

2 For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the LORD: "but to this man will I look, "even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and "trembleth at my word.

3 "He that killeth an ox is as if he slew a man; he that sacrificeth a "lamb, as if he "cut off a dog's neck; he that offereth an oblation, as if he offered swine's blood; he that "burneth incense, as if he blessed an idol. Yea, they have chosen their own ways, and their soul delighteth in their abominations.

4 I also will choose their "delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; "because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not.

5 Hear the word of the LORD, "ye that tremble

7 Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child.

8 Who hath heard such a thing? who hath seen such things? Shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day: or shall a nation be born at once? for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children.

9 Shall I bring to the birth, and not "cause to bring forth? saith the LORD: shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb? saith thy God.

Verse 2. And all those things have been] "And all these things are mine." A word absolutely necessary to the sense is here lost out of the text: to, mine. It is preserved by the Septuagint and Syriac.

Verse 3. He that killeth an ox is as if he slew a man] These are instances of wickedness joined with hypocrisy; of the most flagitious crimes committed by those who at the same time affected great strictness in the performance of all the external services of religion. God, by the prophet Ezekiel, upbraids the Jews with the same practices.

The generality of interpreters, by departing from the literal rendering of the text, have totally lost the true sense of it, and have substituted in its place what makes no good sense at all; for it is not easy to show how, in any circumstances sacrifice and murder, the presenting of legal offerings and, idolatrous worship, can possibly be of the same account in the sight of God.

He that offereth an oblation, as if he offered swine's blood]

* Deut. xxiii. 18.—"Heb. maketh a memorial of, Lev. ii. 2.—"Or, devices.—Prov. i. 24. Ch. lvi. 12. Jer. vii. 13.—"Ver. 1.—"Ch. v. 19.—"2 Thessa. i. 10. Tit. ii. 12.—"Or, begot.

A word here likewise, necessary to complete the sense, is perhaps irrecoverably lost out of the text. The Vulgate and Chaldee add the word offereth, to make out the sense; not, as I imagine, from any different reading (for the word wanted seems to have been lost before the time of the oldest of them, as the Septuagint had it not in their copy), but from mere necessity.

Verse 6. A voice of noise from the city, a voice from the temple, a voice of the Lord] It is very remarkable that similar words were spoken by Jesus, son of Ananias, previously to the destruction of Jerusalem. See his very affecting history related by Josephus, WAR. B. vi., chap. v.

Verse 12. Like a river, and—like a flowing stream] "Like the great river, and like the overflowing stream." That is, the Euphrates and the Nile.

Verse 15. The Lord will come with fire] "JEHOVAH shall come as a fire." For baesh, in fire, the Septuagint had in their copy caesh, as a fire.

12 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream: then shall ye suck, ye shall be borne upon her sides, and be dandled upon her knees.

13 As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem.

14 And when ye see this, your heart shall rejoice, and your bones shall flourish like an herb: and the hand of the LORD shall be known toward his servants, and his indignation toward his enemies.

15 For, behold, the LORD will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire.

16 For by fire and by his sword will the LORD plead with all flesh: and the slain of the LORD shall be many.

Verse 17. Behind one tree] Whatever the particular mode of idolatry which the prophet refers to might be, the general sense of the place is perfectly clear.

I know not what to make of this place; it is certain that our translation makes no sense. Kimchi interprets this of the Turks, who are remarkable for ablutions. "Behind one in the midst" he understands of a large fish-pond placed in the middle of their gardens. Others make achad a deity; and a deity of various names it is supposed to be, for it is Achad, and Chad, and Hadad, and Achath, and Hecat, an Assyrian idol.

Verse 18. For I know their works] A word is here lost out of the present text, leaving the text quite imperfect. The word is yodea, knowing, supplied from the Syriac. I think there can be little doubt of its being genuine. The concluding verses of this chapter refer to the complete restoration of the Jews, and to the destruction of all the enemies of the gospel of Christ, so that the earth shall be filled with the knowledge and glory of the Lord. Lord, hasten the time!

Verse 19. That draw the bow] I much suspect that the words moshechey kesheth, who draw the bow, are a corruption of the word, mesheki, Moschi, the name of a nation situated between the Euxine and Caspian Seas; and properly joined with tubal, the Tibareni.

Verse 20. And in chariots] There is a sort of vehicle

19 And I will set a sign among them, and I will send those that escape of them unto the nations, to Tarshish, Pul, and Lud, that draw the bow, to Tubal, and Javan, to the isles afar off; that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles.

20 And they shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the LORD out of all nations upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and upon mules, and upon swift beasts, to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the LORD, as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel into the house of the LORD.

21 And I will also take of them for priests and for Levites, saith the LORD.

22 For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the LORD, so shall your seed and your name remain.

23 And it shall come to pass that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the LORD.

24 And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

much used in the East, consisting of a pair of hampers or cradles, thrown across a camel's back, one on each side; in each of which a person is carried. They have a covering to defend them from the rain and the sun.

Verse 24. For their worm shall not die] These words of the prophet are applied by our blessed Saviour, Mark ix. 44, to express the everlasting punishment of the wicked in Gehenna, or in hell. Gehenna, or the valley of Hinnom, was very near to Jerusalem to the south-east: it was the place where the idolatrous Jews celebrated that horrible rite of making their childrer pass through the fire, that is, of burning them in sacrifice to Moloch. To put a stop to this abominable practice, Josiah defiled, or desecrated, the place, by filling it with human bones, 2 Kings xxiii. 10, 14; and probably it was the custom afterwards to throw out the carcases of animals there, when it also became the common burying place for the poorer people of Jerusalem. Our Saviour expressed the state of the blessed by sensible images; such as paradise, Abraham's bosom, or, which is the same thing, a place to recline next to Abraham at table in the kingdom of heaven. See Matt. viii. 11. In like manner he expressed the place of torment under the image of Gehenna; and the punishment of the wicked by the worm which there preyed on the carcases, and the fire that consumed the wretched victims.

INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOK

OF THE

PROPHET JEREMIAH.

THE Prophet Jeremiah, son of Hilkiah, was of the sacerdotal race, and a native of Anathoth, a village in the tribe of Benjamin, within a few miles of Jerusalem, which had been appointed for the use of the priests, the descendants of Aaron, Josh. xxi. 18. He was called to the prophetic office when very young; probably when he was fourteen years of age, and in the thirteenth of the reign of Josiah, A. M. 3375, B. C. 629. He continued to prophesy till after the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, which took place A. M. 3416; and it is supposed that about two years after he died in Egypt. Thus it appears that he discharged the arduous duties of the prophetic office for upwards of forty years.

Being very young when called to the prophetic office, he endeavoured to excuse himself on account of his youth and incapacity for the work; but, being overruled by the divine authority, he undertook the task, and performed it with matchless zeal and fidelity in the midst of a most crooked and perverse people, by whom he was continually persecuted, and whom he boldly reproved, often at the hazard of his life.

His attachment to his country was strong and fervent; he foresaw by the light of prophecy the ruin that was coming upon it. He might have made terms with the enemy, and not only saved his life, but have gained ease and plenty; but he chose rather to continue with his people, and take his part in all the disasters that befel them.

As a writer, the character of Jeremiah has been well drawn by Bishop Louth. On comparing him with Isaiah, the learned prelate says: "Jeremiah is by no means wanting either in elegance or sublimity; although, generally speaking, inferior to Isaiah in both. St. Jerome has objected to him a certain rusticity in his diction; of which, I must confess, I do not discover the smallest trace. His thoughts, indeed, are somewhat less elevated, and he is commonly more large and diffuse in his sentences; but the reason of this may be, that he is mostly taken up with the gentler passions of grief and pity, for the expressing of which he has a peculiar talent. This is most evident in the Lamentations, where those passions altogether predominate; but it is often visible also in his Prophecies; in the former part of the book more especially, which is principally poetical. The middle parts are for the most part historical; but the last part, consisting of six chapters, is entirely poetical; and contains several oracles distinctly marked, in which this prophet falls very little short of the loftiest style of Isaiah."

OF THE

PROPHET JEREMIAH.

CHAPTER I.

General title to the whole Book, 1-3. Jeremiah receives a commission to prophesy concerning nations and kingdoms, a work to which in the divine purpose he had been appointed before his birth, 4-10. The vision of the rod of an almond-tree and of the seething-pot, with their signification, 11-16. Promises of divine protection to Jeremiah in the discharge of the arduous duties of his prophetic office, 17-19.

THE words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, of the priests that were ^a in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin:

2 To whom the word of the LORD came in the days of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, ^b in the thirteenth year of his reign.

3 It came also in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, ^c unto the end of the eleventh year of Zedekiah the son of Josiah king of Judah, ^d unto the carrying away of Jerusalem captive ^e in the fifth month.

4 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Before I ^f formed thee in the belly ^g I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I ^h sanctified thee, and I ⁱ ordained thee a prophet unto the nations.

6 Then said I, ^j Ah, Lord GOD! behold, I cannot speak: for I ^k am a child.

7 But the LORD said unto me, Say not, ^l I am a child; for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, Verses 1-3. The words of Jeremiah] These three verses are the title of the Book; and were probably added by Ezra when he collected and arranged the sacred books, and put them in that order in which they are found in Hebrew Bibles in general.

Verse 3. Eleventh year of Zedekiah] That is, the last year of his reign; for he was made prisoner by the Chaldeans in the fourth month of that year, and the carrying away of the inhabitants of Jerusalem was in the fifth month of the same year.

Verse 5. Before I formed thee] I had destined thee to the prophetic office before thou wast born: I had formed my plan, and appointed thee to be my envoy to this people.

Verse 6. I cannot speak] Those who are really called of God to the sacred ministry are such as have been brought to a deep acquaintance with themselves, feel their own ignorance, and know their own weakness. They know also the awful responsibility that attaches to the work; and nothing but the authority of God can induce such to undertake it.

11 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Jeremiah, what seest thou? And I said, I see a rod of an almond tree.

12 Then said the LORD unto me, Thou hast well seen: for I will hasten my word to perform it.

13 And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying, What seest thou? And I said, I see ^t a seething pot; and the face thereof is ^u toward the north.

Verse 7. Whatsoever I command thee] I shall teach thee; therefore thy youth and inexperience can be no hindrance.

Verse 8. Be not afraid of their faces] That is, the Jews, whom he knew would persecute him because of the message which he brought. To be forewarned is to be half-armed.

Verse 10. I have—set thee over the nations] God represents his messengers the prophets as doing what he commanded them to declare should be done.

Verse 11. A rod of an almond tree.] Shaked, from shakad, "to be ready," "to hasten," "to watch for an opportunity to do a thing," to awake; because the almond-tree is the first to flower and bring forth fruit. It was here the symbol of that promptitude with which God was about to fulfil his promises and threatenings.

Verse 12. I will hasten my word] Here is a peronomasia. What dost thou see? I see shaked, "an almond," the hastening tree: that which first awakes. Thou hast well seen, for (shoked) I will hasten my word. The judgment shall come speedily; it shall soon flourish, and come to maturity.

the fullest instruction, the purest ordinances, the highest privileges; and reason would that I should expect thee to live suitably to such advantages; but instead of this thou art become degenerate; the tree is deteriorated, and the fruit is bad.

Verse 22. For though thou wash thee with nitre] It should be rendered natar or natron, a substance totally different from our nitre. It comes from the root nathar, to dissolve, loosen, because a solution of it in water is abstersive, taking out spots, &c., from clothes. It is still used in the East for the purpose of washing.

Thine iniquity is marked before me] The marks of thy idolatry and corruption are too deeply rooted to be extracted by any human means.

Verse 23. See thy way in the valley] The valley of Hinnom, where they offered their own children to Moloch, an idol of the Ammonites.

Verse 24. Withhold thy foot from being unshod] "Cease from discovering thy feet; prostitute thyself no more to thy idols."

And thy throat from thirst] Drink no more of their libations, nor use those potions which tend only to increase thy appetite for pollution.

Verse 25. As the thief is ashamed] As the pilferer is confounded when he is caught in the fact; so shalt thou, thy kings, princes, priests, and prophets, be confounded, when God shall arrest thee in thy idolatries, and deliver thee into the hands of thine enemies.

Verse 27. Thou art my father] How deeply fallen and brutishly ignorant must they be when they could attribute this to the stock of a tree!

Verse 28. According to the number of thy cities are thy gods] Among heathen nations every city had its tutelary deity. Judah, far sunk in idolatry, had adopted this custom.

Verse 31. Have I been a wilderness unto Israel?] Have I ever withheld from you any of the blessings necessary for your support?

A land of darkness] Have you, since you passed through the wilderness, and came out of the darkness of Egypt, ever been brought into similar circumstances?

We are lords] We wish to be our own masters; we will neither brook religious nor civil restraint; we will regard no laws, human or divine.

31 O generation, see ye the word of the LORD. ^aHave I been a wilderness unto Israel? a land of darkness? Wherefore say my people, ^bWe ^care lords; ^dwe will come no more unto thee?

32 Can a maid forget her ornaments, or a bride her attire? yet my people ^ehave forgotten me days without number.

33 Why trimmest thou thy way to seek love? therefore hast thou also taught the wicked ones thy ways.

34 Also in thy skirts is found ^fthe blood of the souls of the poor innocents: I have not found it by ^gsecret search, but upon all these.

35 ^hYet thou sayest, Because I am innocent, surely his anger shall turn from me. Behold, ⁱI will plead with thee, ^jbecause thou sayest, I have not sinned.

36 ^kWhy gaddest thou about so much to change thy way? ^lthou also shalt be ashamed of Egypt, ^mas thou wast ashamed of Assyria.

37 Yea, thou shalt go forth from him, and ⁿthine hands upon thine head: for the LORD hath rejected thy confidences, and thou shalt not prosper in them.

Verse 32. Can a maid forget her ornaments] This people has not so much attachment to me as young females have to their dress and ornaments.

Days without number] That is, for many years; during the whole reign of Manasses, which was fifty-five years, the land was deluged with idolatry, from which the reform by good king Josiah his grandson had not yet purified it.

Verse 33. Why trimmest thou thy way] Ye have used a multitude of artifices to gain alliances with the neighbouring idolatrous nations.

Hast thou also taught the wicked ones thy ways] Ye have made even these idolaters worse than they were before.

Verse 34. The blood of the souls of the poor innocents] We find from the sacred history that Manasseh had filled Jerusalem with innocent blood; see 2 Kings, xxi. 16, and Ezek. xxxiv. 10.

I have not found it by secret search, but upon all these] Others cover the blood that it may not appear; but ye have shed it openly, and sprinkled it upon your consecrated oaks, and gloried in it.

Verse 35. Because I am innocent] They continued to assert their innocence; and therefore expected that God's judgment would be speedily removed!

I will plead with thee] I will maintain my process, follow it up to conviction, and inflict the deserved punishment.

Verse 36. Why gaddest thou about] When they had departed from the Lord, they sought foreign alliances for support. 1. The Assyrians, 2 Chron. xxviii. 13-21; but they injured instead of helping them. 2. The Egyptians; but in this they were utterly disappointed, and were ashamed of their confidence. See chap. xxxvii. 7, 8, for the fulfilment of this prediction.

Verse 37. Thou shalt go forth from him, and thine hands upon thine head] Thou shalt find all thy confidence in vain,—thy hope disappointed,—and thy state reduced to desperation. The hand being placed on the head was the evidence of deep sorrow, occasioned by utter desolation. See 2 Sam. xiii. 19.

Thou shalt not prosper in them] They shall all turn to thy disadvantage; and this, as we shall see in the history of this people, was literally fulfilled. O what a grievous and bitter thing it is to sin against the Lord, and have him for an enemy!

CHAPTER III.

The first five verses of this chapter allude to the subject of the last; and contain earnest exhortations to repentance, with gracious promises of pardon, notwithstanding every aggravation of guilt, 1-5. At the sixth verse a new section of prophecy commences, opening with a complaint against Judah for having exceeded in guilt her sister Israel, already cast off for her idolatry, 6-11. She is cast off, but not for ever; for to this same Israel, whose place of captivity (Assyria) lay to the north of Judea, pardon is promised on her repentance, together with a restoration to the church of God, along with her sister Judah, in the latter days, 12-20. The prophet foretells the sorrow and repentance of the children of Israel under the gospel dispensation, 21. God renews his gracious promises, 22; and they again confess their sins. In this confession their not deigning to name the idol Baal, the source of their calamities, but calling him in the abstract shame, or a 'thing of shame, is a nice touch of the pencil, extremely beautiful and natural, 22-25.

THEY say, If a man put away his wife, and she go from him, and become another man's, shall he return unto her again? shall not that land be greatly polluted? but thou hast played the harlot with many lovers; yet return again to me, saith the LORD.

2 Lift up thine eyes unto the high places, and see where thou hast not been lien with. In the ways hast thou sat for them, as the Arabian in the wilderness; and thou hast polluted the land with thy whoredoms and with thy wickedness.

3 Therefore the showers have been withholden, and there hath been no latter rain; and thou hadst a whore's forehead, thou refusedst to be ashamed.

4 Wilt thou not from this time cry unto me, My father, thou art the guide of my youth?

5 Will he reserve his anger for ever? will he keep it to the end? Behold, thou hast spoken and done evil things as thou couldest.

6 The LORD said also unto me in the days of Josiah the king, Hast thou seen that which backsliding Israel hath done? she is gone up upon every high mountain and under every green tree, and there hath played the harlot.

7 And I said, after she had done all these things, Turn thou unto me. But she returned not. And her treacherous sister Judah saw it.

8 And I saw, when for all the causes whereby backsliding Israel committed adultery I had put her away, and given her a bill of divorce; yet her treacherous sister Judah feared not, but went and played the harlot also.

9 And it came to pass through the lightness of her whoredom, that she defiled the land, and committed adultery with stones and with stocks.

10 And yet for all this her treacherous sister Judah hath not turned unto me with her whole heart, but feignedly, saith the LORD.

11 And the LORD said unto me, The backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah.

12 Go and proclaim these words toward the north, and say, Return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the LORD; and I will not cause mine anger to Verse 7. And I said] By the prophets Elijah, Elisha, Hosea, Amos, &c.; for all these prophesied to that rebellious people, and exhorted them to return to the Lord.

Verse 8. I had put her away] Given them up into the hands of the Assyrians.

Verse 9. The lightness of her whoredom] The grossness of her idolatry: worshipping objects the most degrading, with rites the most impure.

Verse 11. Backsliding Israel hath justified herself more] She was less offensive in my eyes, and more excusable, than treacherous Judah. So it is said, Luke xviii. 14, the humbled publican went down to his house justified rather than the boasting Pharisee.

Verse 12. Proclaim these words toward the north] The countries where the ten tribes were then in captivity, Mesopotamia, Assyria, Media, &c., see 2 Kings xvii. 6; these lay north of Judea. How tender and compassionate are the exhortations in this and the following verses!

Verse 14. I will take you one of a city, and two of a family] If there should be but one of a city left, or one willing to return, and two only of a whole tribe, yet will I receive these, and bring them back from captivity into their own land.

Verse 15. I will give you pastors according to mine heart] The pastor means either the king or the prophet; and the pastors here promised may be either kings or prophets, or both. These shall be according to God's own heart; they shall be of his own choosing, and shall be qualified by himself: and in consequence they shall feed the people with knowledge, &c., that divine truth concerning the true God and the best interests of man, which was essentially necessary to their salvation; and understanding—haskel, the Verse 1. If a man put away his wife] It was ever understood, by the law and practice of the country, that if a woman were divorced by her husband, and became the wife of another man, the first man could never take her again. Now Israel had been married unto the Lord; joined in solemn covenant to him to worship and serve him only. Israel turned from following him, and became idolatrous. On this ground, considering idolatry as a spiritual whoredom, and the precept and practice of the law to illustrate this case, Israel could never more be restored to the divine favour: but God, this first husband, in the plenitude of his mercy, is willing to receive this adulterous spouse, if she will abandon her idolatries and return unto him.

Verse 2. As the Arabian in the wilderness] They were as fully intent on the practice of their idolatry, as the Arab in the desert is in lying in wait to plunder the caravans.

Verse 3. There hath been no latter rain] The former rain, which prepared the earth for tillage, fell in the beginning of November, or a little sooner; and the latter rain fell in the middle of April, after which there was scarcely any rain during the summer.

Verse 5. Will he reserve his anger for ever?] Why should not wrath be continued against thee, as thou continuest transgression against the Lord?

Verse 6. The Lord said also unto me in the days of Josiah the king] Here the prophet shows the people of Judah the transgressions, idolatry, obstinacy, and punishment of their brethren, the ten tribes, whom he calls to return to the Lord, with the most gracious promises of restoration to their own country, their reunion with their brethren of Judah, and every degree of prosperity in consequence.

13 'Only acknowledge thine iniquity, that thou hast transgressed against the LORD thy God, and hast 'scattered thy ways to the 'strangers 'under every green tree, and ye have not obeyed my voice, saith the LORD.

full interpretation of every point, that in receiving the truth they might become wise, holy, and happy.

Verse 16. The ark of the covenant of the Lord] This symbol of the divine presence shall be no longer necessary; for in the days of Messiah, the temple of God shall be among men, and everywhere God be adored through Christ Jesus.

Verse 17. They shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord] The new Jerusalem, the universal church of Christ, shall be God's throne: and wherever he is acknowledged as the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world, there God sits on his throne, and holds his court.

Verse 18. The house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel] That is, in those days in which the Jews shall be brought in with the fullness of the Gentiles.

Out of the land of the north] From Chaldea. This prophecy has two aspects: one refers to the return from the Babylonish captivity; the other, to the glorious days of Christianity. But the words may refer to that gathering together of the Jews, not only from Chaldea, but from the countries of their dispersion over the face of the whole earth, and uniting them in the Christian church.

Verse 19. How shall I put thee among the children] As if he had said, How can ye be accounted a holy seed, who are polluted?

that I have 'given for an inheritance unto your fathers.

19 But I said, How shall I put thee among the children, and give thee 'a 'pleasant land, 'a goodly heritage of the hosts of nations? and I said, Thou shalt call me, 'My father; and shalt not turn away 'from me.

20 Surely a 'wife treacherously departeth from her 'husband, so 'have ye dealt treacherously with me, O house of Israel, saith the LORD.

21 A voice was heard upon 'the high places, weeping and supplications of the children of Israel: for they have perverted their way, and they have forgotten the LORD their God.

22 'Return, ye backsliding children, and 'I will heal your backslidings. Behold we come unto thee; for thou art the LORD our God.

23 'Truly in vain is salvation hoped for from the hills, and from the multitude of mountains: 'truly in the LORD our God is the salvation of Israel.

24 'For shame hath devoured the labour of our fathers from our youth; their flocks and their herds, their sons and their daughters.

25 We lie down in our shame, and our confusion covereth us: 'for we have sinned against the LORD our God, we and our fathers, from our youth even unto this day, and 'have not obeyed the voice of the LORD our God.

And I said, Thou shalt call me, My father] This is the answer to the above question. They could not be put among the children unless they became legal members of the heavenly family: and they could not become members of this family unless they abandoned idolatry, and took the Lord for their portion.

Verse 21. A voice was heard upon the high places] Here the Israelites are represented as assembled together to bewail their idolatry and to implore mercy. While thus engaged they hear the gracious call of Jehovah.

Verse 22. Return, ye backsliding children] This they gladly receive, and with one voice make their confession to him: 'Behold, we come unto thee, for thou art Jehovah our God;' and thence to the end of the chapter, show the reasons why they return unto God.

Verse 24. For shame hath devoured] The word shame, here and in chap. xi. 18, Hos. ix. 10, is supposed to signify Baal, the idol which they worshipped. That thing or shame which has brought you into contempt, confusion, and ruin. Sooner or later every sinner must be ashamed of his conduct; next, confounded; and lastly, ruined by it, unless by true faith and hearty repentance he returns to the Lord.

CHAPTER IV.

Sequel of the exhortations and promises addressed to Israel in the preceding chapter, 1, 2. The prophet then addresses the people of Judah and Jerusalem, exhorting to repentance and reformation, that the dreadful visitation with which they were threatened might be averted, 3, 4. He then sounds the alarm of war, 5, 6. Nebuchadnezzar, like a fierce lion, is, from the certainty of the prophecy, represented to be on his march; and the disastrous event which has been already declared, 7-9. And as the lying prophets had flattered the people with the hopes of peace and safety, they are now introduced (when their predictions are falsified by the event) excusing themselves; and, with matchless effrontery, laying the blame upon God,

('And they said,' &c., so the text is corrected by Kennicott,) 10. The prophet immediately resumes his subject; and, in the person of God, denounces again those judgments which were shortly to be inflicted by Nebuchadnezzar, 11-18. The approaching desolation of Jerusalem lamented in language amazingly energetic and exquisitely tender, 19-21. The incorrigible wickedness of the people the sole cause of these calamities, 22. In the remaining verses the prophet describes the sad catastrophe of Jerusalem by such a beautiful assemblage of the most striking and afflictive circumstances as form a picture of a land "swept with the besom of destruction." The earth seems ready to return to its original chaos; every ray of light is extinguished, and succeeded by a frightful gloom; the mountains tremble, and the hills shake, under the dreadful apprehension of the wrath of Jehovah; all is one awful solitude, where not a vestige of the human race is to be seen. Even the fowls of heaven, finding no longer whereon to subsist, are compelled to migrate; the most fruitful places are become a dark and dreary desert, and every city is a ruinous heap. To complete the whole, the dolorous shrieks of Jerusalem, as of a woman in peculiar agony, break through the frightful gloom; and the appalled prophet pauses, leaving the reader to reflect on the dreadful effects of apostasy and idolatry, 23-31.

IF thou wilt return, O Israel, saith the LORD, *return unto me: and if thou wilt put away thine abominations out of my sight, then shalt thou not remove.

2 ^b And thou shalt swear, The LORD liveth, ^c in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness; ^d and the nations shall bless themselves in him, and in him shall they ^e glory.

3 For thus saith the LORD to the men of Judah and Jerusalem, ^f Break up your fallow-ground, and ^g sow not among thorns.

4 ^h Circumcise yourselves to the LORD, and take away the foreskins of your heart, ye men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem: lest my fury come forth like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

5 Declare ye in Judah, and publish in Jerusalem; and say, Blow ye the trumpet in the land: cry, gather together, and say, ⁱ Assemble yourselves, and let us go into the defended cities.

6 Set up the standard toward Zion: ^j retire, stay not: for I will bring evil from the ^k north, and a great ^l destruction.

7 ^m The lion is come up from his thicket, and ⁿ the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way; he is gone forth from his place ^o to make thy land desolate; and thy cities shall be laid waste, without an inhabitant.

Verse 1. Shalt thou not remove.] This was spoken before the Babylonish captivity; and here is a promise that if they will return from their idolatry, they shall not be led into captivity.

Verse 2. Thou shalt swear, The Lord liveth.] Thou shalt not bind thyself by any false god: thou shalt acknowledge ME as the Supreme.

The nations shall bless themselves in him.] They shall be so fully convinced of the power and goodness of Jehovah in seeing the change wrought on thee, and the mercies heaped upon thee, that their usual mode of benediction shall be, May the God of Israel bless thee.

Verse 3. Break up your fallow ground.] Ye have been long uncultivated in righteousness; let true repentance break up your fruitless and hardened hearts; and when the seed of the word of life is sown in them, take heed that worldly cares and concerns do not arise, and, like thorns, choke the good seed.

Verse 4. Circumcise yourselves.] Put away every thing that has a tendency to grieve the Spirit of God, or to render your present holy resolutions unfruitful.

Verse 5. Blow ye the trumpet.] Give full information to all parts of the land, that the people may assemble together and defend themselves against their invaders.

Verse 6. I will bring evil from the north.] From the land of Chaldeans.

8 For this ^p gird you with sackcloth, lament and howl: for the fierce anger of the LORD is not turned back from us.

9 And it shall come to pass at that day, saith the LORD, that the heart of the king shall perish, and the heart of the princes; and the priests shall be astonished, and the prophets shall wonder.

10 Then said I, Ah, Lord GOD! ^q surely thou hast greatly deceived this people and Jerusalem, ^r saying, Ye shall have peace; whereas the sword reacheth unto the soul.

11 At that time shall it be said to this people and to Jerusalem, ^s A dry wind of the high places in the wilderness toward the daughter of my people, not to fan nor to cleanse, 12 ^t Even ^u a full wind from those places shall come unto me: now also ^v will I ^w give sentence against them.

13 Behold, he shall come up as clouds, and ^x his chariots shall be as a whirlwind: ^y his horses are swifter than eagles. Woe unto us! for we are spoiled.

Verse 7. The lion is come up.] Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon.

The destroyer of the Gentiles.] Of the nations: of all the people who resisted his authority.

Verse 9. The heart of the king shall perish.] Shall lose all courage.

Verse 10. Ah, Lord God! surely thou hast greatly deceived this people.] The prophet could not reconcile this devastation of the country with the promises of God; and he appears to ask the question, Hast thou not then deceived this people in saying there shall be peace, i. e., prosperity?

Whereas the sword reacheth unto the soul.] That is, the life; the people being generally destroyed.

Verses 11-13. A dry wind—a full wind—as clouds—as a whirlwind.] All these expressions appear to refer to the pestilential winds, suffocating vapours, and clouds and pillars of sand collected by whirlwinds, which are so common and destructive in the East (see on Isa. xxi. 1); and these images are employed here to show the overwhelming effect of the invasion of the land by the Chaldeans.

Verse 13. Woe unto us!] The people, deeply affected with these threatened judgments, interrupt the prophet with the lamentation—Woe unto us, for we are spoiled!

Verse 14. O Jerusalem, wash thine heart.] Why do ye not put away your wickedness, that ye may be saved from these tremendous judgments?

16 Make ye mention to the nations; behold, publish against Jerusalem, that watchers come * from a far country, and give out their voice against the cities of Judah.

17 ^b As keepers of a field, are they against her round about; because she hath been rebellious against me, saith the LORD.

18 ^c Thy way and thy doings have procured these things unto thee; this is thy wickedness, because it is bitter, because it reacheth unto thine heart.

19 My ^d bowels, my bowels! I am pained at ^e my very heart; my heart maketh a noise in me; I cannot hold my peace, because thou hast heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war.

20 ^f Destruction upon destruction is cried; for the whole land is spoiled: suddenly are ^g my tents spoiled, and my curtains in a moment.

21 How long shall I see the standard, and hear the sound of the trumpet?

22 For my people ^h is foolish, they have not known me: they are sottish children, and they have none understanding; ⁱ they are wise to do evil, but to do good they have no knowledge.

23 ^j I beheld the earth, and, lo, it was ^k without form and void; and the heavens, and they had no light.

24 ^l I beheld the mountains, and, lo, they trembled, and all the hills moved lightly.

27 For thus hath the LORD said, The whole land shall be desolate; ⁿ yet will I not make a full end.

28 For this ^o shall the earth mourn, and ^p the heavens above be black: because I have spoken it, I have purposed it, and ^q will not repent, neither will I turn back from it.

29 The whole city shall flee for the noise of the horsemen and bowmen; they shall go into thickets, and climb up upon the rocks: every city shall be forsaken, and not a man dwell therein.

30 And when thou art spoiled, what wilt thou do? Though thou clothest thyself with crimson, though thou deckest thee with ornaments of gold, ^r though thou rentest thy ^s face with painting, in vain shalt thou make thyself fair; ^t thy lovers will despise thee, they will seek thy life.

31 For I have heard a voice as of a woman in travail, and the anguish as of her that bringeth forth her first child, the voice of the daughter of Zion, that bewaileth herself, that ^u spreadeth her hands, saying, Woe is me now! for my soul is wearied because of murderers.

Verse 23. I beheld the earth (the land), and lo, it was without form and void] The very words used in Genesis to denote the formless state of the chaotic mass before God had brought it into order.

Verse 24. The mountains—hills] Princes, rulers, &c., were astonished and fled.

Verse 25. The birds of the heavens were fled.] The land was so desolated that even the fowls of heaven could not find meat, and therefore fled away to another region. How powerfully energetic is this description! See Zeph. i. 8.

Verse 30. Though thou rentest thy face with painting] Reference is here particularly made to the practice of harlots to allure men.

Verse 31. Bringeth forth her first child] In such a case the fear, danger, and pain were naturally the greatest.

Spreadeth her hands] The gesture indicated by nature to signify distress, and implore help.

CHAPTER V.

The prophet, having described the judgments impending over his countrymen, enlarges on the corruptions which prevailed among them. Their profession of religion was all false and hypocritical, 1, 2. Though corrected, they were not amended, but persisted in their guilt, 3. This was not the case with the low and ignorant only, 4; but more egregiously so with those of the higher order, from whose knowledge and opportunities better things might have been expected, 5. God therefore threatens them with the most cruel enemies, 6; and appeals to themselves if they should be permitted to practise such sins unpunished, 7-9. He then commands their enemies to raze the walls of Jerusalem, 10; that devoted city, whose inhabitants added to all their other sins the highest contempt of God's word and prophets, 11-13. Wherefore his word, in the mouth of his prophet, shall be as fire to consume them, 14; the Chaldean forces shall cruelly afflict them, 15-17; and further judgments await them as the consequence of their apostasy and idolatry, 18, 19. The chapter closes with a most melancholy picture of the moral condition of the Jewish people at that period which immediately preceded the Babylonish captivity, 20-31.

RUN ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof, * if ye can find a man, ^b if there be any that executeth judgment, that seeketh the truth; ^c and I will pardon it.

2 And ^d though they say, *The LORD liveth; surely they ^e swear falsely.

3 O LORD, are not ^f thine eyes upon the truth? thou hast ^g stricken them, but they have not grieved; thou hast consumed them, but ^h they have refused to receive correction: they have made their faces harder than a rock; they have refused to return.

4 Therefore I said, Surely these are poor; they are foolish: for ⁱ they know not the way of the LORD, nor the judgment of their God.

5 I will get me unto the great men, and will speak unto them; for ^k they have known the way of the LORD, and the judgment of their God: but these have altogether ^l broken the yoke, and burst the bonds.

6 Wherefore ^m a lion out of the forest shall slay them, ⁿ and a wolf of the ^o evenings shall spoil them, ^p a leopard shall watch over their cities: every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces: because their transgressions are many, and their backslidings ^q are increased.

7 How shall I pardon thee for this? thy children have forsaken me, and ^r sworn by them ^s that are no gods: *when I had fed them to the full, they then committed adultery, and assembled themselves by troops in the harlots' houses.

8 *They were as fed horses in the morning: every one ^t neighed after his neighbour's wife.

9 * Shall I not visit for these things? saith the LORD: *and shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

Verse 1. Broad places] Market-places, and those where there was most public resort.

I will pardon it.] I will spare the city for the sake of one righteous person. Gen. xviii. 26.

Verse 2. The LORD liveth] Though they profess to bind themselves by Jehovah, as if they acknowledged him their God and only Lord, yet they swore falsely; for not believing in him, they took a false oath; one by which they did not believe themselves bound, not acknowledging him as their Lord. See on chap. iv. 2.

Verse 4. These are poor] They are ignorant; they have no education; they know no better.

Verse 5. I will get me unto the great men] Those whose circumstances and rank in life gave them opportunities of information which the others could not have, for the reasons already given.

These have altogether broken the yoke] These have cast aside all restraint, have acted above law, and have trampled all moral obligations under their feet; and into their vortex the lower classes of the people have been swept away.

Verse 6. Wherefore a lion] Nebuchadnezzar, according to the general opinion; who is called here a lion for his courage and violence, a bear for his rapaciousness, and a leopard for his activity.

Verse 7. In the harlots' houses.] In places consecrated to idleness. In the language of the prophets, adultery generally signifies idolatry.

Verse 8. After his neighbour's wife.] This may have been literally true, as the abominations of idolatry, in which they make not a full end: take away her battlements; for they are not the LORD's.

11 For ^a the house of Israel and the house of Judah have dealt very treacherously against me, saith the LORD.

12 ^b They have belied the LORD, and said, ^c It is not he; neither shall evil come upon us; ^d neither shall we see sword nor famine:

13 And the prophets shall become wind, and the word is not in them: thus shall it be done unto them.

14 Wherefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, Because ye speak this word, ^e behold, I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them.

15 Lo, I will bring a ^f nation upon you ^g from far, O house of Israel, saith the LORD: it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say.

16 Their quiver is as an open sepulchre, they are all mighty men.

17 And they shall eat up thine ^h harvest, and thy bread, ⁱ which thy sons and thy daughters should eat: they shall eat up thy flocks and ^j thine herds: they shall eat up thy vines and thy fig trees: they shall impoverish thy fenced cities, wherein thou trustedst, with the sword.

18 Nevertheless in those days, saith the LORD, I will not make a full end with you.

19 And it shall come to pass, when ye shall say, ^k Wherefore doeth the LORD our God all these things unto us? then shalt thou answer them, Like as ye have ^l forsaken me, and served strange gods in your land, so ^m shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours.

were so deeply practised, would necessarily produce such a state of things as that here mentioned.

Verse 10. Go ye up upon her walls] This is the permission and authority given to the Chaldeans to pillage Jerusalem.

Take away her battlements] Some translate netishoth, branches; others, vines. Destroy the branches, cut down the stem; but do not damage the root. Leave so many of the people that the state may be regenerated.

Verse 12. They have belied the LORD] They have denied or disavowed the Lord.

It is not he] Lo hu, he is not; there is no such being; therefore this evil shall not come upon us. They were atheists at heart.

Verse 13. And the prophets shall become wind] What are the prophets? Empty persons. Their words are wind; we hear the sound of their threatenings, but of the matter of the threatenings we shall hear no more.

And the word is not in them] There is no inspirer; but may their own predictions fall on their own heads!

Verse 14. Because ye speak this word] They have said they are but air; but I will make them fire, and a fire too that shall devour them.

Verse 15. I will bring a nation] The Scythians says Dahler; the Babylonians, whose antiquity was great, that empire being founded by Nimrod.

Whose language thou knowest not] The Chaldean, which, though a dialect of the Hebrew, is so very different in its words and construction, that in hearing it spoken they could not possibly collect the meaning of what was said.

21 Hear now this, O foolish people, and without understanding; which have eyes, and see not; which have ears, and hear not:

22 Fear ye not me? saith the LORD: will ye not tremble at my presence, which have placed the sand for the bound of the sea by a perpetual decree, that it cannot pass it: and though the waves thereof toss themselves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not pass over it?

23 But this people hath a revolting and a rebellious heart; they are revolted and gone.

24 Neither say they in their heart, Let us now fear the LORD our God, that giveth rain, both the former and the latter, in his season: he reserveth unto us the appointed weeks of the harvest.

25 Your iniquities have turned away these things, and your sins have withholden good things from you.

26 For among my people are found wicked men:

Hab. i. 15.

Verse 16. Their quiver is as an open sepulchre] They are such exact archers as never to miss their mark; every arrow is sure to slay one man.

Verse 18. I will not make a full end] There are more evils in store for you. You shall not only be spoiled, and all your property destroyed, but ye shall be carried into captivity.

Verse 22. Which have placed the sand for the bound of the sea] What can I not do, who confine the sea, that enormous mass of waters, and prevent it from overflowing the earth; not by immense mountains and rocks, but by the sand, no particle of which is in cohesion with another?

Verse 23. They are revolted and gone] They have abandoned me, and are gone farther and farther into transgression.

Verse 24. The appointed weeks of the harvest] The appointed weeks of the harvest were those which fell between the passover and pentecost. In the southern parts the harvest was earlier than in the northern.

Verse 25. Your iniquities have turned away these things] When these appointed weeks of harvest do not come, should we not examine and see whether this be not in God's judgments?

Verse 26. They lay wait, as he that setteth snares] A they lay wait, as he that setteth snares; they set a trap, they catch men.

27 As a cage is full of birds, so are their houses full of deceit: therefore they are become great, and waxen rich:

28 They are waxen fat, they shine: yea, they overpass the deeds of the wicked: they judge not the cause, the cause of the fatherless, yet they prosper; and the right of the needy do they not judge.

29 Shall I not visit for these things? saith the LORD: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

30 A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land;

31 The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so: and what will ye do in the end thereof?

metaphor taken from fowlers, who, having fixed their nets, lie down and keep out of sight, that when birds come, they may be ready to draw and entangle them.

Verse 27. As a cage is full of birds] There is no doubt that the reference here is to a decoy or trap-cage; in these the fowlers put several tame birds, which, when the wild ones see, they come and light on the cage, and fall into the snare.

Verse 28. They judge not the cause, yet they prosper] Perhaps we might be justified in translating, "And shall they prosper?"

Verse 31. The prophets prophesy falsely] The false prophets predict favourable things, that they may please both the princes and the people.

The priests bear rule by their means] The false prophets affording them all that their influence and power can procure, to enable them to keep their places, and feed on the riches of the Lord's house.

And my people love to have it so] So infatuated were the people that they willingly abandoned themselves to those blind guides, and would not hearken to the voice of any reformer. When profligate people stand up on behalf of profligate priests, corruption must then be at its height.

CHAPTER VI.

Jeremiah, in the spirit of prophecy, seeing the Chaldeans on their march, bids his people set up the usual signals of distress, and spread the general alarm to betake themselves to flight, 1. Then, by a beautiful allusion to the custom of shepherds moving their flocks to the richest pastures, Jerusalem is singled out as a place devoted to be eaten up or trodden down by the armies of the Chaldeans, who are called up against her, and whose ardour and impatience are so great that the soldiers, when they arrive in the evening, regret they have no more day, and desire to begin the attack without waiting for the light of the morning, 2-5. God is then represented as animating and directing the besiegers against this guilty city, which sinned as incessantly as a fountain flows, 6, 7, though warned of the fatal consequence, 8. He intimates also, by the gleaning of the grapes, that one invasion should carry away the remains of another, till their disobedience, hypocrisy, and other sins should end in their total overthrow, 9-15. And to show that God is clear when he judgeth, he mentions his having in vain admonished and warned them, and calls upon the whole world to witness the equity of his proceedings, 16-18, in punishing this perverse and hypocritical people, 19, 20, by the ministry of the cruel Chaldeans, 21-23. Upon this a chorus of Jews is introduced expressing their fears and alarms, 24, 25; to which the prophet echoes a response full of sympathy and tenderness, 26. The concluding verses, by metaphors taken from the process of refining gold and silver, represent all the methods hitherto used to amend them as wholly ineffectual, 27-30.

O YE children of Benjamin, gather yourselves to flee out of the midst of Jerusalem, and blow the trumpet in Tekoa, and set up a sign of fire in ^a Beth-haccerem: ^b for evil appeareth out of the north, and great destruction.

2 I have likened the daughter of Zion to a ^c comely and delicate woman.

3 The shepherds with their flocks shall come unto her; ^d they shall pitch their tents against her round about; they shall feed every one in his place.

4 ^e Prepare ye war against her; arise, and let us go up ^f at noon. Woe unto us! for the day goeth away, for the shadows of the evening are stretched out.

5 Arise, and let us go by night, and let us destroy her palaces.

6 For thus hath the LORD of hosts said, Hew ye down trees, and ^g cast a mount against Jerusalem: this is the city to be visited; she is wholly oppression in the midst of her.

7 ^h As a fountain casteth out her waters, so she casteth out her wickedness: ⁱ violence and spoil is heard in her; before me continually is grief and wounds.

8 Be thou instructed, O Jerusalem, lest ^j my soul ^k depart from thee; lest I make thee desolate, ^l a land not inhabited.

9 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, They shall thoroughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine: turn back thine hand as a grape-gatherer into the baskets.

10 To whom shall I speak, and give warning, that they may hear? behold, their ^m ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot hearken: behold, ⁿ the word of the LORD is unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it.

11 Therefore I am full of the fury of the LORD; ^o I am weary with holding in: I will pour it out ^p upon the children abroad, and upon the assembly of young men together: for even the husband with the wife shall be taken, the aged with him that is full of days.

Verse 1. O ye children of Benjamin, gather yourselves to flee] They are called the children of Benjamin, because Jerusalem was in the tribe of Benjamin.

Tekoa] Was a city about twelve miles to the south of Jerusalem.

Beth-haccerem] Was the name of a small village situated on an eminence between Jerusalem and Tekoa.

Verse 3. The shepherds with their flocks] The chiefs and their battalions. The invading army is about to spoil and waste all the fertile fields round about the city, while engaged in the siege.

Verse 4. Prepare ye war against her] The words of the invaders exciting each other to the assault, and impatient lest any time should be lost.

Verse 6. Hew ye down trees] To form machines. And cast a mount] That may overlook the city, on which to place our engines.

Verse 7. As a fountain casteth out her waters] The inhabitants are incessant in their acts of iniquity; they do nothing but sin.

Verse 8. Be thou instructed] Still there is respite: if they would even now return unto the Lord with all their heart, the advancing Chaldeans would be arrested on their march, and turned back.

Verse 9. They shall thoroughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine: turn back thine hand] The Chaldeans are here

12 And ^s their houses shall be turned unto others, with their fields and wives together: for I will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD.

13 For from the least of them even unto the greatest of them every one ^t is given to ^u covetousness; and from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely.

14 They have ^v healed also the ^w hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, ^x saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace.

15 Were they ^y ashamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush: therefore they shall fall among them that fall: at the time that I visit them they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.

16 Thus saith the LORD, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the ^z old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find ^{aa} rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein.

17 Also I set ^{ab} watchmen over you, saying, Harken to the sound of the trumpet. But they said, We will not hearken.

18 Therefore hear, ye nations, and know, O congregation, what is among them.

19 ^{ac} Hear, O earth: behold, I will bring evil upon this people, even ^{ad} the fruit of their thoughts, because they have not hearkened unto my words, nor to my law, but rejected it.

20 ^{ae} To what purpose cometh there to me incense ^{af} from Sheba, and the sweet cane from a far country? ^{ag} your burnt-offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifices sweet unto me.

21 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will lay stumbling blocks before this people, and the fathers and the sons together shall fall upon them; the neighbour and his friends shall perish.

22 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, a people cometh from the ^{ah} north country, and a great nation shall be raised from the sides of the earth.

exhorted to turn back and glean up the remnant of the inhabitants that were left after the capture of Jerusalem; for even that remnant did not profit by the divine judgments that fell on the inhabitants at large.

Verse 10. The word of the Lord is unto them a reproach] It is an object of derision; they despise it.

Verse 11. I am full of the fury of the Lord] God has given me a dreadful revelation of the judgments he intends to inflict: my soul is burdened with this prophecy.

Verse 14. They have healed also the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly] Of the daughter is not in the text, and is here improperly added: it is, however, in some MSS. Peace, peace] Here the prophets prophesied falsely; and the people continued in sin, being deceived by the priests and the prophets.

Verse 16. Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see] Let us observe the metaphor. A traveller is going to a particular city; he comes to a place where the road divides into several paths, he is afraid of going astray; he stops short,—endeavours to find out the right path; he cannot fix his choice. At last he sees another traveller; he inquires of him, gets proper directions—proceeds on his journey—arrives at the desired place—and reposes after his fatigue.

are cruel, and have no mercy; their voice ^a roareth like the sea; and they ride upon horses, set in array as men for war against thee, O daughter of Zion.

24 We have heard the fame thereof: our hands wax feeble: ^b anguish hath taken hold of us, and pain, as of a woman in travail.

25 Go not forth into the field, nor walk by the way; for the sword of the enemy and fear is on every side.

Verse 27. I have set thee for a tower and a fortress] Dr. Blayney translates, I have appointed thee to make an assay among my people. The people are here represented under the notion of alloyed silver. They are full of impurities; and they are put into the hands of the prophet, the assayer, to be purified. The bellows are placed, the fire is lighted up, but all to no purpose: so intensely commixed is the tion: for the spoiler shall suddenly come upon us. 27 I have set thee for a tower and ^a a fortress among my people, that thou mayest know and try their way.

28 ^a They are all grievous revolters, ^b walking with slanders: they are ^c brass and iron; they are all corrupters.

29 The bellows are burned, the lead is consumed of the fire; the founder melteth in vain: for the wicked are not plucked away.

30 ^a Reprobate ^b silver shall men call them, because the LORD hath rejected them.

alloy with the silver, that it cannot be separated. The assayer gives up the process,—will not institute one more expensive or tedious,—pronounces the mass unfit to be coined, and denominates it reprobate silver, ver. 30. Thus the evil habits and dispositions of the Israelites were so ingrained that they would not yield to either the ordinary or extraordinary means of salvation. God pronounces them reprobate silver,—not sterling,—full of alloy;—having neither the image nor the superscription of the Great King either on their hearts or on their conduct. Thus he gave them up as incorrigible, and their adversaries prevailed against them. This should be a warning to other nations, and indeed to the Christian church; for if God did not spare the natural branches, neither will he spare these.

CHAPTER VII.

Here begins a new section of prophecy, ending with the ninth chapter. It opens with exhortation to amendment of life, without which the confidence of the Jews in their temple is declared vain, 1-11. God bids them take warning from the fate of their brethren the Israelites, who had been carried away captive on account of their sins without any regard to that sacred place (Shiloh) where the ark of God once resided, 12-15. The iniquities of Judah are so great in the sight of God that the prophet is commanded not to intercede for the people, 16; the more especially as they persisted in provoking God by their idolatrous practices, 17-20. The Jewish sacrifices, if not accompanied with obedience to the moral law, are of no avail, 21-24. Notwithstanding the numerous messages of mercy from the time of the exodus, the people revolted more and more; and have added to their other sins this horrible evil, the setting up of their abominations in the temple of Jehovah; or, in other words, they have encumbered the Mosaic economy, which shadowed forth the glorious truths of Christianity, with an heterogeneous admixture of the idolatrous, impure, and cruel rites of heathenism; consequently, the whole land shall be utterly desolated, 25-34.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 ^a Stand in the gate of the LORD's house, and proclaim there this word, and say, Hear the word of the LORD, all ye of Judah, that enter in at these gates to worship the LORD.

3 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, ^b Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place.

^a Ch. xxvi. 2.—^b Ch. xviii. 11. xxvi. 18.—^c Mic. iii. 11.

Verse 2. Stand in the gate of the Lord's house] There was a show of public worship kept up. The temple was considered God's residence; the usual ceremonies of religion restored by Josiah were still observed; and the people were led to consider the temple and its services as sacred things, which would be preservatives to them in case of the threatened invasion.

Verse 4. The temple of the Lord] These words express the conviction which the people had, that they should be safe while their temple service continued; for they supposed

4 ^a Trust ye not in lying words, saying, The temple of the LORD, The temple of the LORD, The temple of the LORD, are these.

5 For if ye thoroughly ^a execute judgment between a man and his neighbour;

6 If ye oppress not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place, ^a neither walk after other Gods to your hurt:

^a Ch. xii. 3.—^b Deut. vi. 14, 15. viii. 19. xi. 28. Ch. xiii. 10.

that God would not give it up into profane hands. But sacred places and sacred symbols are nothing in the sight of God when the heart is not right with him.

Verse 5. If ye thoroughly amend your ways] Literally, If in making good ye fully make good your ways. God will no longer admit of half-hearted work. Semblances of piety cannot deceive him; he will not accept partial reformation; there must be a thorough amendment.

Verse 9. Will ye steal, murder] Will you continue to commit such abominations, and pretend to worship me; and 7 * Then will I cause you to dwell in this place, in ^b the land that I gave to your fathers, for ever and ever.

8 Behold, * ye trust in ^d lying words, that cannot profit.

9 * Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and ^e walk after other gods whom ye know not ;

10 * And come and stand before me in this house, ^b which ⁱ is called by my name, and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations ?

11 Is ^j this house, which is called by my name, become a ^k den of robbers in your eyes ? Behold, even I have seen it, saith the LORD.

12 But go ye now unto ^l my place which was in Shiloh, ^m where I set my name at the first, and see ⁿ what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel.

13 And now, because ye have done all these works, saith the LORD, and I spake unto you, ^o rising up early and speaking, but ye heard not ; and I ^p called you, but ye answered not ;

14 Therefore will I do unto this house, which is called by my name, wherein ye trust, and unto the place which I gave to you and to your fathers, as I have done to ^q Shiloh.

15 And I will cast you out of my sight, ^r as I have cast out all your brethren, ^s even the whole seed of Ephraim.

16 Therefore ^t pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me : ^u for I will not hear thee.

17 Seest thou not what they do in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem ?

18 * The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes to the ^v queen of heaven, and to ^w pour out drink-offerings unto other gods, that they may provoke me to anger.

19 * Do they provoke me to anger ? saith the LORD : do they not provoke themselves to the confusion of their own faces ?

thus defile the place that is called by my name ; and so make my house a den of robbers ?

Verse 12. But go ye now unto my place which was in Shiloh.] See what I did to my tabernacle and ark formerly : after a long residence at Shiloh, for the iniquity of the priests and the people, I suffered it to fall into the hands of the Philistines, and to be carried captive into their land, and to be set up in the house of their idols.

Verse 15. The whole seed of Ephraim.] Taken here for all the ten tribes, that of Ephraim being the principal.

Verse 16. Therefore pray not thou for this people.] How terrible must the state of that place be, where God refuses to pour out the spirit of supplication on his ministers and people in its behalf !

Verse 18. The children gather wood] Here is a description of a whole family gathered together, and acting unitedly in idolatrous worship. Family worship is a most amiable and becoming thing when performed according to truth. What a pity that so few families show such zeal for the worship of God as those apostate Israelites did for that of their idols !

20 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ; Behold, mine anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place, upon man, and upon beast, and upon the trees of the field, and upon the fruit of the ground ; and it shall burn, and shall not be quenched.

21 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel ; * Put your burnt-offerings unto your sacrifices, and eat flesh.

22 ^a For I spake not unto your fathers, nor commanded them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, ^b concerning burnt-offerings or sacrifices.

23 But this thing commanded I them, saying, ^c Obey my voice, and ^d I will be your God, and ye shall be my people : and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you.

24 ^e But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but ^f walked in the counsels and in the ^g imagination of their evil heart, and ^h went ⁱ backward, and not forward.

25 Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even ^j sent unto you all my servants the prophets, ^k daily rising up early and sending them :

26 ^l Yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but ^m hardened their neck : ⁿ they did worse than their fathers.

27 Therefore ^o thou shalt speak all these words unto them : but they will not hearken to thee : thou shalt also call unto them ; but they will not answer thee.

28 But thou shalt say unto them, This is a nation that obeyeth not the voice of the Lord their God, ^p nor receiveth ^q correction : ^r truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth.

29 ^s Cut off thine hair, O Jerusalem, and cast it away, and take up a lamentation on high places ; for the Lord hath rejected and forsaken the generation of his wrath.

Verse 23. This thing commanded I them—Obey my voice.] It was not sacrifices and oblations which I required of your fathers in the wilderness, but obedience ; it was to walk in that way of righteousness which I have commanded ; then I should have acknowledged them for my people, and I should have been their God ; and then it would have been well with them.

Verse 28. Nor receiveth correction] They have profited neither by mercies nor by judgment ; blessings and corrections have been equally lost upon them.

Verse 29. Cut off thine hair] Jerusalem is here considered under the notion of a Nazarite, by profession devoted to the service of God : but that profession was empty ; it was not accompanied with any suitable practice. God tells them here to cut off their hair ; to make no vain pretensions to holiness or religion ; to throw off the mask, and attempt no abominations in the house which is called by my name, to pollute it.

31 And they have built the high ^aplaces of Tophet, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to ^bburn their sons and their daughters in the fire; ^cwhich I commanded them not, neither ^dcame it into my heart.

32 Therefore, behold, ^ethe days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be called Tophet, nor the valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of longer to impose upon themselves and others by their hypocritical pretensions. Dr. Blayney thinks the address is to the prophet, who was a Nazarite by virtue of his office, and who was called to cut off his hair as a token of mourning for the desolations which were coming upon his people. That cutting of the hair was a sign of distress and mourning may be seen, Ezra ix. 3, Isai. xlv. 2, Jer. xli. 5, &c. But I think the other the more natural construction.

Tophet was the place in that valley where the continual fires were kept up, in and through which they consecrated their children to Moloch.

Verse 32. The valley of slaughter] The place where the slaughtered thousands of this rebellious people shall be cast, in order to their being burnt, or becoming food for the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, verse 33.

Verse 34. Then will I cause to cease—the voice of mirth] There shall no longer be in Jerusalem any cause of joy, they shall neither marry nor be given in marriage, for the land shall be totally desolated. Such horrible sins required such a horrible punishment. And they must be horrible, when they move God to destroy the work of his own hands.

CHAPTER VIII.

The judgments threatened in the last chapter are here declared to extend to the very dead, whose tombs should be opened, and the carcasses treated with every mark of indignity, 1-3. From this the prophet returns to reprove them for their perseverance in transgression, 4-6; and for their thoughtless stupidity, which even the instinct of the brute creation, by a beautiful contrast, is made to upbraid, 7-9. This leads to further threatenings, expressed in a variety of striking terms, 10-13. Upon which a chorus of Jews is introduced, expressing their terror on the news of the invasion, 14, 15; which is greatly heightened in the next verse by the prophet's hearing the snorting of Nebuchadnezzar's horses even from Dan, and then seeing the devastation made by his army, 16, whose cruelties God himself declares no intreaties will soften, 17. On this declaration the prophet laments most bitterly the fate of the daughter of his people, changing the scene unawares to the place of her captivity, where she is introduced answering in mournful responses to the prophet's dirge, 18-22. The variety of images and figures used to diversify the same subject is equally pleasing and astonishing. The dress is generally new, always elegant.

AT that time, saith the LORD, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, and the bones of the priests, and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves:

2 And they shall spread them before the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven, whom they have loved, and whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, and whom they have sought, and ^awhom they have worshipped: they shall not be gathered, ^bnor be buried; they shall be for ^cdung upon the face of the earth.

Verse 1. They shall bring out the bones] This custom of raising the bodies of the dead, and scattering their bones about, seems to have been general. It was the highest expression of hatred and contempt.

Verse 4. Shall they fall, and not arise? shall he turn away, and not return?] That is, It is as possible for sinners to return from their sin to God, as for his grace is ever at hand to assist, as it is for God, who is pouring out his judgments, to return to them on their return to him. But these held fast deceit, and refused to return; they would not be undeceived.

4 Moreover thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD; Shall they fall, and not arise? shall he turn away, and not return?

5 Why then is this people of Jerusalem ^aslidden back by a perpetual blacksliding? ^b'they hold fast deceit, ^cthey refuse to return.

6 ^dI hearkened and heard, but they spake not aright: no man repented him of his wickedness, saying, What have I done? every one turned to his course, as the horse rusheth into the battle.

9 * The wise men are ashamed, they are dismayed and taken: lo, they have rejected the word of the LORD; and * what wisdom is in them?

10 Therefore ^b will I give their wives unto others, and their fields to them that shall inherit them: for every one from the least even unto the greatest is given to ^c covetousness, from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely.

11 For they have ^d healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, ^e Peace, peace; when there is no peace.

12 Were they ^f ashamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush: therefore shall they fall among them that fall: in the time of their visitation they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.

13 ^g I will surely consume them, saith the LORD: there shall be no grapes ^h on the vine, nor figs on the ⁱ fig tree, and the leaf shall fade; and the things that I have given them shall pass away from them.

14 Why do we sit still? ^j assemble yourselves, and let us enter into the defenced cities, and let us strongly marks the unthinking, careless desperation of their conduct.

Verse 7. The stork in the heaven] The birds of passage know the times of their going and return, and punctually observe them; they obey the dictates of nature, but my people do not obey my law.

Verse 8. The pen of the scribes is in vain.] The deceitful pen of the scribes. They have written falsely, though they had the truth before them. It is too bold an assertion to say that "the Jews have never falsified the sacred oracles;" they have done it again and again.

Verse 16. The snorting of his horses was heard from Dan] Dan lay in the way from Babylon to Jerusalem; and it was by this city, after the battle of Carchemish, that Nebuchadnezzar, in pursuing the Egyptians, entered Palestine. •

The whole land trembled at the sound of the neighing of his strong ones] Of his war horses. This is a fine image; so terrible was the united neighing of the cavalry of the Babylonians that the reverberation of the air caused the ground to tremble.

Verse 17. I will send serpents] These were symbols of the enemies that were coming against them; a foe that would rather slay them and destroy the land than get booty and ransom.

Verse 20. The harvest is past] The siege of Jerusalem lasted two years; for Nebuchadnezzar came against it in the ninth year of Zedekiah, and the city was taken in the eleventh; see 2 Kings xxv. 1-8.

Verse 22. Is there no balm in Gilead?] Yes, the most excellent in the world. "Is there no physician there?" Yes, persons well skilled to apply it. "Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?" Because ye have not applied to the physician, nor used the balm. Ye die because ye will not use remedy.

CHAPTER IX.

The prophet bitterly laments the terrible judgments about to be inflicted upon his countrymen, and points out some of the evils which have provoked the Divine Majesty, 1-9. Judea shall be utterly desolated, and the inhabitants transplanted into heathen countries, 10-17. In allusion to an ancient custom, a band of mourning women is called to lament over the ruins of Jerusalem, 17, 18; and even the funeral dirge is given in terms full of beauty, elegance, and pathos, 19-22. God is the fountain of all good; man, merely an instrument by which a portion of this good is distributed in the earth; therefore none should glory in his wisdom, might, or riches, 23, 24. The judgments of God shall fall, not upon the land of Judea only, but also upon many heathen nations, 25, 26.

OH^a that^b my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!

2 Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men; that I might leave my people, and go from them! for^c they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men.

3 And^d they bend their tongues like their bow for lies: but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth; for they proceed from evil to evil, and they^e know not me, saith the LORD.

4 Take ye heed every one of his^f neighbour, and trust ye not in any brother: for every brother will utterly supplant, and every neighbour will^g walk with slanders.

5 And they will^h deceive every one his neighbour, and will not speak the truth: they have taught their tongue to speak lies, and weary themselves to commit iniquity.

6 Thine habitation is in the midst of deceit; through deceit they refuse to know me, saith the LORD.

7 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will melt them, and try them; ⁱfor how shall I do for the daughter of my people?

8 Their tongue is as an arrow shot out; it speaketh^j deceit: one speaketh^k peaceably to his neighbour with his mouth, but^l in heart he layeth^m his wait.

9 Shall I not visit them for these things? saith the LORD: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

10 For the mountains will I take up a weeping and wailing, andⁿ for the^o habitations of the wilderness a lamentation, because they are^p burned up, so that none can pass through them; neither can men hear the voice of the cattle; ^qboth^r the fowl of the heavens and the beast are fled; they are gone.

Verse 1. Oh that my head were waters] "Who will give to my head waters?" My mourning for the sins and desolations of my people has already exhausted the source of tears: I wish to have a fountain opened there, that I may weep day and night for the slain of my people. This has been the sorrowful language of many a pastor who has preached long to a hardened, rebellious people, to little or no effect.

Verse 2. Oh that I had in the wilderness] I wish to hide myself any where, in the most uncomfortable circumstances, that I may not be obliged any longer to witness the abominations of these people who are shortly to be visited with the most grievous punishments.

Verse 3. They bend their tongues like their bow for lies] And their lies are such that they as fully take away life as the keenest arrow shot from the best strong bow.

They are not valiant for the truth] They are bold in sin, and courageous to support their lies; but the truth they neither patronize nor support.

Verse 5. And weary themselves to commit iniquity] Oh, what a drudgery is sin! and how much labour must a man take in order to get to hell! The tenth part of it, in working together with God, would bring him to the gate of glory.

Verse 7. Behold, I will melt them] I will put them in the furnace of affliction, and see if this will be a means of purging away their dross. See on chap. vi. 27.

Verse 10. Both the fowl of the heavens and the beast are 11 And I will make Jerusalem^a heaps, and^b a den of dragons; and I will make the cities of Judah^c desolate, without an inhabitant.

12 Who is the wise man that may understand this? and who is he to whom the mouth of the LORD hath spoken, that he may declare it, for what the land perisheth and is burned up like a wilderness, that none passeth through?

13 And the LORD saith, Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein;

14 But have^d walked after the^e imagination of their own heart, and after Baalim, ^fwhich their fathers taught them:

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will^g feed them, even this people, ^hwith wormwood, and give them water of gall to drink.

16 I willⁱ scatter them also among the heathen, whom neither they nor their fathers have known: and I will send a sword after them, till I have consumed them.

17 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Consider ye, and call for^j the mourning women, that they may come; and send for cunning women, that they may come:

18 And let them make haste, and take up a wailing for us, that^k our eyes may run down with tears, and our eyelids gush out with waters.

19 For a voice of wailing is heard out of Zion, How are we spoiled! we are greatly confounded, because we have forsaken the land, because^l our dwellings have cast us out.

20 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O ye women, and let your ear receive the word of his mouth, and teach your daughters wailing, and every one her neighbour lamentation.

21 For death is come up into our windows, and is entered into our palaces, to cut off^m the children from without, and the young men from the streets.

Verse 11. A den of dragons] Supposed to mean here the jackal, an animal that seems to have been bred originally between the wolf and the dog.

Verse 12. Who is the wise man] To whom has God revealed these things? He is the truly wise man.

Verse 15. I will feed them—with wormwood] They shall have the deepest sorrow and heaviest affliction. They shall have poison instead of meat and drink.

Verse 17. Call for the mourning women] Those whose office it was to make lamentations at funerals, and to bewail the dead, for which they received pay. This custom continues to the present in Asiatic countries.

Verse 20. Teach your daughters] This is not a common dirge that shall last only till the body is consigned to the earth; it must last longer; teach it to your children, that it may be continued through every generation, till God turn again your captivity.

Verse 21. For death is come up into our windows] Here DEATH is personified, and represented as scaling their wall; and after having slain the playful children without, and the vigorous youth employed in the labours of the field, he is now come into the private houses, to destroy the aged and infirm; and into the palaces, to destroy the king and the princes.

Verse 22. And as the handful after the harvestman] Death is represented as having cut down the inhabitants of Verse 23. Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom] Riches cannot deliver in the day of death ; strength cannot avail against him ; and as a shield against him, our wisdom is foolishness.

Verse 24. But let him that glorieth] To glory in a thing is to depend on it as the means or cause of procuring happiness. But there can be no happiness but in being experimentally acquainted with that God who exercises lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness in the earth.

Verse 25. I will punish all them which are circumcised with the uncircumcised] Do not imagine that you, because of your crimes, are the only objects of my displeasure ; the circumcised and the uncircumcised, the Jew and the Gentile, shall equally feel the stroke of my justice, their transgressions being alike, after their advantages and disadvantages are duly compared.

Verse 26. All that are in the utmost corners] These words have been variously understood. The Vulgate translates : " All who have their hair cut short." The Targum, Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic have understood it nearly in the same way ; and so our margin. Others think that the insular or peninsular situation of the people is referred to.

CHAPTER X.

The Jews, about to be carried into captivity, are here warned against the superstition and idolatry of that country to which they were going. Chaldea was greatly addicted to astrology, and therefore the prophet begins with warning them against it, 1, 2. He then exposes the absurdity of idolatry in short but elegant satire ; in the midst of which he turns, in a beautiful apostrophe, to the one true God, whose adorable attributes repeatedly strike in view, as he goes along, and lead him to contrast his infinite perfections with those despicable inanities which the blinded nations fear, 3-16. The prophet again denounces the Divine judgments, 17, 18 ; upon which Jerusalem laments her fate, and supplicates the Divine compassion in her favour, 19-25.

HEAR ye the word which the LORD speaketh unto you, O house of Israel :

2 Thus saith the LORD, ^aLearn not the way of the heathen, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven ; for the heathen are at them.

3 For the ^bcustoms of the people are vain : for ^cone cutteth a tree out of the forest, the work of the hands of the workman, with the ax.

Verse 1. Hear ye the word which the Lord speaketh unto you] Dr. Dahler supposes this discourse to have been delivered in the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim.

Verse 2. Learn not the way of the heathen] These words are more particularly addressed to the ten tribes scattered among the heathen by the Assyrians, who carried them away captive ; they may also regard those in the land of Israel, who still had the customs of the former heathen settlers before their eyes.

Be not dismayed at the signs of heaven ; for the heathen are dismayed] The Chaldeans and Egyptians were notoriously addicted to astrology ; and the Israelites here are cautioned against it.

Verse 5. They are upright as a palm tree] As straight and as stiff as the trees out of which they are hewn.

Verse 9. Blue and purple is their clothing] These were the most precious dyes; very rare, and of high price.

Verse 10. But the Lord] The original word should be preserved, however we agree to pronounce it: Yehovah is the true God. He is without beginning, and without end.

He is the living God] His being is undivided: and he gives life to all. He is the very Fountain whence all life is derived.

And an everlasting king] As he has made, so he governs all things. His sway is felt both in the heavens and in the earth.

At his wrath the earth shall tremble] All storms, tempests, tornadoes, and earthquakes are the effects of his power; and when the nations are destroyed, or turned upside down, it is the effect of his displeasure.

Verse 11. Thus shall ye say unto them] This is the message you shall deliver to the Chaldean idolaters.

The gods that have not made the heaven and the earth, even they shall perish] This verse is written in a sort of Hebræo-Syriaco-Chaldeæ; such a dialect as I suppose was spoken at that time in Babylon, or during the captivity.

Verse 12. When he uttereth his voice, there is a multitude of waters] This is a plain allusion to a storm of thunder and lightning, and the abundance of rain which is the consequence.

Verse 14. Every man is brutish] Nibar, is a boor, acts as a brute, who may suppose that a stock of a tree, formed like a man, may be an intellectual being; and therefore shuns the form as though it had life.

Verse 16. The Portion of Jacob is not like them] Every nation had its tutelary god; this was its portion; in reference to this God says, Deut. iv. 19: "He has divided the sun, moon, and stars, to all the nations under the heaven." And the Lord had taken the Israelites to be his portion; for "The Lord's portion is his people," Deut. xxxii. 9, and David says, "The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance," Ps. xvi. 5; cxix. 57.

Verse 17. Gather up thy wares] Pack up your goods, or what necessities of life your enemies will permit you to carry away; for,

Verse 18. I will sling out the inhabitants of the land] I will project you with violence from your country. I will send you all into captivity. This discourse, from ver. 17, is supposed to have been delivered in the eleventh year of Jehoiakim.

Verse 19. This is a grief, and I must bear it] Oppressive as it is, I have deserved it, and worse; but even in this judgment God remembers mercy.

Verse 20. My tabernacle is spoiled] The city is taken, and all our villages ruined and desolated.

Verse 21. The pastors are become brutish] The king and his counsellors, who, by refusing to pay the promised tribute to Nebuchadnezzar, had kindled a new war.

Verse 22. The noise of the bruit is come] That is, the report we had heard of the projected invasion of Judea by Nebuchadnezzar is confirmed.

Verse 23. O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself] I will not pretend to dispute with thee; thou dost every thing wisely and justly; we have sinned, and thou hast a right to punish; and to choose that sort of punishment thou thinkest will best answer the ends of justice.

Verse 24. Correct me, but with judgment] Let not the punishment be to the uttermost of the demerit of the offence; else we shall be brought to nothing—totally and irrecoverably ruined.

Verse 25. Pour out thy fury upon the heathen] This was fulfilled in the Chaldeans. Nebuchadnezzar was punished with madness, his son was slain in his revels, and the city was taken and sacked by Cyrus; and the Babylonish empire was finally destroyed! —

CHAPTER XI.

The prophet proclaims the tenor of God's covenant with the Jews of old, 1-5; and then reproves them for their hereditary disobedience, 6-19. In consequence of this the Almighty is introduced, declaring he will show them no pity, 11-13; forbidding Jeremiah to intercede, 14; rejecting their sacrifices, 15; and in a word, condemning this fair but unfruitful tree to the fire, 16, 17. In what remains of the chapter the prophet predicts evil to his neighbours of Anathoth, who had conspired against him, 18-23. "Let us," said they, "destroy this tree, with the fruit thereof," &c., alluding to what Jeremiah had said in the sixteenth verse.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Hear ye the words of this covenant, and speak unto the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem;

3 And say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel; * Cursed be the man that obeyeth not the words of this covenant,

4 Which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, ^b from the iron furnace, saying, * Obey my voice, and do them, according to all which I command you: so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God:

5 That I may perform the ^c oath which I have sworn unto your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is this day. Then answered I, and said, * So be it, O LORD.

6 Then the LORD said unto me, Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying, Hear ye the words of this covenant, ^d and do them.

7 For I earnestly protested unto your fathers in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, ^e rising early and protesting, saying, Obey my voice.

8 ^h Yet they obeyed not, nor inclined their ear, but ⁱ walked every one in the ^j imagination of their evil heart: therefore I will bring upon them all the words of this covenant, which I commanded them to do; but they did them not.

9 And the LORD said unto me, * A conspiracy is found among the men of Judah, and among the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

10 They are turned back to ^l the iniquities of their forefathers, which refused to hear my words;

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah] This discourse is supposed to have been delivered in the first year of the reign of Zedekiah.

Verse 2. Hear ye the words of this covenant] It is possible that the prophet caused the words of the covenant made with their fathers in the desert (Exod. xxiv. 4-8) to be read to them on this occasion; or, at least, the blessings and the cursings which Moses caused to be pronounced to the people as soon as they had set foot in Canaan, Deut. xxvii., xxviii.

Verse 5. So be it, O Lord.] Let thy promises be fulfilled; and let the incorrigible beware of thy threatenings!

Verse 6. Proclaim all these words] Let the same covenant, with the blessings and cursings, be read in every city of Judah, and in all the streets of Jerusalem, that all the people may know their duty, their privileges, and their danger.

Verse 9. A conspiracy is found] They were all sworn brothers, determined to cast off the divine yoke, and no longer to have God to reign over them.

Verse 10. They are turned back to the iniquities of their forefathers] It required a captivity to cure them of this propensity; and God sent one: after that, there was no idolatry among the Jews.

and they went after other gods to serve them: the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken my covenant which I made with their fathers.

11 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon them, which they shall not be able ^a to escape; and ^b though they shall cry unto me, I will not hearken unto them.

12 Then shall the cities of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem go, and ^c cry unto the gods unto whom they offer incense: but they shall not save them at all in the time of their ^d trouble.

13 For according to the number of thy ^e cities were thy gods, O Judah; and according to the number of the streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars to that ^f shameful thing, even altars to burn incense unto Baal.

14 Therefore ^g pray not thou for this people, neither lift up a cry or prayer for them: for I will not hear them in the time that they cry unto me for their ^h trouble.

15 ⁱ What ^j hath my beloved to do in mine house, seeing she hath ^k wrought lewdness with many, and ^l the holy flesh is passed from thee? ^m when thou doest evil, then thou ⁿ rejoicest.

16 The LORD called thy name, * A green olive tree, fair, and of goodly fruit: with the noise of a great tumult he hath kindled fire upon it, and the branches of it are broken.

17 For the LORD of hosts, ^o that planted thee, hath pronounced evil against thee, for the evil of the house of Israel and of the house of Judah, which they have done against themselves to provoke me to anger in offering incense unto Baal.

Verse 14. Therefore pray not thou for this people] I am determined to give them up into the hands of their enemies; I will neither hear thy intercession, nor regard their prayers. Their measure is full.

Verse 15. What hath my beloved to do in mine house] This has been supposed to refer to Abraham, Moses, or such eminent servants of God, whose intercession was very powerful. Were even they to appear as intercessors, their prayer should not be regarded. Others think that this is an endearing expression, which properly belonged to the Israelites. This is probably the sense of this very obscure passage.

Verse 16. The Lord called thy name, A green olive tree] That is, he made thee like a green olive—fair, flourishing, and fruitful; but thou art degenerated, and God hath given the Chaldeans permission to burn thee up.

Verse 18. The Lord hath given me knowledge of it] The men of Anathoth had conspired against his life, because he reproved them for their sins, and denounced the judgments of God against them. Of this God had given him a secret warning, that he might be on his guard.

Verse 19. I was like a lamb or an ox] I think that kechebes allude signifies, like the familiar lamb—the lamb

Verse 23. The year of their visitation. This punishment shall come in that year in which I shall visit their iniquities upon them.

CHAPTER XII.

This chapter is connected with the foregoing. The prophet expostulates with God concerning the ways of Providence in permitting the wicked to prosper, 1-4. It is intimated to him that he must endure still greater trials, 5, from his false and deceitful brethren, 6; but that still heavier judgments awaited the nation for their crimes, 7-13. That God, however, would at length have compassion on them; restore them to their land; and turn his judgments against those that oppressed them, if not prevented by their becoming converts to the true religion, 14-17.

RIGHTEOUS art thou, O LORD, when I plead with thee: yet let me talk with thee of thy judgments: Wherefore doth the way of the wicked prosper? wherefore are all they happy that deal very treacherously?

2 Thou hast planted them, yea, they have taken root: they grow, yea, they bring forth fruit: thou art near in their mouth, and far from their reins.

3 But thou, O LORD, knowest me: thou hast seen me, and tried mine heart toward thee: pull

^a Ps. li. 4.—^b Or, let me reason the case with thee.—^c Job xii. 8. xxi. 7. Ps. xxxvii. 1. 35. lxxlii. 1, &c. Ch. v. 28. Hab. i. 4. Mal. iii. 15.—^d Heb. they go on.—^e Isa. xxix. 13. Matt. xv. 8. Mark vii. 6.—^f Ps. xvii. 8. cxxxix. 1.—^g Ch. xi. 20.—^h Heb. with thee.—ⁱ James Verse 1. Righteous art thou, O Lord, when I plead with thee! The prophet wonders how, consistently with God's righteousness, vice should often be in affluence, and piety in suffering and poverty. On this subject he wishes to reason with God, that he may receive instruction.

Verse 2. Thou art near in their mouth! They have no sincerity: they have something of the form of religion, but nothing of its power.

Verse 3. But thou, O Lord, knowest me! I know that the very secrets of my heart are known to thee; and I am glad of it, for thou knowest that my heart is towards thee—is upright and sincere.

Verse 4. How long shall the land mourn! These hypocrites and open sinners are a curse to the country; pull them out, Lord, that the land may be delivered of that which is the cause of its desolation.

them out like sheep for the slaughter, and prepare them for the day of slaughter.

4 How long shall the land mourn, and the herbs of every field wither, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein? the beasts are consumed, and the birds; because they said, he shall not see our last end.

5 If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?

v. 5.—^a Ch. xxlii. 10. Hos. iv. 3.—^b Ps. cvii. 34.—^c Ch. iv. 25. vii. 20, ix. 10. Hos. iv. 3.—^d Josh. iii. 15. 1 Chron. xii. 15. Ch. xlix. 19. 1. 44.

Verse 5. If thou hast run with the footmen! Footmen may here be the symbol of common evil events; horsemen, of evils much more terrible. If thou have sunk under small difficulties, what wilt thou do when great ones come?

And if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst! "If in a country now enjoying peace thou scarcely thinkest thyself in safety, what wilt thou do in the swellings of Jordan? in the time when the enemy, like an overflowing torrent, shall deluge every part of the land?"

Verse 6. For even thy brethren, and the house of thy father! Thou hast none to depend on but God: even thy brethren will betray thee when they have it in their power.

Believe them not! Do not trust to them; do not commit thyself to them; they are in heart thy enemies, and will betray thee.

6 For even ^athy brethren, and the house of thy father, even they have dealt treacherously with thee; yea, ^bthey have called a multitude after thee: ^cbelieve them not, though they speak ^dfair words unto thee.

7 I have forsaken mine house, I have left mine heritage; I have given ^ethe dearly beloved of my soul into the hand of her enemies.

8 Mine heritage is unto me as a lion in the forest; it ^fcrieth ^gout against me: therefore have I hated it.

9 Mine heritage is unto me as a ^hspeckled bird, the birds round about are against her; come ye, assemble all the beasts of the field, ⁱcome ^jto devour.

10 Many ^kpastors have destroyed ^lmy vineyard, they have ^mtrodden my portion under foot, they have made my ⁿpleasant portion a desolate wilderness.

11 They have made it desolate, and being desolate ^oit mourneth unto me; the whole land is made desolate, because ^pno man layeth it to heart.

I have given the dearly beloved of my soul] The people once in covenant with me, and inexpressibly dear to me while faithful.

Into the hand of her enemies.] This was a condition in the covenant I made with them; if they forsook me, they were to be abandoned to their enemies, and cast out of the good land I gave to their fathers.

Verse 8. Mine heritage is unto me as a lion] The people are enraged against me; they roar like a furious lion against their God.

Verse 9. Is unto me as a speckled bird] A bird of divers colours. This is a people who have corrupted the worship of the true God with heathenish rites and ceremonies; therefore, the different nations (see ver. 10), whose gods and forms of worship they have adopted, shall come and spoil them.

Verse 10. Many pastors have destroyed my vineyard] My people have had many kinds of enemies which have fed upon their richest pastures; the Philistines, the Moabites, Ammonites, Assyrians, Egyptians, and now the Chaldeans.

through the wilderness: for the sword of the Lord shall devour from the one end of the land even to the other end of the land: no flesh shall have peace.

13 ^aThey have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns: they have put themselves to pain, but shall not profit: and ^bthey shall be ashamed of your revenues because of the fierce anger of the Lord.

14 Thus saith the Lord against all mine evil neighbours, that ^ctouch the inheritance which I have caused my people Israel to inherit; Behold, I will ^dpluck them out of their land, and pluck out the house of Judah from among them.

15 ^eAnd it shall come to pass, after that I have plucked them out I will return, and have compassion on them, ^fand will bring them again, every man to his heritage, and every man to his land.

16 And it shall come to pass, if they will diligently learn the ways of my people, ^gto swear by my name, The Lord liveth; (as they taught my people to swear by Baal); then shall they be ^hbuilt in the midst of my people.

17 But if they will not ⁱobey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation, saith the Lord.

Verse 11. No man layeth it to heart.] No man layeth it to heart, or considereth that these are God's judgments; and that the only way to have them removed is to repent of their sins, and turn to God with all their hearts.

Verse 12. The sword of the Lord shall devour] It is the sword of the Lord that has devoured, and will devour: this is what no man layeth to heart.

Verse 13. They have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns] All their projects shall fail: none of their enterprises shall succeed.

Verse 14. Against all mine evil neighbours] God often uses one wicked nation to scourge another; and afterwards scourges the scourger by some other scourge.

Verse 15. I will return, and have compassion on them] This is a promise of restoration from the captivity, and an intimation also that some of their enemies would abjure idols, and take Jehovah for their God; Jew and Gentile forming one church of the Most High.

Verse 17. I will—destroy that nation] Several of them did not obey, and are destroyed. Of the Moabites, Ammonites, and Chaldeans, not one vestige remains.

CHAPTER XIII.

This chapter contains an entire prophecy. The symbol of the linen girdle, left to rot for a considerable time, was a type of the manner in which the glory of the Jews should be marred, during the course of their long captivity, 1-11. The scene of the hiding of the girdle being laid near the Euphrates, intimated that the scene of the nation's distress should be Chaldea, which that river waters. The next three verses, by another emblem frequently used to represent the judgments of God, are designed to show that the calamities threatened should be extended to every rank and denomination, 12-14. This leads the prophet to a most affectionate exhortation to repentance, 15-17. But God, knowing that this happy consequence would not ensue, sends him with an awful message to the royal family particularly, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem in general, declaring the approaching judgments in plain terms, 18-27. The ardent desire for the reformation of Jerusalem, with which the chapter concludes, beautifully displays the compassion and tender mercy of God.

THUS saith the LORD unto me, Go and get thee ^a a linen girdle, and put it upon thy loins, and put it not in water.

2 So I got a girdle according to the word of the LORD, and put it on my ^b loins.

3 And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying,

4 Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins, and arise, go to Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock.

5 So I went and hid it by Euphrates, as the LORD commanded me.

6 And it came to pass after many days, that the LORD said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide there.

7 Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle from the place where I had hid it; and, behold, the girdle was marred, it was profitable for nothing.

8 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Thus saith the LORD, After this manner ^c will I mar the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem.

10 This evil people, which refuse to hear my words, which ^d walk in the ^e imagination of their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing.

11 For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah, saith the LORD; that ^f they might be unto me for a people, and ^g for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory: but they would not hear.

Verse 1. Go and get thee a linen girdle] This was either a vision, or God simply describes the thing in order that the prophet might use it in the way of illustration.

Put it not in water.] After having worn it, let it not be washed, that it may more properly represent the uncleanness of the Israelites: for they were represented by the girdle.

Verse 4. Go to Euphrates, and hide it there] Intending to point out, by this distant place, the country into which they were to be carried away captive.

Verse 7. And, behold, the girdle was marred; it was profitable for nothing.] This symbolically represented the state of the Jews: they were corrupt and abominable; and God, by sending them into captivity, "marred the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem," ver. 9.

Verse 12. Every bottle shall be filled with wine.] "Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine? Have we not every prospect that it will be so? Do we need a revelation to inform us of this?"

Verse 13. Behold I will fill all the inhabitants of this land—with drunkenness.] You, and your kings, your priests, and prophets, are represented by these bottles. The wine is God's wrath against you, which shall first be shown by confounding your deliberations, filling you with foolish plans of defence, causing you from your divided counsels to fall out among yourselves, so that like so many drunken men you shall reel about and jostle each other, defend yourselves without plan, and fight without order, till all ye fall an easy prey into the hands of your enemies.

Verse 16. Stumble upon the dark mountains] Before you meet with those great obstacles, which, having no light—no proper understanding in the matter, ye shall be utterly unable to surmount.

Verse 17. My soul shall weep in secret places] If you will not hearken to the Lord, there is no remedy: destruction must come; and there is no thing left for me, but to go 12 Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word; Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Every bottle shall be filled with wine: and they shall say unto thee, Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine?

13 Then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David's throne, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, ^h with drunkenness.

14 And ⁱ I will dash them ^j one against another, even the fathers and the sons together, saith the LORD: I will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy, ^k but destroy them.

15 Hear ye, and give ear; be not proud: for the LORD hath spoken.

16 ^l Give glory to the LORD your God, before he cause ^m darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and, while ye ⁿ look for light, he turn it into ^o the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness.

17 But if ye will not hear it, my soul shall weep in secret places for ^p your pride; and ^q mine eye shall weep sore, and run down with tears, because the LORD's flock is carried away captive.

18 Say unto ^r the king and to the queen, Humble yourselves, sit down: for your ^s principalities shall come down, even the crown of your glory.

19 The cities of the south shall be shut up, and none shall open them; Judah shall be carried away captive all of it, it shall be wholly carried away captive.

20 Lift up your eyes, and behold them ^t that come from the north: where is the flock that was given thee, thy beautiful flock?

Verse 18. Say unto the king and to the queen] Probably Jeconiah and his mother, under whose tutelage, being young when he began to reign, he was left, as is very likely.

Sit down] Show that ye have humbled yourselves; for your state will be destroyed, and your glorious crown taken from your heads.

Verse 19. The cities of the south shall be shut up] Not only the cities of the north, the quarter at which the Chaldeans entered, but the cities of the south also; for he shall proceed from one extremity of the land to the other, spreading devastation every where and carrying off the inhabitants.

Verse 20. Where is the flock—thy beautiful flock?] Jerusalem is addressed. Where are the prosperous multitudes of men, women, and children?

Verse 21. Thou hast taught them to be captains, and as chief over thee] This is said of their enemies, whether Assyrians or Chaldeans; for since Ahaz submitted himself to the king of Assyria, the kings of Judah never regained their independence. Their enemies were thus taught to be their lords and masters.

Verse 22. Are thy skirts discovered] Thy defenceless state is every where known; thou art not only weak, but ignominiously so.

Verse 23. Can the Ethiopian change his skin] These things are natural to them, and they cannot be altered: so sin, and especially your attachment to idolatry, is become a second nature; and we may as well expect the Ethiopian to change his skin, and the leopard his spots, as you to do good, who have been accustomed to do evil. But the expression does not imply that the thing is as impossible in a moral as it is in a natural sense: it only shows that it is extremely difficult, and not to be often expected: and a thousand matters of fact prove the truth of this. But still, what is impossible to man is possible to God. See on ver. 27.

Woe unto thee, O Jerusalem! wilt thou not be made clean?] Man cannot change himself; but he may pray to God to do it, and come to him through Christ that he may do it. To enable him to pray and believe, the power is still at hand. If he will not use it, he must perish.

CHAPTER XIV.

This chapter begins with foretelling a drought that should greatly distress the land of Judea, the effects of which are described in a most pathetic manner, 1-6. The prophet then, in the people's name, makes a confession of sins, and supplication for pardon, 7-9. But God declares his purpose to punish, forbidding Jeremiah to pray for the people, 10-12. False prophets are then complained of, and threatened with destruction, as are also those who attend to them, 13-16. The prophet, therefore, bewails their misery, 17-18; and though he had just now been forbidden to intercede for them, yet, like a tender pastor, who could not cease to be concerned for their welfare, he falls on the happy expedient of introducing themselves as supplicating in their own name that mercy which he was not allowed to ask in his, 19-22.

THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah concerning ^athe dearth.

2 Judah mourneth, and ^bthe gates thereof languish; they are ^cblack unto the ground; and ^dthe cry of Jerusalem is gone up.

3 And their nobles have sent their little ones to the waters: they came to the pits, and found no water; they returned with their vessels empty; they were ^eashamed and confounded, ^fand covered their heads.

4 Because the ground is chapt, for there was no rain in the earth, the plowmen were ashamed, they covered their heads.

^aHeb. the words of the dearths, or restraints.—^bIsa. iii. 26.—^cCh. viii. 21.—^dSee 1 Sam. v. 12.

Verse 1. The word—that came—concerning the dearth.] This discourse is supposed to have been delivered after the fourth year of Jehoiakim. We have no historic record of any dearth that may fall in with the time of this prophecy, and perhaps it does not refer to any particular dearth: but this was a calamity to which Judea was very liable.

Verse 2. The gates thereof languish] The gates being the places of public resort, they are put here for the people.

They are black unto the ground] Covered from head to foot with a black garment, the emblem of sorrow and calamity.

Verse 3. Their nobles have sent their little ones] So general was their calamity, that the servants no longer attended to their lords, but every one was interested alone for himself; and the nobles of the land were obliged to employ their own children to scour the land, to see if any water could be found in the tanks or the pits.

Verse 4. The ground is chapt] The cracks in the earth

5 Yea, the hind also calved in the field, and forsook it, because there was no grass.

6 And ^athe wild asses did stand in the high places, they snuffed up the wind like dragons; their eyes did fail, because there was no grass.

7 O LORD, though our iniquities testify against us, do thou it ^bfor thy name's sake: for our backslidings are many; we have sinned against thee.

8 ^cO the hope of Israel, the Saviour thereof in time of trouble, why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land, and as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night?

9 Why shouldest thou be as a man astonished, as a

before the descent of the rains are in some places a cubit wide, and deep enough to receive the greater part of a human body.

Verse 6. Snuffed up the wind like dragons] Tannim here probably means the hippopotamus, who, after feeding under the water, is obliged to come to the surface in order to take in fresh draughts of air; or it may mean the wild asses.

Verse 7. O Lord, though our iniquities testify against us] We deeply acknowledge that we have sinned, and deserve nothing but death. Yet act for thy name's sake—work in our behalf, that we perish not.

Verse 8. O the hope of Israel] O thou who art the only object of the hope of this people.

The Saviour thereof in time of trouble] Who hast never yet abandoned them that seek thee.

Why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land] As one who has no interest in the prosperity and safety of the country.

mighty man *that cannot save? yet thou, O LORD, art in the midst of us, and we are called by thy name; leave us not.

10 Thus saith the LORD unto this people, 'Thus have they loved to wander, they have not refrained their feet, therefore the LORD doth not accept them; he will now remember their iniquity, and visit their sins.

11 Then said the LORD unto me, 'Pray not for this people for their good.

12 'When they fast, I will not hear their cry; and when they offer burnt-offering and an oblation, I will not accept them: but I will consume them by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence.

13 'Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you assured peace in this place.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, 'The prophets prophesy lies in my name: I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.

16 And the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem because of the famine and the sword; and they shall have none to bury them; them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters: for I will pour their wickedness upon them.

17 Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them; Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease: for the virgin daughter of my people is broken with a great breach, with a very grievous blow.

18 If I go forth into the field, then behold the slain with the sword! and if I enter into the city, then behold them that are sick with famine! yea, both the prophet and the priest go about into a land that they know not.

19 Hast thou utterly rejected Judah? hath thy soul loathed Zion? why hast thou smitten us, and there is no healing for us? we looked for peace, and there is no good; and for the time of healing, and behold trouble!

20 We acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness, and the iniquity of our fathers: for we have sinned against thee.

21 Do not abhor us, for thy name's sake, do not disgrace the throne of thy glory: remember, break not thy covenant with us.

22 Are there any among the vanities of the Gentiles that can cause ruin? or can the heavens give showers? art not thou he, O Lord our God? therefore we will wait upon thee: for thou hast made all these things.

And as a wayfaring man] A traveller on his journey. That turneth aside to tarry for a night? Who stays the shortest time he can; and takes up his lodging in a tent or caravanserai, for the dead of the night, that he may pursue his journey by break of day.

Verse 9. Yet thou, O LORD, art in the midst of us] Thy ark, temple, and sacred rites, are all here; and thou thyself who art every where present, art here also: but alas! thou dost not reveal thyself as the Father of mercies, who forgive iniquity, transgression, and sin.

We are called by thy name; leave us not.] Let us call thee our Father, and say thou to us, "Ye are my sons and daughters!"

Verse 10. Thus have they loved to wander] And the measure of your iniquity being now full, ye must be punished.

Verse 11. Pray not for this people] They are ripe for destruction, intercede not for them. Oh, how dreadful is the state of that people in reference to whom the Lord says to his ministers, Pray not for them; for, what amounts nearly to a prohibition, withhold from his ministers the spirit of prayer and intercession in behalf of the people!

Verse 13. Ah, Lord God! behold, the prophets say unto them] True, Lord, they are exceedingly wicked; but the false prophets have deceived them; this is some mitigation of their offence. This plea God does not admit; and why? the people believed them, without having any proof of their divine mission.

Verse 14. The prophets prophesy lies] The people should know their character, and avoid them; but they love to have it so, and will not be undeceived.

Verse 15. By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.] Nebuchadnezzar invaded and destroyed the land; and the false prophets fell in these calamities. See 2 Kings xxv. 8; Lam. ii. 11-19.

Verse 16. And the people—shall be cast out] They shall be destroyed, because they preferred their lying words to my truth, proclaimed by thee.

Verse 17. For the virgin daughter of my people is broken]

First, the land was sadly distressed by Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt. Secondly, it was laid under a heavy tribute by Nebuchadnezzar. And, thirdly, it was nearly desolated by a famine afterwards. In a few years all these calamities fell upon them; these might be well called a great breach, a very grievous blow.

Verse 18. If I go forth into the field, then behold the slain with the sword] Every place presents frightful spectacles; the wounded, the dying, the starving, and the slain; none to bury the dead, none to commiserate the dying, none to bring either relief or consolation. Even the prophets and the priests are obliged to leave the cities, and wander about in unfrequented and unknown places, seeking for the necessities of life.

Verse 19. We looked for peace] We expected prosperity when Josiah purged the land of idolatry.

And there is no good] For we have relapsed into our former ways.

Verse 20. We acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness] This the prophet did in behalf of the people; but, alas! they did not join him.

Verse 21. Do not disgrace the throne of thy glory] The temple. Let not this sacred place be profaned by impious and sacrilegious hands.

Break not thy covenant] See Exod. xxiv. 7, 8; xix. 5. They had already broken the covenant, and they wish God to fulfil his part. They ceased to be his people, for they abandoned themselves to idolatry: and yet they wished Jehovah to be their Lord; to defend, support, and fill them with all good things! But when the conditions of a covenant are broken by one of the contracting parties, the other party is not bound; and the covenant is necessarily annulled.

Verse 22. Are there any among the vanities of the Gentiles] Probably the dearth was now coming, as there had been a long want of rain. It was the prerogative of the true God to give rain and send showers at the prayers of his people.

Therefore we will wait upon thee] If thou do not undertake for us, we must be utterly ruined.

CHAPTER XV.

God declares to Jeremiah that not even Moses and Samuel, whose prayers had been so prevalent, could divert him from his purpose of punishing so wicked a people, 1. Accordingly their captivity is again announced in a variety of images so full of terror, 2-9, that the prophet complains of his own hard fate in being obliged to deliver such unwelcome messages, 10; for which too he is reproved, 11-14. Immediately he appeals to God for his sincerity, and supplicates pardon, 15-18; and God tempers his reproof with promising again to protect him in the faithful discharge of his duty, 19-21.

THEN said the LORD unto me, 'Though^a Moses and^b Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people: cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth.

2 And it shall come to pass, if they say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth? then thou shalt tell them, Thus saith the LORD; 'Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity.

3 And I will appoint over them four kinds, saith the LORD: the sword to slay, and the dogs to tear, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the earth, to devour and destroy.

4 And I will cause them to be removed into all kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh the son of Hzekiah king of Judah, for that which he did in Jerusalem.

5 For who shall have pity upon thee, O Jerusalem? or who shall bemoan thee? or who shall go aside to ask how thou doest?

6 'Thou hast forsaken me, saith the LORD, thou art gone backward: therefore will I stretch out my hand against thee, and destroy thee; I am weary with repenting.

7 And I will fan them with a fan in the gates of the land; I will bereave them of children, I will destroy my people, since they return not from their ways.

Verse 1. Though Moses and Samuel] Moses had often supplicated for the people; and in consequence they were spared. See Exod. xxxii. 11 and following verses, Num. xiv. 13. Samuel also had prayed for the people, and God heard him, 1 Sam. vii. 9; but if these or the most holy men were now to supplicate for this people, he would not spare them.

Cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth.] Do not bring them into my presence by your prayers; let them go forth into captivity.

Verse 2. Whither shall we go forth?—Such as are for death, to death] Some shall be destroyed by the pestilence, here termed death. See chap. xviii. 21. Others shall be slain by the sword in battle, and in the sackage of cities. Others shall perish by famine, shall be starved to death through the mere want of the necessaries of life; and the rest shall go into captivity. There shall be different sorts of punishments inflicted on them according to the nature of their transgressions.

Verse 4. I will cause them to be removed into all kingdoms of the earth] This seems to have respect to the succeeding state of the Jews in their different generations; and never was there a prophecy more literally fulfilled; and it is still a standing monument of divine truth.

Verse 5. Who shall go aside to ask how thou doest?] Perhaps there is not a more despised nor a more degraded people under the sun. Scarcely any one thinks himself called upon to do a kind office for a Jew. Their character is bad in society, and they are not at all solicitous to redeem it.

Verse 6. I am weary with repenting.] With repeatedly 10 'Woe is me, my mother, that thou hast borne me a man of strife and a man of contention to the whole earth! I have neither lent on usury, nor men have lent to me on usury; yet every one of them doth curse me.

In the gates of the land] The places of public justice; and there it shall be seen that the judgments that have fallen upon them have been highly merited.

Verse 8. The mother of the young men] The metropolis or mother city, Jerusalem.

Verse 9. She that hath borne seven] Jerusalem, the parent of so many cities, villages, and families in the land. Seven signifies a complete or full number.

Verse 10. A man of contention to the whole earth] To the whole LAND, to all his countrymen; though he had done nothing to merit their displeasure.

Verse 11. I will cause the enemy to entreat thee well in the time of evil] This was literally fulfilled; see chap. xxxix. 11, &c.

Verse 12. Shall iron break the northern iron and the steel?] Shall our weak forces be able to oppose and overcome the powers of the Chaldeans? Nechosheth, which we here translate steel, properly signifies brass or copper united with tin, which gives it much hardness and enables it to bear a good edge.

Verse 13. Thy substance—will I give to the spoil without price] Invaluable property shall be given up to thy adversaries. Or, without price—thou shalt have nothing for it in return.

Verse 15. O Lord—remember me, and visit me] Let me not be carried away into captivity; and it does not appear 15 O LORD, *thou knowest: remember me, and visit me, and *revenge me of my persecutors; take me not away in thy long-suffering: know that *for thy sake I have suffered rebuke.

that he had ever been taken to Babylon. After the capture of the city he went into Egypt; and either died there, or was put to death by his countrymen.

Verse 16. Thy word was—the joy and rejoicing of mine heart] When I did receive the prophetic message, I did rejoice in the honour thou hadst done me; and I faithfully testified thy will to them.

Verse 18. Wilt thou be altogether unto me as—waters that fail?] Meaning either springs, which in the height of summer grow dry; or, like that phenomenon in the sandy desert, where, by a peculiar action of the air on the rising vapours, the resemblance of water is produced, so that the traveller, deceived, rejoices that he is come, in the sandy desert, to the verge of a beautiful lake; but the farther he travels, it is still at the same distance, and at last vanishes; and he finds the whole was an illusion, for the waters have failed.

19 Therefore thus saith the LORD, 'If thou return, then will I bring thee again, and thou shalt *stand before me: and if thou *take forth the precious from the vile, thou shalt be as my mouth: let them return unto thee; but return not thou unto them.

20 And I will make thee unto this people a fenced brasen *wall: and they shall fight against thee, *but they shall not prevail against thee: for I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee, saith the LORD.

Verse 19. If thou return] By repentance unto me,—Then will I bring thee again] Restore thee to thy own country. But some think the words are spoken to the prophet in reference to his ministry. He had greatly repined because of the persecutions which he endured. The Lord reprehends him, and is about to take from him the prophetic gift; but exhorts him first to take the precious from the vile—not to attend to the deceitful words of the people, but boldly declare the message he had given him; not to return unto the people, but let the people return unto him. And then he should be as God's mouth—his words should appear to be what they were, the genuine words of God; and the people should be obliged to acknowledge them as such.

Verse 20. I will make thee—a fenced brasen wall] While thou art faithful to me, none of them shall be able to prevail against thee.

CHAPTER XVI.

On account of the evils which threatened his country, the prophet is forbidden to encumber himself with a wife and family, or to bear any share in the little joys and sorrows of his neighbours, which were to be forgotten and absorbed in those public calamities, 1-9, which their sins should draw on them, 10-13. A future restoration however is intimated, 14, 15, after those calamities should be endured, 16-18; and the conversion of the Gentiles is foretold, 19-21.

THE word of the LORD came also unto me, saying,

2 Thou shalt *not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons or daughters in this place.

3 For thus saith the LORD concerning the sons and concerning the daughters that are born in this place, and concerning their mothers that bare them, and concerning their fathers that begat them in this land;

4 They shall die of *grievous deaths; they shall not be *lamented; neither shall they be buried; but they shall be *as dung upon the face of the earth: and they shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine; and their *carcasses shall be meat for the fowls of heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

5 For thus saith the LORD, 'Enter not into the house of mourning, neither go to lament nor bemoan them: for I have taken away my peace from this people, saith the LORD, even loving-kindness and mercies.

6 Both the great and the small shall die in this land: they shall not be buried, *neither shall men lament for them, nor *cut themselves, nor *make themselves bald for them:

7 Neither shall men *tear themselves for them in mourning, to comfort them for the dead; neither shall men give them the cup of consolation to *drink for their father or for their mother.

Verse 1. The word of the Lord came also unto me] This discourse Dahler supposes to have been delivered some time in the reign of Jehoiakim.

Verse 2. Thou shalt not take thee a wife] As it would be very inconvenient to have a family when the threatened desolations should come on the place. The reason is given in the following verses.

—*Lev. xix. 28. Deut. xiv. 1. Ch. xli. 5. xlvii. 5.—*Isa. xxii. 13. Ch. vii. 29.—*Or, break bread for them, as Ezek. xxiv. 17. Hos. ix. 4. See Deut. xxvi. 14. Job xlii. 11.—*Prov. xxxi. 6, 7.

Verse 4. They shall die of grievous deaths] All prematurely; see chap. xiv. 16.

Verse 5. Enter not into the house of mourning] The public calamities are too great to permit individual losses to come into consideration.

Verse 6. Nor cut themselves] A custom of the heathen forbidden to the Jews, Lev. xix. 28; Deut. xiv. 1, and which feasting, to sit with them to eat and to drink.

9 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, ^a I will cause to cease out of this place in your eyes, and in your days, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride.

10 And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt shew this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, ^b Wherefore hath the LORD pronounced all this great evil against us? or what is our iniquity? or what is our sin that we have committed against the LORD our God?

11 Then shalt thou say unto them, ^c Because your fathers have forsaken me, saith the LORD, and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped them, and have forsaken me, and have not kept my law;

12 And ye have done ^d worse than your fathers; for, behold, ^e ye walk every one after the 'imagination of his evil heart, that they may not hearken unto me:

appears now to have prevailed among them; because, having become idolaters, they conformed to all the customs of the heathen.

Verse 8. Thou shalt not also go into the house of feasting] Funeral banquets were made to commemorate the dead, and comfort the surviving relatives; and the cup of consolation, strong mingled wine, was given to those who were deepest in distress, to divert their minds and to soothe their sorrows. These kinds of ceremonies were common among almost all the nations of the world on funeral occasions.

Verse 12. And ye have done worse than your fathers] The sins of the fathers would not have been visited on the children, had they not followed their example, and become even worse than they.

Verse 15. The land of the north] Chaldea: and their deliverance thence will be as remarkable as the deliverance of their fathers from the land of Egypt.

Verse 16. I will send for many fishers—for many hunters] I shall raise up enemies against them, some of whom shall 15 But, the LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and ^a I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.

16 Behold, I will send for many ^b fishers, saith the LORD, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks.

17 For mine ^c eyes are upon all their ways: they are not hid from my face, neither is their iniquity hid from mine eyes.

18 And first I will recompense their iniquity and their sin ^d double; because ^e they have defiled my land, they have filled mine inheritance with the carcasses of their detestable and abominable things.

19 O LORD, ^f my strength, and my fortress, and ^g my refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things ^h wherein there is no profit.

20 Shall a man make gods unto himself, and ⁱ they are no gods?

21 Therefore, behold, I will this once cause them to know, I will cause them to know mine hand and my might; and they shall know that ^j my name is 'the LORD.

destroy them by wiles, and others shall ruin them by violence.

Verse 18. The carcasses of their detestable—things.] Either meaning the idols themselves, which were only carcasses without life; or the sacrifices which were made to them.

Verse 19. The Gentiles shall come] Even the days shall come when the Gentiles themselves, ashamed of their confidence, shall renounce their idols, and acknowledge that their fathers had believed lies, and worshipped vanities. This may be a prediction of the calling of the Gentiles by the gospel of Christ; if so, it is a light amidst much darkness.

Verse 20. Shall a man make gods unto himself?] Can any be so silly, and so preposterously absurd?

Verse 21. Therefore, behold, I will this once] I will not now change my purpose. They shall be visited and carried into captivity; nothing shall prevent this: and they shall know that my name is JEHOVAH. Since they would not receive the abundance of my mercies, they shall know what the true God can do in the way of judgment.

CHAPTER XVII.

This chapter begins with setting forth the very strong bias which the people of Judah had to idolatry, with the fatal consequences, 1-4. The happiness of the man that trusteth in Jehovah is then beautifully contrasted with the opposite character, 5-8. God alone knows the deceitfulness and wretchedness of the heart of man, 9, 10. The comparison of a bird's hatching the eggs of another of a different species, which will soon forsake her, is highly expressive of the vanity of ill-acquired riches, which often disappoint the owner, 11. The prophet continues the same subject in his own person, appeals to God for his sincerity, and prays that the evil intended him by his enemies may revert on their own heads, 12-18. The remaining part of the chapter is a distinct prophecy relating to the due observance of the Sabbath, enforced both by promises and threatenings, 19-27.

THE sin of Judah is written with a ^a pen of iron, and with the ^b point of a diamond: it is ^c graven upon the table of their heart, and upon the horns of your altars;

2 Whilst their children remember their altars and their ^d groves by the green trees upon the high hills.

3 O my mountain in the field, ^e I will give thy substance and all thy treasures to the spoil, and thy high places for sin, throughout all thy borders.

4 And thou, even ^f thyself, shalt discontinue from thine heritage that I gave thee; and I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in ^g the land which thou knowest not: for ^h ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which shall burn for ever.

5 Thus saith the LORD; ⁱ Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh ^j flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the LORD.

6 For he shall be ^k like the heath in the desert, and ^l shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, ^m in a salt land and not inhabited.

7 ⁿ Blessed is the man that trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is.

8 For he shall be ^o as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of ^p drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit.

9 The heart is deceitful above all ^q things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?

10 I the LORD ^r search the heart, I try the reins, ^s even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings.

11 As the partridge ^t sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches, and not by right, ^u shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be ^v a fool.

12 A glorious high throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary.

13 O LORD, ^w the hope of Israel, ^x all that forsake thee shall be ashamed, and they that depart from me shall be ^y written in the earth, because they have forsaken the LORD, the ^z Fountain of living waters.

14 Heal me, O LORD, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for ^{aa} thou art my praise.

15 Behold, they say unto me, ^{ab} Where is the word of the LORD? let it come now.

16 As for me, ^{ac} I have not hastened from being a pastor ^{ad} to follow thee: neither have I desired the woeful day; thou knowest: that which came out of my lips was right before thee.

17 Be not a terror unto me: ^{ae} thou art my hope in the day of evil.

18 ^{af} Let them be confounded that persecute me, but ^{ag} let not me be confounded: let them be dismayed, but let not me be dismayed: bring upon them the day of evil, and ^{ah} destroy ^{ai} them with double destruction.

19 Thus saith the LORD unto me; Go and stand in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by the which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem;

20 And say unto them, ^{aj} Hear ye the word of the Verse 1. The sin of Judah] Idolatry.

Is written with a pen of iron] There may be reference here to the different methods of recording events in those days:—1. A pen or stile of iron, for engraving on lead or wood. 2. A point of a diamond, for writing on vitreous substances. 3. Writing on tables of brass or copper. 4. Writing on the horns of the altars the names of the deities worshipped there.

Verse 2. Whilst their children remember] Even the rising generation have their imagination stocked with idol images, and their memories with the frantic rites and ceremonies which they saw their parents observe in this abominable worship.

Verse 3. O my mountain in the field] The prophet here addresses the land of Judea, which was a mountainous country, Deut. iii. 25; but Jerusalem itself may be meant, which is partly built upon hills which, like itself, are elevated above the rest of the country.

Verse 5. Cursed be the man that trusteth in man] This reprehends their vain confidence in trusting in Egypt. An arm of flesh is put here for a weak and ineffectual support. And he who, in reference to the salvation of his soul, trusts in an arm of flesh—in himself or others, or in any thing he has done or suffered, will inherit a curse instead of a blessing.

Verse 6. He shall be like the heath in the desert] Or, like a blasted tree, without moisture, parched and withered. Shall not see when good cometh] Shall not be sensible of it: the previous drought having rendered it incapable of absorbing any more vegetable juices.

A salt land] Barren; and therefore unfit to be inhabited. Verse 8. As a tree planted by the waters] Which is sufficiently supplied with moisture, though the heat be intense, and there be no rain; for the roots being spread out by the river, they absorb from it all the moisture requisite for the flourishing vegetation of the tree.

Shall not see when heat cometh] Shall not feel any damage by drought, for the reason already assigned. It shall be strong and vigorous, its leaf always green; and shall produce plenty of fruit in its season.

Verse 9. The heart is deceitful] Akob hallel, "the heart is supplanting—tortuous—full of windings—insidious;" lying over at the catch; striving to avail itself of every favourable circumstance to gratify its propensities to pride, ambition, evil desire, and corruption of all kinds.

And desperately wicked] Veanush lu, and is wretched, or feeble; distressed beyond all things, in consequence of the wickedness that is in it.

Who can know it?] It even hides itself from itself; so that its owner does not know it.

Verse 10. I the Lord search the heart] The Lord is called by his apostles, Acts i. 24, the Knower of the heart. To him alone can this epithet be applied; and it is from him alone that we can derive that instruction by which we can in any measure know ourselves.

Verse 11. As the partridge] It is very likely that this was a bird different from our partridge.

Verse 12. A glorious high throne] As he is cursed who trusts in man, so he is blessed who trusts in God. He is here represented as on a throne in his temple; to him in the means of grace all should resort. He is the support, and a glorious support, of all them that trust in him.

Verse 13. Written in the earth] They shall never come to true honour. Their names shall be written in the dust; and the first wind that blows over it shall mar every letter, and render it illegible.

Verse 14. Heal me—and I shall be healed] That is, I shall be thoroughly healed, and effectually saved, if thou undertake for me.

Thou art my praise] The whole glory of the work of salvation belongs to thee alone.

LORD, ye kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that enter in by these gates :

21 Thus saith the LORD; * Take heed to your selves, and bear no burden on the sabbath day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem ;

22 Neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the sabbath day, neither do ye any work, but hallow ye the sabbath day, as I * commanded your fathers.

23 * But they obeyed not, neither inclined their ear, but made their neck stiff, that they might not hear, nor receive instruction.

24 And it shall come to pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the LORD, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath day, but hallow the sabbath day, to do no work therein ;

25 * Then shall there enter into the gates of this Verse 15. Where is the word of the Lord ? Where is the accomplishment of his threatenings ? Thou hast said that the city and the temple should both be destroyed. No such events have yet taken place. But they did take place, and every tittle of the menace was strictly fulfilled.

Verse 17. Be not a terror unto me Do not command me to predict miseries, and abandon me to them and to my enemies.

Verse 18. Let them be confounded They shall be confounded. These words are to be understood as simple predictions, rather than prayers.

Verse 19. The gate of the children of the people I suppose the most public gate is meant ; that through which there was the greatest thoroughfare.

27 But if ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the sabbath day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath day ; then * will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.

Verse 21. Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden From this and the following verses we find the ruin of the Jews attributed to the breach of the sabbath ; as this led to a neglect of sacrifice, the ordinances of religion, and all public worship, so it necessarily brought with it all immorality.

Verse 24. If ye diligently hearken unto me So we find that though their destruction was positively threatened, yet still there was an unexpressed proviso that, if they did return to the Lord, the calamities should be averted, and a succession of princes would have been continued on the throne of David, ver. 25, 26.

Verse 27. But if ye will not hearken Then their sin lay at their own door. How fully were they warned ; and how basely did they reject the counsel of God against themselves !

CHAPTER XVIII.

The type of the potter's vessel, and its signification, 1-10. The inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem exhorted to repentance, 11 ; but on their refusal (which is represented to be as unnatural as if a man should prefer the snowy Lebanon or barren rock to a fruitful plain, or other waters to the cool stream of the fountain), their destruction is predicted, 12-17. In consequence of these plain reproofs and warnings of Jeremiah, a conspiracy is formed against him, 18. This leads him to appeal to God for his integrity, 19, 20 ; who puts a most dreadful curse in the mouth of his prophet, strongly indicative of the terrible fate of his enemies, 21-23.

THE word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Arise, and go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words.

3 Then I went down to the potter's house, and, behold, he wrought a work on the * wheels.

4 And the vessel * that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter : so he * made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it.

the hand of the potter.—* Heb. returned, and made.

Verse 1. The word which came to Jeremiah This discourse is supposed to have been delivered some time in the reign of Jehoiakim, probably within the first three years.

Verse 2. Go down to the potter's house By this similitude God shows the absolute state of dependance on himself in which he has placed mankind. They are as clay in the hands of the potter ; and in reference to every thing here below, he can shape their destinies as he pleases. Again ; though while under the providential care of God they may go morally astray, and pervert themselves, yet they can be reclaimed by the almighty and all-wise Operator, and become such vessels as seemeth good for him to make. In considering this parable we must take heed that in running parallels we do not destroy the free agency of man, nor disgrace the goodness and supremacy of God.

Verse 3. He wrought a work on the wheels. The potter's wheel in the present day seems to differ very little from that which was in use between two and three thousand years ago.

Verse 4. The vessel—was marred in the hand of the potter It did not stand in the working ; it got out of shape ; or some gravel or small stone having been incorporated with the mass of clay, made a breach in that part where it was found, so that the potter was obliged to knead up the clay afresh, place it on the wheel, and form it anew ; and then it was such a vessel as seemed good to the potter to make it.

Verse 6. Cannot I do with you as this potter ? Have I

5 Then the word of the LORD came to me, saying,
6 O house of Israel, ^a cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the LORD. Behold, ^b as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel.

7 At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to ^c pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it;

8 ^d If that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, ^e I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them.

9 And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it;

10 If it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good, wherewith I said I would benefit them.

11 Now therefore go to, speak to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I frame evil against you, and devise a device against you: ^f return ye now, every one from his evil way, and make your ways and your doings good.

12 And they said, ^g There is no hope: but we will walk after our own devices, and we will every one do the imagination of his evil heart.

13 Therefore thus saith the LORD; ^h Ask ye now among the heathen, who hath heard such things: the virgin of Israel hath done ⁱ a very horrible thing.

14 Will a man leave ^j the snow of Lebanon which cometh from the rock of the field? or shall the cold flowing waters that come from another place be forsaken?

15 Because my people hath forgotten ^k me, they have burned incense to ^l vanity, and they have caused them to stumble in their ways from the

^m ancient paths, to walk in paths, in a way not cast up;

16 To make their land ⁿ desolate, and a perpetual ^o hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished, and wag his head.

17 ^p I will scatter them ^q as with an east wind before the enemy; ^r I will shew them the back, and not the face, in the day of their calamity, 18 Then said they, ^s Come, and let us devise devices against Jeremiah; ^t for the law shall not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet. Come, and let us smite him ^u with the tongue, and let us not give heed to any of his words.

19 Give heed to me, O LORD, and hearken to the voice of them that contend with me.

20 ^v Shall evil be recompensed for good? for ^w they have digged a pit for my soul. Remember that I stood before thee to speak good for them, and to turn away thy wrath from them.

21 Therefore ^x deliver up their children to the famine, and ^y pour out their blood by the force of the sword; and let their wives be bereaved of their children, and be widows; and let their men be put to death; let their young men be slain by the sword in battle.

22 Let a cry be heard from their houses, when thou shalt bring a troop suddenly upon them: for ^z they have digged a pit to take me, and hid snares for my feet.

23 Yet, LORD, thou knowest all their counsel against me ^{aa} to slay me: ^{bb} forgive not their iniquity, neither blot out their sin from thy sight, but let them be overthrown before thee; deal thus with them in the time of thine anger.

not a right to do with a people whom I have created as reason and justice may require? If they do not answer my intentions, may I not reject and destroy them; and act as this potter, make a new vessel out of that which at first did not succeed in his hands? See on Rom. ix. 22.

Verses 7-10. At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, &c.—If that nation, against whom, &c.—And at what instant, &c.—If it do evil, &c.] These verses contain what may be called God's decree by which the whole of his conduct towards man is regulated. If he purpose destruction against an offending person, if that person repent and turn to God, he shall live and not die.

If he purpose peace and salvation to him that walketh uprightly, if he turn from God to the world and sin, he shall die and not live.

Verse 14. Will a man leave the snow of Lebanon] Lebanon was the highest mountain in Judea. Would any man in his senses abandon a farm that was always watered by the melted snows of Lebanon, and take a barren rock in its place?

Verse 17. I will scatter them as with an east wind] It is the property of this wind, almost every where, to parch up, blast, and destroy grain and trees, and even cattle and men suffer from it.

Verse 18. Come, and let us devise devices] Let us form a conspiracy against him, accuse him of being a false prophet, and a contradictor of the words of God, for God has promised us protection, and he says we shall be destroyed, and that God will forsake his people.

Let us smite him with the tongue] On the tongue; so it should be rendered. Lying and false testimony are punished in the eastern countries, to the present day, by smiting the person on the mouth with a strong piece of leather like the sole of a shoe.

Verse 20. They have digged a pit for my soul.] For my life; this they wish to take away.

Stood before thee to speak good for them] I was their continual intercessor.

Verse 21. Therefore deliver up their children] The executions in these verses should be considered as simply prophetic declarations of the judgments which God was about to pour out on them.

CHAPTER XIX.

By the significant type of breaking a potter's vessel, Jeremiah is directed to predict the utter desolation of Judah and Jerusalem, 1-15. The prophets taught frequently by symbolic actions as well as by words.

THUS saith the LORD, Go and get a potter's earthen bottle, and take of the ancients of the people, and of the ancients of the priests;

2 And go forth unto ^athe valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of ^bthe east gate, and proclaim there the words that I shall tell thee,

3 ^cAnd say, Hear ye the word of the LORD, O kings of Judah, and inhabitants of Jerusalem; Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, the which whosoever heareth, his ears shall ^dtingle.

4 Because they ^ehave forsaken me, and have estranged this place, and have burned incense in it unto other gods, whom neither they nor their fathers have known, nor the kings of Judah, and have filled this place with ^fthe blood of innocents;

5 ^gThey have built also the high places of Baal, to burn their sons with fire for burnt offerings unto Baal, ^hwhich I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into my mind:

6 Therefore, behold the days come, saith the LORD, that this place shall no more be called Tophet, nor ⁱThe valley of the son of Hinnom, but The valley of slaughter.

7 And I will make void the counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place; ^jand I will cause them to fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hands of them that seek their lives: and their ^kcarcasses will I give to be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

8 And I will make this city ^ldesolate, and an hissing: every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished and hiss because of all the plagues thereof.

9 And I will cause them to eat the ^mflesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness, wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them.

10 ⁿThen shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee,

11 And shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^oEven so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot ^pbe made whole again: and they shall ^qbury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury.

12 Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof, and ^reven make this city as Tophet:

13 And the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled ^sas the place of Tophet, because of all the houses upon whose ^troofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and ^uhave poured out drink-offerings unto other gods.

14 Then came Jeremiah from Tophet, whither the LORD had sent him to prophesy; and he stood in ^vthe court of the LORD's house, and said to all the people,

15 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon this city and upon all her towns all the evil that I have pronounced against it, because ^wthey have hardened their necks, that they might not hear my words.

Verse 1. Go and get a potter's earthen bottle] This discourse was also delivered sometime in the reign of Jehoiakim. Ancients of the priests] The chiefs of the twenty-four classes which David had established. See 1 Chron. xxiv. 4.

Verse 4. Estranged this place] Ye have devoted my temple to a widely different purpose from that for which it was erected.

Verse 5. Offerings unto Baal] A general name for all the popular idols; Baal, Moloch, Ashtarothe, &c.

Verse 7. I will make void the counsel of Judah] Probably this refers to some determination made to proclaim themselves independent, and pay no more tribute to the Chaldeans.

Verse 9. I will cause them to eat the flesh of their sons] This was literally fulfilled when Jerusalem was besieged by the Romans.

Verse 11. Even so will I break this people and this city] The breaking of the bottle was the symbolical representation of the destruction of the city and the state. That cannot be made whole again] This seems to refer rather to the final destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, than to what was done by the Chaldeans. Jerusalem was healed after 70 years: but nearly 1800 years have elapsed since Jerusalem was taken and destroyed by the Romans; and it was then so broken, that it could not be made whole again.

Verse 12. And even make this city as Tophet] A place of slaughter and destruction.

Verse 14. Then came Jeremiah from Tophet] He had probably gone to the valley of Hinnom, and there repeated the discourse which he had a little before delivered to the chief priests and elders.

Verse 15. Because they have hardened their necks] A metaphor taken from unruly and unbroke oxen, who resist the yoke, break, and run away with their gears.

CHAPTER XX.

Jeremiah, on account of his prophesying evil concerning Judah and Jerusalem, is beaten and imprisoned by Pashur, chief governor of the temple, 1, 2. On the following day the prophet is released, who denounces the awful judgments of God which should fall upon the governor and all his house, as well as upon the whole land of Judah, in the approaching Babylonian captivity, 3-6. Jeremiah then bitterly complains of the reproaches continually heaped upon him by his enemies; and, in his haste, resolves to speak no more in the name of Jehovah; but the word of the Lord is in his heart as a burning flame, so that he is not able to forbear, 7-10. The prophet professes his trust in God, whom he praises for his late deliverance, 11-13. The remaining verses, which appear to be out of their place, contain Jeremiah's regret that he was ever born to a life of so much sorrow and trouble, 14-18. This complaint resembles that of Job; only it is milder, and more dolorous. This excites our pity, that our horror. Both are highly poetical, and embellished with every circumstance that can heighten the colouring. But such circumstances are not always to be too literally understood or explained. We must often make allowances for the strong figures of eastern poetry,

NOW Pashur the son of ^aImmur the priest, who was also chief governor in the house of the LORD, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things.

2 Then Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the LORD.

3 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks. Then said Jeremiah unto him, The LORD hath not called thy name Pashur, but ^bMagor-missabib.

4 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends; and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it: and I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall carry them captive into Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword.

5 Moreover I will deliver all the strength of this city, and all the labours thereof, and all the precious things thereof, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah will I give into the hand of their enemies, which shall spoil them, and take them, and carry them to Babylon.

6 And thou, Pashur, and all that dwell in thine house shall go into captivity: and thou shalt come to Babylon, and there thou shalt die, and shalt be buried there, thou, and all thy friends, to whom thou hast ^dprophesied lies.

7 O LORD, thou hast deceived me, and I was ^edeceived: 'thou art stronger than I, and hast prevailed: ^fI am in derision daily, every one mocketh me.

8 For since I spake, I cried out, ^aI cried violence and spoil; because the word of the LORD was made a reproach unto me, and a derision, daily.

9 Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in mine heart as a ^bburning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and ^cI could not stay.

10 ^kFor I heard the defaming of many, fear on every side. Report, say they, and we will report it. ^lAll ^mmy familiars watched for my halting, saying, Peradventure he will be enticed, and we shall prevail against him, and we shall take our revenge on him, 11 But ⁿthe LORD is with me as a mighty terrible one: therefore my persecutors shall stumble, and they shall not ^oprevail: they shall be greatly ashamed; for they shall not prosper: their ^peverlasting confusion shall never be forgotten.

12 But, O LORD of hosts, that ^qtriest the righteous, and seest the reins and the heart, ^rlet me see thy vengeance on them: for unto thee have I opened my cause.

13 Sing unto the LORD, praise ye the LORD: for ^she hath delivered the soul of the poor from the hand of evil doers.

14 ^tCursed be the day wherein I was born: let not the day wherein my mother bare me be blessed.

15 Cursed be the man who brought tidings to my father, saying, A man child is born unto thee; making him very glad.

16 And let that man be as the cities which the LORD ^uoverthrew, and repented not: and let him

Verse 2. Put him in the stocks.] Probably such a place near the gate as we term the lock-up, the coal-hole; or it may mean a sort of dungeon.

Verse 3. The Lord hath not called thy name Pashur.] Security on all sides. This name thou hast had, but not by divine appointment.

But Magor-missabib.] Fear on every side. This name hath God given thee; because, in the course of his providence, thou shalt be placed in the circumstances signified by it: thou shalt be a terror to thyself.

Verse 6. And thou, Pashur—shall go into captivity.] Thou shalt suffer for the false prophecies which thou hast delivered, and for thy insults to my prophet.

Verse 7. O Lord, thou hast deceived me.] I think our translation of this passage is very exceptionable. The original word is pittithani, thou hast persuaded me, i. e., to go and prophesy to this people. I went, faithfully declared thy message, and now I am likely to perish by their cruelty.

Verse 8. I cried violence and spoil.] This was the burden of the message thou didst give me.

Verse 9. I will not make mention of him.] I will renounce the prophetic office, and return to my house.

As a burning fire shut up in my bones.] He felt stings of conscience for the hasty and disobedient resolution he had formed. It is as dangerous to refuse to go when called, as it is to run without a call.

Verse 10. Report—and we will report it.] Let us spread calumnies against him every where; or let us spread reports of dangers coming upon him, that we may intimidate him, and cause him to desist.

Verse 11. But the Lord is with me as a mighty terrible one.] Thus was he, by his strong confidence in the strong God, delivered from all his fears, and enabled to go on comfortably with his work.

Verse 13. Sing unto the Lord.] He was so completely delivered from all fear, that although he remained in the same circumstances, yet he exults in the divine protection, and does not fear the face of any adversary.

Verse 14. Cursed be the day wherein I was born] If we take these words literally, and suppose them to be in their proper place, they are utterly inconsistent with that state of confidence in which he exulted a few minutes before in ver. 9. I believe these verses have got out of their proper place, which I conjecture to be between the eighth and ninth verses. There they will come in very properly; and might have been a part of his complaint in those moments when he purposed

Verse 16. And let him hear the cry] Let him be in continual alarms.

Verse 18. Wherefore came I forth] It would have been well had I never been born, as I have neither comfort in my life, nor comfort in my work.

CHAPTER XXI.

Nebuchadrezzar being come up against Jerusalem, Zedekiah sends Pashur and Zephaniah to the prophet to request him to intercede with God in behalf of his people, 1, 2. But he is declared to be against Jerusalem, and the whole land of Judah; and the only mitigation of their punishment must proceed from their surrendering to the king of Babylon, 3-10. Prophecy concerning the house of the king of Judah, 11, 12. Notwithstanding the amazing fortifications round about Jerusalem, in which the people vainly trust, the Lord will most assuredly visit them for their iniquities; the city shall be taken by the Chaldeans, 13, 14.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, when king Zedekiah sent unto him ^a Pashur the son of Melchiah, and ^b Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying,

2 ^c Inquire, I pray thee, of the LORD for us; (for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon maketh war against us;) if so be that the LORD will deal with us according to all his wondrous works, that he may go up from us.

3 Then said Jeremiah unto them, Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah:

4 Thus saith the LORD God of Israel; Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, wherewith ye fight against the king of Babylon, and against the Chaldeans, which besiege you without the walls, and ^d I will assemble them into the midst of this city.

5 And I myself will fight against you with an outstretched hand and with a strong arm, even in anger, and in fury, and in great wrath.

And I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast: they shall die of a great pestilence.

Verse 1. The word which came unto Jeremiah] The chapters in the remaining parts of this prophecy seem strangely interchanged. The discourse here was delivered about the ninth year of the reign of Zedekiah.

Pashur the son of Melchiah] There can be little doubt that this Pashur was a different person from him who was called the son of Immur in the preceding chapter.

Verse 2. Inquire, I pray thee] See whether God intends to deliver us into or out of the hand of the Chaldeans.

Verse 4. I will turn back the weapons] Every attempt you make to repel the Chaldeans shall be unsuccessful.

I will assemble them into the midst of this city] I will deliver the city into their hands.

7 And afterward, saith the LORD, 'I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in this city from the pestilence, from the sword, and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life: and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword; ^a he shall not spare them, neither have pity, nor have mercy.

8 And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^b I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.

9 He that ^c abideth in this city shall die by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans that besiege you, he shall live, and ^d his life shall be unto him for a prey.

10 For I have ^e set my face against this city for evil, and not for good, saith the LORD: ^f it shall be given into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall ^g burn it with fire.

11 And touching the house of the king of Judah, say, Hear ye the word of the LORD;

Verse 6. They shall die of a great pestilence] The sword may appear to be that of man, though I have given the Chaldeans their commission; but the pestilence shall appear to be the immediate act of God.

Verse 7. Nebuchadrezzar] This name is spelt as above in twenty-six places of this book; and in ten places it is spelt Nebuchadnezzer, which is the common orthography.

Verse 8. Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death] Meaning escape or destruction instance. This is explained in the next verse.

Verse 10. He shall burn it with fire] What a heavy message to all; and especially to them who had any fear of God, or reverence for the temple and its sacred services!

Verse 13. Execute judgment in the morning] Probably the time for dispensing judgment was the morning, when the people were going to their work; but the words may mean, Do justice promptly, do not delay. Let justice be administered as soon as required.

Verse 13. O inhabitant of the valley, and rock of the plain] Jerusalem itself, though partly on two hills, was also extended in the valley; and Zion, the city of David, was properly a rock, strongly fortified both by nature and art; and which say, 'Who shall come down against us? or who shall enter into our habitations?'

by its ancient possessors, the Jebusites, was deemed impregnable.

Who shall come down against us? Probably the words of those courtiers who had persuaded Zedekiah to rebel against the king of Babylon.

Verse 14. I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof] I will send destruction into its centre, that shall spread to every part of the circumference, and so consume the whole.

CHAPTER XXII.

This section of prophecy, extending to the end of the eighth verse of the next chapter, is addressed to the king of Judah and his people. It enjoins on them the practice of justice and equity, as they would hope to prosper, 1-4; but threatens them, in case of disobedience, with utter destruction, 5-9. The captivity of Shallum, the son of Josiah, is declared to be irreversible, 10-12; and the miserable and unlamented end of Jeconiah, contemptuously called Coniah, is foretold, 13-19. His family is threatened with the like captivity, and his seed declared to be for ever excluded from the throne, 20-30.

THUS saith the LORD; Go down to the house of the king of Judah, and speak there this word,

2 And say, 'Hear the word of the LORD, O king of Judah, that sittest upon the throne of David, thou, and thy servants, and thy people that enter in by these gates:

3 Thus saith the LORD; 'Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor: and do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place.

4 For if ye do this thing indeed, then shall there enter in by the gates of this house kings sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, he, and his servants, and his people.

5 But if ye will not hear these words, I swear by myself, saith the LORD, that this house shall become a desolation.

6 For thus saith the LORD unto the king's house of Judah; Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon: yet surely I will make thee a wilderness, and cities which are not inhabited.

7 And I will prepare destroyers against thee, every one with his weapons, and they shall cut down

Verse 2. O king of Judah—thou, and thy servants] His ministers are here addressed, as chiefly governing the nation; and who had counselled Zedekiah to rebel.

Verse 6. Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon] Lebanon was the highest mountain in Israel, and Gilead the richest and most fertile part of the country; and were, therefore, proper emblems of the reigning family.

Verse 7. They shall cut down thy choice cedars] The destruction of the country is expressed under the symbol of the destruction of a fine forest; a multitude of fellers come against it, each with his axe; and, there being no resistance, every tree is soon felled to the earth.

'thy choice cedars, and cast them into the fire.

8 And many nations shall pass by this city, and they shall say every man to his neighbour, 'Wherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this great city?

9 Then they shall answer, 'Because they have forsaken the covenant of LORD their God, and worshipped other gods, and served them.

10 Weep ye not for the dead, neither bemoan him; but weep sore for him that goeth away: for he shall return no more, nor see his native country.

11 For thus saith the LORD touching Shallum the son of Josiah king of Judah, which reigned instead of Josiah his father, 'which went forth out of this place; He shall not return thither any more:

12 But he shall die in the place whither they have led him captive, and shall see this land no more.

13 'Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by wrong; that useth his neighbour's service without wages, and giveth him not for his work;

Verse 8. Many nations shall pass] These words seem borrowed from Deut. xxix. 22, &c.

Verse 10. Weep sore for him that goeth away] Josiah, dead in consequence of the wound he had received at Megiddo, in a battle with Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt; but he died in peace with God.

But weep sore for him that goeth away] Namely, Jehoahaz, the son of Josiah, called below Shallum, whom Pharaoh-necho had carried captive into Egypt, from which it was prophesied he should never return, 2 Kings xxiii. 30-34.

Verse 18. Woe unto him that buildeth his house] These cedar? *did not thy father eat and drink, and do judgment and justice, and then ^b it was well with him?

16 He judged the cause of the poor and needy; then it was well with him: was not this to know me? saith the LORD.

17 *But thine eyes and thine heart are not but for thy covetousness, and for to shed innocent blood, and for oppression, and for ^c violence to do it.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah; *They shall not lament for him, saying, 'Ah my brother! or, Ah sister! they shall not lament for him saying, Ah lord! or Ah his glory!

19 *He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

20 Go up to Lebanon, and cry; and lift up thy voice in Bashan, and cry from the passages: for all thy lovers are destroyed.

21 I spake unto thee in thy ^a prosperity; but thou saidst, I will not hear. ¹ This hath been thy manner from thy youth, that thou obeyedst not my voice.

evils, charged against Jehoiakim, are nowhere else circumstantially related.

Verse 15. Shall thou reign, &c.] Dost thou think thou art a great king, because thou dwellest in a splendid palace?

Verse 18. They shall not lament for him, saying, Ah my brother!] These words were no doubt the burden of some funeral dirge.

Verse 19. With the burial of an ass] Cast out, and left unburied, or buried without any funeral solemnities, and without such lamentations as the above.

Verse 20. Go up to Lebanon] Probably Anti-Libanus, which, together with Bashan and Abarim, which we here translate passages, were on the way by which the captives should be led out of their own country.

Verse 21. I spake unto thee in thy prosperity] In all states and circumstances I warned thee by my prophets; and thou wilt only be ashamed of thy conduct when thou shalt be stripped of all thy excellencies, and reduced to poverty and disgrace, ver. 22.

Verse 22. The wind shall eat up all thy pastors] A blast nest in the cedars, how gracious shalt thou be when pangs come upon thee, ^a the pain as of a woman in travail!

24 *As I live, saith the LORD, * though Coniah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah * were the signet upon my right hand, yet would I pluck thee thence;*

25 And I will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life, and into the hand of them whose face thou fearest, even into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 * And I will cast thee out, and thy mother that bare thee, into another country, where ye were not born; and there shall ye die.

27 But to the land whereunto they ^a desire to return, thither shall they not return.

The signet upon my right hand] The most precious seal, ring, or armet. Though dearer to me than the most splendid gem to its possessor.

Verse 26. I will cast thee out, and thy mother] See all this fulfilled, 2 Kings xxiv. 12, 13.

Verse 28. Is this man Coniah a despised broken idol?] These are probably the exclamations of the people, when they heard these solemn denunciations against their king and their country.

Verse 29. O earth] These are the words of the prophet in reply: O land! unhappy land! desolated land! Hear the judgment of the Lord!

Verse 30. Write ye this man childless] Though he had seven sons, 1 Chron. iii. 17, yet, having no successor, he is to be entered on the genealogical tables as one without children, for none of his posterity ever sat on the throne of David.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Sequel of the discourse which commenced in the preceding chapter. The prophet denounces vengeance against the pastors of Israel who have scattered and destroyed the flock of the Lord, 1, 2. He concludes with gracious promises of deliverance from the Babylonish captivity, and of better times under the Messiah, when the converts to Christianity, who are the true Israel of God, shadowed forth by the old dispensation, shall be delivered, by the glorious light of the gospel, from worse than Chaldean bondage, from the captivity of sin and death. But this prophecy will not have its fullest accomplishment till that period arrives which is fixed in the divine counsel for the restoration of Israel and Judah from their various dispersions, of which their deliverance from the Chaldean domination was a type; when Jesus the Christ, the righteous Branch, the Root and Offspring of David, and the only legitimate Heir to the throne, shall take unto himself his great power, and reign gloriously over the whole house of Jacob, 3-8. At the ninth verse a new discourse commences. Jeremiah expresses his horror at the great wickedness of the priests and prophets of Judah, and declares that the divine vengeance is hanging over them. He exhorts the people not to listen to their false promises, 9-22; and predicts the utter ruin that shall fall upon all pretenders to inspiration, 23-32, as well as upon all scoffers at true prophecy, 33-40.

WOE ^abe unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the LORD.

2 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people; Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them: ^bbehold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the LORD.

3 And ^cI will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase.

4 And I will set up ^dshepherds over them which shall feed them: and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the LORD.

5 Behold, ^ethe days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, ^fand shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.

6 ^gIn his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel ^hshall dwell safely: and ⁱthis is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTE-OUSNESS.

7 Therefore, Behold, ^jthe days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;

8 But, the LORD liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, ^kand from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land.

9 Mine heart within me is broken because of the prophets; ^lall my bones shake; I am like a drunken man, and like a man whom wine hath overcome;

Verse 1. Woe unto the pastors] There shall a curse fall on the kings, princes, priests, and prophets; who, by their vicious conduct and example, have brought desolation upon the people.

Verse 2. Ye have scattered my flock] The bad government both in church and state was a principal cause of the people's profligacy.

Verse 5. I will raise unto David a righteous Branch] The passage has been understood to refer to our blessed Lord, Jesus Christ, who was a branch out of the stem of Jesse; a righteous king; by the power of his Spirit and influence of his religion reigning, prospering, and executing judgment and justice in the earth.

Verse 6. In his days Judah shall be saved] The real Jew is not one who has his circumcision in the flesh, but in the spirit. The real Israel are true believers in Christ Jesus; and the genuine Jerusalem is the church of the first-born, and made free, with all her children, from the bondage of sin, Satan, death, and hell. All these exist only in the days of the Messiah. All that went before were the types or signifiers of these glorious gospel excellencies.

And this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

That this text speaks any thing about the imputed righteousness of Christ, cannot possibly be proved by any man who understands the original text. As to those who put the sense of their creed upon the words, they must be content to stand out of the list of Hebrew critics. I believe Jesus to be Jehovah; but I doubt much whether this text calls him so. No doctrine so vitally important should be rested on an interpretation so dubious and unsupported by the text. That all our righteousness, holiness, and goodness, as well because of the LORD, and because of the words of his holiness.

as the whole of our salvation, come by HIM, from HIM, and through HIM, is fully evident from the Scriptures; but this is not one of the passages that support this most important truth.

Verse 9. Mine heart within me is broken because of the prophets] The first word of this clause is lannebim, which we incorporate with the whole clause, and translate, "Because of the prophets." But as a new prophecy begins here, it is evident that the word is the title to this prophecy, CONCERNING THE PROPHETS. This discourse was delivered probably in the reign of Jehoiakim.

All my bones shake] He was terrified even by his own message, and shocked at the profanity of the false prophets.

Verse 10. The land is full of adulterers] Of idolaters. Of persons who break their faith to ME, as an impure wife does to her husband.

The pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up] He speaks here, most probably, in reference to dearth. Profane oaths, false swearing, evil courses, violence, &c., had provoked God to send this among other judgments; see ver. 19.

Verse 11. In my house] They had even introduced idolatry into the Temple of God!

Verse 13. I have seen folly in the prophets of Samaria] This was not to be wondered at, for their religion was a system of corruption.

Verse 14. I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem] That is, the prophets of Jerusalem, while professing a pure faith, have followed the ways, and become as corrupt as the prophets of Samaria.

Verse 16. Hearken not unto the words of the prophets] That is, of those who promise you safety, without requiring tion of his own heart, "No evil shall come upon you.

18 For ^b who hath stood in the ^c counsel of the LORD, and hath perceived and heard his word? who hath marked his word, and heard it?

19 Behold, a ^d whirlwind of the LORD is gone forth in fury, even a grievous whirlwind: it shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked.

20 The ^e anger of the LORD shall not return until he have executed, and till he have performed the thoughts of his heart: "in the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly.

21 "I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran: I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied.

26 How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart;

27 Which think to cause my people to forget my name by their dreams which they tell every man to his neighbour, ^a as their fathers have forgotten my name for Baal.

28 The prophet ^a that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the LORD.

Verse 18. Who hath stood in the counsel of the Lord? Who of them has ever received a word of prophecy from me? My word is not in them.

Verse 19. Behold, a whirlwind. The *sin*oom: the hot pestilential wind blowing from the south.

Verse 20. In the latter days ye shall consider it. I give you warning; and this punishment which I now threaten shall surely take place; a short time will determine it: ye shall not escape.

Verse 21. I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran. Not to save souls, but to profit themselves.

I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied. The churches which have legal emoluments are ever in danger of being overrun and ruined by worldly and self-interested priests.

Verse 23. Am I a God at hand,—and not a God afar off? You act as if you thought I could not see you! Am I not omnipresent?

Verse 27. By their dreams. Dreams were anciently reputed as a species of inspiration; see Numb. xii. 6, 1 Sam. xxviii. 6, Joel iii. 1, Dan. vii. 1. In the Book of Genesis we find many examples; and although many mistook the workings of their own vain imaginations in sleep for revelations from God, yet he has often revealed himself in this way: but such dreams were easily distinguished from the others. They were always such as had no connexion with the gratification of the flesh; they were such as contained warnings against sin, and excitements to holiness; they were always consecutive—well connected, with a proper beginning and ending; such as possessed the intellect more than the imagination.

Verse 28. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord.

saith the LORD, that steal my words every one from his neighbour.

31 Behold, I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, ^a that use their tongues, and say, He saith.

32 Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the LORD, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by ^b their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them: therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the LORD.

33 And when this people, or the prophet, or a priest, shall ask thee, saying, What is ^a the burden of the LORD? thou shalt then say unto them, What burden? "I will even forsake you, saith the LORD.

34 And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people, that shall say, The burden of the LORD, I will even ^a punish that man and his house.

35 Thus shall ye say every one to his neighbour, and every one to his brother, What hath the LORD answered? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

36 And the burden of the LORD shall ye mention no more: for every man's word shall be his burden; for ye have perverted the words of the living God, of the LORD of hosts our God.

37 Thus shalt thou say to the prophet, What hath the LORD answered thee? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

38 But since ye say, The burden of the LORD; therefore thus saith the LORD; Because ye say this word, The burden of the LORD, and I have sent unto you, saying, Ye shall not say, The burden of the LORD;

39 Therefore, behold, I, even I, ^a will utterly forget you, and ^a I will forsake you, and the city that I gave you and your fathers, and cast you out of my presence:

40 And I will bring ^a an everlasting reproach upon you, and a perpetual shame, which shall not be forgotten.

Do not mingle these equivocal matters with positive revelations. Mix none of your own devices with my doctrines.

Verse 29. Is not my word like as a fire? When it is communicated to the true prophet, it is like a fire shut up in his bones; he cannot retain it, he must publish it: and when published it is like a hammer that breaks the rock in pieces; it is ever accompanied by a divine power, that causes both sinner and saint to feel its weight and importance.

In the original words there is something singular: halo coh debari koesch, "Is not thus my word like fire?" I suspect that coh, thus, was formerly written coach, strength or power; and so it was understood by the Targumist: "Are not all my words strong, like fire?" and probably the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews read it thus; Heb. iv. 12. This admitted, the text would read, "Is not my word powerful, like fire?" or, "Is not the power of my word like fire?" But take heed lest we think, as some have thought and affirmed, that the sacred writings are quite sufficient of themselves to enlighten, convince, and convert the soul, and that there is no need of the Holy Spirit. Fire itself must be applied by an agent in order to produce its effects; and surely the hammer cannot break the rock in pieces, unless wielded by an able workman. And it is God's Spirit alone that can thus apply it; for we find it frequently read and frequently spoken, without producing any salutary effects.

Verse 33. What is the burden of the Lord? The word massa, here used, signifies burden, oracle, prophetic discourse; and is used by almost every prophet. But the persons in the text appear to have been mockers. "Where is this burden of the Lord?"—"What is the burden now?" To this insolent question the prophet answers in the following verses.

I will even forsake you] I will punish the prophet, the priest, and the people, that speak thus, ver. 34. Here are burdens.

Verse 36. Every man's word shall be his burden] Ye say that all God's messages are burdens, and to you they shall be such: whereas, had you used them as you ought, they would have been blessings to you.

For ye have perverted the words of the living God] And thus have sinned against your own souls.

Verse 40. I will bring an everlasting reproach upon you] And this reproach of having rebelled against so good a God, and rejected so powerful a Saviour, follows them to this day through all their dispersions, in every part of the habitable earth. The word of the Lord cannot fail.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Under the emblem of the good and bad figs is represented the fate of the Jews already gone into captivity with Jeconiah, and of those that remained still in their own country with Zedekiah. It is likewise intimated that God would deal kindly with the former, but that his wrath would still pursue the latter, 1-10.

THE ^aLORD shewed me, and, behold, two baskets of figs were set before the temple of the LORD, after that Nebuchadrezzar ^bking of Babylon had carried away captive ^cJeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, with the carpenters and smiths from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon.

2 One basket had very good figs, even like the figs that are first ripe; and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, ^dthey were so bad.

3 Then said the LORD unto me, What seest thou, Jeremiah? And I said, Figs; the good figs, very good; and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil:

4 Again the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

5 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Like these good figs, so will I acknowledge ^ethem that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good.

Verse 1. The Lord shewed me, and, behold, two baskets of figs] This prophecy was undoubtedly delivered in the first year of the reign of Zedekiah.

Under the type of good and bad figs, God represents the state of the persons who had already been carried captives into Babylon, with their king Jeconiah, compared with the state of those who should be carried away with Zedekiah. Those already carried away, being the choice of the people, are represented by the good figs; those now remaining, and soon to be carried into captivity, are represented by the bad figs, that are good for nothing.

7 And I will give them ^aa heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be ^bmy people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me ^cwith their whole heart.

8 And as the evil ^dfigs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely thus saith the LORD, So will I give Zedekiah the king of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that remain in this land, and ^ethem that dwell in the land of Egypt:

9 And I will deliver them ^fto ^gbe removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt, ^hto be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt ⁱand a curse, in all places whither I shall drive them.

Verse 5. Like these good figs, so will I acknowledge] Those already carried away into captivity, I esteem as far more excellent than those who still remain in the land. I will watch over them by an especial providence, and they shall be restored to their own land.

Verse 7. They shall be my people] I will renew my covenant with them, for they will return to me with their whole heart.

Verse 8. So will I give Zedekiah] I will treat these as they deserve. They shall be carried into captivity, and scattered through all nations.

Verse 10. I will send the sword] Many of them fell by sword and famine in the war with the Chaldeans, and many more by such means afterwards.

CHAPTER XXV.

This chapter contains a summary of the judgments denounced by Jeremiah against Judah, Babylon, and many other nations. It begins with reproving the Jews for disobeying the calls of God to repentance, 1-7; on which account their captivity, with that of other neighbouring nations, during seventy years, is foretold, 8-11. At the expiration of that period (computing from the invasion of Nebuchadrezzar in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, to the famous edict of the first year of Cyrus), an end was to be put to the Babylonian empire, 12-14. All this is again declared by the emblem of that cup of wrath which the prophet, as it should seem in a vision, tendered to all the nations which he enumerates, 15-29. And for further confirmation, it is a third time repeated in a very beautiful and elevated strain of poetry, 30-38. The talent of diversifying the ideas, images, and language, even when the subject is the same, or nearly so, appears nowhere in such perfection as among the sacred poets.

THE word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah *in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that was the first year of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon;

2 The which Jeremiah the prophet spake unto all the people of Judah, and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying,

3 ^b From the thirteenth year of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, even unto this day, that is the three and twentieth year, the word of the LORD hath come unto me, and I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; ^c but ye have not hearkened.

4 And the LORD hath sent unto you all his servants the prophets, ^d rising early and sending them; but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear.

5 They said, * Turn ye again now every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the LORD hath given unto you, and to your fathers for ever and ever:

6 And go not after other gods to serve them, and to worship them, and provoke me not to anger with the works of your hands; and I will do you no hurt.

7 Yet ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the LORD; that ye might ^e provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt.

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts; Because ye have not heard my words,

9 Behold, I will send and take ^f all the families of the north, saith the LORD, and Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, ^g my servant, and will bring them against this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, and against all these nations round about, and will utterly destroy them, and ^h make them an astonishment, and an hissing, and perpetual desolations.

10 Moreover ⁱ I will take from them the ^k voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, ^l the sound of the millstones, and the light of the candle.

11 And this whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years.

12 And it shall come to pass, ^m when seventy years are accomplished, that I will ⁿ punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the LORD, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans, ^o and will make it perpetual desolations.

13 And I will bring upon that land all my words which I have pronounced against it, even all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath prophesied against all the nations.

14 ^p For many nations ^q and great kings shall ^r serve themselves of them also: ^s and I will recompense them according to their deeds, and according to the works of their own hands.

15 For thus saith the LORD God of Israel unto me; Take the ^t wine cup of this fury at my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it.

16 And ^u they shall drink, and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them.

17 Then took I the cup at the LORD's hand, and made all the nations to drink, unto whom the LORD had sent me.

18 To wit, Jerusalem, and the cities of Judah, and the kings thereof, and the princes thereof, to make them ^v a desolation, an astonishment, an hissing, and ^w a curse; as it is this day;

19 ^x Pharaoh king of Egypt, and his servants, and his princes, and all his people;

20 And all ^y the mingled people, and all the kings of ^z the land of Uz, ^{aa} and all the kings of the land of the Philistines, and Ashkelon, and Azzah, and Ekron, and ^{ab} the remnant of Ashdod,

Verse 12. And that nation.] It is certainly more clear and definite to read, "I will punish the king of Babylon, and his nation."

Verse 14. Many nations and great kings.] The Medes and the Persians, under Cyrus; and several princes, his vassals or allies.

Verse 15. Take the wine cup of this fury.] For an ample illustration of this passage and simile, see the note on Isa. li. 21.

Verse 17. Then took I the cup—and made all the nations to drink.] This cup of God's wrath is merely symbolical, and simply means that the prophet should declare to all these people that they shall fall under the Chaldean yoke, and that this is a punishment inflicted on them by God for their iniquities.

Verse 19. Pharaoh king of Egypt.] This was Pharaoh-necho, Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah—in the fourth year.] The defeat of the Egyptians by Nebuchadnezzar at Carchemish, and the subsequent taking of Jerusalem, occurred in this year, viz., the fourth year of Jehoiakim.

The first year of Nebuchadnezzar.] This king was associated with his father two years before the death of the latter. The Jews reckon his reign from this time, and this was the first of those two years; but the Chaldeans date the commencement of his reign two years later, viz., at the death of his father.

Verse 7. That ye might provoke.] Ye would not hearken; but chose to provoke me with anger.

Verse 9. Behold, I will send.] At this time Nebuchadnezzar had not invaded the land, according to this Version; but the Hebrew may be translated, "Behold, I am sending, and have taken all the families;" that is, all the allies of the king of Babylon.

Verse 10. The sound of the millstones, and the light of the candle.] These two are conjoined, because they generally ground corn before day, by the light of the candle.

Verse 11. Shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years.] As this prophecy was delivered in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, 23 *Dedan, and Tema, and Buz, and all ^bthat are in the utmost corners,

24 And ^call the kings of Arabia, and all the kings of the mingled people that dwell in the desert,

25 And all the kings of Zimri, and all the kings of ^eElam, and all the kings of the Medes, 26 ^fAnd all the kings of the north, far and near, one with another, and all the kingdoms of the world, which are upon the face of the earth: ^gand the king of Sheshach shall drink after them.

27 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: ^hDrink ye, and ⁱbe drunken, and spue, and fall, and ^jrise no more, because of the sword which I will send among you.

28 And it shall be, if they refuse to take the cup at thine hand to drink, then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Ye shall certainly drink.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Jeremiah, by the command of God, goes into the court of the Lord's house; and foretells the destruction of the temple and city, if not prevented by the speedy repentance of the people, 1-7. By this unwelcome prophecy his life was in great danger; although saved by the influence of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, who makes a masterly defence for the prophet, 8-18. Urijah is condemned, but escapes to Egypt; whence he is brought back by Je'oiakim, and slain, 20-23. Ahikam befriends Jeremiah, 24.

IN the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah came this word from the LORD, saying,

3 Thus saith the LORD; Stand in ^athe court of the LORD's house, and speak unto all the cities of Judah, which come to worship in the LORD's house, ^ball the words that I command thee to speak unto them; ^cdiminish not a word:

4 ^dIf so be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way, that I may ^erepent me of the evil, which I purpose to do unto them, because of the evil of their doings.

5 And thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD; ^fIf ye will not hearken to me to walk in my law, which I have set before you,

6 To hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, ^gwhom I sent unto you, both rising up early, and sending ^hthem, but ye have not hearkened;

7 Then will I make this house like ⁱShiloh, and will make this city ^ja curse to all the nations of the earth.

8 So the priests and the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD.

9 Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the LORD had commanded ^khim to speak unto all the people, that the priests and the prophets and all the people took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die.

10 Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

11 When the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up from the king's house unto the house of the LORD, and sat down ^lin the entry of the new gate of the LORD's house.

12 Then spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes and to all the people, saying, ^mThis man is worthy to die; ⁿfor he hath prophesied against this city, as ye have heard with your ears.

13 Then spake Jeremiah unto all the princes and to all the people, saying, The LORD sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city all the words that ye have heard.

14 Therefore now ^oamend your ways and ^pyour doings, and obey the voice of the LORD your God; and the LORD will ^qrepent him of the evil that he hath pronounced against you.

15 As for me, behold, ^rI am in your hand: do with me ^sas seemeth good and meet unto you.

16 But know ye for certain, that if ye put me to death, ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, and upon the inhabitants thereof: for of a truth the LORD hath sent me unto you, to speak all these words in your ears.

17 Then said the princes and all the people unto the priests and to the prophets; This man is not worthy to die: for he hath spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.

18 Then rose up certain of the elders of the land, and spake to all the assembly of the people, saying,

19 Micah the Morasthite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and spake to all the people of Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^tZion shall be plowed like a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest.

20 Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him at all to death? ^udid he not fear the LORD, and besought ^vthe LORD, and the LORD ^wrepented him of the evil which he had pronounced against them? ^xThus might we procure great evil against our souls.

21 And there was also a man that prophesied in the name of the LORD, Urijah the son of Shemaiah of Kirjath-jearim, who prophesied against this city and against this land according to the words of Jeremiah:

22 And when Jehoiakim the king, with all his mighty men, and all the princes, heard his words, the king sought to put him to death: but when Urijah heard it, he was afraid, and fled, and went into Egypt;

23 And Jehoiakim the king sent men into Egypt, ^ynamely, Elnathan the son of Achbor, and ^zcertain men with him into Egypt.

24 And they fetched forth Urijah out of Egypt, and brought him unto Jehoiakim the king; who slew him with the sword, and cast his dead body into the graves of the ^{aa}common people.

25 Nevertheless ^{ab}the hand of Ahikam the son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah, that they should not give him into the hand of the people to put him to death.

Verse 1. In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim] As this prophecy must have been delivered in the first or second year of the reign of Jehoiakim it is totally out of its place here.

Verse 9. And all the people] That were in company with the priests and the prophets.

Verse 10. The princes of Judah] The king's court; his cabinet counsellors.

Verse 12. The LORD sent me to prophesy] My commission is from him, and my words are his own.

Verse 13. Therefore now amend your ways] If ye wish to escape the judgment which I have predicted, turn to God, and iniquity shall not be your ruin.

Verse 14. As for me, behold, I am in your hand] I am the messenger of God; you may do with me what you please; but if you slay me, you will bring innocent blood upon yourselves.

Verse 16. This man is not worthy to die] The whole court acquitted him.

Verse 17. Certain of the elders] This is really a fine defence, and the argument was perfectly conclusive. Some think that it was Ahikam who undertook the prophet's defence.

Verse 18. Micah the Morasthite] The same as stands among the prophets. Now all these prophesied as hard things against the land as Jeremiah had done; yet they were not put to death, for the people saw that they were sent of God.

Verse 24. The hand of Ahikam—was with Jeremiah] And it was probably by his influence that Jeremiah did not share the same fate with Urijah. The Ahikam mentioned here was probably the father of Gedaliah, who, after the capture of Jerusalem, was appointed governor of the country by Nebuchadnezzar, chap. xl. 5. Of the prophet Urijah, whether he was true or false, we know nothing but what we learn from this place.

That they should not give him into the hand of the people] Though acquitted in the supreme court, he was not out of danger; there was a popular prejudice against him, and it is likely that Ahikam was obliged to conceal him, that they might not put him to death. The genuine ministers of God have no favour to expect from those who are HIS enemies.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Ambassadors being come from several neighbouring nations to solicit the king of Judah to join in a confederacy against the king of Babylon, Jeremiah is commanded to put bands and yokes upon his neck (the emblems of subjection and slavery), and to send them afterwards by those ambassadors to their respective princes; intimating by this significant type that God had decreed their subjection to the Babylonian empire, and that it was their wisdom to submit. It is further declared that all the conquered nations shall remain in subjection to the Chaldeans during the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, and those of his son and grandson, even till the arrival of that period in which the Babylonians shall have filled up the measure of their iniquities; and that then the mighty Chaldean monarchy itself, for a certain period the paramount power of the habitable globe, shall be visited with a dreadful storm of divine wrath, through the violence of which it shall be dashed to pieces like a potter's vessel, the fragments falling into the hands of many nations and great kings, 1-11. Zedekiah, particularly, is admonished not to join in the revolt against Nebuchadnezzar, and warned against trusting to the suggestions of false prophets, 11-18. The chapter concludes with foretelling that what still remained of the sacred vessels of the temple should be carried to Babylon, and not restored till after the destruction of the Chaldean empire, 19-22.

IN the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah ^aking of Judah came this word unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

3 Thus ^bsaith the LORD to me; Make thee bonds and yokes, ^cand put them upon thy neck,

3 And send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah;

4 And command them ^dto say unto their masters, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say unto your masters;

5 ^eI have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm, and ^fhave given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me.

6 ^gAnd now have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, ^hmy servant; and ⁱthe beasts of the field have I given him also to serve him.

7 ^jAnd all nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son, ^kuntil the very time of his land come: ^land then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him.

8 And it shall come to pass, that the nation and kingdom which will not serve the same Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, and that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, that nation will I punish, saith the LORD, with the sword, and with the famine, and with the pestilence, until I have consumed them by his hand.

9 Therefore hearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners, nor to your ^mdreamers, nor to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers, which speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon:

10 ⁿFor they prophesy a lie unto you, to ^oremove you far from your land; and that I should drive you out, and ye should perish.

11 But the nations that bring their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him, those will I let remain still in their own land, saith the LORD; and they shall till it, and dwell therein.

12 I spake also to ^pZedekiah king of Judah according to all these words, saying, Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people, and live.

13 ^qWhy will ye die, thou and thy people, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, as the LORD hath spoken against the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon?

14 Therefore hearken not unto the words of the prophets that speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon: for they prophesy ^ra lie unto you.

15 For I have not sent them, saith the LORD, yet they prophesy ^sa lie in my name; that I might drive you out, and that ye might perish, ye, and the prophets that prophesy unto you.

16 Also I spake to the priests, and to all this

CHAPTER XXVIII.

One of those pretended prophets spoken of in the preceding chapter, having contradicted and opposed Jeremiah, receives an awful declaration that, as a proof to the people of his having spoken without commission, he should die in the then current year; which accordingly came to pass in the seventh month, 1-17.

AND ^a it came to pass the same year, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year, and in the fifth month, that Hananiah the son of Azur the prophet, which was of Gibeon, spake unto me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests and of all the people, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, I have broken ^b the yoke of the king of Babylon.

3 ^c Within ^d two full years will I bring again into this place all the vessels of the LORD's house, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away^e from this place, and carried them to Babylon:

4 And I will bring again to this place Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, with all the ^e captives of Judah, that went into Babylon, saith the LORD: for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.

^a Ch. xxvii. 1.—^b Ch. xxvii. 12.—^c Ch. xxvii. 16.—^d Heb. two years

Verse 1. And it came to pass the same year—the fifth month] This verse gives the precise date of the prophecy in the preceding chapter; and proves that Zedekiah, not Jehoiakim, is the name that should be read in the first verse of that chapter.

Hananiah the son of Azur the prophet] One who called himself a prophet; who pretended to be in commerce with the Lord, and to receive revelations from him. He was probably a priest; for he was of Gibeon, a sacerdotal city in the tribe of Benjamin.

Verse 2. Thus speaketh the Lord] What awful impudence! when he knew in his conscience that God had given him no such commission.

Verse 3. Within two full years] Time sufficient for the 5 Then the prophet Jeremiah said unto the prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests, and in the presence of all the people that stood in the house of the LORD,

6 Even the prophet Jeremiah said, 'Amen: the LORD do so: the LORD perform thy words which thou hast prophesied, to bring again the vessels of the LORD's house, and all that is carried away captive, from Babylon unto this place.

7 Nevertheless hear thou now this word that I speak in thine ears, and in the ears of all the people;

8 The prophets that have been before me and before thee of old prophesied both against many countries, and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence.

Chaldeans to destroy the city, and carry away the rest of the sacred vessels; but he did not live to see the end of this short period.

Verse 6. Amen; the Lord do so] O that it might be according to thy word! May the people find this to be true!

Verse 9. When the word of the prophet shall come to pass] He is a true prophet who specifies things that he says shall happen, and also fixes the time of the event; and the things do happen, and in that time.

Verse 10. Then Hananiah—took the yoke—and brake it.] He endeavoured by this symbolical act to persuade them of the truth of his prediction.

Verse 13. Yokes of iron.] Instead of Nebuchadnezzar's yoke being broken, this captivity shall be more severe than shall the prophet be known, that the LORD hath truly sent him.

10 Then Hananiah the prophet took the yoke from off the prophet Jeremiah's neck, and brake it.

11 And Hananiah spake in the presence of all the people, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Even so will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon ^b from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years. And the prophet Jeremiah went his way.

12 Then the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the prophet, (after that Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremiah), saying,

13 Go and tell Hananiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Thou hast broken the yokes of wood;

the preceding. All these nations shall have a yoke of iron on their neck. He shall subdue them, and take all their property, even the beasts of the field.

Verse 15. Hear now, Hananiah; the Lord hath not sent thee] This was a bold speech in the presence of those priests and people who were prejudiced in favour of this false prophet, who prophesied to them smooth things. In such cases men wish to be deceived.

but thou shalt make for them yokes of iron.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; 'I have put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these nations, that they may serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and they shall serve him: and 'I have given him the beasts of the field also.

15 Then said the prophet Jeremiah unto Hananiah the prophet, Hear now, Hananiah; The LORD hath not sent thee; but 'thou makest this people to trust in a lie.

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will cast thee from off the face of the earth: this year thou shalt die, because thou hast taught 'rebellion' against the LORD.

17 So Hananiah the prophet died the same year in the seventh month.

^aCh. xxix. 31. Esek. xlii. 22.—^bDeut. xlii. 5. Ch. xxix. 32.—^cHeb. revolt.

Verse 16. This year thou shalt die] By this shall the people know who is the true prophet. Thou hast taught rebellion against the Lord, and God will cut thee off; and this shall take place, not within seventy years, or two years, but in this very year, and within two months from this time.

Verse 17. So Hananiah—died the same year in the seventh month.] And thus God, in mercy, gave him about two months, in which he might prepare to meet his Judge.

CHAPTER XXIX.

This chapter contains the substance of two letters sent by the prophet to the captives in Babylon. In the first he recommends to them patience and composure under their present circumstances, which were to endure for seventy years, 1-14; in which, however, they should fare better than their brethren who remained behind, 15-19. But, finding little credit given to this message, on account of the suggestions of the false prophets, Ahub, the son of Kolaiiah, and Zedekiah, the son of Mauseiiah, who flattered them with the hopes of a speedy end to their captivity, he sends a second, in which he denounces heavy judgments against those false prophets that deceived them, 20-23, as he did afterwards against Shemaiah the Nehelamite, who had sent a letter of complaint against Jeremiah, in consequence of his message, 24-32.

NOW these are the words of the letter that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem unto the residue of the ^aelders which were carried away captives, and to the priests, and to the prophets, and to all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had ^bcarried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon;

2 [After that ^cJecooniah the king and the queen, and the ^deunuchs, the princes of Judah and Jerusalem, and the carpenters, and the smiths, were departed from Jerusalem;]

3 By the hand of Elasah the son of Shaphan, and Gemariah the son of Hilkiah, (whom Zedekiah king of Judah sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon) saying,

4 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, unto all that are carried away captives, whom I have caused to be carried away from Jerusalem unto Babylon;

Verse 1. Now these are the words of the letter] This transaction took place in the first or second year of Zedekiah.

Verse 4. Thus saith the Lord of hosts] This was the commencement of the letter.

Verse 5. Build ye houses] Prepare for a long continuance in your present captivity. Provide yourselves with the 5 'Build ye houses, and dwell in them, and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them;

6 Take ye wives, and beget sons and daughters: and take wives for your sons, and give your daughters to husbands, that they may bear sons and daughters; that ye may be increased there, and not diminished.

7 And seek the peace of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, 'and pray unto the LORD for it: for in the peace thereof shall ye have peace.

8 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, 'deceive you, neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed.

9 'For they prophesy 'falsely unto you in my name: I have not sent them, saith the LORD.

necessaries of life, and multiply in the land, that ye may become a powerful people.

Verse 7. Seek the peace of the city] Endeavour to promote, as far as you can, the prosperity of the places in which ye sojourn. Let no disaffection appear in word or act.

Verse 8. Neither hearken to your dreams] Rather, years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place.

11 For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the LORD, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an ^aexpected end.

12 Then shall ye ^bcall upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you.

13 And ^cye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me ^dwith all your heart.

14 And ^eI will be found of you, saith the LORD: and I will turn away your captivity; and ^fI will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you; saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive.

15 Because ye have said, The LORD hath raised us up prophets in Babylon;

16 Know that thus saith the LORD of the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and of all the people that dwelleth in this city, and of your brethren that are not gone forth with you into captivity;

17 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, I will send upon them the ^gsword, the famine, and the pestilence, and will make them like ^hvile figs, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

18 And I will persecute them with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence, and ⁱwill deliver them to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth, ^jto be ^ka curse, and an astonishment, and an hissing, and a reproach, among all the nations whither I have driven them:

19 Because they have not hearkened to my words, saith the LORD, which ^lI sent unto them by my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them; but ye would not hear, saith the LORD.

20 Hear ye therefore the word of the LORD, all ye of the captivity, whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon:

21 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, of Ahab the son of Kolaiiah, and of Zedekiah the son of Maaseiah, which prophesy a lie unto you in my name; Behold, I will deliver them into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and he shall slay them before your eyes; dreamers; for it appears there was a class of such persons, who not only had acquired a facility of dreaming themselves, but who undertook to interpret the dreams of others.

Verse 10. That after seventy years be accomplished] Seventy years is the measure which must be filled;—fill this to the brim;—complete this measure, and then you shall be visited and released.

Verse 14. I will gather you from all the nations] A quotation from Deut. xxx. 3, and see also Deut. iv. 7.

Verse 17. Behold, I will send upon them the sword] Do not envy the state of Zedekiah who sits on the throne of David, nor that of the people who are now in the land whence ye have been carried captive. The reader will not forget that the prophet is addressing the captives in Babylon.

Verse 21. He shall slay them before your eyes] Nebuchadnezzar would be led by political reasons to punish these 22 ^mAnd of them shall be taken up a curse by all the captivity of Judah which are in Babylon, saying, The LORD make thee like Zedekiah, and like Ahab, ⁿwhom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire;

23 Because ^othey have committed villany in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives, and have spoken lying words in my name, which I have not commanded them; even I know, and am a Witness, saith the LORD.

24 Thus shalt thou also speak to Shemaiah the ^pNehelamite, saying,

25 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Because thou hast sent letters in thy name unto all the people that are at Jerusalem, ^qand to Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, and to all the priests, saying,

26 The LORD hath made thee priest in the stead of Jehoiada the priest, that ye should be ^rofficers in the house of the LORD, for every man that is ^smad, and maketh himself a prophet, that thou shouldst ^tput him in prison, and in the stocks.

27 Now therefore why hast thou not reproved Jeremiah of Anathoth, which maketh himself a prophet to you?

28 For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, This captivity is long: ^ubuild ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

29 And Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

30 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

31 Send to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the LORD concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite, Because that Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, ^vand I sent him not, and he caused you to trust in a lie:

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will punish Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and his seed: he shall not have a man to dwell among this people: neither shall he behold the good that I will do for my people, saith the LORD; ^wbecause he hath taught ^xrebellion against the LORD.

pretended prophets, as their predictions tended to make his Israelitish subjects uneasy and disaffected, and might excite them to rebellion. He therefore slew them; two of them, it appears, he burnt alive, viz., Ahab and Zedekiah. Burning alive was a Chaldean punishment, Dan. iii. 6, and Amos ii. 1.

Verse 26. For every man that is mad, and maketh himself a prophet] Mad, meshugga, in ecstatic rapture; such as appeared in the prophets, whether true or false, when under the influence, the one of God, the other of a demon. See 2 Kings ix. 11; Hos. ix. 7.

Verse 32. I will punish Shemaiah] Because he hath taught rebellion against the Lord. He excited the people to reject Jeremiah, and to receive the lying words of the false prophets; and these led them to rebel.

CHAPTER XXX.

This and the following chapter must relate to a still future restoration of the posterity of Jacob from their several dispersions, as no deliverance hitherto afforded them comes up to the terms of it; for, after the return from Babylon, they were again enslaved by the Greeks and Romans, contrary to the prediction in the eighth verse; in every papistical country they have laboured under great civil disabilities, and in some of them have been horribly persecuted; upon the ancient people has this mystic Babylon very heavily laid her yoke; and in no place in the world are they at present their own masters; so that this prophecy remains to be fulfilled in the reign of David, i. e., the Messiah; the type, according to the general structure of the prophetic writings, being put for the antitype. The prophecy opens by an easy transition from the temporal deliverance spoken of before, and describes the mighty revolutions that shall precede the restoration of the descendants of Israel, 1-9, who are encouraged to trust in the promises of God, 10, 11. They are, however, to expect corrections; which shall have a happy issue in a future period, 12-17. The great blessings of Messiah's reign are enumerated, 18-22; and the wicked and impenitent declared to have no share in them, 23, 24.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the LORD God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book.

3 For, lo, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the LORD: ^aand I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

4 And these are the words that the LORD spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah.

5 For thus saith the LORD; We have heard a voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace.

6 Ask ye now, and see whether ^aa man doth travail with child? wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, ^aas a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness?

7 'Alas! for that day is great, ^aso that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it.

8 For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him.

9 But they shall serve the LORD their God, and David their King, whom I will raise up unto them.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord] Supposing these two chapters to be penned after the taking of Jerusalem, which appears the most natural, they will refer to the same events, one captivity shadowing forth another, and one restoration being the type or pledge of the second.

Verse 2. Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book.] The book here recommended I believe to be the thirtieth and thirty-first chapters; for among the Hebrews any portion of writing, in which the subject was finished, however small, was termed sepher, a book, a treatise or discourse.

Verse 3. The days come] First, After the conclusion of the seventy years. Secondly, under the Messiah.

That I will bring again the captivity of Israel] The ten tribes, led captivity by the king of Assyria, and dispersed among the nations.

And Judah] The people carried into Babylon at two different times; first, under Jeconiah, and, secondly, under Zedekiah, by Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 5. We have heard a voice of trembling] This may refer to the state and feelings of the people during the war which Cyrus carried on against the Babylonians. This is 10 Therefore ¹fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, saith the LORD; neither be dismayed, O Israel: for, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed ²from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid.

11 For I am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: ¹though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, ²yet will I not make a full end of thee: but I will correct thee ³in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished.

12 For thus saith the LORD, ⁴Thy bruise is incurable, and thy wound is grievous.

13 There is none to plead thy cause, ⁵that thou mayest be bound up: ⁶thou hast no healing medicines.

14 ⁷All thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not; for I have wounded thee with the wound ⁸of an enemy, with the chastisement ⁹of a cruel one, for the multitude of thine iniquity; ¹⁰because thy sins were increased.

15 Why ¹¹criest thou for thine affliction? thy sorrow is incurable for the multitude of thine iniquity: because thy sins were increased, I have done these things unto thee.

well described in the next verse, where men are represented as being, through pain and anguish, like women in travail

Verse 7. Alas! for that day is great] When the Medes and Persians, with all their forces, shall come on the Chaldeans, it will be the day of Jacob's trouble—trial, dismay, and uncertainty; but he shall be delivered out of it—the Chaldean empire shall fall, but the Jews shall be delivered by Cyrus. Jerusalem shall be destroyed by the Romans, but the Israel of God shall be delivered from its ruin. Not one that had embraced Christianity perished in the sackage of that city.

Verse 8. I will break his yoke] That is, the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar.

Of him] Of Jacob (ver. 7), viz., the then captive Jews.

Verse 9. But they shall serve the Lord their God, and David their King] This must refer to the times of the Messiah; David was long since dead; and none of his descendants ever reigned over them after the Babylonish captivity, nor have they since been a regal nation.

Verse 11. Though I make a full end of all nations] Though the Persians destroy the nations whom they vanquish, yet they shall not destroy thee.

incurable; for the cure is promised in ver. 17, I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds.

Verse 18. There is none to plead thy cause] All thy friends and allies have forsaken thee.

Verse 16. They that devour thee] The Chaldeans, Shall be devoured] By the Medes and Persians.

All that prey upon thee will I give for a prey.] The Assyrians were destroyed by the Babylonians; the Babylonians, by the Medes and Persians; the Egyptians and Persians were destroyed by the Greeks, under Alexander.

Verse 18. The city shall be builded upon her own heap] Be re-edified from its own ruins.

And the palace shall remain] Meaning, the king's house shall be restored; or, more probably, the temple shall be rebuilt; which was true, for after the Babylonish captivity it was rebuilt by Nehemiah, &c. By the tents distinguished from the dwelling-places of Jacob, we may understand all the minor dispersions of the Jews, as well as those numerous synagogues found in large cities.

Verse 19. I will multiply them] They shall be very numerous; even where at present they have but tents.

I will also glorify them] I will put honour upon them everywhere, so that they shall be no longer contemptible.

their congregation shall be established before me, and I will punish all that oppress them.

21 And their nobles shall be of themselves, ^aand their governor shall proceed from the midst of them: and I will ^bcause him to draw near, and he shall approach unto me: for who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? saith the LORD.

22 And ye shall be ^cmy people, and I will be your God.

23 Behold, the ^dwhirlwind of the LORD goeth forth with fury, a ^econtinuing whirlwind: it shall ^ffall with pain upon the head of the wicked.

This will be a very great change, for they are now despised all over the earth.

Verse 20. Their children also] They shall have the education of their own children as formerly.

And their congregation] Their religious assemblies.

Shall be established] Being, in the latter days, incorporated with those "who serve the Lord their God, and worship the Messiah, the son of David."

Verse 21. Their nobles shall be of themselves] Strangers shall not rule over them; and—

Their governor shall proceed from the midst of them] Both Nehemiah and Zerubbabel, their nobles and governors after the return from Babylon, were Jews.

Verse 22. Ye shall be my people] The old covenant shall be renewed.

Verse 23. The whirlwind of the Lord] A grievous tempest of desolation,— Shall fall with pain upon the head of the wicked.] On Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans.

Verse 24. In the latter days ye shall consider it.] By the latter days the gospel dispensation is generally meant; and that restoration which is the principal topic in this and the succeeding chapter refers to this time.

CHAPTER XXXI.

This chapter continues the subject of the preceding in a beautiful vision represented at a distant period. God is introduced expressing his continual regard for Israel, and promising to restore them to their land and liberty, 1-5. Immediately heralds appear, proclaiming on Mount Ephraim the arrival of the great year of jubilee, and summoning the people to gather unto Zion, 6. Upon which God resumes the speech; and makes such gracious promises both of leading them tenderly by the way, and making them happy in their own land, that all the nations of the world are called upon to consider with deep attention this great salvation, 7-14. The scene is then diversified by a very happy invention. Rachel, the mother of Joseph and Benjamin, is represented as risen from her tomb, in a city of Benjamin near Jerusalem, looking about for her children, and bitterly lamenting their fate, as none of them are to be seen in the land of their fathers, 15. But she is consoled with the assurance that they are not lost, and that they shall in due time be restored, 16, 17. To this another tender and beautiful scene immediately succeeds. Ephraim (often put for the TEN tribes) comes in view. He laments his past errors, and expresses the most earnest desires of reconciliation; upon which God, as a tender parent, immediately forgives him, 18-20. The virgin of Israel is then directed to prepare for returning home, 21, 22; and the vision closes with a promise of abundant peace and security to Israel and Judah in the latter days, 23-26. The blessed condition of Israel under the Messiah's reign is then beautifully contrasted with their afflicted state during the general dispersion, 27, 28. In the remaining part of the chapter the promises to the posterity of Jacob of the impartial administration of justice, increasing peace and prosperity, the universal diffusion of righteousness, and stability in their own land after a general restoration in gospel times, are repeated, enlarged on, and illustrated by a variety of beautiful figures, 29-40.

AT *the same time, saith the LORD, ^bwill I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people.

2 Thus saith the LORD, The people which were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when ^cI went to cause him to rest.

3 The LORD hath appeared ^dof old unto me, saying, Yea, ^eI have loved thee with ^fan everlasting love: therefore ^gwith lovingkindness have I ^hdrawn thee.

4 Again, ⁱI will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: thou shalt again be adorned with thy ^jtabrets, ^kand shalt go forth ^lin the dances of them that make merry.

5 ^mThou shalt yet plant vines upon the mountains of Samaria: the planters shall plant, and shall ⁿeat them as common things.

6 For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, ^oArise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the LORD our God.

7 For thus saith the LORD; ^pSing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, O LORD, save thy people, the remnant of Israel.

8 Behold, I will bring them ^qfrom the north country, and ^rgather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither.

Verse 1. At the same time] This discourse was delivered at the same time with the former; and, with that, constitutes the Book which God ordered the prophet to write.

Will I be the God of all the families of Israel] I shall bring back the ten tribes, as well as their brethren the Jews. The restoration of the Israelites is the principle subject of this chapter.

Verse 2. The people which were left of the sword] Those of the ten tribes that had escaped death by the sword of the Assyrians.

Found grace in the wilderness] The place of their exile; a wilderness, compared to their own land.—Dahler. See Isa. xl. 3.

Verse 3. I have loved thee with an everlasting love] Veahabath olam alabitch, “and with the old love I have loved thee.” Can it be supposed, by any person seriously considering the context, that these words are spoken of God’s decrees of election in behalf of the Jews. Those who make it such, act most injudiciously on their own principle; for, how few of the Jews have ever given evidence that they were the children of God, from their restoration from Babylon to the present day! The words refer simply to their state as a people, most wondrously preserved by the providence and mercy of God, as a standing proof of the divine authority of the Scriptures, and as an evidence of God’s displeasure against sin.

Verse 4. O virgin of Israel] Israelites in general; now called virgin, because restored to their ancient purity.

With thy tabrets] Women in general played on these; they were used in times of rejoicing, and accompanied with dancing.

Verse 5. Thou shalt yet plant vines upon the mountains of Samaria] This was the regal city of the Israelites, as Jerusalem was of the Jews.

Shall eat them as common things] By the law of Moses no man was permitted to eat of the fruit of his vineyard till the fifth year after planting: Lev. xix. 23-25. But in the time here mentioned the fruit should be considered common—lawful at all times to be eaten.

Verse 6. For there shall be a day] Literally, for this is the day, or the day is come. The watchmen—the prophets.

9 ^aThey shall come with weeping, and with ^bsupplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk ^cby the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my ^dfirst-born.

10 Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel ^ewill gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd ^fdoth his flock.

11 For ^gthe LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him ^hfrom the hand of him that was stronger than he.

12 Therefore they shall come and sing in ⁱthe height of Zion, and shall flow together to ^jthe goodness of the LORD, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd: and their soul shall be as ^ka watered garden; ^land they shall not sorrow any more at all.

13 Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together: for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow.

14 And I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the LORD.

15 Thus saith the LORD; ^mA voice was heard in ⁿRamah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because ^othey were not.

O Lord, save thy people] Let the Jews earnestly intercede in behalf of their Israelitish brethren; or let them rejoice and praise the Lord, who hath saved the remnant of Israel.

Verse 8. I will bring them from the north country] From Babylon.

From the coasts of the earth] The ten tribes were carried away partly into Assyria by Tiglath-pileser, and partly into Mesopotamia and Media by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xv. 29, xvii. 6. Assyria and Media, being very distant from Palestine, might have been called, in prophetic language, the coasts of the earth.

The blind and the lame] I will so effectually remove all difficulties out of the way, that the veriest invalids shall safely proceed to, and happily arrive at, the end of their journey.

Verse 9. They shall come with weeping] Duly penetrated with a sense of their sins, they shall deeply deplore them; and, while weeping for them, earnestly supplicate God to have mercy upon them.

By the rivers of waters] I will so guide and provide for them in the arid deserts, that they shall find streams of water whenever necessary.

Ephraim is my first-born] Ephraim, being the most considerable, is often put for the whole of the ten tribes.

Verse 12. And shall flow together] Perhaps this may refer to their assembling at the three great national feasts, the passover, pentecost, and tabernacles.

Their soul shall be as a watered garden] Full of the light, life, and power of God; so that they shall rejoice evermore, pray without ceasing, and give thanks in every thing.

Verse 14. And I will satiate the soul of the priests] The worship of God being restored, they shall have their proper share of the victims brought to the temple.

Verse 15. A voice was heard in Ramah] Near this place Rachel was buried; who is here, in a beautiful figure of 16 Thus saith the LORD; Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the LORD; and * they shall come again from the land of the enemy.

17 And there is hope in thine end, saith the LORD, that thy children shall come again to their own border.

18 I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus; Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: ^b turn thou me, and I shall be turned; for thou art the LORD my God.

19 Surely ^c after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth.

20 Is Ephraim my dear son? ^d is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still: ^e therefore my bowels ^f are troubled for him; ^g I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the LORD.

21 Set thee up waymarks, make thee high heaps: ^h set thine heart toward the highway, open the way which thou wenterest: turn again, O virgin of Israel, turn again to these thy cities.

22 How long wilt thou ⁱ go about, O thou ^j backsliding daughter? for the LORD hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman shall compass a man.

23 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; As yet they shall use this speech in the land of Judah and in the cities thereof, when I shall bring again their captivity; ^k The LORD bless thee, O habitation of justice, and ^l mountain of holiness.

24 And there shall dwell in Judah itself, and ^m in all the cities thereof together, husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks.

25 For I have satiated the weary soul, and I have replenished every sorrowful soul.

26 Upon this I awaked, and beheld; and my sleep was sweet unto me.

27 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that ⁿ I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah, with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast.

28 And it shall come to pass, that like as I have ^o watched over them, ^p to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I watch over them, ^q to build, and to plant, saith the LORD.

29 ^r In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

30 ^s But every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

31 Behold, the ^t days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah:

32 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day that ^u I took them by the hand, to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, ^v although I was an husband unto them, saith the LORD:

poetry, represented as coming out of her grave, and lamenting bitterly for the loss of her children, none of whom presented themselves to her view, all being slain or gone into exile.

Verse 18. I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself [The exiled Israelites are in a state of deep repentance.

Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised] I was at first like an unbroken and untoward steer, the more I was chastised the more I rebelled; but now I have benefited by thy correction.

Turn thou me] I am now willing to take thy yoke upon me, but I have no power. I can only will and pray. Take the matter into thy own hand, and fully convert my soul.

Verse 19. After that I was turned] Converted from my sin, folly, and idolatry.

I repented] To conviction of sin, I now added contrition for sin. Conviction, in this sense of the word, must precede contrition or repentance. As soon as a man sees himself lost and undone, he is convicted of sin: when convicted, he begins to mourn.

I smote upon my thigh] This was a usual sign of deep affliction. See Ezek. xxi. 12.

Verse 20. Is Ephraim my dear son? It is impossible to conceive any thing more tenderly affectionate than this. The ten tribes, called here Ephraim, for the reason before alleged, are represented as acknowledging their sins. In this state of confusion and distress God sees him; and, commiserating his state, thus speaks:

1. Is Ephraim my dear son? Bad as he is in his own sight, and in the sight of my justice, he is now a penitent, and to me is precious. 2. However loathsome and disfigured he may be with sin and sorrow, he is to me a pleasant child—a child of delights; one in whose conversion I delight, and my angels rejoice. 3. God has taken much pains with him, and is unwilling to give him up; but now that he repents, he has not received the grace of God utterly in vain. 4. God feels a yearning desire towards him; “my bowels are agitated for him.” I feel nothing towards him but pity and love. When a sinner turns to God, God ceases to be angry with him. 5. God expresses his determination to save him; “I will be affectionately merciful to him, with tender mercy, saith the Lord.” He shall find that I treat him as a father does a returning prodigal son. So every penitent is sure to find mercy at the hand of God.

Verse 21. Set thee up waymarks] Alluding to stones, or heaps of stones, which travellers in the desert set up to ascertain the way, that they may know how to return. Mark the way to Babylon: thither ye shall certainly go; but from it ye shall as certainly return.

Verse 22. A woman shall compass a man.] “A weak woman shall compass or circumvent a strong man.” This place has given much trouble to Biblical critics. By many Christian writers it is considered a prophecy of the miraculous conception of the holy virgin; but as I am sure no such meaning is in the words, nor in the context, so I am satisfied no such meaning can be fairly brought out of them. I think it likely that the Jews in their present distressed circumstances are represented under the similitude of a weak defenceless female, nekebah; and the Chaldeans under that of a fierce strong man, gaber, who had prevailed over and oppressed this weak woman. But, notwithstanding the disparity between them, God would cause the woman—the weak defenceless Jews, to compass—to overcome the strong man—the powerful Babylonians. And this the prophet says would be a new thing in the land; for in such a case the lame would take the prey.

Verse 23. The Lord bless thee, O habitation of justice] Piety and industry shall go hand in hand; they shall have their husbandmen, their shepherds, and their herds, ver. 24. And Jerusalem shall become a righteous city, and the temple shall be a place of holiness; so the weary there shall have rest, and the sorrowful shall be abundantly comforted, ver. 24, 25.

Verse 26. Upon this I awaked] It appears that the prophecy, commencing with chap. xxx. 2, and ending with ver. 25 of this chapter, was delivered to the prophet in a dream.

Verse 27. I will sow—with the seed of man and with the seed of beast] I will multiply both men and cattle.

Verse 29. The fathers have eaten a sour grape] A proverbial expression for, “The children suffer for the offences 33 "But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, "I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; "and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

34 And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for "they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for "I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.

35 Thus saith the LORD; "which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth "the sea when the waves thereof roar; "The LORD of hosts is his name:

of their parents." This is explained in the next verse: "Every one shall die for his own iniquity." No child shall suffer divine punishment for the sin of his father; only so far as he acts in the same way can he be said to bear the sins of his parents.

Verse 31. A new covenant] The Christian dispensation.

Verse 33. After those days] Then God will be truly their God, received and acknowledged as their portion, and the sole object of their devotion; and they shall be his people, filled with holiness, and made partakers of the divine nature, so that they shall perfectly love him and worthily magnify his name.

Verse 34. And they shall teach no more] It shall be a time of universal light and knowledge; all shall know God in Christ, from the least to the greatest; the children shall be taught to read the New Covenant, and to understand the terms of their salvation.

I will forgive their iniquity] It shall be a time of GENERAL PARDON; multitudes shall be daily in the Christian church receiving the witness of God's Spirit, and in their life and conversation witnessing a good confession.

Verse 36. If those ordinances] As sure as the sun shall give light to the day, and the moon to the night, so surely shall the Jews continue to be a distinct people.

Verse 38. The city shall be built to the Lord] This cannot saith the LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever.

37 Thus saith the LORD; "If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the LORD.

38 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that the city shall be built to the LORD "from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner.

39 And "the measuring line shall yet go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about to Goath.

40 And the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the fields unto the brook of Kidron, "unto the corner of the horse-gate toward the east, "shall be holy unto the LORD; it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down any more for ever.

mean the city built after the return from Babylon, for two reasons: 1. This is to be much greater in extent; 2. It is to be permanent, never to be thrown down, verse 40. It must therefore mean, if taken literally at all, the city that is to be built by them when they are brought in with the fulness of the Gentiles.

The tower of Hananeel] This stood in the north-east part of the city; from thence the wall proceeded to the corner gate (probably the same as the old gate), thus named from its running out into an angle in that part.

Verse 39. Upon the hill Gareb] Gareb and Goath are out of the limits of this city. The latter is supposed to be Golgotha; that is, the heap of Gotha, which, being the place where our Lord was crucified, was without the city. These hills were a little to the north-west of the old city walls: but are destined to be within the new city. [Goath is not identical with Golgotha. The Targumist translates it: the heifer's pool.]

Verse 40. The whole valley of the dead bodies] The valley of the son of Hinnom.

And all the fields unto the brook of Kidron, unto the corner of the horse-gate toward the east] All these places, the fullers field, &c., shall be consecrated to the Lord, and become a part of this new city.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Jeremiah, now confined for his faithful admonitions, foretells the fate of the king and city, 1-5. According to the direction of God, he buys of his cousin Hanameel a field in Anathoth; the contract, or deed of sale, being subscribed, sealed, and witnessed, and delivered to Baruch, together with a duplicate not sealed, who is commanded to put them into an earthen vessel that they may remain there for many days, 6-14. This transaction of the prophet, which is entered and subscribed in the public register, God constitutes a sign or pledge of the Jews' return from the Babylonish captivity, and of their again possessing houses, fields, and vineyards, in their own land, and by their own right, according to their tribes and families, 15. Jeremiah's prayer, in which he recounts God's marvellous acts towards the children of Israel, and deeply deplores the lamentable state of the country, and the numerous provocations which have led to it, 16-25. After which, God is introduced declaring his purpose of giving up his people into the hands of their enemies, 26-35; promising, however, to restore them in due time to their ancient possessions, and to make with them an everlasting covenant, 36-44.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD^a in the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar.

2 For then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem: and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up^b in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house.

3 For Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD, 'Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it;

4 And Zedekiah king of Judah 'shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes;

5 And he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be 'until I visit him, saith the LORD: 'though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper.

6 And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

7 Behold, Hanameel the son of Shallum thine uncle shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in Anathoth: for the 'right of redemption is thine to buy it.

8 So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me in the court of the prison according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and 'weighed him the money, even 'seventeen shekels of silver.

10 And I 'subscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances.

11 So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that which was open:

Verse 1. The word that came] This prophecy bears its own date: it was delivered in the tenth year of Zedekiah, which answered to the eighteenth of Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 2. Then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem] The siege had commenced the year before, and continued a year after, ending in the fifth month of the following year; consequently, the siege must have lasted about eighteen months and twenty-seven days. See 2 Kings xxv. 18.

Verse 4. And shall speak with him mouth to mouth] He shall be reduced to a state of the most abject servitude. The slave was obliged to fix his eyes on every motion of the master whilst giving his orders, who often condescended to give them only by dumb signs.

Verse 7. The right of redemption is thine] This is what is called the right of goel, or kinsman, Lev. xxv. 25. And in the year of jubilee the whole reverted to its ancient master, Lev. xxv. 18.

Verse 8. This was the word of the Lord.] The whole was designed as a symbolical act, to show the people that there would be a return from Babylon, that each family should re-enter on its former possessions, and that a man might safely purchase on the certainty of this event.

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto 'Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the 'witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 And I charged Baruch before them, saying,

14 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days.

15 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards 'shall be possessed again in this land.

16 Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto the LORD, saying,

17 Ah Lord God! behold, 'thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched-out arm, and 'there is nothing 'too hard for thee:

18 Thou shewest 'loving-kindness unto thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them: the Great, 'the Mighty God, 'the LORD of hosts, is his name,

19 'Great in counsel, and mighty in 'work: for thine 'eyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men: 'to give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings:

20 Which hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men; and hast made thee 'a name, as at this day;

21 And 'hast brought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with great terror;

22 And hast given them this land, which thou didst swear to their fathers to give them, 'a land flowing with milk and honey;

23 And they came in, and possessed it; but

Verse 9. Weighed him the money] It does not appear that there was any coined or stamped money among the Jews before the captivity; the scripture, therefore, never speaks of counting money, but of weighing it.

Seventeen shekels of silver.] The shekel at this time must have been a nominal coin; it was a thing of a certain weight, or a certain worth.

Verse 10. I subscribed the evidence] We have here all the circumstances of this legal act. Baruch was a scribe by profession; and the deeds were delivered into his hands, before witnesses, to be preserved as above. Perhaps the law, in this case, required that the instrument should be thus lodged. But, in the present case, both the deeds, the original and the duplicate, were put into the earthen pitcher, because the city was about to be burnt; and, if lodged as usual, they would be destroyed in the general conflagration.

Verse 15. Houses and fields—shall be possessed again] That is, this is an evidence that the captivity shall not last long: houses, &c., shall here be possessed again, either by their present owners or immediate descendants. The young might return; at least, all under ten years of age: there was no natural impossibility that they should not live till they should be fourscore.

* they obeyed not thy voice, neither walked in thy law; they have done nothing of all that thou commandedst them to do: therefore thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them:

24 Behold the ^b mounts, they are come unto the city to take it; and the city ^c is given into the hand of the Chaldeans, that fight against it, because of ^d the sword, and of the famine, and of the pestilence: and what thou hast spoken is come to pass; and, behold, thou seest it.

25 And thou hast said unto me, O Lord God, Buy thee the field for money, and take witnesses; * for 'the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying;

27 Behold, I am the LORD, the * God of all flesh: ^a is there any thing too hard for me?

28 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, 'I will give this city into the hand of the Chaldeans; and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it:

29 And the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come and ¹ set fire on this city, and burn it with the houses, ² upon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink-offerings unto other gods; to provoke me to anger.

30 For the children of Israel and the children of Judah ¹ have only done evil before me from their youth: for the children of Israel have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands; saith the LORD.

31 For this city hath been to me as ^a a provocation of mine anger and of my fury from the day that they built it even unto this day; ^a that I should remove it from before my face.

32 Because of all the evil of the children of Israel and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger, ^o they, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

33 And they have turned unto me the ^p back; ^a and not the face: though I taught them, ^r rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction.

Verse 16. I prayed unto the Lord] And what a prayer! What weight of matter, sublimity of expression; profound veneration, just conception, divine unctio[n]; powerful pleading, and strength of faith! Historical, without flatness; condensed, without obscurity; confessing the greatest of crimes against the most righteous of Beings, without despairing of his mercy, or presuming on his goodness: a confession that, in fact, acknowledges that God's justice should smite and destroy, had not his infinite goodness said, I will pardon and spare.

Verse 24. Behold the mounts] The huge terraces raised up to plant their engines on, that they might throw darts, stones, &c., into the city.

Verse 30. For the children of Israel and the children of Judah have only done evil] They have all been transgressors from their earliest history.

Have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands] They have been sinners beyond all others, being excessive idolaters. Their hands have formed the objects of their worship.

Verse 33. Though I taught them, rising up early and 34 But they * set their abominations in the house, which is called by my name, to defile it.

35 And they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to ' cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto ^a Molech; * which I commanded them not, neither came it unto my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin.

36 And now therefore thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city, whereof ye say, * It shall be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence;

37 Behold, I will * gather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them ^r to dwell safely:

38 And they shall be ^a my people, and I will be their God:

39 And I will ^a give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me ^b for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them:

40 And ^a I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away ^a from them, to do them good; but ^a I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me.

41 Yea, ^a I will rejoice over them to do them good, and ^a I will plant them in this land ^b assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul.

42 For thus saith the LORD; ^a Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them.

43 And ^a fields shall be bought in this land, ^a whereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

44 Men shall buy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them, and take witnesses in ^a the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, and in the cities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south: for ^a I will cause their captivity to return, saith the LORD:

teaching them] From the frequent reference to this, we may naturally conclude that morning preaching prevailed much in Judea.

Verse 37. Behold, I will gather them out of all countries] A promise often repeated. See chap. xxix. 14, and the notes on chap. xxxi. 8, &c.

Verse 39. I will give them one heart] And that a clean one.

And one way] God's blessing is a profitable inheritance] They shall have but one object of worship, and one way of salvation; and being saved from sin, idolatry, and destruction, they must necessarily be happy within and happy without.

Verse 41. Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good] Nothing can please God better than our coming to him to receive the good which, with his whole heart and his whole soul, he is ready to impart.

Verse 42. Will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised] The Jews have never yet received the good that God has promised. Nothing like the fulfilment of these promises took place after their return from Babylon; therefore there remaineth yet a rest for these ancient people of God ; and it is under the Christian dispensation that they are to have it.

Verse 44. Men shall buy fields for money] This is a reference to the symbolical purchase mentioned at the beginning of the chapter ; that may be considered by them as a sure sign of their restoration, not only to the same land, but to their respective inheritances in that land.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

In this chapter the prophet predicts a restoration of Israel and Judah to the favour of God, attended with such glorious circumstances as shall astonish all the world, 1-9. Their prosperity from that period is then described by a beautiful enumeration of circumstances, 10-13. This leads to the promise of the Messiah, the grand subject of the prophetic writings, and the happiness and stability which the children of Israel shall enjoy under his government ; promises which, in so far as they respect the great body of the Jews, remain still to be fulfilled, 14-26.

MOREOVER the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the second time (while he was yet ^a shut up in the court of the prison), saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD the ^b Maker thereof, the LORD that formed it, to establish it ; ^c the ^d LORD is his name ;

3 ^e Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and ^f mighty things which thou knowest not.

4 For thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city, and concerning the houses of the kings of Judah, which are thrown down by ^g the mounts, and by the sword ;

5 ^h They come to fight with the Chaldeans, but it is to fill them with the dead bodies of men, whom I have slain in mine anger and in my fury, and for all whose wickedness I have hid my face from this city.

6 Behold, ⁱ I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, and will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth.

7 And ^j I will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, and will build them, ^k as at the first.

8 And I will ^l cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me ; and I will ^m pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me.

Verse 1. Moreover the word of the Lord] This was in the eleventh year of the reign of Zedekiah, Jeremiah being still shut up in prison : but he was now in the court of the prison, where the elders and the king's officers, &c. might consult him with the greater ease ; for they continued to inquire, foolishly thinking that if he would but prophesy good things, these must come.

Verse 3. Call unto me, and I will answer thee] To me alone it belongs to reveal what is future ; and the stupendous things which are now coming are known only to myself.

Verse 6. Behold I will bring it health and cure] Aruchah, an extensive plaister ; or, as we phrase it, a plaister as large as the sore. I will repair the losses of families by numerous births, and bless the land with fertility.

Verse 7. The captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel] This must respect the latter times, for the ten tribes did not return with the Jews at the termination of the seventy years.

Verse 8. I will cleanse them] These promises of pardon

9 ^a And it shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them : and they shall ^b fear and tremble for all the goodness and for all the prosperity that I procure unto it.

10 Thus saith the LORD ; Again there shall be heard in this place, ^c which ye say shall be desolate without man and without beast, even in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, that are desolate, without man, and without inhabitant, and without beast, 11 The ^d voice of joy, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, the voice of them that shall say, ^e Praise the LORD of hosts : for the LORD is good ; for his mercy endureth for ever : and of them that shall bring ^f the sacrifice of praise into the house of the LORD. For ^g I will cause to return the captivity of the land, as at the first, saith the LORD.

12 Thus saith the LORD of hosts ; ^h Again in this place, which is desolate without man and without beast, and in all the cities thereof, shall be an habitation of shepherds causing their flocks to lie down.

13 ⁱ In the cities of the mountains, in the cities of the vale, and in the cities of the south, and in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, shall the flocks ^j pass again under the hands of him that telleth them, saith the LORD.

and holiness must be referred to their state under the gospel when they shall have received Jesus as the promised Messiah.

Verse 9. They shall fear and tremble] The surrounding nations shall be persuaded that it is the hand of the Almighty that has wrought this change in your behalf ; and shall fear to molest you, and tremble lest they should incur the displeasure of your God by doing you any kind of evil.

Verse 11. The voice of them that shall say, Praise the Lord of hosts] That is, the voice of the Levites in the sacred service : intimating that the temple should be rebuilt, and the public service restored.

Verse 16. And this is the name wherewith she shall be called, the Lord our Righteousness.] See what has been said on chap. xxiii. 6. I will give the original, as before : veseh asher yikra lah, Yehovah tsidkenu, "And this one who shall call to her is the Lord our Justification ;" that is, the salvation of the Jews shall take place when Jesus Christ is

*I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah.

15 In those days, and at that time, will I cause the ^b Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land.

16 ^c In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, ^d The LORD our Righteousness.

17 For thus saith the LORD; ^e David shall never ^f want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel;

18 Neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to ^g offer burnt-offerings, and to kindle meat-offerings, and to do sacrifice continually.

proclaimed to them as their Justifier, and they receive him as such.

Verse 18. Neither shall the priests the Levites want a man] This is a repetition of the promise made to Phinehas, Numb. xxv. 13.

Verse 22. So will I multiply the seed of David] This must be understood of the spiritual David, Jesus Christ, and his progeny, genuine Christians.

Verse 24. The two families which the Lord hath chosen]

21 Then may also ⁱ my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites, the priests, my ministers.

22 As ^j the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured: so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me.

23 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, saying,

24 Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, ^k The two families which the LORD hath chosen, he hath even cast them off? thus they have despised my people that they should be no more a nation before them.

25 Thus saith the LORD; If ^l my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not ^m appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth;

26 ⁿ Then will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David my servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for ^o I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them.

If the two families which had the priesthood be not meant, then the regal family of David, and the sacerdotal family of Jacob through Levi, may be designed. Following the spiritual interpretation, neither the regal nor sacerdotal family has failed; for Jesus is a King and a Priest, and all true believers in him are kings and priests unto God and the Lamb. And the highest King that ever reigned is He who is the seed of David, King of kings and Lord of lords, who has all power in heaven and in earth.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

This chapter contains two prophecies: the first, delivered during the siege of Jerusalem, predicts to Zedekiah the taking and burning of the city, with his own peaceful death and honourable burial, 1-7. The second was delivered when the Chaldeans had for some time broken up the siege. It reproves the Jews for their conduct towards their brethren of the poorer sort, whom they released, by a solemn covenant, from bondage, in the extremity of their danger; but compelled to return to it when they thought that danger over, 8-11. For this God threatens them with the sword, pestilence, and famine; and with the return of the Chaldeans, who should take the city, destroy it and the other cities by fire, and make an utter desolation of the whole land of Judea, 12-22.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, (^a when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and all his army, and ^b all the kingdoms of the earth ^c of his dominion, and all the people, fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities thereof,) saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Go and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah, and tell him, ^d 2 Kings xxv. 1, &c. Ch. xxxix. 1. li. 4.—^e Ch. i. 15.—^f Heb. the dominion of his hand.

Verse 1. The word which came unto Jeremiah] This discourse was delivered in the tenth year of the reign of Zedekiah.

Nebuchadnezzar—and all his army, and all the kingdoms of the earth of his dominion] That is, his army was composed of soldiers gathered out of Babylon, and out of all his tributary dominions: one hundred and twenty provinces.

Thus saith the LORD; Behold ^g I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and ^h he shall burn it with fire:

3 And ⁱ thou shalt not escape out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand; and thine eyes shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and ^j he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth, and thou shalt go to Babylon.

^k Ch. xxi. 10. xxxii. 3, 28.—^l Ch. xxxii. 29. Ver. 22.—^m Ch. xxxii. 4.—ⁿ Heb. his mouth shall speak to thy mouth.

Verse 2. He shall burn it with fire] This was a newly-added circumstance.

Verse 3. Thou shalt not escape] This, however, he had attempted, but was taken in his flight. See chap. xxxix. 4, and lii. 7, &c.

Verse 5. Thou shalt die in peace] Thou shalt not die a violent death; and at thy death thou shalt have all those

4 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O Zedekiah king of Judah; Thus saith the LORD of thee, Thou shalt not die by the sword:

5 But thou shalt die in peace: and with ^athe burnings of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, ^bso shall they burn odours for thee; and ^cthey will lament thee, saying, Ah lord! for I have pronounced the word, saith the LORD.

6 Then Jeremiah the prophet spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem,

7 When the king of Babylon's army fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against Lachish, and against Azekah: for ^dthese defenced cities remained of the cities of Judah.

8 This is the word that came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, to proclaim ^eliberty unto them;

9 ^fThat every man should let his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, being an Hebrew, or an Hebrewess, go free; ^gthat none should serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother.

10 Now when all the princes, and all the people, which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his man-servant, and every one his maid-servant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more, then they obeyed, and let them go.

11 But ^hafterward they turned, and caused the servants and the handmaids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for handmaids.

12 Therefore the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; I made a covenant with your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondmen, saying,

14 At the end of ⁱseven years let ye go every man his brother an Hebrew, which ^jhath been sold unto thee; and when he hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee: but your funeral solemnities which were usual at the demise of kings. See 2 Chron. xvi. 14.

So shall they burn odours for thee] Scented wood and other odiferous substances are placed on the funeral pile of the rich Hindoos, and burned with the body.

And they will lament thee, saying, Ah lord!] They will recite the funeral dirge that begins with those words.

Verse 6. Spake all these words unto Zedekiah] He delivered this message at the hazard of his life. Jeremiah feared God, and had no other fear.

Verse 7. Against Lachish, and against Azekah] These were two cities of Judah of considerable importance: they had been strongly fortified by Rehoboam, 2 Chron. xi. 9-11, 2 Chron. xxxii. 9.

Verse 8. The word that came unto Jeremiah] Here the second discourse begins, which was delivered probably a short time, even a few days, after the former.

Zedekiah had made a covenant] We find no account elsewhere of this covenant.

Verse 11. But afterward they turned] They had agreed to manumit them at the end of the seventh year; but when the seventh year was ended, they recalled their engagement, fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear.

15 And ye were ^know turned, and had done right in my sight, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbour; and ye had ^lmade a covenant before me ^min the house ⁿwhich is called by my name:

16 But ye turned and ^opolluted my name, and caused every man his servant, and every man his handmaid, whom he had set at liberty at their pleasure, to return, and brought them into subjection, to be unto you for servants and for handmaids.

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Ye have not hearkened unto me, in proclaiming liberty, every one to his brother, and every man to his neighbour: ^pbehold, I proclaim a liberty for you, saith the LORD, ^qto the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and I will make you ^rto be ^sremoved into all the kingdoms of the earth.

18 And I will give the men that have transgressed my covenant, which have not performed the words of the covenant which they had made before me, when ^tthey cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof,

19 The princes of Judah, and the princes of Jerusalem, the eunuchs, and the priests, and all the people of the land, which passed between the parts of the calf;

20 I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life: and their ^udead bodies shall be for meat unto the fowls of the heaven, and to the beasts of the earth.

21 And Zedekiah king of Judah, and his princes, will I give into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life, and into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, ^vwhich are gone up from you.

22 ^wBehold, I will command, saith the LORD, and cause them to return to this city; and they shall fight against it, ^xand take it, and burn it with fire: and ^yI will make the cities of Judah a desolation without an inhabitant.

and detained their servants. This, I believe, is what is here meant.

Verse 16. Ye—polluted my name] By breaking that covenant, and acting contrary to my law.

Verse 17. I proclaim a liberty for you] The prophet loves to express the conformity between the crime and its punishment. You promised to give liberty to your enslaved brethren; I was pleased, and bound the sword in its sheath. You broke your promise, and brought them again into bondage; I gave liberty to the sword, pestilence, and famine, to destroy multitudes of you, and captivity to take the rest.

Verse 18. When they cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof] This was the ancient and most solemn way of making a covenant.

Verse 21. The king of Babylon's army, which are gone up from you] Nebuchadnezzar, hearing that there was an Egyptian army coming to the relief of Jerusalem, raised the siege, went out, and met and defeated the Egyptians. It was in the interim that this prophecy was delivered.

Verse 22. I will—cause them to return] They did return; re-invested the city; and, after an obstinate defence, took it, plundered it, and burned it to the ground, taking Zedekiah and his princes captive.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Jeremiah is commanded to go to the Rechabites, who, on the approach of the Chaldean army, took refuge in Jerusalem; and to try their obedience to the command of Jonadab (or Jehonadab, 2 Kings x. 15, 16), their great progenitor, who lived in the reign of Jehu, king of Israel, upwards of two hundred and fifty years before this time, offers them wine to drink, which they refuse, 1-11. Hence occasion is taken to upbraid the Jews with their disobedience to God, their heavenly Father, 12-17; and a blessing is pronounced on the Rechabites, 18, 19.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,

2 Go unto the house of the ^aRechabites, and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the LORD, into one of ^bthe chambers, and give them wine to drink.

3 Then I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites;

4 And I brought them into the house of the LORD, into the chamber of the sons of Hanan, the son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, ^cthe keeper of the ^ddoor:

5 And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, Drink ye wine.

6 But they said, We will drink no wine: for ^eJonadab the son of Rechab our father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye, nor your sons for ever:

7 Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any: but all your days ye shall dwell in tents; ^fthat ye may live many days in the land where ye be strangers.

8 Thus have we obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab our father in all that he hath charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters;

9 Nor to build houses for us to dwell in: neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed:

10 But we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.

11 But it came to pass, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

12 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Go and tell the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not ^greceive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the LORD.

14 The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment: ^hnotwithstanding I have spoken unto you, ⁱrising early and speaking; but ye hearkened not unto me:

15 ^jI have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, ^kReturn ye now every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers: but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me.

16 Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; but this people hath not hearkened unto me:

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them: ^lbecause I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered.

18 And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith the LORD of hosts the God of Israel; Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts, and ^mdone according unto all that he hath commanded you:

19 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; ⁿJonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to ^ostand before me for ever.

Verse 6. We will drink no wine] Their whole religious and political institution consisted in obedience to three simple precepts, each of which has an appropriate spiritual meaning.

Verse 8. Thus have we obeyed the voice] We have considered these precepts so very reasonable, so very useful, so conducive to the health of both body and mind, and sanctioned by such a respectable antiquity, that we scrupulously and religiously observe them.

Verse 1. The word which came—in the days of Jehoiakim] What strange confusion in the placing of these chapters! Who could have expected to hear of Jehoiakim again, whom we have long ago buried; and we have now arrived in the history at the very last year of the last Jewish king.

This discourse was probably delivered in the fourth or fifth year of Jehoiakim's reign.

Verse 2. The house of the Rechabites] The Rechabites were not descendants of Jacob; they were Kenites, 1 Chron. i. 55, a people originally settled in that part of Arabia ^a where, various were the names Midian; and most probably the descendants of Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses. Compare Num. x. 29-32, with Judg. i. 16; iv. 11. Those mentioned here seem to have been a tribe of Nomades or Scenite Arabs, who fed their flocks in the deserts of Judæa; and preserved the simple manners of their ancestors.

Verse 8. The whole house of the Rechabites] That is, the family—the chiefs of which are here specified.

this people, chose to try them in this way, that he might, by their conscientious obedience to the precepts of their forefathers, show the Jews, to their confusion, their ingratitude to him, and their neglect of his precepts, which if a man do, he shall live by them.

Verse 19. Thus saith the Lord—Jonadab—shall not want a man to stand before me for ever.] His name shall ever be honourable, and his posterity shall enjoy my continual protection; and there shall never be found a time in which men of his spirit shall be wanting as patterns of genuine simplicity, filial obedience, purity of manners, and deadness to the world.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

God commands Jeremiah to write down in one roll or volume all the predictions he had uttered against Israel and Judah, and all the surrounding nations, from the day of his vocation to the prophetic office, that the house of Judah might have abundant warning of the dreadful calamities with which their country was about to be visited, if not prevented by a timely repentance, 1-3. The prophet employs Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah, to write from his mouth all the words of the Lord, and then to read them publicly upon a fast day in the Lord's house, 4-8. A general fast is proclaimed in the following year, viz., the fifth year of the reign of Jehoiakim; upon which occasion, Baruch, in obedience to the prophet's command, reads the words of Jeremiah to all the people at the entry of the new gate of the temple, 9, 10. The princes, hearing of this, send for Baruch, who reads the roll to them; at the contents of which they are greatly alarmed, and solemnly resolve to give information to the king, at the same time advising both the prophet and his scribe to hide themselves, 11-19. Jehoiakim likewise having sent for the roll, Jehudi reads to him a part; and then the king, though advised to the contrary by some of his princes, having cut the leaves, throws the whole into the fire, 20-25, and orders Jeremiah and Baruch to be seized; but they could not be found, because a special providence of God had concealed them, 26. Jeremiah is commanded to re-write his prophecies, and to denounce the judgments of God against the king who had destroyed the first roll, 27-31. Baruch accordingly writes from the mouth of Jeremiah a new copy, with numerous additions, 32.

AND it came to pass in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah king of Judah, that this word came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Take thee a ^a roll of a book, and ^b write therein all the words that I have spoken unto thee against Israel, and against Judah, and against ^c all the nations, from the day I spake unto thee, from the days of ^d Josiah, even unto this day.

3 ^e It may be that the house of Judah will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that they may ^f return every man from his evil way; that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin.

4 Then Jeremiah ^g called Baruch the son of Neriah: and ^h Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book.

5 And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up; I cannot go into the house ⁱ of the LORD:

6 Therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD, in the ears of the people in the LORD's house upon ^j the fasting day: and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities

7 ^k It may be ^l they will present their supplication before the LORD, and will return every one from his evil way: for great ^m is the anger and fury that the LORD hath pronounced against this people.

8 And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.

9 And it came to pass in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem.

10 Then read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the LORD, in the chamber of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe, in the higher court, at the ⁿ entry ^o of the new gate of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.

11 When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the LORD,

12 Then he went down into the king's house, into

Verse 1. And it came to pass in the fourth year] This discourse was probably delivered at a time when the people enjoyed peace, and were about to celebrate one of their annual fasts.

Verse 2. Take thee a roll of a book] Take a sufficient quantity of parchment; cut and stitch it together, that it may make a roll on which to write the words that I have already spoken, that they may serve for a testimony to future generations.

Verse 3. It may be that the house of Judah will hear] It was yet possible to avert the judgments which had been so often denounced against them.

Verse 4. Then Jeremiah called Baruch] This man so useful to the prophet, and so faithfully attached to him, was by office a scribe; which signifies, not only a writer, but also a man in office; a chancellor, secretary, &c., a learned man; one acquainted with laws and customs.

Verse 6. Upon the fasting day] A day when multitudes of people would be gathered together from all parts to implore the mercy of God.

13 Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read in the book in the ears of the people.

14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them.

15 And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.

15 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, they were afraid both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words.

17 And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth?

18 Then Baruch answered them, He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink in the book.

19 Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be.

20 And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king.

21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king.

22 Now the king sat in the winterhouse in the ninth month: and there was a fire on the hearth burning before him.

23 And it came to pass, that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, he cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth.

24 Yet they were not afraid, nor rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words.

25 Nevertheless Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll: but he would not hear them.

26 But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet: but the Lord hid them.

27 Then the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying, 28 Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned.

29 And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the Lord; Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast?

30 Therefore thus saith the Lord of Jehoiakim king of Judah; He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David: and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat and in the night to the frost.

31 And I will punish him and his seed and his servants for their iniquity; and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them; but they hearkened not.

32 Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah; who wrote therein from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire: and there were added besides unto them many like words.

Verse 26. But the Lord hid them.] They had, at the counsel of some of the princes, hidden themselves, ver. 19. And now, though a diligent search was made, the Lord did not permit them to be found.

Verse 28. Take thee again another roll] There was no duplicate of the former preserved; and now God inspired the prophet with the same matter that he had given him before; and there is to be added the heavy judgment that is to fall on Jehoiakim and his courtiers.

Verse 30. He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David] He shall have no successor, and himself shall have an untimely end, and shall not even be buried, but his body be exposed to the open air, both night and day.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Zedekiah succeeds Coniah, the son of Jehoiakim, in the Jewish throne, and does that which is evil in the sight of the Lord, 1, 2. The king sends a message to Jeremiah, 3-5. God suggests an answer; and foretels the return of the Chaldean army, who should most assuredly take and burn the city, 6-10. Jeremiah, in attempting to leave this devoted city, and retire to his possession in the country, is seized as a deserter, and cast into a dungeon, 11-15. The king, after a conference with him, abates the rigour of his confinement, 16-21.

AND king *Zedekiah the son of Josiah reigned instead of Coniah the son of Jehoiakim, whom Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon made king in the land of Judah.

2 * But neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the LORD, which he spake * by the prophet Jeremiah.

3 And Zedekiah the king sent Jehucal the son of Shelemiah and * Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest to the prophet Jeremiah, saying, Pray now unto the LORD our God for us.

4 Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people: for they had not put him into prison.

5 Then * Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt: * and when the Chaldeans that besieged Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they departed from Jerusalem.

6 Then came the word of the LORD unto the prophet Jeremiah, saying,

7 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah, * that sent you unto me to enquire of me; Behold, Pharaoh's army, which is come forth to help you, shall return to Egypt into their own land.

8 * And the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city, and take it, and burn it with fire.

9 Thus saith the LORD; Deceive not * yourselves, saying, The Chaldeans shall surely depart from us: for they shall not depart.

10 * For though ye had smitten the whole army of the Chaldeans that fight against you, and there remained but * wounded men among them, yet should they rise up every man in his tent, and burn this city with fire.

11 * And it came to pass, that when the army of the Chaldeans was * broken up from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army, 12 Then Jeremiah went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin, * to separate himself thence in the midst of the people.

Verse 3. Zedekiah—to the prophet Jeremiah] He was willing to hear a message from the Lord, provided it were according to his own mind. He did not fully trust in his own prophets.

Verse 4. Now Jeremiah came in and went out] After the siege was raised, he had a measure of liberty; he was not closely confined, as he afterwards was. See ver. 16.

Verse 5. Then Pharaoh's army] This was Pharaoh's hophra or Apries, who then reigned in Egypt in place of his father Necho. See Ezek. xxix. 6, &c.

Verse 7. Pharaoh's army—shall return to Egypt] They were defeated by the Chaldeans; and, not being hearty in the cause, returned immediately to Egypt, leaving Nebuchadrezzar unmolested to recommence the siege.

Verse 10. For though ye had smitten the whole army] Strong words; but they show how fully God was determined to give up this city to fire and sword, and how fully he had instructed his prophet on this point.

Verse 12. Jeremiah went forth] At the time that Nebuchadrezzar had raised the siege, and gone to meet the Egyptian army.

14 Then said Jeremiah, It is * false; I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not, to him: so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes.

15 Wherefore the princes were wroth with Jeremiah, and smote him, * and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe: for they had made that the prison.

18 Moreover Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, What have I offended against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison?

19 Where are now your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land?

20 Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: * let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there.

21 Then Zedekiah the king commanded they should commit Jeremiah * into the court of the prison, that they should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, * until all the bread in the city were spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

The princes of Judah, taking offence at Jeremiah on account of his predicting the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple by the Chaldeans, cause him to be cast into a deep and miry dungeon, 1-6. Ebed-melech an Ethiopian gets the king's permission to take him out, 7-13. Jeremiah advises the king, who consulted him privately, to surrender to the Chaldeans, 14-23. The king promises the prophet that he will not put him to death, and requires him not to reveal what had passed to the princes; to whom he accordingly gives an evasive answer, telling them only so much of the conference as related to his request for his life, 24-28.

THEN Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and ^aJucal the son of Shelemiah, and ^bPashur the son of Malchiah, ^cheard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, ^dHe that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live.

3 Thus saith the LORD, ^eThis city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.

4 Therefore the princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, let this man be put to death: for thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them: for this man seeketh not the ^fwelfare of this people, but the hurt.

5 Then Zedekiah the king said, Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.

6 ^gThen took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah the son ^hof Hammelech, that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire; so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.

7 ⁱNow when Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, one of the eunuchs which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon; (the king then sitting in the gate of Benjamin;)

8 Ebed-melech went forth out of the king's house, and spake to the king, saying,

9 My lord the king, these men have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dungeon; and ^khe is like to die for hunger in the place where he is: for there is no more bread in the city.

10 Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence thirty men ^lwith thee, and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.

11 So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence old cast clouts and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah.

12 And Ebed-melech the Ethiopian said unto Jeremiah, Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine armholes under the cords. And Jeremiah did so.

13 ^mSo they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and Jeremiah remained ⁿin the court of the prison.

14 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the ^othird entry that is in the house of the LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me.

15 Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare it unto thee, wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken unto me?

16 So Zedekiah the king sware secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, As the LORD liveth, ^pthat made us this soul, I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand of these men that seek thy life.

17 Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel; If thou wilt assuredly ^qgo forth ^runto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be burned with fire; and thou shalt live, and thine house.

18 But if thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylon's princes, then shall this city be given into the hand of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and ^sthou shalt not escape out of their hand.

20 But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver thee. Obey, I beseech thee, the voice of the Lord, which I speak unto thee: so it shall be well unto thee, and thy soul shall live.

21 But if thou refuse to go forth, this is the word that the Lord hath shewed me:

22 And, behold, all the women that are left in the king of Judah's house shall be brought forth to the king of Babylon's princes, and those women shall say, Thy friends have set thee on, and have prevailed against thee: thy feet are sunk in the mire, and they are turned away back.

23 So they shall bring out all thy wives and thy children to the Chaldeans: and thou shalt not escape out of their hand, but shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon: and thou shalt cause this city to be burned with fire.

—^d Ver. 18.—^e Heb. thou shalt burn, &c.

Verse 22. All the women—brought forth] I think this place speaks of a kind of defection among concubines or women of the second rank.

Verse 23. They shall bring out all thy wives and thy children] These were the women of the first rank, by whom the king had children. These had no temptation to go out to the Chaldeans, nor would they have been made welcome; but the others being young, and without children, would be well received by the Chaldean princes.

24 Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die.

25 But if the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death; and also what the king said unto thee:

26 Then thou shalt say unto them, I presented my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return to Jonathan's house, to die there.

27 Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him: and he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded. So they left off speaking with him; for the matter was not perceived.

28 So J^h Jeremiah abode in the court of the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken: and he was there when Jerusalem was taken.

Verse 27. The matter was not perceived.] They did not question him farther; and the king's commandment to remove him from the house of Jonathan being well known, they took for granted that they had all the information that they sought.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

This chapter gives an account of the siege and taking of Jerusalem; the flight, capture, and punishment of Zedekiah; the burning of the city; and the carrying away of the people (a few of the meanest excepted) to Babylon, 1-10; also of the release of Jeremiah, and the special orders of Nebuchadnezzar concerning him, 11-14. The remaining verses relate to the subject of the preceding chapter; and contain promises of personal safety to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian amidst the public calamities, on account of his piety, and his humanity to the prophet, 15-18.

IN the ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it.

2 And in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up.

3 And all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate, even Nergal-

* 2 Kings xv. 1-4. Ch. lii. 4-7.—^b Ch. xxxviii. 17.

Verse 1. In the ninth year of Zedekiah—in the tenth month] This month is called Tebeth in Esther ii. 16. It began with the first new moon of our January, and it was on the tenth day of this month that Nebuchadnezzar invested the city.

Verse 2. The eleventh year—in the fourth month] This month in the Hebrew calendar is called Thammuz, and commences with the first new moon of our July. The siege had lasted just eighteen months.

The city was broken up] A breach was made in the wall by which the Chaldeans entered.

Verse 3. Sat in the middle gate] The gate of the centre, sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rab-saris, Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, with all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 And it came to pass, that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls: and he went out the way of the plain.

* 2 Kings xxv. 4, &c. Ch. lii. 7, &c.

as the term seems plainly to import, was a gate of communication in the middle of the valley, between the two parts of the city, sometimes called the higher and the lower city.

Nergal-sharezer] These were the principal commanders; but Dr. Blayney thinks that instead of six persons, we have in reality but three, as the name that follows each is a title of office.

Verse 4. Went forth out of the city by night] Probably there was a private passage under ground, leading without the walls, by which Zedekiah and his followers might escape unperceived, till they had got some way from the city.

5 But the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho: and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon to ^bRiblah in the land of Hamath, where he gave judgment upon him.

6 Then the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes: also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah.

7 Moreover ^dhe put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him ^ewith chains, to carry him to Babylon.

8 And the Chaldeans burnt the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem.

9 Then Nebuzar-adan the captain ¹of the guard carried away captive into Babylon the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained.

10 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left of the poor of the people, which had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields ¹at the same time.

11 Now Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon gave charge concerning Jeremiah ^ato Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying,

The way of the plain.] There were two roads from Jerusalem to Jericho. One passed over the mount of Olives; but, as this might have retarded his flight, he chose the way of the plain, and was overtaken near Jericho, perhaps about sixteen or eighteen miles from Jerusalem.

Verse 5. To Riblah.] This city was situated on the northern frontier of Palestine, and Hamath was a large city belonging also to Syria. See Gen. x. 18.

Verse 7. Bound him with chains.] Margin: "Two brassen chains;" one for his hands, and the other for his feet.

12 Take him, and look well to him, and do him no harm; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.

13 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard sent, and Nebushasban, Rab-saris, and Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, and all the king of Babylon's princes;

14 Even they sent, and took Jeremiah out of the court of the prison, and committed him ^aunto Gedaliah the son of ^bAhikam the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him home: so he dwelt among the people.

15 Now the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, while he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

16 Go and speak to ^cEbed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold ^dI will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be accomplished in that day before thee.

17 But I will deliver thee in that day, saith the LORD: and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid.

18 For I will surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, but ^ethy life shall be for a prey unto thee: ^fbecause thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORD.

Verse 18. I will surely deliver thee.] They that fear God need fear nothing besides.

CHAPTER XL.

This and the four following chapters contain a distinct account of what passed in the land of Judah from the taking of Jerusalem to the retreat of the remnant of the people to Egypt; together with the prophecies of Jeremiah concerning that place, whither he himself accompanied them. In this chapter we have an account of the enlargement of Jeremiah by Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, who advises him to put himself under the jurisdiction of Gedaliah, the son of Ahikam, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land of Judea, 1-5. The prophet and many of the dispersed Jews repair to Gedaliah, 6-12. Johanan acquaints the governor of a conspiracy against him, but is not believed, 13-16.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, ^aafter that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had let him go from Ramah, when he had taken him being bound in ^bchains among all that were carried away captive ^aCh. xxxix. 14.—^bOr, manacles.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah.] This and the four following chapters contain a particular account of what passed in the land of Judea from the taking of the city to the of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon.

2 And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and ^asaid unto him, The LORD thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place.

retreat of the people into Egypt, and the prophecies of Jeremiah concerning them there.

Verse 2 The Lord thy God hath pronounced.] I know

3 Now the LORD hath brought it, and done according as he hath said: * because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you.

4 And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which ^bwere upon thine hand. ^cIf it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come; and ^dI will look well unto thee: but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me unto Babylon, forbear: behold, ^eall the land is before thee: whither it seemeth good and convenient for thee to go, thither go.

5 Now while he was not yet gone back, he said, Go back also to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, ^fwhom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people; or go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go.

6 ^gThen went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to ^hMizpah; and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.

7 ⁱNow when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, ^jeven they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of ^kthe poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon;

8 Then they came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, ^leven Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men.

9 And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of that thou art a true prophet, for what thou hast predicted from thy God is come to pass.

Verse 4. Come; and I will look well unto thee] Thou art now at full liberty to do as thou pleasest; either to come to Babylon, or to stay in thy own land.

Verse 5. Go back also to Gedaliah] If thou wilt stay in thy own land, thou hadst best put thyself under the protection of thy countryman Gedaliah, whom the king of Babylon has made governor of the land.

Verse 8. Ishmael the son of Nethaniah] This is he who afterwards murdered Gedaliah.

Verse 14. But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not.] Conscious of his own integrity and benevolence, he took Shaphan swear unto them and to their men, saying, Fear not to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

10 As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, ¹to serve the Chaldeans, which will come unto us: but ye, gather ye wine, and summer fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.

11 Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan;

12 Even all the Jews returned out of all places whether they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much.

13 Moreover Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, 14 And said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that ²Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah ³to slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not.

15 Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: wherefore should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish?

16 But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, Thou shalt not do this thing: for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

the portrait of others from his own mind; and therefore believed evil of no man, because he felt none towards any in his own breast. A little soul is ever suspicious, and ready to believe the worst of every person and thing. A great mind acts always on the contrary.

Verse 16. Thou shalt not do this thing] He cannot be so base.

Thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.] Had he been a little more distrustful, he would have saved his own life. The next chapter shows that Johanan's information was too true. So noble Gedaliah lost his life by not believing that evil of others of which he himself was incapable.

CHAPTER XLI

Ishmael executes his conspiracy against Gedaliah the governor and his companions, and attempts to carry away the Jews who were with him captives to the Ammonites, 1-10; but Johanan recovers them, and purposes to flee into Egypt, 11-18.

NOW it came to pass in the seventh month, ^athat Ishmael the son of Nethaniah the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and there they did eat bread together in Mizpah.

2 Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and ^bsmote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

3 Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war.

4 And it came to pass the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it,

5 That there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men, ^chaving their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them to ^dthe house of the LORD.

6 And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, ^eweeping all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam.

7 And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and ^fcast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him.

8 But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, Slay us not: for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbore, and slew them not among their brethren.

9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain ^gbecause ^hof Gedaliah, was it ⁱwhich Asa the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.

10 Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, ^j*even* the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, ^kwhom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed to go over to ^lthe Ammonites.

11 But when Johanan the son of Kareah, and all ^mthe captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done, 12 Then they took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by ⁿthe great waters that are in Gibeon.

13 Now it came to pass that when all the people ^owhich were with Ishmael saw Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, then they were glad.

14 So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah cast about and returned, and went unto Johanan the son of Kareah.

15 But Ishmael the son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanan with eight men, and went to the Ammonites.

16 Then took Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, all the remnant of the people whom he had recovered from Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, from Mizpah, after that he had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, even mighty men of war, and the women, and the children, and the eunuchs, whom he had brought again from Gibeon:

17 And they departed, and dwelt in the habitation of ^pChimham, which is by Beth-lehem, to go to enter into Egypt, 18 Because of the Chaldeans: for they were afraid of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, ^qwhom the king of Babylon made governor in the land.

Verse 6. Weeping all along as he went.] This felonious hypocrite pretended that he also was deeply afflicted, and wished to bear their company in their sorrow.

CHAPTER XLII

Johanan and the remnant of the people desire Jeremiah to ask counsel of God what they should do, 1-8. The prophet assures them of safety in Judea, but destruction in Egypt, 4-18; and reproves their hypocrisy in asking counsel with which they had no intention to comply. 19-22.

THEN all the captains of the forces, *and Johanan the son of Kareah, and Jezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people, from the least even unto the greatest, came near,

2 And said unto Jeremiah the prophet, ^b Let, we beseech thee, our supplication be accepted before thee, and ^c pray for us unto the LORD thy God, even for all this remnant; (for we are left but ^d a few of many, as thine eyes do behold us:)

3 That the LORD thy God may shew us ^e the way wherein we may walk, and the thing that we may do.

4 Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, I have heard you; behold, I will pray unto the LORD your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass, that ^f whatsoever thing the LORD shall answer you, I will declare it unto you; I will ^g keep nothing back from you.

5 Then they said to Jeremiah, ^h The LORD be a true and faithful Witness between us, if we do not ⁱ ~~even~~ according to all things for the which the LORD thy God shall send thee to us.

6 Whether it be good, or whether it be evil, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God, to whom we send thee; ^j that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God.

7 And it came to pass after ten days, that the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah.

8 Then called he Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces which were with him, and all the people from the least even to the greatest.

9 And said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto whom ye sent me to present your supplication before him;

10 If ye will still abide in this land, then ^k will I build you, and not pull you down; and I will plant you, and not pluck you up: for ^l I repent me of the evil that I have done unto you.

11 Be not afraid of the king of Babylon, of whom ye are afraid; be not afraid of him, saith the LORD: ^m for I am with you to save you, and to deliver you from his hand.

12 And ⁿ I will shew mercies unto you, that he may have mercy upon you, and cause you to return to your own land.

13 But if ^o ye say, We will not dwell in this land, neither obey the voice of the LORD your God,

14 Saying, No; but we will go into the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war, nor hear the sound of the trumpet, nor have hunger of bread; and there will we dwell:

15 And now therefore hear the word of the LORD, ye remnant of Judah, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; If ye ^p wholly set ^q your faces to enter into Egypt, and go to sojourn there;

16 Then it shall come to pass, that the sword, ^r which ye feared, shall overtake you there in the land of Egypt, and the famine, whereof ye were afraid, ^s shall follow close after you there in Egypt; and there ye shall die.

17 ^t So shall it be with all the men that set their faces to go into Egypt to sojourn there; they shall die ^u by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: and ^v none of them shall remain or escape from the evil that I will bring upon them.

18 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; As mine anger and my fury hath been ^w poured forth upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem; so shall my fury be poured forth upon you, when ye shall enter into Egypt: and ^x ye shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach; and ye shall see this place no more.

19 The LORD hath said concerning you, O ye remnant of Judah; ^y Go ye not into Egypt: know certainly that I have ^z admonished you this day.

20 For ^{aa} ye dissembled in your hearts, when ye sent me unto the LORD your God, saying, ^{ab} Pray for us unto the LORD our God: and according unto all that the LORD our God shall say, so declare unto us, and we will do it.

21 And now I have this day declared it to you; but ye have not obeyed the voice of the LORD your God, nor ^{ac} any thing for the which he hath sent me unto you.

22 Now therefore know certainly that ^{ad} ye shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, in the place whither ye desire ^{ae} to go and to sojourn.

Verse 19. Go ye not into Egypt]. Why? Because God knew, such was their miserable propensity to idolatry, that they would there adopt the worship of the country, and serve idols.

Verse 20. For ye dissembled in your hearts]. What a most miserable and incorrigible people! Ingratitude, hypocrisy, rebellion, and cruelty seem to have been enthroned in their hearts?

Verse 21. Ye have not obeyed the voice]. Though ye have requested to have this particular revelation of the divine will, and promised obedience, yet have ye not done one thing for which ye sent me to inquire of the Lord.

Verse 22. Now therefore know certainly]. As ye have determined to disobey, God has determined to punish.

Verse 1. The captains of the forces]. The different leaders of the small bands or companies, collected from different parts of the land.

Verse 3. That the Lord thy God may shew us]. They did not know which might be the safest direction to take; for though they inclined to Egypt, yet they wished to know the mind of God on that point.

Verse 5. The Lord be a true and faithful Witness]. The Lord is such; and as ye have bound yourselves to obey his voice, he will register the covenant, and bless or curse according as ye shall conduct yourselves in this matter.

Verse 7. After ten days]. All this time he was waiting upon God: for it is evident the prophets could not prophesy when they pleased, any more than the disciples of our Lord could work miracles when they wished.

Verse 10. For I repent me of the evil]. As I have punished you only because you continued to be rebellious, I will arrest this punishment as soon as you become obedient to my word.

Verse 15. If ye—set your faces to enter into Egypt, &c.]

CHAPTER XLIII.

The leading men, discrediting Jeremiah's prophecy, carry the people into Egypt, 1-7. Jeremiah, by a type, foretells the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, 8-13. This mode of conveying instruction by actions was very expressive, and frequently practised by the prophets. The image of Nebuchadnezzar arraying himself with Egypt, as a shepherd puts on his garment, is very noble. Egypt at this time contended with Babylon for the empire of the East; yet this mighty kingdom, when God appoints the revolution, shifts its owner with as much ease as a shepherd removes his tent or garment, which the new proprietor has only to spread over him. See ver. 12.

AND it came to pass, that when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking unto all the people all the words of the LORD their God, for which the LORD their God had sent him to them, even all these words,

2 *Then spake Azariah the son of Hoshaiah, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the proud men, saying unto Jeremiah, Thou speakest falsely: the LORD our God hath not sent thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there:

3 But Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that they might put us to death, and carry us away captives into Babylon.

4 So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, obeyed not the voice of the LORD, to dwell in the land of Judah.

5 But Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, took ^a all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations, whither they had been driven to dwell in the land of Judah;

6 Even men, and women, and children, ^c and the king's daughters, ^d and every person that Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah.

7 So they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: thus came they even to ^e Tahpanhes.

8 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying,

9 Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brick-kiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah;

10 And say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will send and take Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, ^f my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid; and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them.

11 ^g And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver ^h such as are for death to death; and such as are for captivity to captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword.

12 And I will kindle a fire in the houses of ⁱ the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them and carry them away captives: and he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd putteth on his garment; and he shall go forth from thence in peace.

13 He shall break also the ^j images of ^k Beth-shemesh, that is in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

Verse 6. Men, and women, and children, and the king's daughters] See the note on chap. xli. 10. It is truly surprising that the Chaldeans should have left behind any of the royal family of Judah!

Verse 7. Came they even to Tahpanhes.] This city was called Daphne by the Greeks, and was situated at the extremity of Lower Egypt, near to Heliopolis. It was at this place that, according to St. Jerome, tradition says the faithful Jeremiah was stoned to death by these rebellious wretches.

Verse 11. Such as are for death to death] See the note on chap. xv. 2.

Verse 12. He shall burn them, and carry them away captives] Some of these gods, such as were of wood, he will burn; those of metal he will carry away. Some of them were of gold.

Shall array himself with the land of Egypt] Shall take all its wealth, and all its grandeur; shall take all its spoils.

As a shepherd putteth on his garment] With as much ease and with as little opposition; and with as full a confidence that it is now his own.

He shall go forth from thence in peace.] He shall suffer no interruption, nor endure any disaster in his return from his Egyptian expedition. See the proof of all this in the notes at the end of chap. xlii.

Verse 13. He shall break also the images of Beth-shemesh] Beth shemesh is literally, the house or temple of the sun; which was worshipped here, and whose images are said to have been of solid gold. Beth-shemesh is the same as Heliopolis.

CHAPTER XLIV.

Jeremiah reproves the Jews in Egypt for continuing in idolatry after the exemplary judgments inflicted by God on their nation for that sin, 1-14; and, upon their refusing to reform, denounces destruction to them, and to that kingdom wherein they sought protection, 15-30.

THE word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the Jews which dwell in the land of Egypt, which dwell at Migdol, and at Tahpanhes, and at Noph, and in the country of Pathros, saying,

2 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel; Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Judah; and, behold, this day they are a desolation, and no man dwelleth therein,

3 Because of their wickedness which they have committed to provoke me to anger, in that they went to burn incense, and to serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers.

4 Howbeit I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, Oh, do not this abominable thing that I hate.

5 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods.

6 Wherefore my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.

7 Therefore now thus saith the Lord the God of hosts, the God of Israel; Wherefore commit ye this great evil against your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, out of Judah, to leave you none to remain;

8 In that ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye might be a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

9 Have ye forgotten the wickedness of your fathers, and the wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and the wickedness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

10 They are not humbled even unto this day, neither have they feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you and before your fathers.

11 Therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold I will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah.

12 And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine: and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

13 For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence:

14 So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they have a desire to return to dwell there: for none shall return but such as shall escape.

15 Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the Lord, we will not hearken unto thee.

17 But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for then had we plenty of victuals, and were well, and saw no evil.

18 But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine.

19 And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink-offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink-offerings unto her, without our men?

20 Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying,

21 The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the Lord remember them, and came it not into his mind?

22 So that the Lord could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings and because of the abominations which ye have committed; therefore is your land a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, as at this day.

Verse 9. Have ye forgotten the wickedness of your fathers] It seems that the women were principal agents in idolatrous practices; for the queens—the wives, of rulers and of common people, burnt incense to the queen of heaven (the moon), ver. 17, and poured out drink-offerings to her.

Verse 15. Then all the men—and all the women] We have not seen the women in determined rebellion before. Here they make a common cause with their idolatrous husbands.

23 Because ye have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; * therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

24 Moreover Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of the LORD, all Judah, that are in the land of Egypt:

CHAPTER XLV.

This chapter is evidently connected with the subject treated of in the thirty-sixth. Baruch, who had written the prophecies of Jeremiah, and read them publicly in the temple, and afterwards to many of the princes, is in great affliction because of the awful judgments with which the land of Judah was about to be visited; and also on account of the imminent danger to which his own life was exposed, in publishing such unwelcome tidings, 1-3. To remove Baruch's fear with respect to this latter circumstance, the prophet assures him that though the total destruction of Judea was determined because of the great wickedness of the inhabitants, yet his life should be preserved amidst the general desolation, 4, 5.

THE * word that Jeremiah the prophet spake unto Baruch the son of Neriah, when he had written these words in a book at the mouth of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of Jehoia-kim ^b the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto thee, O Baruch,

3 Thou didst say, Woe is me now! for the LORD hath added grief to my sorrow; I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest.

* Ch. xxxvi. 1, 4, 32.—^b2 Kings xxiii. 34.—^cIsa. v. 5.

Verse 1. The word that Jeremiah—spake unto Baruch] This is another instance of transposition. This discourse was delivered in the fourth year of Jehoia-kim, several years before Jerusalem was taken by the Chaldeans. It is a simple appendage to chap. xxxvi., and there it should have been inserted.

Verse 3. Thou didst say, Woe is me now! All that were the enemies of Jeremiah became his enemies too; and he needed these promises of support.

Verse 4. Behold, that which I have built] I most certainly will fulfil all those threatenings contained in the 4 Thus shalt thou say unto him, The LORD saith thus; Behold, * that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

5 And seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not: for, behold, * I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the LORD: but thy life will I give unto thee * for a prey in all places whither thou goest.

roll thou hast written; for I will destroy this whole land.

Verse 5. And seekest thou great things for thyself?] Nothing better can be expected of this people: thy hopes in reference to them are vain. Expect no national amendment till national judgments have taken place. And as for any benefit to thyself, think it sufficient that God has determined to preserve thy life amidst all these dangers.

But thy life will I give unto thee for a prey] This is a proverbial expression. As a prey or spoil is that which is gained from a vanquished enemy, so it is preserved with pleasure as the proof and reward of a man's own valour.

CHAPTER XLVI.

The difference between the preceding and the subsequent prophecies in point of composition is very remarkable; the last excelling much in majesty and elegance. This chapter (of which the first verse forms a general title to this and the five chapters following) contains two distinct prophecies relating to Egypt. The first was delivered previous to an engagement between Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt, and Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon; in which the Egyptians were routed in Carchemish with great slaughter, as here predicted. The prophet sees the mighty preparations; but they are all declared to be of no avail, as God had decreed their fall, 1-6. The king of Egypt, however, is represented as marching with all the confidence of victory, like a river overflowing its banks, and threatening all around with its inundation, 7, 8. But this immense armament of Pharaoh-necho, consisting of various nations, shall, by a righteous judgment of God, receive such a signal overthrow near the river Euphrates, that the political consequence of Egypt shall be thereby irretrievably ruined, and its remaining power become contemptible in the sight of the nations, 9-12. The other prophecy, beginning at the thirteenth verse, relates to the memorable overthrow of the Egyptians by Nebuchadnezzar, subsequent to his siege of Tyre, in the sixteenth year after the destruction of Jerusalem, 13-26. The promise, in the conclusion of the chapter, of preservation to the Jews (who have for many ages continued a distinct people, when the various nations of antiquity who oppressed them, or with whom they had any intercourse, have long ago ceased to have any separate and visible existence), has been most remarkably fulfilled; and is a very signal act of providence, and a pledge of the restoration of Israel to the divine favour, when the time of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled, 27, 28.

THE word of the LORD which came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Gentiles;

2 Against Egypt, against the army of Pharaoh-necho king of Egypt, which was by the river Euphrates in Carchemish, which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon smote in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah.

3 Order ye the buckler and shield, and draw near to battle.

4 Harness the horses; and get up, ye horsemen, and stand forth with your helmets; furbish the spears, and put on the brigandines.

5 Wherefore have I seen them dismayed and turned away back? and their mighty ones are beaten down, and are fled apace, and look not back: for fear was round about, saith the LORD.

6 Let not the swift flee away, nor the mighty man escape; they shall stumble, and fall toward the north by the river Euphrates.

7 Who is this that cometh up as a flood, whose waters are moved as the rivers?

8 Egypt riseth up like a flood, and his waters are moved like the rivers; and he saith, I will go up, Verse 4. Furbish the spears] Cleanse, brighten, and sharpen them.

Brigandines]. A coat of mail, especially that which was made scale fashion; one plate overlapping the other, like the scales of fish.

Verse 5. Wherefore have I seen them dismayed] What! such a numerous, formidable, and well-appointed army panic-struck?

Verse 6. Let not the swift flee away] Even the swiftest shall not be able to escape.

They shall—fall toward the north] By the Euphrates, which was northward of Judea. Here the Egyptian army was routed with great slaughter.

Verse 7. Who is this that cometh up as a flood] A fine image to represent the incursions of vast armies carrying all before them.

Verse 9. The Ethiopians] This army was composed of many nations. Cush, which we translate Ethiopians, almost invariably means the Arabians; and here, those Arabs that bordered on Egypt near the Red Sea. Phut probably means the Libyans; for Phut settled in Libya, according to Josephus.

Verse 10. For this is the day of the Lord God of hosts] The prophet represents this as a mighty sacrifice, where innumerable victims were slain.

Verse 11. Go up into Gilead, and take balm] An irony. Egypt is so completely enfeebled by this overthrow, that her political wound is utterly incurable. This figure is used with the more propriety here, as the Egyptians have been celebrated from the remotest antiquity for their knowledge of medicine.

Verse 12. The nations have heard of thy shame] Of thy disgrace, by this prodigious slaughter of thy troops.

Verse 16. One fell upon another] In their terror and confusion ranks fell on ranks, and overturned each other.

Let us go again to our own people] Let us flee to our own country with all possible speed. These were the auxiliaries.

And as Carmel by the sea] Carmel is a mountain on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, on the southern frontier of the tribe of Asher.

Verse 24. The hand of the people of the north.] The Chaldeans.

Verse 25. The multitude of No] Amon minno, the Amon of No, called by the Greeks Jupiter's city. It was the famous Thebes, celebrated anciently for its hundred gates. Amon was the name by which the Egyptians called Jupiter, who had a famous temple at Thebes.

Verse 26. Afterward it shall be inhabited] That is, within forty years, as Ezekiel had predicted, chap. xxix. 13.

Verse 27. Fear not—my servant Jacob] In the midst of wrath God remembers mercy. Though Judah shall be destroyed, Jerusalem taken, the temple burnt to the ground, and the people carried away into captivity, yet the nation shall not be destroyed. A seed shall be preserved, out of which the nation shall revive.

Verse 28. I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee; but I will not make a full end of thee] The Jews still remain as a distinct people, while the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Egyptians, &c., are no more!

CHAPTER XLVII.

Among the nations doomed to suffer from the hostilities of Nebuchadnezzar are the Philistines (see chap. xxv. 20). And the calamities predicted in this chapter befell them probably during the long siege of Tyre, when their country was desolated to prevent their giving Tyre or Sidon any assistance, 1-5. The whole of this chapter is remarkably elegant. The address to the sword of Jehovah, at the close of it, is particularly a very beautiful and bold personification, 6, 7.

THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet * against the Philistines, before that Pharaoh smote ^c Gaza.

2 Thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^a waters rise up * out of the north, and shall be an overflowing flood, and shall overflow the land, and ^a all that is therein; the city and them that dwell therein: then the men shall cry, and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl.

3 At the ^a noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his strong horses, at the rushing of his chariots, and at the rumbling of his wheels, the fathers shall not look back to their children for feebleness of hands;

4 Because of the day that cometh to spoil all the Philistines, and to cut off from ^b Tyrus and Zidon every helper that remaineth: for the LORD will spoil the Philistines, ^b the remnant of ^b the country of ^b Caphtor.

5 ^b Baldness is come upon Gaza; ^c Ashkelon is cut off with the remnant of their valley: how long wilt thou ^c cut thyself?

6 O thou ^c sword of the LORD, how long will it be ere thou be quiet? ^c put up thyself into thy scabbard, rest, and be still.

7 ^c How can it be quiet, seeing the LORD hath ^c given it a charge against Ashkelon, and against the sea shore? there hath he ^c appointed it.

Verse 1. The word of the Lord—against the Philistines. The date of this prophecy cannot be easily ascertained.

Before that Pharaoh smote Gaza. We have no historical relation of any Egyptian king smiting Gaza.

Verse 2. Waters rise up out of the north. Waters is a common prophetic image for a multitude of people. The north here, as in other places of this prophecy, means Chaldaea.

Verse 3. The stamping of the hoofs. At the galloping sound.

The fathers shall not look back. Though their children are left behind, they have neither strength nor courage to go back to bring them off.

Verse 4. To spoil all the Philistines. These people, of whom there were five seignories, occupied the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, to the south of the Phœnicians.

Tyrus and Zidon. Places sufficiently remarkable both in the Old and New Testament, and in profane history.

The remnant of the country of Caphtor. Crete, or Cyprus. Some think it was a district along the coast of the Mediterranean, belonging to the Philistines; others, that the Capadocians are meant.

Ashkelon is cut off. Or put to silence; another mark of the deepest sorrow. Ashkelon was one of the five seignories of the Philistines, Gaza was another.

The remnant of their valley. Or plain; for the whole land of the Philistines was a vast plain, which extended along the coast of the Mediterranean sea from Phœnicia to the frontiers of Egypt.

Verse 6. O thou sword of the Lord. This is a most grand prosopopœia—a dialogue between the sword of the Lord and the prophet. Nothing can be imagined more sublime.

Put up thyself into thy scabbard, rest, and be still. Shed no more blood, destroy no more lives, erase no more cities, desolate no more countries. Rest:—hast thou not been long enough at this work of judgment? O be still:—let wars and desolations cease for ever.

Verse 7. How can it be quiet. This is the answer of the sword. I am the officer of God's judgments, and he has given me a commission against Ashkelon, and against the sea shore; all the coast where the Philistines have their territories.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

The following prophecy concerning the Moabites is supposed to have had its accomplishment during the long siege of Tyre in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. The whole of this chapter is poetry of the first order. The distress of the cities of Moab, with which it opens, is finely described. The cries of one ruined city resound to those of another, 1-3. The doleful helpless cry of the children is heard, 4; the highways, on either hand, resound with the voice of weeping, 5; and the few that remain resemble a blasted tree in the wide howling waste, 6. Chemosh, the chief god of the Moabites, and the capital figure in the triumph, is represented as carried off in chains, with all his trumpery of priests and officers, 7. The desolation of the country shall be so general and sudden that, by a strong figure, it is intimated that there shall be no possibility of escape, except it be in the speediest flight, 8, 9. And some idea may be formed of the dreadful wickedness of this people from the consideration that the prophet, under the immediate inspiration of the Almighty, pronounces a curse on those who do the work of the Lord negligently, in not proceeding to their utter extermination, 10. The subject is then diversified by an elegant and well-supported comparison, importing that the Moabites increased in insolence and pride in proportion to the duration of their prosperity, 11; but this prosperity is declared to be nearly at an end; the destroyer is already commissioned against Moab, and his neighbours called to sing the usual lamentation at his funeral, 13-18. The prophet then represents some of the women of Aroer and Ammon (the extreme borders of Moab) standing in the highways, and asking the fugitives of Moab, What intelligence? They inform him of the complete discomfiture of Moab, 19-24, and of the total annihilation of its political existence, 25. The divine judgments about to fall upon Moab are further represented under the expressive metaphor of a cup of intoxicating liquor, by which he should become an object of derision because of his intolerable pride, his magnifying himself against Jehovah, and his great contempt for the children of Israel in the day of their calamity, 26, 27. The prophet then points out the great distress of Moab by a variety of striking figures, viz., by the failure of the customary rejoicings at the end of harvest, by the mournful sort of music used at funerals, by the signs which were expressive among the ancients of deep mourning, as shaving the head, clipping the beard, cutting the flesh, and wearing sackcloth; and by the methods of catching wild beasts in toils, and by the terror and pitfall, 28-46. In the close of the chapter it is intimated that a remnant shall be preserved from this general calamity whose descendants shall be prosperous in the latter days, 47.

AGAINST Moab thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Woe unto ^bNebo! for it is spoiled: ^cKiriathaim is confounded and taken: ^dMisgab is confounded and dismayed.

2 ^eThere shall be no more praise of Moab: in Heshbon they have devised evil against it; come, and let us cut it off from being a nation. Also thou shalt ^fbe cut down, O Madmen; the sword shall ^gpursue thee.

3 ^hA voice of crying shall be from Horonaim, spoiling and great destruction.

4 Moab is destroyed; her little ones have caused a cry to be heard.

5 ⁱFor in the going up of Luhith ^kcontinual weeping shall go up; for in the going down of Horonaim the enemies have heard a cry of destruction.

6 ^lFlee, save your lives, and be like ^mthe ⁿheath in the wilderness.

7 For because thou hast trusted in thy works and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken: and ^oChemosh shall go forth into captivity with his ^ppriests and his princes together.

8 And ^qthe spoiler shall come upon every city, and no city shall escape: the valley also shall perish, and the plain shall be destroyed, as the LORD hath spoken.

9 ^rGive wings unto Moab, that it may flee and get away: for the cities thereof shall be desolate, without any to dwell therein.

10 ^sCursed be he that doeth the work of the LORD ^tdeceitfully, and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood.

Verse 1. Against Moab] This was delivered sometime after the destruction of Jerusalem. The Moabites were in the neighbourhood of the Ammonites, and whatever evils fell on the one would naturally involve the other.

Woe unto Nebo! for it is spoiled] This was a city in the tribe of Reuben, afterwards possessed by the Moabites. It probably had its name from Nebo, one of the principal idols of the Moabites.

Kiriathaim] Another city of the Moabites.

Misgab is confounded] There is no place of this name known; and therefore several learned men translate ham-misgab, literally, The high tower, or fortress, which may apply to Kiriathaim, or any other high and well-fortified place.

Verse 2. No more praise of Moab] There is a double paronomasia in this and the next verse, a figure in which the prophets delight; becheshbon chashebu, "in Cheshbon they have devised," and madmen tidommi, "Madmena, thou shalt be dumb."

Verse 3. Horonaim] Another city of Moab, near to Luhith. At this latter place the hill country of Moab commenced.

Verse 6. Flee, save your lives] The enemy is in full pursuit of you.

Be like the heath] "Like Aroer," which some take for a city, others for a blasted or withered tree. It is supposed that a place of this name lay towards the north, in the land of the Ammonites, on a branch of the river Jabbok; surrounded by deserts.

Verse 7. Chemosh shall go forth into captivity] The grand national idol of the Moabites, Numb. xxi. 29, Judg. xi. 24. Ancient idolaters used to take their gods with them to the field of battle.

Verse 9. Give wings unto Moab] There is no hope

11 Moab hath been at ease from his youth, and he ^ahath settled on his lees, and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither hath he gone into captivity: therefore his taste ^bremained in him, and his scent is not changed.

12 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will send unto him wanderers, that shall cause him to wander, and shall empty his vessels, and break their bottles.

13 And Moab shall be ashamed of ^cChemosh, as the house of Israel ^dwas ashamed of ^eBeth-el their confidence.

14 How say ye, ^fWe are mighty and strong men for the war?

15 ^gMoab is spoiled, and gone up out of her cities, and ^hhis chosen young men are ⁱgone down to the slaughter, saith ^jthe King, whose name is the LORD of hosts.

16 The calamity of Moab is near to come, and his affliction hasteth fast.

17 All ye that are about him, bemoan him; and all ye that know his name, say, "How is the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod!"

18 ^kThou daughter that dost inhabit ^lDibon, come down from ^mthy glory, and sit in thirst; for ⁿthe spoiler of Moab shall come upon thee, and he shall destroy thy strong holds.

19 O ^oinhabitant of ^pAroer, ^qstand by the way, and spy; ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth, and say, What is done?

20 Moab is confounded; for it is broken down: ^rhowl and cry; tell ye it in ^sArnon, that Moab is spoiled,

21 And judgment is come upon ^tthe plain in resistance, and to escape requires the speediest flight.

Verse 10. Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully] Moab is doomed to destruction, and the Lord pronounces a curse on their enemies if they do not proceed to utter extirpation.

Verse 11. Moab hath been at ease] The metaphor here is taken from the mode of preserving wines. They let them rest upon their lees for a considerable time, as this improves them both in strength and flavour; and when this is sufficiently done, they rack, or pour them off into other vessels. Moab had been very little molested by war since he was a nation; he had never gone out of his own land.

Therefore his taste remained in him] Still carrying on the allusion to the curing of wines; by resting long upon the lees, the taste and smell are both improved.

Verse 12. I will send unto him wanderers, that shall cause him to wander] Dr. Blayney renders tsaim, tilers; those who elevate one end of the wine cask when nearly run out, that the remains of the liquor may be the more effectually drawn off at the cock.

Verse 13. Beth-el their confidence] Alluding to the golden calves which Jeroboam had there set up, and commanded all the Israelites to worship.

Verse 17. How is the strong staff broken] The sceptre The sovereignty of Moab is destroyed.

Verse 18. Thou dost inhabit Dibon] This was anciently a city of the Reubenites, afterwards inhabited by the Moabites, about two leagues north of the river Arnon, and about six to the east of the Dead Sea.

Verse 19. O inhabitant of Aroer] This place, being at a greater distance, is counselled to watch for its own safety, and enquire of every passenger, What is done? that it may know when to pack up and be gone.

Verse 21. Upon Holon, &c.] All these were cities of the country; upon Holon, and upon Jahazah, and upon Mephaath,

22 And upon Dibon, and upon Nebo, and upon Beth-diblathaim,

23 And upon Kiriathaim, and upon Beth-gamul, and upon Beth-meon,

24 And upon *Kerioth, and upon Bozrah, and upon all the cities of the land of Moab, far or near.

25 ^bThe horn of Moab is cut off, and his ^carm is broken, saith the LORD.

26 ^dMake ye him drunken: for he magnified himself against the LORD: Moab also shall wallow in his vomit, and he also shall be in derision.

27 For ^ewas not Israel a derision unto thee? ^fwas he found among thieves? for since thou spakest of him, thou ^gskippedst for joy.

28 O ye that dwell in Moab, leave the cities, and ^hdwell in the rock, and be like ⁱthe dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth.

29 We have heard the ^jpride of Moab, (he is exceeding proud) his loftiness, and his arrogance, and his pride, and the haughtiness of his heart.

30 I know his wrath, saith the LORD; but it shall not be so; ^khis ^llies shall not so effect it.

31 Therefore ^mwill I howl for Moab, and I will cry out for all Moab; mine heart shall mourn for the men of Kir-heres.

32 ⁿO vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer: thy plants are gone over the sea, they reach even to the sea of Jazer: the spoiler is fallen upon thy summer fruits and upon thy vintage.

33 And ^ojoy and gladness is taken from the plentiful field, and from the land of Moab; and I have caused wine to fail from the wine-presses: none shall tread with shouting; their shouting shall be no shouting.

34 ^pFrom the cry of Heshbon even unto Elealeh, and even unto Jahaz, have they uttered their voice, ^qfrom Zoar even unto Horonaim, as an heifer of three years old: for the waters also of Nimrim shall be ^rdesolate.

38 There shall be lamentation generally upon all the housetops of Moab, and in the streets thereof: for I have broken Moab like ^ca vessel wherein is no pleasure, saith the LORD.

39 They shall howl, saying, How is it broken down! how hath Moab turned the ^dback with shame! so shall Moab be a derision and a dismaying to all them about him.

40 For thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^ehe shall fly as an eagle, and shall ^fspread his wings over Moab.

41 ^gKerioth ^his taken, and the strong holds are surprised, and ⁱthe mighty men's hearts in Moab at that day shall be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

CHAPTER XLIX.

This chapter is a collection of prophecies relating to several nations in the neighbourhood of Judea; and, like those preceding, are supposed to have been fulfilled by the ministry of Nebuchadnezzar during the thirteen years' siege of Tyre. The chapter opens with a prophecy concerning the Ammonites, whose chief city, Rabbah, shall be destroyed; and Malcom, the supreme divinity of the people, with all his retinue of priests and officers, carried into captivity, 1-5. Promise that the Ammonites shall be restored to their liberty, 6. Prophecy against the Edomites (very like that most dreadful one in the thirty-fourth chapter of Isaiah against the same people), who shall be utterly exterminated, after the similitude of Sodom and Gomorrah, 7-22. Prophecy against Damascus, 23-27; and against Kedar, 28, 29. Utter desolation of the kingdoms of Hazor foretold, 30-33. The polity of the Elamites shall be completely dissolved, and the people dispersed throughout the nations, 34-38. The Elamites shall be delivered from their captivity in the latter days, 39. It will be proper here to observe that these predictions should not be so explained as if they admitted of merely a private interpretation; for, as Bishop Lowth remarks upon Isaiah's prophecy concerning the Idumeans, "by a figure very common in the prophetic writings, any city or people, remarkably distinguished as enemies of the people and kingdom of God, is put for those enemies in general;" therefore, it is under the gospel dispensation that these prophecies shall be accomplished to their fullest extent upon all the antichristian nations that have sinned after the similitude of the ancient enemies of the people of God under the Mosaic economy.

CONCERNING ^b the Ammonites, thus saith the LORD; Hath Israel no sons? hath he no heir? why then doth ^c their king inherit ^d Gad, and his people dwell in his cities?

2 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will cause an alarm of war to be heard in ^e Rabbah of the Ammonites; and it shall be a desolate heap, and her daughters shall be burned with fire: then shall Israel be heir unto them that were his heirs, saith the LORD.

3 Howl, O Heshbon, for Ai is spoiled: cry, ye daughters of Rabbah, ^f gird you with sackcloth; lament, and run to and fro by the hedges; for ^g their king shall go into captivity, and his ^h priests and his princes together.

4 Wherefore gloriest thou in the valleys, ⁱ thy flowing valley, O ^j backsliding daughter? that trusted in her treasures, ^k saying, Who shall come unto me?

5 Behold, I will bring a fear upon thee, saith the LORD God of hosts, from all those that be about thee; and ye shall be driven out every man right forth; and none shall gather up him that wandereth.

6 And ^l afterward I will bring again the captivity of the children of Ammon, saith the LORD.

Verse 1. CONCERNING THE AMMONITES] This prophetic discourse was also delivered after the capture of Jerusalem.

Hath Israel no sons? — no heir? The Ammonites, it appears, took advantage of the depressed state of Israel, and invaded their territories in the tribe of Gad, hoping to make them their own for ever. But the prophet intimates that God will preserve the descendants of Israel, and will bring them back to their forfeited inheritances.

Why then doth their king? Malcom, or Milcom, the chief idol of the Ammonites.

Verse 8. Run to and fro by the hedges] It is supposed that this may refer to the women making lamentations for the dead, that were in general buried by the walls of their gardens; but others think that it refers to the smaller cities or villages, called here the daughters of Rabbah, the metropolis.

Verse 4. Wherefore gloriest thou? A stronger than thou is coming against thee.

Verse 6. Afterward I will bring again] The Ammonites are supposed to have returned with the Moabites and Israelites, on permission given by the edict of Cyrus.

hosts; ⁿ Is wisdom no more in Teman? ^o is counsel perished from the prudent? is their wisdom vanished?

8 ^p Flee ye, ^q turn back, dwell deep, O inhabitants of ^r Dedan; for I will bring the calamity of Esau upon him, the time that I will visit him.

9 If ^s grape-gatherers come to thee, would they not leave some gleaning grapes? if thieves by night, they will destroy ^t till they have enough.

10 ^u But I have made Esau bare, I have uncovered his secret places, and he shall not be able to hide himself: his seed is spoiled, and his brethren, and his neighbours, and ^v he is not.

11 Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive; and let thy widows trust in me.

12 For thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^w they whose judgment was not to drink of the cup have assuredly drunken; and art thou he that shall altogether go unpunished, thou shalt not go unpunished, but thou shalt surely drink of it.

13 For ^x I have sworn by myself, saith the LORD, that ^y Bozrah shall become a desolation, a reproach, a waste, and a curse; and all the cities thereof shall be perpetual wastes.

14 I have heard a ^z rumour from the LORD, and an ambassador is sent unto the heathen, saying,

Verse 7. CONCERNING EDOM] This is a new and separate discourse.

Teman] A part of Idumea, put here for the whole country.

Verse 8. Dwell deep] An allusion to the custom of the Arabs, who, when about to be attacked by a powerful foe, strike their tents, and set off to the great desert, and so bury themselves in it that no enemy either will or can pursue.

Dedan] Was a city of Idumea, not far from Teman.

Verse 9. If grape-gatherers] Your enemies shall not leave one of you behind; all shall be carried into captivity.

Verse 10. I have made Esau bare] I have stripped him of all defence, and have discovered his hiding-places to his enemies.

Verse 11. Leave thy fatherless children] The connexion of this with the context is not easy to be discerned; but, as a general maxim, it is of great importance. Widows and orphans are the peculiar care of God.

Verse 12. Art thou he that shall altogether go unpunished? Others, less wicked than thou, have been punished; and canst thou expect to escape?

Gather ye together, and come against her, and rise up to the battle.

15 For, lo, I will make thee small among the heathen, and despised among men.

16 Thy terribleness hath deceived thee, and the pride of thine heart, O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, that holdest the height of the hill: "though thou shouldst make thy nest as high as the eagle, I will bring thee down from thence, saith the LORD.

17 Also Edom shall be a desolation: "every one that goeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss at all the plagues thereof.

18 "As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD, no man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it.

19 Behold, he shall come up like a lion from "the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong: but I will suddenly make him run away from her: and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? for "who is like me? and who will appoint me the time? and "who is that shepherd that will stand before me?

20 "Therefore hear the counsel of the LORD, that he hath taken against Edom; and his purposes, that he hath purposed against the inhabitants of Teman: Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out: surely he shall make their habitations desolate with them.

21 "The earth is moved at the noise of their fall, at the city the noise thereof was heard in the "Red Sea.

22 Behold, "he shall come up and fly as the eagle, and spread his wings over Bozrah: and at that day shall the heart of the mighty men of Edom be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

Verse 13. Bozrah shall become a desolation] Bozrah, a city of Idumea, is here put for the whole country.

Verse 14. I have heard a rumour] The Lord has revealed to me what he is about to do to the Edomites.

An ambassador is sent] I believe this means only that God has given permission, and has stirred up the hearts of these nations to go against those whom he has doomed to destruction.

Verse 16. O thou that dwellest] All Idumea is full of mountains and rocks, and these rocks and mountains full of caves, where, in time of great heats, and in time of war, the people take shelter.

Verse 18. No man shall abide there] It shall be so desolate as not to be habitable.

Verse 19. Behold, he shall come up like a lion] See the note on chap. xii. 5.

A chosen man] Nebuchadnezzar. That is, God has chosen this man, and given him a commission against Idumea.

Verse 20. The inhabitants of Teman] Taken here for the whole of Idumea.

Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out] They shall be like timid sheep; the weakest foe shall overcome them.

Verse 21. The earth is moved] The whole state is represented here as a vast building suddenly thrown down, so as to cause the earth to tremble, and the noise to be heard at a great distance.

Verse 22. He shall come up and fly as the eagle] Nebuchadnezzar. See chap. xlviii. 40.

Verse 23. CONCERNING DAMASCUS.] This is the head or title of another prophecy. Damascus was one of the principal cities of Syria.

23 "Concerning Damascus. Hamath is confounded, and Arpad: for they have heard evil tidings: they are faint-hearted; "there is sorrow on the sea; it cannot be quiet.

24 Damascus is waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee, and fear hath seized on her: "anguish and sorrows have taken her, as a woman in travail.

25 How is "the city of praise not left, the city of my joy, 26 "Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets, and all the men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD of hosts.

27 And I will kindle a "fire in the wall of Damascus, and it shall consume the palaces of Ben-hadad.

28 "Concerning Kedar, and concerning the kingdoms of Hazor, which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon shall smite, thus saith the LORD; Arise ye, go up to Kedar, and spoil "the men of the east.

29 Their tents and their flocks shall they take away: they shall take to themselves their curtains, and all their vessels, and their camels, and they shall cry unto them, "Fear is on every side.

30 "Flee, "get you far off, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the LORD; for Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon hath taken counsel against you, and hath conceived a purpose against you.

31 Arise, get you up unto "the "wealthy nation, that dwelleth without care, saith the LORD, which have neither gates nor bars, which "dwell alone.

32 And their camels shall be a booty, and the multitude of their cattle a spoil; and I will "scatter into all winds "them that are "in the utmost corners, and I will bring their calamity from all sides thereof, saith the LORD.

33 And Hazor "shall be a dwelling for dragons, and a desolation for ever: "there shall no man abide there, nor any son of man dwell in it.

Arpad] Not far from Damascus.

Sorrow on the sea] They are like the troubled sea that cannot rest.

Verse 25. How is the city of praise not left] Damascus is so ruined that she can no more be called a praiseworthy, or happy city.

Verse 27. The palaces of Ben-hadad.] Damascus was a seat of the Syrian kings, and Ben-hadad was a name common to several of its kings.

Verse 28. CONCERNING KEDAR, AND CONCERNING THE KINGDOMS OF HAZOR] This is the title of another new prophecy.

Kedar was the name of one of the sons of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 18) who settled in Arabia, and who gave name to a powerful tribe of Arabs who used to traffic with the Tyrians in cattle.

Verse 29. Their tents and their flocks] This description of property shows that they were Semite or Nomad Arabs; persons who dwell in tents, and whose principal property was cattle, especially camels.

Verse 30. Dwell deep] See on ver. 8.

34 The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against ^a Elam in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, saying, 35 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, I will break ^b the bow of Elam, the chief of their might.

36 And upon Elam will I bring the four winds from the four quarters of heaven, and ^c will scatter them toward all those winds; and there shall be no nation whither the outcasts of Elam shall not come.

37 For I will cause Elam to be dismayed before

^a Ch. xxv. 25.—^b See Isa. xxiii. 6.—^c Ver. 32.—^d Ch. ix. 16, xlviii. 2.

Verse 33. Hazor shall be a dwelling for dragons] Shall be turned into a wilderness.

Verse 34. THE WORD—AGAINST ELAM] Another new head of prophecy. Some think that by Elam Persia is always meant; but this is not at all likely. It was a part of the Babylonian empire in the time of Daniel (chap. viii. 2), and is most probably what is called Elymais by the Greeks. This, with Susiana, Nebuchadnezzar subdued, and took from Astyages, king of Media.

Verse 35. I will break the bow of Elam] They were eminent archers; and had acquired their power and eminence by their dexterity in the use of the bow. See Isa. xxii. 6.

Verse 36. Will I bring the four winds] Nebuchadnezzar their enemies, and before them that seek their life: and I will bring evil upon them, even my fierce anger, saith the LORD; ^a and I will send the sword after them, till I have consumed them:

38 And I will ^a set my throne in Elam, and will destroy from thence the king and the princes, saith the LORD.

39 But it shall come to pass ^a in the latter days, that I will bring again the captivity of Elam, saith the LORD.

and his armies, gathered out of different provinces, and attacking this people at all points in the same time. There shall be no nation, &c.] They shall be scattered through the one hundred and twenty-seven provinces of which the Babylonish empire is composed.

Verse 38. I will set my throne in Elam] This is spoken either of Nebuchadnezzar or Cyrus. It is certain that Cyrus did render himself master of Elymais and Media, which are in the land of Elam.

Verse 39. I will bring again the captivity of Elam] As this is to be in the latter days, probably it may mean the spiritual freedom which these people would receive under the gospel dispensation.

C H A P T E R I.

This and the following chapter contain a prophecy relating to the fall of Babylon, interspersed with several predictions relative to the restoration of Israel and Judah, who were to survive their oppressors, and, on their repentance, to be pardoned and brought to their own land. This chapter opens with a prediction of the complete destruction of all the Babylonish idols, and the utter desolation of Chaldea, through the instrumentality of a great northern nation, 1-3. Israel and Judah shall be reinstated in the land of their forefathers after the total overthrow of the great Babylonish empire, 4, 5. Very oppressive and cruel bondage of the Jewish people during the captivity, 6, 7. The people of God are commanded to remove speedily from Babylon, because an assembly of great nations are coming out of the north to desolate the whole land, 8-10. Babylon, the hammer of the whole earth, the great desolator of nations, shall itself become a desolation on account of its intolerable pride, and because of the iron yoke it has rejoiced to put upon a people whom a mysterious Providence had placed under its domination, 11-34. The judgments which shall fall upon Chaldea, a country addicted to the grossest idolatry, and to every species of superstition, shall be most awful and general, as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, 35-40. Character of the people appointed to execute the divine judgments upon the oppressors of Israel, 41-45. Great sensation among the nations at the very terrible and sudden fall of Babylon, 46.

THE word that the LORD spake ^a against Babylon and against the land of the Chaldeans ^b by Jeremiah the prophet.

2 Declare ye among the nations, and publish, and ^c set up a standard; publish, and conceal not: say, Babylon is taken, ^d Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces; ^e her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces.

Verse 1. THE WORD THAT THE LORD SPAKE AGAINST BABYLON] This is also a new head of discourse.

Verse 2. Declare ye among the nations] God's determination relative to this empire.

Set up a standard] Show the people where they are to assemble.

Say, Babylon is taken] It is a thing so firmly determined, that it is as good as already done.

Bel] The tutelary deity of Babylon.

Merodach] Another of their idols.

Verse 3. Out of the north there cometh up a nation] The Medes, who formed the chief part of the army of Cyrus, lay to the north or north-east of Babylon.

Shall make her land desolate] This war, and the conse-quency against her, which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein: they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast.

4 In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the children of Israel shall come, ^a they and the children of Judah together, ^b going and weeping: they shall go, ^c and seek the LORD their God.

5 They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us join ourselves quent taking of the city, began those disasters that brought Babylon in process of time to complete desolation; so that now it is not known where it stood, the whole country being a total solitude.

Verse 4. In those days, and in that time] In the times in which Babylon shall be opposed by the Medes and Persians, both Israel and Judah, seeing the commencement of the fulfilling of the prophecies, shall begin to seek the Lord with much prayer, and broken and contrite hearts.

Verse 5. Let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant] All our former covenants have been broken; let us now make one that shall last for ever. He shall be the LORD OUR GOD, and we will no more worship idols.

The description that is here given of the state of this to the LORD in "a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

6 My people hath been ^blost sheep: their shepherds have caused them to go astray, they have turned them away on ^cthe mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their ^dresting place.

7 All that found them have ^edevoured them: and ^ftheir adversaries said, "We offend not, because they have sinned against the LORD, ^hthe habitation of justice, even the LORD, ⁱthe Hope of their fathers.

8 ^jRemove out of the midst of Babylon, and go forth out of the land of the Chaldeans, and be as the he-goats before the flocks.

9 ^kFor, lo, I will raise and cause to come up against Babylon an assembly of great nations from the north country: and they shall ^lset themselves in array against her; from thence she shall be taken: ^mtheir arrows shall be as of a mighty ⁿexpert man; ^onone shall return in vain.

10 And Chaldaea shall be a spoil: ^pall that spoil her shall be satisfied, saith the LORD.

11 ^qBecause ye were glad, because ye rejoiced, O ye destroyers of mine heritage, because ye are grown ^r'fat' as the heifer at grass, and ^s'bellow as bulls;

12 Your mother shall be sore confounded; she that bare you shall be ashamed: behold, the hindermost of the nations shall be a wilderness, a dry land, and a desert.

13 Because of the wrath of the LORD it shall not be inhabited, ^tbut it shall be wholly desolate: ^u'every one that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished, and hiss at all her plagues.

14 ^vPut yourselves in array against Babylon round about: all ye ^wthat bend the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows: for she hath sinned against the LORD.

15 Shout against her round about: she hath ^xgiven her hand: her foundations are fallen, ^yher walls are thrown down: for ^z'it is the vengeance of the LORD: take vengeance upon her; ^{aa}'as she hath done, do unto her.

16 Cut off the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the ^{bb}sickle in the time of harvest: for fear of the oppressing sword ^{cc}'they shall turn every one to his people, and they shall flee every one to his own land.

17 Israel is ^{dd}'a scattered sheep; ^{ee}'the lions have driven him away: first ^{ff}'the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last this ^{gg}'Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria.

19 ^{hh}And I will bring Israel again to his habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon Mount Ephraim and Gilead.

20 ⁱⁱIn those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, ^{jj}'the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them ^{kk}whom I reserve.

21 Go up against the land ^{ll}'of Merathaim, even against it, and against the inhabitants of ^{mm}'Pekod: ⁿⁿ'waste and utterly destroy after them, saith the LORD, and do ^{oo}'according to all that I have commanded thee.

22 ^{pp}'A sound of battle is in the land, and of great destruction.

23 How is ^{qq}'the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!

24 I have laid a snare for thee, and thou art also taken, O Babylon, ^{rr}'and thou wast not aware: thou art found, and also caught, because thou hast striven against the LORD.

25 The LORD hath opened his armoury, and hath brought forth ^{ss}'the weapons of his indignation: for Verse 6. My people hath been lost sheep] He pities them; for their pastors, kings, and prophets have caused them to err. They have gone from mountain to hill] In all high places they have practised idolatry.

Verse 7. Their adversaries said, We offend not] God has abandoned them; we are only fulfilling his designs in plaguing them.

Verse 8. Be as the he-goats before the flocks.] Who always run to the head of the flock, giving the example for others to follow.

Verse 9. An assembly of great nations] The army of Cyrus was composed of Medes, Persians, Armenians, Caducians, Saces, &c. Though all these did not come from the north; yet they were arranged under the Medes, who did come from the north, in reference to Babylon.

Verse 16. Cut off the sower] Destroy the gardens and the fields, that there may be neither fruits nor tillage.

Verse 17. Israel] All the descendants of Jacob have been harassed and spoiled, first by the Assyrians, and afterwards by the Chaldeans.

Verse 18. As I have punished the king of Assyria] The king is here taken for all their kings, generals, &c., Tiglath-pileser, Shalmaneser, Sennacherib, Esar-haddon, &c.

Verse 19. I will bring Israel again] This seems to refer wholly to the ten tribes; for Carmel, Bashan, Mount Ephraim, and Gilead, were in their territories.

Verse 20. In those days and in that time] This phrase appears to take in the whole of an epoch, from its commencement to its end. See ver. 4.

Verse 21. Go up against the land of Merathaim—and against the inhabitants of Pekod] No such places as these are to be found any where else; and it is not likely that places are at all meant. [Both words are appellatives, and are applied to the country of the Chaldeans.]

Verse 22. The hammer of the whole earth] Nebuchadnezzar dashed to pieces the nations against whom he warred. He was the scourge of the Lord.

Verse 24. I have laid a snare for thee] It was not by storm that Cyrus took the city, but by diverting the course of the Euphrates.

Verse 27. Slay all her bullocks] Princes, magistrates, &c., &c.

this is the work of the Lord God of hosts in the land of the Chaldeans.

26 Come against her ^afrom the utmost border, open her storehouses: ^bcast her up as heaps, and destroy her utterly: let nothing of her be left.

27 Slay all her ^cbullocks; let them go down to the slaughter: woe unto them! for their day is come, the time of ^dtheir visitation.

28 The voice of them that flee and escape out of the land of Babylon, ^eto declare in Zion the vengeance of the LORD our God, the vengeance of his temple.

29 Call together the archers against Babylon: ^fall ye that bend the bow, camp against it round about; let none thereof escape: ^grecompense her according to her work; according to all that she hath done, do unto her: ^hfor she hath been proud against the LORD, against the Holy One of Israel.

30 ⁱTherefore shall her young men fall in the streets, and all her men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD.

31 Behold, I am against thee, O thou ^jmost proud, saith the Lord God of hosts: for ^kthy day is come, the time that I will visit thee.

32 And ^lthe most proud shall stumble and fall, and none shall raise him up: and ^mI will kindle a fire in his cities, and it shall devour all round about him.

33 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; The children of Israel and the children of Judah were oppressed together: and all that took them captives held them fast; they refused to let them go.

34 ⁿTheir Redeemer is strong; ^othe LORD of hosts is his name: he shall thoroughly plead their cause, that he may give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon.

35 A sword is upon the Chaldeans, saith the LORD, and upon the inhabitants of Babylon, and ^pupon her princes, and upon ^qher wise men.

36 A sword is ^rupon the ^sliars; ^tand they shall dote: a sword is upon her mighty men; and they shall be dismayed.

37 A sword is upon their horses, and upon their chariots, and upon all ^uthe mingled people that are in the midst of her; and ^vthey shall become as women: a sword is upon her treasures; and they shall be robbed.

38 ^wA drought is upon her waters; and they shall be dried up: for it is the land of ^xgraven images, and they are mad upon their idols.

39 ^yTherefore the wild beasts of the desert with the wild beasts of the islands shall dwell there, and the owls shall dwell therein: ^zand it shall be no more inhabited for ever; neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation.

40 ^{aa}As God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD; ^{ab}so shall no man abide there, neither shall any son of man dwell therein.

41 ^{bb}Behold, a people shall come from the north, and a great nation, and many kings shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.

42 ^{cc}They shall hold the bow and the lance: ^{dd}they are cruel, and will not show mercy: ^{ee}their voice shall roar like the sea, and they shall ride upon horses, every one put in array, like a man to the battle, against thee, O daughter of Babylon.

43 The king of Babylon hath heard the report of them, and his hands waxed feeble: ^{ff}anguish took hold of him, and pangs as of a woman in travail.

44 ^{gg}Behold, he shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan unto the habitation of the strong: but I will make them suddenly run away from her: and who ^{hh}is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? for who ⁱⁱis like me? and who will ^{jj}appoint me the time? and ^{kk}who is that shepherd that will stand before me?

45 Therefore hear ye ^{ll}the counsel of the LORD, that he hath taken against Babylon; and his purposes, that he hath purposed against the land of the Chaldeans: Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out: surely he shall make their habitation desolate with them.

Verse 35. A sword.] War and its calamities, or any grievous plague; and so in the following verses.

Verse 38. A drought is upon her waters.] May not this refer to the draining of the channel of the Euphrates, by which the army of Cyrus entered the city. The original is, however, chereb, a sword, as in the preceding verses, which signifies war, or any calamity by which the thing on which it falls is ruined.

Verse 40. As God overthrew Sodom.] As the very ground on which these cities stood, with all the plain, now lies under the Dead Sea; so Babylon and the adjacent country shall be rendered totally barren and unfruitful, and utterly incapable of being inhabited.

Verse 46. At the noise of the taking of Babylon.] The taking of Babylon was a wonder to all the surrounding nations. It was thought to be impregnable.

CHAPTER LI.

Sequel of the prophecies of Jeremiah against Babylon. The dreadful, sudden, and final ruin that shall fall upon the Chaldeans, who have compelled the nations to receive their idolatrous rites (see an instance in the third chapter of Daniel), set forth by a variety of beautiful figures; with a command to the people of God (who have made continual intercession for the conversion of their heathen rulers), to flee from the impending vengeance, 1-14. Jehovah, Israel's God, whose infinite power, wisdom, and understanding are every where visible in the works of creation, elegantly contrasted with the utterly contemptible objects of the Chaldean worship, 15-19. Because of their great oppression of God's people, the Babylonians shall be visited with cruel enemies from the north, whose innumerable hosts shall fill the land, and utterly extirpate the original inhabitants, 20-44. One of the figures by which this formidable invasion is represented is awfully sublime. "The sea is come up upon Babylon; she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof." And the account of the sudden desolation produced by this great armament of a multitude of nations (which the prophet, dropping the figure, immediately subjoins), is deeply afflictive. "Her cities are a desolation, a dry land, and a wilderness; a land wherein no man dwelleth, neither doth any son of man pass thereby." The people of God a third time admonished to escape from Babylon, lest they be overtaken with her plagues, 45, 46. Other figures setting forth in a variety of lights the awful judgments with which the Chaldeans shall be visited on account of their very gross idolatries, 47-58. The significant emblem with which the chapter concludes, of Seraiah, after having read the book of the prophet Jeremiah against Babylon, binding a stone to it, and casting it into the river Euphrates, thereby prefiguring the very sudden downfall of the Chaldean city and empire, 59-64, is beautifully improved by the writer of the Apocalypse, chap. xviii, 21, in speaking of Babylon the GREAT, of which the other was a most expressive type; and to which many of the passages interspersed throughout the Old Testament Scriptures relative to Babylon must be ultimately referred, if we would give an interpretation in every respect equal to the terrible import of the language in which these prophecies are conceived.

THUS saith the LORD; Behold, I will raise up against Babylon, and against them that dwell in the midst of them that rise up against me, a destroying wind;

2 And will send unto Babylon fanners, that shall fan her, and shall empty her land; for in the day of trouble they shall be against her round about.

3 Against him that bendeth let the archer bend his bow, and against him that lifeth himself up in his brigandine: and spare ye not her young men; destroy ye utterly all her host.

4 Thus the slain shall fall in the land of the Chaldeans, and they that are thrust through in her streets.

5 For Israel hath not been forsaken, nor Judah of his God, of the LORD of hosts; though their land was filled with sin against the Holy One of Israel.

6 Flee out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul; be not cut off in her iniquity; for this is the time of the LORD's vengeance; he will render unto her a recompense.

Verse 1. Thus saith the Lord] This chapter is a continuation of the preceding prophecy.

A destroying wind] Such as the pestilential winds in the East; and here the emblem of a destroying army, carrying all before them, and wasting with fire and sword.

Verse 2. And will send—fanners] When the corn is trodden out with the feet of cattle, or crushed out with a heavy wheel armed with iron, with a shovel they throw it up against the wind, that the chaff and broken straw may be separated from it.

Verse 5. For Israel hath not been forsaken] I conceive asham, which we translate sin, as rather signifying punishment, which meaning it often has.

Verse 7. Made all the earth drunken] The cup of God's wrath is the plenitude of punishment, that he inflicts on transgressors. It is represented as intoxicating and making them mad.

Verse 8. Babylon is suddenly fallen and destroyed] These appear to be the words of some of the spectators of Babylon's misery.

7 Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken: the nations have drunken of her wine; therefore the nations are mad.

8 Babylon is suddenly fallen and destroyed; howl for her; take balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed.

9 We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed: forsake her, and let us go every one into his own country: for her judgment reacheth unto heaven, and is lifted up even to the skies.

10 The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness: come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the Lord our God.

11 Make bright the arrows; gather the shields: the Lord hath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes: for his device is against Babylon, to destroy it; because it is the vengeance of the Lord, the vengeance of his temple.

12 Set up the standard upon the walls of Babylon, make the watch strong, set up the watchmen

Verse 9. We would have healed Babylon] Had it been in our power, we would have saved her; but we could not turn away the judgment of God.

Verse 10. The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness] This is the answer of the Jews. God has vindicated our cause.

Verse 11. Make bright the arrows] This is the prophet's address to Babylon.

Verse 12. Set up the standard] A call to the enemies of Babylon to invest the city and press the siege.

Verse 13. O thou that dwellest upon many waters] Thou who hast an abundant supply of waters. It was built on the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates; the latter running through the city.

Verse 14. I will fill thee with men] By means of those very waters through the channel of thy boasted river, thou shalt be filled with men, suddenly appearing as an army of locusts; who, without being expected, shall lift up a terrific cry, as soon as they have risen from the channel of the river.

prepare the ^aambushes: for the LORD hath both devised and done that which he spake against the inhabitants of Babylon.

13 ^bO thou that dwellest upon many waters, abundant in treasures, thine end is come, and the measure of thy covetousness.

14 ^cThe LORD of hosts hath sworn ^dby himself, saying, Surely I will fill thee with men, ^eas with caterpillers; and they shall ^flift ^gup a shout against thee.

15 ^hHe hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and ⁱhath stretched out the heaven by his understanding.

16 ^jWhen he uttereth his voice, there is a ^kmultitude of waters in the heavens; and ^lhe causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth: he maketh lightnings with rain, and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.

17 ^mEvery man ⁿis brutish by his knowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image: ^ofor his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.

18 ^pThey are vanity, the work of errors: in the time of their visitation they shall perish.

19 ^qThe Portion of Jacob is not like them; for he is the former of all things: and Israel is the rod of his inheritance: the LORD of hosts is his name.

20 ^rThou art my battle ax and weapons of war: for ^swith thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms;

21 And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider;

22 With thee also will I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces ^told and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid;

23 I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock: and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers.

Verse 15. He hath made the earth by his power] The omnipotence of God is particularly manifested in the works of creation.

Verse 17. Every man is brutish by his knowledge] He is brutish for want of real knowledge; and he is brutish when he acknowledges that an idol is anything in the world.

Verse 20. Thou art my battle ax] I believe Nebuchadnezzar is meant, who is called, chap. i. 23, the hammer of the whole earth. Others think the words are spoken of Cyrus. All the verbs are in the past tense: "With these have I broken in pieces," &c., &c.

Verse 24. And I will render] "But I will render unto Babylon."

Verse 25. O destroying mountain] Another epithet which he applies to the Babylonish government; it is like a burning mountain, which, by vomiting continual streams of burning lava, inundates and destroys all towns, villages, fields, &c., in its vicinity.

And roll thee down from the rocks] Under a most expressive metaphor, the prophet shows the nature of the Babylonish government; setting the nations on fire, deluging and destroying them by its troops, till at last, exhausted, it tumbles down, is extinguished, and leaves nothing as a basis to erect a new form of government on; but is altogether

24 ^aAnd I will render unto Babylon and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the LORD.

25 Behold, I am against thee, ^bO destroying mountain, saith the LORD, which destroyest all the earth: and I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and roll thee down from the rocks, ^cand will make thee a burnt mountain.

26 And they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner, nor a stone for foundations; but ^dthou shalt be ^edesolate for ever, saith the LORD.

27 ^fSet ye up a standard in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations, ^gprepare the nations against her, call together against her ^hthe kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz; appoint a captain against her; cause the horses to come up as the rough caterpillers.

28 Prepare against her the nations with ⁱthe kings of the Medes, the captains thereof, and all the rulers thereof, and all the land of his dominion.

29 And the land shall tremble and sorrow, for every purpose of the LORD shall be performed against Babylon, ^jto make the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant.

30 The mighty men of Babylon have forborn to fight, they have remained in their holds; their might hath failed; ^kthey became as women: they have burned her dwelling-places; ^lher bars are broken.

31 ^mOne post shall run to meet another, and one messenger to meet another, to shew the king of Babylon that his city is taken at one end, 32 And that ⁿthe passages are stopped, and the reeds they have burned with fire, and the men of war are affrighted.

33 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: The daughter of Babylon is ^olike a threshing-flour, ^p*it is* time to thresh her: yet a little while, ^qand the time of her harvest shall come.

Verse 27. Set ye up a standard] Another summons to the Medes and Persians to attack Babylon.

Ararat, Minni] The Greater and Lesser Armenia.

And Ashchenaz] A part of Phrygia, near the Hellespont.

Verse 29. And the land shall tremble] It is represented here as trembling under the numerous armies that are passing over it, and the prancing of their horses.

Verse 30. The mighty men—have forborn to fight] They were panic-struck when they found the Medes and Persians within their walls, and at once saw that resistance was useless.

Verse 31. One post shall run to meet another] Herodotus tells us that the extreme parts of the city were taken before those of the centre knew any thing of the invasion.

Verse 32. The reeds they have burned with fire] What this means I cannot tell, unless it refer to something done after the taking of the city. That they burnt nothing before they took the city must be evident from the circumstance of their taking the city by surprise, in the night time, with the greatest secrecy. Still there might have been some gates, barricadoes, or wooden works, serving for barracks or such like, which obstructed some of the great passages, which, 35 *The violence done to me and to my ^b flesh be upon Babylon, shall the ^c inhabitant of Zion say: and my blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea, shall Jerusalem say.

36 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^a I will plead thy cause, and take vengeance for thee; ^a and I will dry up her sea, and make her springs dry.

37 ^a And Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling-place for dragons, ^a an astonishment, and an hissing, without an inhabitant.

38 They shall roar together like lions: they shall ^b yell as lions' whelps.

39 In their heat I will make their feasts, and ^a I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice, and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the LORD.

40 I will bring them down like lambs to the slaughter, like rams with he-goats.

Verse 39. In their heat I will make their feasts] It was on the night of a feast day, while their hearts were heated with wine and revelry, that Babylon was taken; see Dan. v. 1-8. Many had retired to rest, and never awoke; slain in their beds, they slept a perpetual sleep.

Verse 41. How is Sheshach taken!] Perhaps the city is here called by the name of its idol.

52 Wherefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, ^a that I will do judgment upon her graven images: and through all her land the wounded shall groan.

53 ^b Though Babylon should mount up to heaven, and though she should fortify the height of her strength, yet from me shall spoilers come unto her, saith the LORD.

Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.] It appears that the following chapter is not the work of this prophet: it is not his style. The author of it writes Jehoiachin; Jeremiah writes him always Jeconiah, or Coniah. It is merely historical, and is very similar to 2 Kings xxiv. 18—xxv. 30.

CHAPTER LII.

This chapter was added after Jeremiah's time, probably by Ezra, after the return from the captivity, of which it gives a short account, nearly the same as in 2 Kings xxiv. 18-20, and xxv. It is very properly subjoined to the preceding prophecies, in order to show how exactly they were fulfilled. It likewise forms a proper introduction to the following Lamentations, as it gives an account of the mournful events which give rise to them. Zedekiah's evil reign and rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar, 1-3. Jerusalem is taken by the Chaldeans after a siege of eighteen months, 4-7. Zedekiah pursued and taken in the plains of Jericho, and his whole army dispersed, 8-9. The king's sons and all the princes of Judah slain in Riblah, 10. Zedekiah has his eyes put out by order of the Chaldean monarch; and is afterward bound in chains, carried to Babylon, and imprisoned for life, 11. Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, burns and spoils the city and temple, 12-19. The two pillars of the temple, with their dimensions and ornaments, 20-23. The officers of the temple, and several others, carried away captives into Babylon, and then slain by order of Nebuchadnezzar, 24-27. The number of Jews that Nebuchadnezzar carried away captive in the seventh year of his reign, 28; in his eighteenth year, 29; and in his twenty-third year, 30. Evil-merodach, the son of Nebuchadnezzar, in the year of his accession to the throne of Babylon (which was in the thirty-seventh year of the captivity, and the one hundred and ninety-first from the building of Rome, according to the computation of Varro), orders Jehoiachin to be taken out of prison, and treats him kindly for the remainder of his life, 31-34.

ZEDEKIAH was ^a one and twenty years old when he ^b began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

2 And he did that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

3 For through the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, till he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

4 And it came to pass in the ^c ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came,

^a 2 Kings xxiv. 18. — ^b Heb. reigned.

Verse 1. Zedekiah was one and twenty years old] See 2 Kings xxiv. 18.

Verse 3. Through the anger of the Lord] Here is a king given to a people in God's anger, and taken away in his displeasure.

he and all his army, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about.

5 So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

6 And in the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land.

7 Then the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden; (now the Chaldeans were by the city round about:) and they went by the way of the plain.

8 But the army of the Chaldeans pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered from him.

9 *Then they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him.

10 ^b And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: he slew also all the princes of Judah in Riblah.

11 Then he ^cput out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in ^dchains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in ^eprison till the day of his death.

12 ^fNow in the fifth month, in the tenth day of the month, ^gwhich was the nineteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, ^hcame Nebuzar-adan, ⁱ'captain' of the guard, ^jwhich ^kserved the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem,

13 And burned the house of the LORD, and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, and all the houses of the great ^{men}, burned he with fire:

14 And all the army of the Chaldeans, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down all the walls of Jerusalem round about.

15 ^lThen Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive ^mcertain of the poor of the people, and the residue of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the multitude.

16 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left ⁿcertain of the poor of the land for vine-dressers and for husbandmen.

17 ^oAlso the ^ppillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of the LORD the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon.

18 ^qThe caldrons also, and the ^rshovels, and the snuffers, and the ^sbowls, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away.

19 And the basons, and the ^tfirepans, and the bowls, and the caldrons, and the candlesticks, and the spoons, and the cups; ^uthat which was of gold in gold, and ^vthat which was of silver in silver, took the captain of the guard away.

20 The two pillars, one sea, and twelve brasen bulls that were under the bases, which king Solomon had made in the house of the LORD: ^wthe ^xbrass of all these vessels was without weight.

21 And ^yconcerning the ^zpillars, the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits; and a ^{aa}fillet of twelve cubits did compass it; and the thickness thereof was four fingers: ^{ab}it was hollow.

22 And a chapter of brass was upon it; and the height of one chapter was five cubits, with network and pomegranates upon the chapters round about, all of brass. The second pillar also and the pomegranates were like unto these.

23 And there were ninety and six pomegranates on a side; and ^{ac}all the pomegranates upon the network were an hundred round about.

24 And ^{ad}the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, ^{ae}and Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the ^{af}door:

25 He took also out of the city an eunuch, which had the charge of the men of war; and seven men of them that ^{ag}were near the king's person, which were found in the city; and the ^{ah}principal scribe of the host, who mustered the people of the land; and threescore men of the people of the land, that were found in the midst of the city.

26 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard took them, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah.

27 And the king of Babylon smote them, and put them to death in Riblah in the land of Hamath. Thus ^{ai}Judah was carried away captive out of his own land.

28 ^{aj}This is the people whom Nebuchadrezzar carried away captive: in the ^{ak}seventh year ^{al}three thousand Jews and three and twenty:

29 ^{am}In the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar he carried away captive from Jerusalem eight hundred thirty and two ^{an}persons:

30 In the three and twentieth year of Nebuchadrezzar Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive of the Jews seven hundred forty and five persons: all the persons were four thousand and six hundred.

31 ^{ao}And it came to pass in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin the king of Judah, in the twelfth month, in the five and twentieth day of the month, ^{ap}that Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the ^{aq}first year of his reign ^{ar}lifted up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah, and brought him forth out of prison,

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

LAMENTATIONS

THERE has been little difference among learned men concerning the author of this book. The whole current of antiquity and modern times has pointed out Jeremiah as the writer: of this the style is a sufficient evidence.

There has been more difference of opinion relative to the subject and occasion. Some have thought the book was composed on the death of Josiah; others that it was composed on occasion of the destruction of Jerusalem, and the various desolations connected with it. To this, all its parts and its general phraseology seem best to apply; and this is the sentiment most generally embraced at present. This will receive much proof from a minute consideration of the book itself.

The composition of this poem is what may be called very technical. Every chapter, except the last, is an acrostic. Of the two first, each verse begins with a several letter of the Hebrew alphabet, in the order of the letters, with this exception, that in the second, third, and fourth chapters, the phe is put before the ain; whereas in all the acrostic Psalms the latter precedes the former, as it does in all grammars of the Hebrew language.

"Never," says Bishop Lowth, "was there a more rich and elegant variety of beautiful images and adjuncts arranged together within so small a compass, nor more happily chosen and applied."

"One would think," says Dr. South, "that every letter was written with a tear; every word the sound of a breaking heart: that the author was compacted of sorrows; disciplined to grief from his infancy; one who never breathed but in sighs, nor spoke but in a groan."

All the expressions and images of sorrow are here exhibited in various combinations, and in various points of view. Misery has no expression that the author of the Lamentations has not employed. Patriots! you who tell us you burn for your country's welfare, look at the prophecies and history of this extraordinary man; look at his Lamentations; take him through his life to his death, and learn from him what true patriotism means! The man who watched, prayed, and lived for the welfare of his country; who chose to share her adversities, her sorrows, her wants, her afflictions, and disgrace, where he might have been a companion of princes, and have sat at the table of kings; who only ceased to live for his country when he ceased to breathe;—that was a patriot, in comparison with whom almost all others are obscured, minished, and brought low, or are totally annihilated!

THE L A M E N T A T I O N S

OF J E R E M I A H.

CHAPTER I.

The prophet begins with lamenting the dismal reverse of fortune that befell his country, confessing at the same time that her calamities were the just consequence of her sins, 1-6. Jerusalem herself is then personified and brought forward to continue the sad complaint, and to solicit the mercy of God, 7-22.

H doth the city sit solitary, that was full of people: ^ahow is she become as a widow! she that was great among nations, and ^bprincess among the provinces, how is she become tributary!

2 She ^cweepeth sore in the ^dnight, and her tears are on her cheeks: ^eamong all her lovers ^fshe hath none to comfort her: all her friends have dealt treacherously with her, they are become her enemies.

3 ^gJudah is gone into captivity because of affliction, and ^hbecause of great servitude: ⁱshe dwelleth among the heathen, she findeth no rest: all her persecutors overtook her between the straits.

4 The ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts: all her gates are desolate: her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she ^jis in bitterness.

5 Her adversaries ^kare the chief, her enemies prosper; for the Lord hath afflicted her ^lfor the multitude of her transgressions: her ^mchildren are gone into captivity before the enemy.

6 And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed: her princes are become like harts that find no pasture, and they are gone without strength before the pursuer.

7 Jerusalem remembered in the days of her affliction and of her miseries all ⁿher pleasant things that she had in the days of old, when her people fell into the hand of the enemy, and none did help her: the adversaries saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths.

8 ^oJerusalem hath grievously sinned; therefore she ^pis removed: all that honoured her despise her, because ^qthey have seen her nakedness: yea, she sigheth, and turneth backward.

9 Her filthiness is in her skirts; she ^rremembereth not her last end; therefore she came down wonderfully: ^sshe had no comforter. O Lord, behold my affliction: for the enemy hath magnified himself.

10 The adversary hath spread out his hand upon ^tall her ^upleasant things: for she hath seen that ^vthe heathen entered into her sanctuary, whom thou didst command that ^wthey should not enter into thy congregation.

Verse 1. How doth the city sit solitary] Sitting down with the elbow on the knee, and the head supported by the hand, without any company, unless an oppressor near,—all these were signs of mourning and distress.

Become as a widow] Having lost her king. Cities are commonly described as the mothers of their inhabitants, the kings as husbands, and the princes as children. When therefore they are bereaved of these, they are represented as widows, and childless.

Is she become tributary!] Having no longer the political form of a nation: and the remnant that is left paying tribute to a foreign and heathen conqueror.

Verse 2. Among all her lovers] Her allies; her friends, instead of helping her, have helped her enemies. Several who sought her friendship when she was in prosperity, in the time of David and Solomon, are now among her enemies.

Verse 3. Between the straits.] She has been brought into such difficulties, that it was impossible for her to escape.

Verse 4. The ways of Zion do mourn] A fine prosopopœia. The ways in which the people trod, coming to the sacred solemnities, being now no longer frequented, are represented as shedding tears; and the gates themselves partake of the general distress.

Verse 5. Her adversaries are the chief] They have now supreme dominion over the whole land.

Verse 7. Did mock at her sabbaths.] Mishbatteha. Some contend that sabbaths are not intended here. The Septuagint has "her habitation;" the Chaldee, "her good things;" the Syriac, "her breach." The Vulgate and Arabic agree 11 All her people sigh, ^a they seek bread; they have given their pleasant things for meat ^b to relieve the soul: see, O LORD, and consider; for I am become vile.

12 ^c Is it nothing to you, all ye that ^d pass by? behold, and see ^e if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the LORD hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger.

13 From above hath he sent fire into my bones, and it prevaileth against them: he hath ^f spread a net for my feet, he hath turned me back: he hath made me desolate and faint all the day.

14 ^g The yoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand: they are wreathed, and come up upon my neck: he hath made my strength to fail, the LORD hath delivered me into their hands, from whom I am not able to rise up.

15 The LORD hath trodden under foot all my mighty men in the midst of me: he hath called an assembly against me to crush my young men: ^h the LORD hath trodden ⁱ the virgin, the daughter of Judah, as in a wine-press.

16 For these things I weep; ^j mine eye, mine eye runneth down with water, because ^k the comforter that should ^l relieve my soul is far from me: my children are desolate, because the enemy prevailed.

with the Hebrew. The Jews were despised by the heathen for keeping the sabbath.

Verse 11. They have given their pleasant things] Jerusalem is compared to a woman brought into great straits, who parts with her jewels and trinkets in order to purchase by them the necessities of life.

Verse 12. Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by?] The desolations and distress brought upon this city and its inhabitants had scarcely any parallel.

Verse 14. The yoke of my transgressions] I am now tied and bound by the chain of my sins; and it is so wreathed, so doubled and twisted round me, that I cannot free myself. A fine representation of the miseries of a penitent soul, which feels that nothing but the pitifulness of God's mercy can loose it.

Verse 15. Called an assembly] The Chaldean army, composed of various nations, which God commissioned to destroy Jerusalem.

Verse 17. Zion spreadeth forth her hands] Extending the hands is the form in supplication.

17 ^m Zion spreadeth forth her hands, and ⁿ there is none to comfort her: the LORD hath commanded concerning Jacob, that his adversaries should be round about him: Jerusalem is as a menstruous woman among them.

18 The LORD is ^o righteous; for I have ^p rebelled against his ^q commandment: hear, I pray you, all people, and behold my sorrow: my virgins and my young men are gone into captivity.

19 I called for my lovers, but ^r they deceived me: my priests and mine elders gave up the ghost in the city, ^s while they sought their meat to relieve their souls.

20 Behold, O LORD; for I am in distress: my ^t bowels are troubled: mine heart is turned within me; for I have grievously rebelled: ^u abroad the sword bereaveth, at home there is as death.

21 They have heard that I sigh: ^v there is none to comfort me: all mine enemies have heard of my trouble; they are glad that thou hast done it: thou wilt bring ^w the day that thou hast ^x called, and they shall be like unto me.

Verse 19. I called for my lovers] My allies; the Egyptians and others.

Verse 20. Abroad the sword bereaveth] WAR is through the country; and at home death; the pestilence and famine rage in the city; calamity in every shape is fallen upon me.

Verse 21. Thou wilt bring the day that thou hast called, and they shall be like unto me.] Babylon shall be visited in her turn; and thy judgments poured out upon her shall equal her state with my own.

Verse 22. Let all their wickedness come before thee] That is, Thou wilt call their crimes also into remembrance; and thou wilt do unto them by siege, sword, famine, and captivity, what thou hast done to me. Though thy judgments, because of thy long-suffering, are slow; yet, because of thy righteousness, they are sure.

Imprecations in the sacred writings are generally to be understood as declarative of the evils they indicate; or, that such evils will take place. No prophet of God ever wished desolation on those against whom he was directed to prophesy.

CHAPTER II

The prophet shows the dire effects of the divine anger in the miseries brought on his country; the unparalleled calamities of which he charges, in a great measure, on the false prophets, 1-14. In this desperate condition, the astonishment and by-word of all who see her, Jerusalem is directed to sue earnestly for mercy and pardon, 15-22.

HOW hath the LORD covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud in his anger, * and cast down from heaven unto the earth ^b the beauty of Israel, and remembered not ^c his footstool in the day of his anger!

2 The LORD hath swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob, ^d and hath not pitied: he hath thrown down in his wrath the strong holds of the daughter of Judah; he hath ^e brought them down to the ground: ^f he hath polluted the kingdom and the princes thereof.

3 He hath cut off in his fierce anger all the horn of Israel: ^g he hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy, ^h and he burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about.

4 ⁱ He hath bent his bow like an enemy: he stood with his right hand as an adversary, and slew ^j all ^k that were pleasant to the eye in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion: he poured out his fury like fire.

5 ^l The LORD was as an enemy: he hath swallowed up Israel, ^m he hath swallowed up all her palaces: he hath destroyed his strong holds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.

6 And he hath violently ⁿ taken away his ^o tabernacle, ^p as if it were of a garden: he hath destroyed his places of the assembly: ^q the LORD hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised in the indignation of his anger the king and the priest.

7 The LORD hath cast off his altar, he hath abhorred his sanctuary, he hath ^r given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; ^s they have made a noise in the house of the LORD, as in the day of a solemn feast.

8 The LORD hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion: ^t he hath stretched out a line, he hath not withdrawn his hand from ^u destroying: therefore he made the rampart and the wall to lament; they languished together.

9 Her gates are sunk into the ground; he hath destroyed and ^v broken her bars: ^w her king and her princes are among the Gentiles: ^x the law is no more; her ^y prophets also find no vision from the LORD.

10 The elders of the daughter of Zion ^z sit upon the ground and keep silence; they have ^{aa} cast up dust upon their heads; they have ^{bb} girded themselves with sackcloth: the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.

11 ^{cc} Mine eyes do fail with tears, ^{dd} my bowels are troubled, ^{ee} my liver is poured upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because ^{ff} the children and the sucklings ^{gg} swoon in the streets of the city.

12 They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? when they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city, when their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.

13 What thing shall I take to witness for thee? ^{hh} what thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? what shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee? O virgin daughter of Zion? for thy breach is great like the sea: who can heal thee?

14 Thy ⁱⁱ prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee: and they have not ^{jj} discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but have seen for thee false burdens and causes of banishment.

15 ^{kk} All that pass ^{ll} by ^{mm} clap their hands at thee; they hiss ⁿⁿ and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying, Is this the city that men call ^{oo} The perfection of beauty, The joy of the whole earth?

16 ^{pp} All thine enemies have opened their mouth against thee: they hiss and gnash the teeth: they say, ^{qq} We have swallowed her up: certainly this is the day that we looked for; we have found, ^{rr} we have seen it.

17 The LORD hath done that which he had ^{ss} devised; he hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded in the days of old: ^{tt} he hath thrown down, and hath not pitied: and he hath caused ^{uu} thine enemy to ^{vv} rejoice over thee, he hath set up the horn of thine adversaries.

Verse 1. How hath the Lord covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud] The women in the eastern countries wear veils, and often very costly ones. Here, Zion is represented as being veiled by the hand of God's judgment. And what is the veil? A dark cloud, by which she is entirely obscured. The beauty of Israel] His Temple.

His footstool] The ark of the covenant, often so called. Verse 2. The Lord hath swallowed up] That is, he has permitted them to be destroyed. See ver. 5.

Verse 3. The horn of Israel] It is a metaphor taken from cattle, whose principal strength lies in their horns.

Verse 4. He hath bent his bow—he stood with his right hand] This is the attitude of the archer.

Verse 6. As if it were of a garden] "As it were the garden of his own hedging."

The Lord hath caused the solemn feasts] By delivering us up to the hands of the enemy, our religious worship is not only suspended, but all divine ordinances are destroyed.

Verse 7. They have made a noise in the house of the Lord] Instead of the silver trumpets of the sanctuary, nothing but the sounds of warlike instruments are to be heard.

Verse 8. He hath stretched out a line] The line of devastation; marking what was to be pulled down and demolished.

Verse 9. Her gates are sunk into the ground] The consequence of their being long thrown down and neglected.

Her king and her princes are among the Gentiles] Zedekiah and many of the princes were then prisoners in Babylon, another proof that the captivity had endured some time; unless all this be spoken prophetically, of what should be done.

Verse 10. Keep silence] No words can express their sorrows: small griefs are eloquent, great ones dumb.

Verse 11. Swoon in the streets of the city] Through the excess of the famine.

Verse 12. When their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom] When, in endeavouring to draw nourishment from the breasts of their exhausted mothers, they breathed their last in their bosoms! How dreadfully afflicting was this!

Verse 14. They have not discovered thine iniquity] They did not reprove for sin; they pretended visions of good in thy favour, and false burdens for thy enemies.

Verse 15. The perfection of beauty] This probably only the daughter of Zion, ^a let tears run down like a river day and night: give thyself no rest; let not the apple of thine eye cease.

19 Arise, ^b cry out in the night: in the beginning of the watches ^c pour out thine heart like water before the face of the LORD: lift up thy hands toward him for the life of thy young children, ^d that faint for hunger ^e in the top of every street.

applied to the temple. Jerusalem never was a fine or splendid city; but the temple was most assuredly the most splendid building in the world.

Verse 16. This is the day that we looked for] Jerusalem was the envy of the surrounding nations: they longed for its destruction, and rejoiced when it took place.

Verse 18. O wall of the daughter of Zion] What is the meaning of wall of the daughter of Zion? I answer, I do not know. It is certainly harsh to say, "O wall of the daughter of Zion, let tears run down like a river day and night." Zion's ways may lament, and her streets mourn; but how the walls can be said to weep is not so easy to be understood, because there is no parallel for it.

Let not the apple of thine eye cease.] Let not thy tears the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the LORD?

cease. For with what propriety can we say to the apple or pupil of the eye, Do not cease?

Verse 19. Arise, cry out in the night] This seems to refer to Jerusalem besieged.

Verse 20. Consider to whom thou hast done this.] Perhaps the best sense of this difficult verse is this: "Thou art our Father, we are thy children; wilt thou destroy thy own offspring? Was it ever heard that a mother devoured her own child, a helpless infant of a span long?"

Verse 22. Thou hast called, as in a solemn day] Perhaps the figure is the collecting of the people in Jerusalem on one of the solemn annual festivals. God has called terrors together to feast on Jerusalem, similar to the convocation of the people from all parts of the land to one of those annual festivals.

CHAPTER III.

The prophet, by enumerating his own severe trials, 1-20, and showing his trust in God, 21, encourages his people to the like resignation and trust in the divine and never-failing mercy, 22-27. He vindicates the goodness of God in all his dispensations, and the unreasonableness of murmuring under them, 28-39. He recommends self-examination and repentance; and then, from their experience of former deliverances from God, encourages them to look for pardon for their sins, and retribution to their enemies, 40-66.

I AM the man that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath.

2 He hath led me, and brought me into darkness, but not into light.

3 Surely against me is he turned; he turneth his hand against me all the day.

4 ^a My flesh and my skin hath he made old; he hath ^b broken my bones.

5 He hath builded against me, and compassed me with gall and travel.

Verse 1. I am the man that hath seen affliction] Either the prophet speaks here of himself, or he is personating his miserable countrymen. This and other passages in this poem have been applied to Jesus Christ's passion; but, in my opinion, without any foundation.

Verse 2. He hath—brought me into darkness] In the sacred writings, darkness is often taken for calamity; light, for prosperity.

Verse 5. He hath builded against me] Perhaps there is a reference here to the mounds and ramparts raised by the Chaldeans in order to take the city.

Verse 7. He hath hedged me about] This also may refer to the lines drawn round the city during the siege. But these and similar expressions in the following verses may be Verse 9. He hath inclosed my ways with hewn stone] He has put insuperable obstacles in my way; and confounded all my projects of deliverance, and all my expectations of prosperity.

Verse 13. The arrows of his quiver] "The sons of his quiver." The issue or effect; the subject, adjunct, or accident, or produce of a thing, is frequently denominated its son or child.

Verse 15. He hath filled me with bitterness] Bitter upon bitter.

He hath made me drunken with wormwood.] I have drunk the cup of misery till I am intoxicated with it.

15 * He hath filled me with ^b bitterness, he hath made me drunken with wormwood.

16 He hath also broken my teeth ^c with gravel stones, he hath ^d covered me with ashes.

Verse 16. He hath also broken my teeth with gravel stones] What a figure to express disgust, pain, and the consequent incapacity of taking food for the support of life; a man, instead of bread, being obliged to eat small pebbles, till all his teeth are broken to pieces by endeavouring to grind them.

He hath covered me with ashes.] "He hath plunged me into the dust." To be thrown into a mass or bed of perfect dust, where the eyes are blinded by it, the ears stopped, and the mouth and lungs filled at the very first attempt to breathe after having been thrown into it—what a horrible idea of suffocation and drowning!

Verse 18. And my hope] That first, that last support of the miserable—it is gone! it is perished!

Verse 22. It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed] Being humbled, and seeing himself and his sinfulness in a proper point of view, he finds that God, instead of dealing with him in judgment, has dealt with him in mercy; and that though the affliction was excessive, yet it was less than his iniquity deserved. If, indeed, any sinner be kept out of hell, it is because God's compassion faileth not.

Verse 23. They are new every morning] Who could exist throughout the day, if there were not a continual superintending Providence? Who could be preserved in the night, if the Watchman of Israel ever slumbered or slept?

Verse 26. It is good that a man should both hope] When a man hopes for salvation, he should not only wait for it, but use every means that may lead to it; for hope cannot live, if there be no exercise. He must expect, and yet be dumb, as the words imply; ever feeling his utter unworthiness; and, without murmuring, struggle into life.

Verse 27. That he bear the yoke in his youth] He who has not got under wholesome restraint in youth will never make a useful man, a good man, nor a happy man.

Verse 28. He sitteth alone] He has learnt that necessary lesson of independence, that shows him how he is to serve himself; to give no trouble to others; and keep his troubles, as far as possible, in his own bosom.

31 'For the LORD will not cast off for ever:

32 But though he cause grief, yet will he have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies.

33 For ^a he doth not afflict ^b willingly, nor grieve the children of men.

34 To crush under his feet all the prisoners of the earth,

35 To turn aside the right of a man before the face of ^c the Most High.

36 To subvert a man in his cause, ^d the LORD ^e approveth not.

37 Who is he ^f that saith, and it cometh to pass, when the LORD commandeth it not?

38 Out of the mouth of the Most High proceedeth not ^g evil and good?

CHAPTER IV.

The present deplorable state of the nation is now contrasted with its ancient prosperity, 1-12; and the unhappy change ascribed, in a great degree, to the profligacy of the priests and prophets, 13-16. The national calamities are tenderly lamented, 17-20. The ruin of the Edomites also, who had insulted the Jews in their distress, is ironically predicted, 21. See Ps. cxxxvii. 7, and Obadiah 10-12. The chapter closes with a gracious promise of deliverance from the Babylonish captivity, 22.

Like the ostriches in the wilderness.] For her carelessness about her eggs, and her inattention to her young, the ostrich is proverbial.

daughter of my people is greater than the punishment of the sin of Sodom, that was ^a overthrown as in a moment, and no hands stayed on her.

7 Her Nazarites were purer than snow, they were whiter than milk, they were more ruddy in body than rubies, their polishing was of sapphire:

8 Their visage is ^b blacker than a coal; they are not known in the streets: ^c their skin cleaveth to their bones; it is withered, it is become like a stick.

9 They that be slain with the sword are better than they that be slain with hunger: for these ^d pine away, stricken through for want of the fruits of the field.

10 The hands of the ^e pitiful women have sodden their own children: they were their ^f meat in the destruction of the daughter of my people.

11 The Lord hath accomplished his fury; ^g he hath poured out his fierce anger, and ^h hath kindled a fire in Zion, and it hath devoured the foundations thereof.

12 The kings of the earth, and all the inhabitants of the world, would not have believed that the adversary and the enemy should have entered into the gates of Jerusalem.

Verse 5. Embrace dunghills.] Lie on straw or rubbish, instead of the costly carpets and sofas on which they formerly stretched themselves.

Verse 6. For the punishment] He thinks the punishment of Jerusalem far greater than that of Sodom. That was destroyed in a moment, while all her inhabitants were in health and strength; Jerusalem fell by the most lingering calamities; her men partly destroyed by the sword, and partly by the famine.

Verse 7. Her Nazarites were purer than snow] Nazir does not always signify a person separated under a religious vow; it sometimes denotes what is chief or eminent.

Milk will most certainly well apply to the whiteness of the skin; the beautiful ruby to the ruddiness of the flesh; and the sapphire, in its clearer transcendent purple, to the veins in a fine complexion. The reverse of this state, as described in the following verse, needs no explanation. The face was a dismal dark brown, the flesh gone, the skin shrivelled, and apparently wrapped round the bones.

Verse 10. The hands of the pitiful women have sodden their own children] This was done, not by mothers cruel and brutal, but by nashim rachmaniyoth, the compassionate, the tender-hearted mothers.

Verse 12. The kings of the earth] Jerusalem was so well fortified, both by nature and art, that it appeared as a miracle that it should be taken at all.

Verse 14. They have wandered as blind men in the streets] Rather, "They ran frantic through the streets, they were stained with blood."

Verse 15. When they fled away] These priests and pro-

^a so ^b that men could not touch their garments.

15 They cried unto thee, Depart ye; ^c it is ^d unclean; depart, depart, touch not: when they fled away and wandered, they said among the heathen, They shall no more sojourn there.

17 As for us, ^g our eyes as yet failed for our vain help: in our watching we have watched for a nation that could not save us.

18 ^h They hunt our steps, that we cannot go in our streets: our end is near, our days are fulfilled; for ⁱ our end is come.

19 Our persecutors are ^j swifter than the eagles of the heaven: they pursued us upon the mountains, they laid wait for us in the wilderness.

phets were so bad, that the very heathen did not like to permit them to sojourn among them. The prophet now resumes the history of the siege.

Verse 17. We have watched for a nation] Viz., the Egyptians, who were their pretended allies, but were neither able nor willing to help them against the Chaldeans.

Verse 18. We cannot go in our streets] Supposed to refer to the darts and other missiles cast from the mounds which they had raised on the outside of the walls.

Verse 19. They pursued us upon the mountains] They hunted down the poor Jews like wild beasts in every part of the country by their marauding parties, whilst the great army besieged Jerusalem.

Verse 20. The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the Lord] That is, Zedekiah, the king, who was as the life of the city, was taken in his flight by the Chaldeans, and his eyes were put out.

Verse 21. Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom] A strong irony.

The cup also shall pass through unto thee] Thou who hast triumphed in our disasters shalt shortly have enough of thy own.

Verse 22. The punishment of thine iniquity is accomplished, O daughter of Zion] The promise in this verse may refer to Jerusalem under the gospel. When they receive Christ crucified, they shall be gathered from all nations, become one with the church among the Gentiles, be one flock under one and the same Shepherd, and shall be carried no more into captivity.

CHAPTER V.

This chapter is, as it were, an epiphonema or conclusion to the four preceding, representing the nation as groaning under their calamities, and humbly supplicating the divine favour, 1. 22.

6 ^g We have given the hand ^h to the Egyptians, and to the Assyrians, to be satisfied with bread.

7 ⁱ Our fathers have sinned, and ^j are not; and we have borne their iniquities.

8 ^k Servants have ruled over us: there is none that doth deliver us out of their hand.

Verse 1. Remember, O Lord] Though this chapter consists of exactly twenty-two verses, the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet, yet the acrostic form is no longer observed. Perhaps any thing so technical was not thought proper when in agony and distress they prostrated themselves before God to ask for mercy.

Verse 2. Our inheritance is turned to strangers] The greater part of the Jews were either slain or carried away captive; and even those who were left under Gedaliah were not free, for they were vassals to the Chaldeans.

Verse 4. We have drunken our water for money] I suppose the meaning of this is, that every thing was taxed by the Chaldeans, and that they kept the management in their own hands, so that wood and water were both sold, the people not being permitted to help themselves.

Verse 5. Our necks are under persecution] We feel the yoke of our bondage; we are driven to our work like the bullock, which has a yoke upon his neck.

Verse 6. We have given the hand to the Egyptians] We have sought alliances both with the Egyptians and the Assyrians, and made covenants with them in order to get the necessities of life.

Verse 7. Our fathers have sinned, and are not] Nations, as such, cannot be punished in the other world; therefore national judgments are to be looked for only in this life.

Verse 8. Servants have ruled over us] To be subject to such is the most painful and dishonourable bondage.

Verse 9. We gat our bread with the peril of our lives] They could not go into the wilderness to feed their cattle, or to get the necessities of life, without being harassed and plundered by marauding parties, and by these were often exposed to the peril of their lives. This was predicted by Moses, Deut. xxviii. 31.

12 Princes are hanged up by their hand: ^p the faces of elders were not honoured.

13 They took the young men ^q to grind, and the children fell under the wood.

14 The elders have ceased from the gate, the young men from their music.

15 The joy of our heart is ceased; our dance is turned into mourning.

16 ^r The ^s crown is fallen from our head: woe unto us, that we have sinned!

17 For this ^t our heart is faint; ^u for these things our eyes are dim.

18 Because of the mountain of Zion, which is desolate, the foxes walk upon it.

19 Thou, O LORD, ^v remainest for ever; ^w thy throne from generation to generation.

20 ^x Wherefore dost thou forget us for ever, and forsake us ^y so long time?

21 ^z Turn thou us unto thee, O LORD, and we shall be turned; renew our days as of old.

22 ^{aa} But thou hast utterly rejected us; thou art very wroth against us.

Verse 10. Our skin was black—because of the terrible famine.] Because of the searching winds that burnt up every green thing, destroying vegetation, and in consequence producing a famine.

Verse 12. Princes are hanged up by their hand] They were suspended from hooks in the wall by their hands till they died through torture and exhaustion.

Verse 13. They took the young men to grind] This was the work of female slaves. See the note on Isaiah xlvii. 2.

Verse 14. The elders have ceased from the gate] There is now no more justice administered to the people; they are under military law, or disposed of in every sense according to the caprice of their masters.

Verse 16. The crown is fallen from our head] At feasts, marriages, &c., they used to crown themselves with garlands of flowers; all festivity of this kind was now at an end. Or it may refer to their having lost all sovereignty, being made slaves.

Verse 18. The foxes walk upon it.] It was usual among the Hebrews to consider all desolated land to be the resort of wild beasts; which is, in fact, the case everywhere when the inhabitants are removed from a country.

Verse 19. Thou, O Lord, remainest for ever] Thou sufferest no change. Thou didst once love us; O let that love be renewed towards us!

Verse 21. Renew our days as of old.] Let us regain our country, our temple, and all the divine offices of our religion; but, more especially, thy favour.

Verse 22. But thou hast utterly rejected us] It appears as if thou hadst sealed our final reprobation, because thou shonest against us exceeding great wrath.

EZEKIEL the prophet was the son of Buzi; and was of the sacerdotal race, as himself informs us, chap. i. 3, and was born at a place called Saresa, as the pseudo-Epiphanius tells us in his lives of the Prophets. He was carried captive by Nebuchadnezzar into Babylon with Jeconiah king of Judah, and three thousand other captives of the principal inhabitants, and was sent into Mesopotamia, where he received the prophetic gift; which is supposed, from an obscure expression in his prophecies, chap. i. 1, to have taken place in the thirtieth year of his age. He had then been in captivity five years; and continued to prophesy about twenty-two years, from A.M. 3409 to A.M. 3430, which answers to the fourteenth year after the destruction of Jerusalem.

About three months and ten days after this conquest of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar made another descent, and again besieged the city; and Jehoiachin, who succeeded his father Jehoiakim, was obliged to surrender. The victorious Chaldeans carried off all the inhabitants of note into Babylon, leaving none behind but the very poorest of the people. See 2 Kings xxiv. 8-16. These captives were fixed at Tel-abib, and other places on the river Chebar, which flows into the east side of the Euphrates at Carchemish, nearly two hundred miles northward of Babylon. There, as Archbishop Newcome observes, he was present in body, though, in visionary representation, he was sometimes taken to Jerusalem.

The principal design of this prophet was to comfort his companions in tribulation during their captivity, and to render it light by the most positive promises of their restoration to their own land, the rebuilding of the temple, and the re-establishment of the divine worship, all their enemies being finally destroyed.

That Ezekiel is a very obscure writer, all have allowed who have attempted to explain his prophecies. The Jews consider him inexplicable.

I believe it may be affirmed with truth that parts of the prophecy have had as many different explanations as there have been expositors! Yet each has been sanguine in the hope that he had removed all difficulties; while every successor felt that the whole work was yet to be done, and that the Gordian knot was not likely to be untied unless by himself! And it is to be lamented that in these circumstances the work still remains as to its principal difficulties; and I certainly do not attempt to add another to Ezekiel's commentators with the most distant hope of being able to solve those particular difficulties.

After all, with the exception of the chariot, Gog and Magog, the peculiarities in the description of the temple, and some matters of this kind, the major part of the prophecy is very intelligible, and highly edifying; and does not present more difficulties than have been found in the preceding prophets, and may be found in those which follow. I have in the following notes done what I could, as a help to a better understanding of this part of the sacred writings.

"Ezekiel," says Bishop Louth, "is inferior to Jeremiah in elegance, but is equal to Isaiah in sublimity, though in a different species of the sublime. He is bold, vehement, tragic, and deals very much in amplification. His sentiments are lofty, animated, poignant, and full of indignation. His images are fertile, magnificent, and sometimes rather bordering on indelicacy. His diction is grand, weighty, austere, rough, and sometimes uncultivated. He abounds in repetitions, not for the sake of beauty or grace, but from vehemence and indignation. Whatever his subject be, he keeps it always in his eye, without the least deviation, and is so much taken with it that he has scarcely any regard to order or connection. In other things he may be perhaps exceeded by the other prophets, but in that species for which he was particularly turned, that is force, impetuosity, weight, and grandeur, no writer ever equalled him. His diction is clear enough; almost all his obscurity arises from his subjects. His visions are particularly obscure; which, however, as in Hosea, Amos, and Zechariah, are delivered in a plain historical narration.

"The greater part of the book, particularly the middle of it, is poetical; whether we regard the matter or the language. But some passages are so rough and unpolished, that we are frequently at a loss to what species of writing we ought to refer them. As to style, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel may be placed with propriety enough in the same rank among the Hebrews, as Homer, Simonides, and Æschylus among the Greeks."

THE BOOK

OF THE

PROPHET EZEKIEL.

CHAPTER I.

This chapter contains that extraordinary vision of the divine glory with which the prophet was favoured when he received the commission and instructions respecting the discharge of his office which are contained in the two following chapters. The time of this divine manifestation to the prophet, 1-3. The vision of the four living creatures, and of the four wheels, 4-25. Description of the firmament that was spread over them, and of the throne upon which one sat in appearance as a man, 26-28. This vision, proceeding in a whirlwind from the north, seems to indicate the dreadful judgments that were coming upon the whole land of Judah through the instrumentality of the cruel Chaldeans, who lay to the north of it. See Jer. i. 14, iv. 6, and vi. 1.

NOW it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the ^a captives ^b by the river of Chebar, that ^c the heavens were opened, and I saw ^d visions of God.

2 In the fifth day of the month, which was the fifth year of ^e king Jehoiachin's captivity.

3 The word of the Lord came expressly unto ^f Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Cheber; and ^g the hand of the Lord was there upon him.

4 And I looked, and, behold, ^h a whirlwind came ⁱ out of the north, a great cloud, and a fire ^j infolding itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof as the colour of amber, out of the midst of the fire.

5 ^k Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four living creatures. And ^l this was their appearance; they had ^m the likeness of a man.

Verse 1. In the thirtieth year] We know not what this date refers to. Some think it was the age of the prophet; others think the date is taken from the time that Josiah renewed the covenant with the people, 2 Kings xxii. 8, from which Usher, Prideaux, and Calmet compute the forty years of Judah's transgression, mentioned chap iv. 6. Ezekiel was then among the captives who had been carried away with Jeconiah, and had his dwelling near the river Chebar, Chaborus, or Aboras, a river of Mesopotamia, which falls into the Euphrates a little above Thapsacus, after having run through Mesopotamia from east to west. [Fairbairn favours the theory that Ezekiel refers to his own age when called to the prophetic office.]

I saw visions of God.] Emblems and symbols of the Divine Majesty. He particularly refers to those in this chapter.

Verse 2. Jehoiachin's captivity.] Called also Jeconiah and Coniah; see 2 Kings xxiv. 12. He was carried away by Nebuchadnezzar; see 2 Kings xxiv. 12.

Verse 4. A whirlwind came out of the north] Nebuchadnezzar, whose land, Babylonia, lay north of Judea.

A great cloud, and a fire infolding itself] A mass of fire concentrated in a vast cloud, that the flames might be more

6 And every one had four faces, and every one had four wings.

7 And their feet were ⁿ straight feet; the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot: and they sparkled ^o like the colour of burnished brass.

8 ^p And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and their wings.

9 ^q Their wings were joined one to another; ^r they turned not when they went; they went every one straight forward.

10 As for ^s the likeness of their faces, they four ^t had the face of a man, ^u and the face of a lion, on the right side: ^v and they four had the face of an ox on the left side; ^w they four also had the face of an eagle.

11 Thus were their faces: and their wings were ^x stretched upward; two wings of every one were joined to one another, and ^y two covered their bodies.

12 And ^z they went every one straight forward:

distinctly observable, the fire never escaping from the cloud, but issuing, and then returning in upon itself. It was in a state of powerful agitation; but always involving itself, or returning back to the centre whence it appeared to issue.

The colour of amber] The word which we translate amber, was used to signify a compound metal, very bright, made of gold and brass.

Verse 6. Every one had four faces] As the face of the man was that which was presented to the prophet's view, so that he saw it more plainly than any of the others, hence it is said, ver. 5, that each of these four figures had the likeness of a man; and the whole of this compound image bore a general resemblance to the human figure.

Verse 7. Their feet were straight feet] There did not seem to be any flexure at the knee, nor were the legs separated in that way as to indicate progression by walking.

Like the sole of a calf's foot] Before it is stated to be a straight foot; one that did not lay down a flat horizontal sole, like that of the human foot.

And they sparkled like the colour of burnished brass.] There is scarcely any thing that gives a higher lustre than highly polished or burnished brass. See Rev. i. 15.

Verse 8. They had the hands of a man under their wings]

* whither the spirit was to go, they went; and ^b they turned not when they went.

13 As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, ^c and like the appearance of lamps: it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning.

14 And the living creatures ^d ran and returned ^e as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

15 Now as I beheld the living creatures, behold ^f one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures, with his four faces.

16 ^g The appearance of the wheels and their work was like unto the colour of a beryl: and they four had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel.

17 When they went, they went upon their four sides: ^h and they turned not when they went.

18 As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful; and their ⁱ rings were ^k full of eyes round about them four.

19 And ^l when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them: and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up.

20 ^m Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them: ⁿ for the spirit ^o of the living creature was in the wheels.

21 ^p When those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit ^q of the living creature was in the wheels.

I doubt much whether the arms be not here represented as all covered with feathers, so that they had the appearance of wings, only the hand was bare.

Verse 9. Their wings were joined one to another] When their wings were extended, they formed a sort of canopy level with their own heads or shoulders; and on this canopy was the throne, and the "likeness of the man" upon it, ver. 26.

They turned not when they went] The wings did not flap in flying, or move in the manner of oars, or of the hands of a man in swimming, in order to their passing through the air.

Verse 10. As for the likeness of their faces] There was but one body to each of those compound animals: but each body had four faces; the face of a man and of a lion on the right side; the face of an ox and an eagle on the left side.

Verse 12. They went every one straight forward] Not by progressive stepping, but by gliding.

Whither the spirit was to go] Whither that whirlwind blew, they went, being borne on by the wind, see ver. 4.

Verse 13. Like burning coals of fire] The whole substance appeared to be of flame; and among them frequent coruscations of fire, like vibrating lamps, often emitting lightning or rather sparks of fire, as we have seen struck out of strongly ignited iron in a forge. They seemed to conflict together.

Verse 14. The living creatures ran and returned] They had a circular movement; they were in rapid motion, but did not increase their distance from the spectator. So I think this should be understood.

Verse 15. One wheel upon the earth] It seems at first view there were four wheels, one for each of the living creatures; that is, the creatures were compound, so were the wheels, for there was "a wheel in the middle of a wheel." And it is generally supposed that these wheels cut each other at right angles up and down; and this is the manner in which they are generally represented; but most probably the wheel within means merely the nave in which the spokes are inserted, in reference to the ring, rim, or periphery, where these spokes terminate from the centre or nave.

22 ^r And the likeness of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature was as the colour of the terrible crystal, stretched forth over their heads above.

23 And under the firmament were their wings straight, the one toward the other: every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies.

24 ^s And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings, ^t like the noise of great waters, as ^u the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an host: when they stood, they let down their wings.

25 And there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings.

26 ^v And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, ^w as the appearance of a sapphire stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it.

27 ^x And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about.

28 ^y As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. ^z This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it, ^{aa} I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.

Verse 18. As for their rings] The strakes which form the rim or periphery.

They were dreadful] They were exceedingly great in their diameter, so that it was tremendous to look from the part that touched the ground to that which was opposite above.

Were full of eyes] Does not this refer to the appearance of nails keeping on the spokes, or strakes or bands upon the rim?

Verse 19. When the living creatures went, the wheels went] The wheels were attached to the living creatures, so that, in progress, they had the same motion.

Verse 20. The spirit of the living creature was in the wheels] That is, the wheels were instinct with a vital spirit; the wheels were alive, they also were animals, or ended with animal life, as the creatures were that stood upon them.

Verse 22. The colour of the terrible crystal] Like a crystal, well cut and well polished, with various faces, by which rays of light were refracted, assuming either a variety of prismatic colours, or an insufferably brilliant splendour.

Verse 23. Every one had two, which covered on this side] While they employed two of their wings to form a foundation for the firmament to rest on, two other wings were let down to cover the lower part of their bodies: but this they did only when they stood, ver. 24.

Verse 24. The noise of their wings] When the whirlwind drove the wheels, the wind rustling among the wings was like the noise of many waters; like a waterfall, or waters dashing continually against the rocks, or rushing down precipices.

As the voice of the Almighty] Like distant thunder; for this is termed the voice of God, Ps. xviii. 13; Exod. ix. 23, 25, 29; xx. 18.

Verse 26. A sapphire] The pure oriental sapphire is one of the most beautiful and resplendent blues that can be conceived. The human form above this canopy is supposed to represent Him who, in the fulness of time, was manifested in the flesh.

Verse 27. The colour of amber] Such a splendid appearance had the august Being who sat upon his throne from the reins upward; but from thence downward he had the appearance of fire, burning with a clear and brilliant flame.

Verse 28. As the appearance of the bow] Over the canopy on which this glorious personage sat there was a fine rainbow, which, from the description here, had all its colours vivid, distinct, and in perfection—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet.

I am inclined to think that the "living creatures, wheels, fires, whirlwinds," &c., which are introduced here, point out, emblematically, the various means, sword, fire, pestilence, famine, &c., which were employed in the destruction of the Jews; and that God appears in all this to show that Nebuchadnezzar is only his instrument to inflict all these calamities. What is in the following chapter appears to me to confirm this supposition. But we have the rainbow, the token of God's covenant, to show that though there should be a destruction of the city, temple, &c., and sore tribulation among the people, yet there should not be a total ruin; after a long captivity they should be restored. The rainbow is an illustrious token of mercy and love. [Fairbairn regards the vision as symbolizing the holiness, severity, energy, and benignant mercy of God, who by this significant representation, "gathered into one magnificent vision, the substance of what was to occupy the prophetic agency of his servant."]

CHAPTER II.

The prophet, having been overwhelmed with the glorious vision in the preceding chapter, is here strengthened and comforted, 1, 2; and then commissioned to declare to the rebellious house of Israel the terrible judgments that would very shortly come upon the whole land, if they repented not; with a gracious assurance to Ezekiel that God would be constantly with him while executing the duties of his office, 3-5. The prophet is also commanded to be fearless, resolute, and faithful in the discharge of it, 6-8, as he must be the messenger of very unpleasant tidings, which will expose him to great persecution, 9, 10.

AND he said unto me, Son of man, "stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee.

2 And ^b the spirit entered into me when he spake unto me, and set me upon my feet, that I heard him that spake unto me.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, I send thee to the children of Israel, to a rebellious ^c nation that hath rebelled against me: ^d they and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very day.

4 For ^e they are ^f 'impudent children and stiff-hearted. I do send thee unto them; and thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God.

5 ^g And they, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear (for they are a rebellious house), yet ^h shall know that there hath been a prophet among them.

Verse 1. And he said unto me] It is evident that the present division of these chapters is wrong.

Verse 2. And the spirit entered into me] The spirit of prophecy is here intended; whose office was not merely to enable him to foresee and foretell future events, but to purify and refine his heart, and qualify him to be a successful preacher of the word of life.

And set me upon my feet] That he might stand as a servant before his master, to receive his orders.

Verse 8. Son of man] This appellation so often mentioned in this book, seems to have been given first to this prophet; afterwards to Daniel; and after that to the MAN Christ Jesus. Perhaps it was given to the two former to remind them of their frailty, and that they should not be exalted in their own minds by the extraordinary revelations granted to them; and that from the common principle of humanity, they should deeply interest themselves in the welfare of their unhappy countrymen. [But why should the term be used in relation to no other prophets? it was undoubtedly a Chaldaism, for O man!]

I send thee to the children of Israel] To those who were now in captivity, in Chaldea particularly; and to the Jews in general, both far and near.

Verse 4. Thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord] Let them know that what thou hast to declare is the message of the LORD, that they may receive it with reverence.

6 And thou, son of man, ⁱ be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though ^j 'briers ^k and thorns be with thee, and thou dost dwell among scorpions: ^l be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, ^m though they be a rebellious house.

7 ⁿ And thou shalt speak my words unto them, ^o whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear: for they are ^p most rebellious.

8 But thou, son of man, hear what I say unto thee; Be not thou rebellious like that rebellious house: open thy mouth, and ^q eat that I give thee.

9 And when I looked, behold, ^r an hand was sent unto me; and, lo, ^s a roll of a book was therein:

10 And he spread it before me; and it was written within and without: and there was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and woe.

Every preacher of God's word should take heed that it is God's message he delivers to the people. Let him not suppose, because it is according to his own creed or confession of faith, that therefore it is God's word. Bring the creed first to the Word of God, and scrupulously try whether it be right.

Verse 6. Be not afraid of them] They will maltreat thee for thy message; but let not the apprehension of this induce thee to suppress it.

Verse 8. Open thy mouth, and eat that I give thee] Take my word as thou wouldst take thy proper food; receive it into thy heart; ponder it there, that it may be the means of strengthening and preserving thy soul, as proper nourishment will strengthen the body, and preserve from death.

Verse 9. An hand was sent] Here the hand signifies not only the instrument of conveyance, but an emblem of the divine power, which the hand of God always signifies.

A roll of a book] All ancient books were written so as to be rolled up; hence volumen, a volume, from volvo, I roll.

Verse 10. It was written within and without] Contrary to the state of rolls in general, which are written on the inside only. The Hebrew rolls are generally written in this way. But the roll presented to the prophet was written on both sides, because the prophecy was long, and to the same effect; that they might see the mind of God wherever they looked.

There was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and woe.] What an awful assemblage! Lamentations on all hands; a groan from the dying; and alas, or Woe is me! from the survivors. It was the letter that killeth, and is the ministration of death. What a mercy to have that which is emphatically called, The glad tidings, the good news! Here are rejoicings, thanksgivings, and exultation.

CHAPTER III.

This chapter contains more particular instructions to the prophet. It begins with repeating his appointment to his office, 1-3. Ezekiel is then informed that his commission is, at this time, to the house of Israel exclusively, 4-6; that his countrymen would pay little regard to him, 7; that he must persevere in his duty notwithstanding such great discouragement; and he is endued with extraordinary courage and intrepidity to enable him fearlessly to declare to a disobedient and gainsaying people the whole counsel of God, 8-11. The prophet is afterwards carried by the spirit that animated the cherubim and wheels, and by which he received the gift of prophecy, to a colony of his brethren in the neighbourhood, where he remained seven days, overwhelmed with astonishment, 12-15. He is then warned of the awful importance of being faithful in his office, 16-21; commanded to go forth into the plain that he may have a visible manifestation of the Divine Presence, 22; and is again favoured with a vision of that most magnificent set of symbols described in the first chapter, by which the glorious majesty of the God of Israel was in some measure represented, 23. See also, Isai. vi. 1-18, Dan. x. 5-19, and Rev. i. 10-16, iv. 1-11, for other manifestations of the divine glory, in all of which some of the imagery is very similar. The prophet receives directions relative to his future conduct, 24-27.

MOREOVER he said unto me, Son of man, eat that thou findest; *eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel.

2 So I opened my mouth, and he caused me to eat that roll.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, and fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then did I *eat it; and it was in my mouth *as honey for sweetness.

4 And he said unto me, Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them.

5 For thou art not sent to a people *of a strange speech and of a hard language, but to the house of Israel.

6 Not to many people *of a strange speech and of an hard language, whose words thou canst not understand. Surely, *had I sent thee to them, they would have hearkened unto thee.

7 But the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee; *for they will not hearken unto me: *for all the house of Israel are *impudent and hard-hearted.

8 Behold, I have made thy face strong against their faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads.

9 *As an adamant harder than flint have I made thy forehead: *fear them not, neither be dismayed *at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.

Verse 3. It was in my mouth as honey] It was joyous to me to receive the divine message. So Rev. x. 10.

Verse 5. Thou art not sent to a people of a strange speech] Even these would more likely have hearkened unto thee than thy own countrymen.

Verse 7. Impudent and hard-hearted.] “Stiff of forehead, and hard of heart.”—Margin.

10 Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, all my words that I shall speak unto thee, receive in thine heart, and hear with thine ears.

11 And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, and tell them, *Thus saith the Lord God; whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.

12 Then *the Spirit took me up, and I heard behind me a voice of a great rushing, saying, Blessed be the glory of the Lord from his place.

13 I heard also the noise of the wings of the living creatures that *touched one another, and the noise of the wheels over against them, and a noise of a great rushing.

14 So *the spirit lifted me up and took me away, and I went *in bitterness, in the *heat of my spirit; but the *hand of the Lord was strong upon me.

15 Then I came to them of the captivity at Telabib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and *I sat where they sat, and remained there astonished among them seven days.

16 And it came to pass at the end of seven days, that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

17 *Son of man, I have made thee a *watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me.

20 Again, When a ^crighteous man doth turn from his ^drighteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumbling-block before him, he shall die: because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

21 Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; also thou hast delivered thy soul.

Seven days.] Perhaps God kept him all this time without an immediate revelation, that the bitterness and heat of spirit of which he speaks above might be subdued, and that he might speak God's words in God's own Spirit.

Verse 17. I have made thee a watchman.] The care and welfare of all this people I have laid on thee.

God is particularly jealous lest any words but his own be taught for divine doctrines. No word can be successful in the salvation of sinners but that which comes from God. Every minister of the gospel should be familiar with his Maker by faith and prayer; otherwise, what he preaches will be destitute of spirit and life, and his hackneyed texts and sermons, instead of being the bread from heaven, will be like the dry mouldy Gibeonitish crusts.

Verse 18. Thou shalt surely die, &c.] That is, I will visit thy soul for the loss of his. O how awful is this! Hear it, ye especially who have entered into the ministry for a living; who gather a congregation to yourselves that ye may feed upon their fat, and clothe yourselves with their wool; in whose parishes and in whose congregations souls are dying unconverted from day to day; who have never been solemnly warned by you, and to whom you have never shown the way of salvation, probably because ye know nothing of it yourselves! Oh, what a perdition awaits you! To have the blood of every soul that has died in your parishes or in your congregations unconverted laid at your door!

But let not this discourage the faithful minister who teaches every man, and warns every man, in all wisdom, that he may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus. If 23 Then I arose, and went forth into the plain: and, behold, ^g the glory of the LORD stood there, as the glory which I ^h saw by the river of Chebar: ⁱ and I fell on my face.

24 Then ^j the spirit entered into me, and set me upon my feet, and spake with me, and said unto me, Go, shut thyself within thine house.

25 But thou, O son of man, behold, ^k they shall put bands upon thee, and shall bind thee with them, and thou shalt not go out among them:

26 And ^l I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb, and shalt not be to them ^m a reprovcr: ⁿ for they are a rebellious house.

27 ^o But when I speak with thee, I will open thy mouth, and thou shalt say unto them, ^p Thus saith the Lord God; he that heareth, let him hear; and he that forbearcth, let him forbear: ^q for they are a rebellious house, after such teaching and warning they will sin on, and die in their sins, their blood will be upon themselves; but thou, O man of God, hast delivered thine own soul.

Verse 20. When a righteous man doth turn from his righteousness.] From these passages we see that a righteous man may fall from grace, and perish everlastingly. Should it be said that it means the self-righteous, I reply, this is absurd; for self-righteousness is a fall itself, and the sooner a man falls from it the better for himself.

And I lay a stumbling-block before him.] That is, I permit him to be tried, and he fall in the trial.

Verse 22. Arise, go forth into the plain.] Into a place remote from observation and noise; a place where the glory of God might have sufficient room to manifest itself, that the prophet might see all its movements distinctly.

Verse 24. The spirit—said unto me, Go, shut thyself within thine house.] Hide thyself for the present. The reason is immediately subjoined.

Verse 25. They shall put bands upon thee.] Thy countrymen will rise up against thee; and, to prevent thy prophesying, will confine thee.

Verse 26. I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth.] I will not give thee any message to deliver to them.

Verse 27. I will open thy mouth.] When it is necessary to address them again, thou shalt sum up what thou hast said in this one speech: Thus saith the Lord, "He that heareth, let him hear; and he that forbearcth, let him forbear."

CHAPTER IV.

Ezekiel delineates Jerusalem, and lays siege to it, as a type of the manner in which the Chaldean army should surround that city, 1-3. The prophet commanded to lie on his left side three hundred and ninety days, and on his right side forty days, with the signification, 4-8. The scanty and coarse provision allowed the prophet during his symbolical siege, consisting chiefly of the worst kinds of grain, and likewise ill-prepared, as he had only cow's dung for fuel, tended all to denote the scarcity of provision, fuel, and every necessary of life, which the Jews should experience during the siege of Jerusalem, 9-17.

THOU also, son of man, take thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and pourtray upon it the city, even Jerusalem:

2 And lay siege against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount against it; set the camp also against it, and set ^a battering rams against it round about.

3 Moreover take thou unto thee ^b an iron pan, and set it for a wall of iron between thee and the city: and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. ^c This shall be a sign to the house of Israel.

4 Lie thou also upon thy left side, and lay the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it: according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon it thou shalt bear their iniquity.

5 For I have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, three hundred and ninety days: ^d so shalt thou bear the iniquity of the house of Israel.

6 And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side, and thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days: I have appointed thee ^e each day for a year.

7 Therefore thou shalt set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and thine arm shall be uncovered, and thou shalt prophesy against it.

8 ^f And, behold, I will lay hands upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee ^g from one side to another, till thou hast ended the days of thy siege.

9 Take thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, and millet, and ^h fitches, and put Verse 1. Take thee a tile.] A brick is most undoubtedly meant; of the large dimensions used in ancient building. On the surface of one of those the whole siege might be easily portrayed.

Verse 2. Battering rams.] Carim. This is the earliest account we have of this military engine. It was a long beam with a head of brass, like the head and horns of a ram, whence its name. It was hung by chains or ropes, between two beams, or three legs, so that it could admit of being drawn backward and forward some yards. Several stout men, by means of ropes, pulled it as far back as it could go; and then, suddenly letting it loose, it struck with great force against the wall which it was intended to batter and bring down.

Verse 3. Take thou unto thee an iron pan.] Machabath, a flat plate or slice, as the margin properly renders it: such as are used in some countries to bake bread on, called a griddle or girdle, being suspended above the fire, and kept in a proper degree of heat for the purpose. A plate like this, stuck perpendicularly in the earth, would show the nature of a wall much better than any pan could do.

Verse 4. Lie thou also upon thy left side.] It appears that all that is mentioned here and in the following verses was done, not in idea, but in fact. The prophet lay three hundred and ninety days upon his left side, and forty days upon his right side, in all four hundred and thirty days. Now Jerusalem was besieged the ninth year of the reign of Zedekiah, 2 Kings xxv. 1, 2, and was not taken till the eleventh year of the same prince, 2 Kings xxv. 2. But properly speaking, the siege did not continue the whole of that time; it was interrupted; for Nebuchadnezzar was obliged to raise it, and go and meet the Egyptians, who were coming to its succour. The siege commenced the tenth day of the tenth month of the ninth year of Zedekiah; and the city was taken on the ninth day of the fourth month of the eleventh year of the same king. Thus the siege had lasted, in the whole, eighteen months, or five hundred and ten days. Subtract for the time that Nebuchadnezzar was obliged to interrupt the siege, in order to go against the Egyptians, them in one vessel, and make thee bread thereof, according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon thy side, three hundred and ninety days shalt thou eat thereof.

10 And thy meat which thou shalt eat shall be by weight, twenty shekels a day: from time to time shalt thou eat it.

11 Thou shalt drink also water by measure, the sixth part of an hin: from time to time shalt thou drink.

12 And thou shalt eat it as barley cakes, and thou shalt bake it with dung that cometh out of man, in their sight.

13 And the Lord said, Even thus ⁱ shall the children of Israel eat their defiled bread among the Gentiles, whither I will drive them.

14 Then said I, ^j Ah Lord God! behold, my soul hath not been polluted: for from my youth up even till now have I not eaten of ^k that which dieth of itself, or is torn in pieces; neither came there ^l abominable flesh into my mouth.

15 Then he said unto me, Lo, I have given thee cows' dung for man's dung, and thou shalt prepare thy bread therewith.

16 Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, behold, I will break the ^m staff of bread in Jerusalem: and they shall ⁿ eat bread by weight, and with care; and they shall ^o drink water by measure, and with astonishment:

17 That they may want bread and water, and be astonished one with another, and ^p consume away for their iniquity.

four months and twenty days, or one hundred and forty days, and there will remain four hundred and thirty days, composed of 390+40=430. [On no ground is it possible to believe that the action of the prophet is to be regarded as among the occurrences of real life. Such a theory is beset with physical and moral impossibilities. Nor can the period of 430 days be referred to the siege of Jerusalem. The days represent, according to v. 5, the years, during which the people were to be punished for their sins.]

Verse 9. Take thou also unto thee wheat.] This mashlin, which the prophet is commanded to take, of wheat, barley, beans, lentiles, millet, and fitches, was intended to show how scarce the necessities of life should be during the siege.

Verse 10. Twenty shekels a day.] Now a shekel, being in weight about half an ounce, this would be ten ounces of bread for each day; and with this water to the amount of one sixth part of a hin, which is about a pint and a half of our measure. All this shows that so reduced should provisions be during the siege, that they should be obliged to eat the meanest sort of aliment, and that by weight, and their water by measure.

Verse 12. Thou shalt bake it with dung.] Dried ox and cow dung is a common fuel in the East; and with this, for want of food and coals, they are obliged to prepare their food. Indeed, dried excrement of every kind is gathered. Here, the prophet is to prepare his bread with dry human excrement. And when we know that this did not come in contact with the bread, and was only used to warm the plate, (see ver. 8), on which the bread was laid over the fire, it removes all the horror and much of the disgust. However, we find that the prophet was relieved from using this kind of fuel, for cows' dung was substituted at his request. See ver. 15.

Verse 14. My soul hath not been polluted.] There is a remarkable similarity between this expostulation of the prophet and that of St. Peter, Acts x. 14.

Verse 16. I will break the staff of bread.] They shall be besieged till all the bread is consumed, till the famine becomes absolute; see 2 Kings xxv. 3.

CHAPTER V.

In this chapter the prophet shows under the type of hair, the judgments which God was about to execute on the inhabitants of Jerusalem by famine, sword, and dispersion, 1-4. The type or allegory is then dropped, and God is introduced, declaring in plain terms the vengeance that was coming on the whole nation which had proved so unworthy of those mercies with which they had hitherto been distinguished, 5-17.

AND thou, son of man, take thee a sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor, * and cause it to pass upon thine head and upon thy beard: then take thee balances to weigh, and divide the hair.

2 ^b Thou shalt burn with fire a third part in the midst of ^c the city, when ^d the days of the siege are fulfilled: and thou shalt take a third part, and smite about it with a knife: and a third part thou shalt scatter in the wind; and I will draw out a sword after them.

3 * Thou shalt also take thereof a few in number, and bind them in thy ^e skirts.

4 Then take of them again, and * cast them into the midst of the fire, and burn them in the fire; for thereof shall a fire come forth into all the house of Israel.

5 Thus saith the Lord God; This is Jerusalem: I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her.

6 And she hath changed my judgments into wickedness more than the nations, and my statutes more than the countries that are round about her: for they have refused my judgments and my statutes, they have not walked in them.

7 Therefore thus the Lord God; Because ye multiplied more than the nations that are round about you, and have not walked in my statutes, neither have kept my judgments, ^f neither have done according to the judgments of the nations that are round about you;

Verses 1-4. Take thee a sharp knife] It is likely that only one kind of instrument is here intended; a knife or short sword, to be employed as a razor.

Here is a new emblem produced, in order to mark out the coming evils. 1. The prophet represents the Jewish nation. 2. His hair, the people. 3. The razor, the Chaldeans. 4. The cutting the beard and hair, the calamities, sorrows, and disgrace coming upon the people. Cutting off the hair was a sign of mourning; see on Jer. xlv. 5, xlviii. 37; and also a sign of great disgrace; see 2 Sam. x. 4. 5. He is ordered to divide the hair, ver. 2, into three equal parts, to intimate the different degrees and kinds of punishment which should fall upon the people. 6. The balances, ver. 1, were to represent the divine justice, and the exactness with which God's judgments should be distributed among the offenders. 7. This hair, divided into three parts, is to be disposed of thus: 1. A third part is to be burnt in the midst of the city, to show that so many should perish by famine and pestilence during the siege. 2. Another third part he was to cut in small portions about the city (that figure which he had portrayed upon the brick), to signify those who should perish in different sorties, and in defending the walls. 3. And the remaining third part he was to scatter in the wind, to point out those who should be driven into captivity. And, 4. The sword following them was intended to show that their lives should be at the will of their captors, and that many of them should perish by the sword in their dispersions. 5. The few hairs which he was to take in his skirts, ver. 3, were intended to represent those few Jews that should be left in the land

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I, even I, am against thee, and will execute judgments in the midst of thee in the sight of the nations.

9 ^l And I will do in thee that which I have not done, and whereunto I will not do any more the like, because of all thine abominations.

10 Therefore the fathers ^m shall eat the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers; and I will execute judgments in thee, and the whole remnant of thee will I ⁿ scatter into all the winds.

11 Wherefore, as I live, saith the Lord God; Surely, because thou hast ^o defiled my sanctuary with all thy ^p detestable things, and with all thine abominations, therefore will I also diminish thee; ^q neither shall mine eye spare, neither will I have any pity.

12 ^r A third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, and with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee: and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; and ^s I will scatter a third part into all the winds, and ^t I will draw out a sword after them.

13 Thus shall mine anger ^u be accomplished, and I will ^v cause my fury to rest upon them, ^w and I will be comforted: ^x and they shall know that I the Lord have spoken it in my zeal, when I have accomplished my fury in them.

14 Moreover ^y I will make thee waste, and a reproach among the nations that are round about thee, in the sight of all that pass by.

under Gedaliah, after the taking of the city. 6. The throwing a part of these last into the fire, ver. 4, was intended to show the miseries that these suffered in Judea, in Egypt, and finally in their being also carried away into Babylon on the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 5. This is Jerusalem: I have set it in the midst of the nations] I have made this city the most eminent and most illustrious in the world. Some think that these words refer to its geographical situation, as being equally in the centre of the habitable world. But any point on a globe is its centre, no matter where laid down; and it would not be difficult to show that even this literal sense is tolerably correct.

Verse 6. She hath changed my judgments] Having fallen from the true God, the Jews became more abominable than others in proportion to the height, eminence, and glory from which they had fallen. This is the common case of backsliders; they frequently, in their fall, become tenfold more the children of wrath than they were before.

Verse 9. I will do in thee that which I have not done] The destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar was one of the greatest calamities that ever fell on any nation or place before; and that by the Romans under Titus, exceeded all that has taken place since.

Verse 10. The fathers shall eat the sons] The same is referred to by Jeremiah, Lam. iv. 10. Even the women, who were remarkable for kindness and humanity, boiled their own children, and ate them during the siege.

Will I scatter into all the winds.] Disperse you, by captivity, among all the nations of the earth.

15 So it shall be a *reproach and a taunt, an instruction and an astonishment unto the nations that are round about thee, when I shall execute judgments in thee in anger and in fury and in ^b furious rebukes. I the LORD have spoken it.

16 When I shall ^c send upon them the evil arrows of famine, which shall be for their destruction, and Verse 13. I will cause my fury to rest] My displeasure, and the evidences of it, shall not be transient; they shall be permanent upon you, and among you. And is not this dreadfully true to the present day?

Verse 16. The evil arrows of famine] Famine and pestilence are represented as poisoned arrows, inflicting death wherever they wound.

which I will send to destroy you: and I will increase the famine upon you, and will break your ^astaff of bread.

17 So will I send upon you famine and ^aevil beasts, and they shall bereave thee; and ^apestilence and blood shall pass through thee; and I will bring the sword upon thee. I the LORD have spoken it.

Verse 17. So will I send upon you famine and evil beasts, and they shall bereave thee] Wild beasts always multiply in depopulated countries. Nebuchadnezzar and his Chaldeans may be called here evil beasts. He is often compared to a lion, Jer. iv. 7, Dan. vii. 14, on account of the ravages made by him and his Chaldean armies.

CHAPTER VI.

In this chapter, which forms a distinct section, the prophet denounces the judgments of God against the Jews for their idolatry, 1-7; but tells them that a remnant shall be saved, and brought to a sense of their sins by their severe afflictions, 8-14.

AND came unto me, say-
2 Son of man, ^aset thy face toward the ^bmountains of Israel, and prophesy against them,

3 And say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God; Thus saith the Lord God to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys; Behold, I, even I, will bring a sword upon you, and ^cI will destroy your high places.

4 And your altars shall be desolate, and your ^aimages shall be broken: and ^aI will cast down your slain men before your idols.

5 And I will ^alay the dead carcases of the children of Israel before their idols; and I will scatter your bones round about your altars.

6 In all your dwelling places the cities shall be laid waste, and the high places shall be desolate; that your altars may be laid waste and made desolate, and your idols may be broken and cease, and your images may be cut down, and your works may be abolished.

7 And the slain shall fall in the midst of you, and ^aye shall know that I am the LORD.

8 ^aYet will I leave a remnant, that ye may have some that shall escape the sword among the nations, when ye shall be scattered through the countries.

9 And they that escape of you shall remember me among the nations whither they shall be carried Verse 2. Set thy face toward the mountains of Israel] This is a new prophecy, and was most probably given after the four hundred and thirty days of his lying on his left and right side were accomplished. By Israel here, Judah is simply meant; not the ten tribes, who had long before been carried into captivity. Ezekiel uses this term in reference to the Jews only.

The mountains may be addressed here particularly, because it was on them the chief scenes of idolatry were exhibited.

captives, because ^aI am broken with their whorish heart, which hath departed from me, and ^awith their eyes, which go a whoring after their idols: and ^athey shall lothe themselves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations.

10 And they shall know that I am the LORD, and that I have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them.

11 Thus saith the Lord God; Smite ^awith thine hand, and stamp with thy foot, and say, Alas for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel! ^afor they shall fall by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.

12 He that is far off shall die of the pestilence; and he that is near shall fall by the sword; and he that remaineth and is besieged shall die by the famine: ^athus will I accomplish my fury upon them.

13 ^aThen ^ashall ye know that I am the LORD, when their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars, ^aupon every high hill, ^ain all the tops of the mountains, and ^aunder every green tree, and under every thick oak, the place where they did offer sweet savour to all their idols.

14 So will I ^astretch out my hand upon them, and make the land desolate, yea, ^amore desolate than the wilderness toward ^aDiblah, in all their habitations: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

Verse 4. Your images shall be broken] Literally, your sun images; representations of the sun, which they worshipped.

Verse 5. Will scatter your bones round about your altars.] This was literally fulfilled by the Chaldeans.

Verse 9. They that escape of you shall remember me] Those that escape the sword, the pestilence, and the famine, and shall be led into captivity, shall humble themselves, leave their idolatry, and worship me alone. And this they have done from the Babylonish captivity to the present day.

Verse 11. Smite with thine hand and stamp with thy foot] Show the utmost marks of thy astonishment and indignation, and dread of the evils that are coming upon them.

Verse 14. And make the land—more desolate than the wilderness toward Diblath] Diblath or Diblathajim is situated in the land of Moab. It is mentioned Num.

xxxiii. 46, and in Jer. xlviii. 22. It was a part of that horrible wilderness mentioned by Moses, Deut. viii. 15, "wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought." The precise reason why it is mentioned here is not very evident.

CHAPTER VII.

This chapter, which also forms a distinct prophecy, foretels the dreadful destruction of the land of Israel, or Judah (for after the captivity of the ten tribes these terms are often used indiscriminately for the Jews in general), on account of the heinous sins of its inhabitants, 1-15; and the great distress of the small remnant that should escape, 16-19. The temple itself, which they had polluted with idolatry, is devoted to destruction, 20-22; and the prophet is directed to make a chain, as a type of that captivity, in which both king and people should be led in bonds to Babylon, 23-27. The whole chapter abounds in bold and beautiful figures, flowing in an easy and forcible language.

MOREOVER the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

4 And ^a mine eye shall not spare thee, neither will I have pity: but I will recompense thy ways upon thee, and thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee: ^a and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

5 Thus saith the Lord God; An evil, an only evil, behold, is come.

Verse 2. An end, the end is come] The end COMETH; the termination of the Jewish state is coming, and while I am yet speaking, it is come. The destruction is at the door.

The end is come upon the four corners of the land.] This is not a partial calamity; it shall cover and sweep the whole land. The cup of your iniquity is full, and my forbearing is at an end. This whole chapter is poetical.

Verse 4. Thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee] They shall ever stare thee in the face, upbraid thee with thy ingratitude and disobedience, and be witnesses against thee.

Verse 5. An evil, an only evil] The great, the sovereign, the last exterminating evil, is come: the sword, the pestilence, the famine, and the captivity.

Verse 6. An end is come, the end is come; it watcheth for thee] The end or final destruction is here personified; and represented as an executioner who has arisen early from his sleep, and is waiting for his orders to execute judgment upon these offenders.

Verse 7. The morning is come unto thee] The morning that the executioner has watched for is come; the time of that morning, in which it should take place, and the day to which that time, precise hour of that morning, belongs, in which judgment shall be executed. All, all is come.

And not the sounding again of the mountains.] The hostile troops are advancing! Ye hear a sound, a tumultuous noise; do not suppose that this proceeds from festivals upon the mountains; from the joy of harvestmen, or the treaders of the wine-press. It is the noise of those by whom ye and your country are to fall. [The translation of Havernick is better: "no brightness upon the mountains."]

Verse 10. The morning is gone forth] It will wait no longer. The rod that is to chastise you hath blossomed; it is quite ready.

Pride hath budded.] Your insolence, obstinacy, and daring opposition to God, have brought forth their proper fruits.

Verse 11. Violence is risen up into a rod of wickedness] There is such a vast rapidity of succession in the ideas of the prophet that he cannot wait to find language to clothe each. Hence we have broken sentences; and, consequently, obscurity. Something must be supplied to get the sense, and most critics alter words in the text. Our Version is to be understood as saying,—None of the people shall be left; all shall be slain, or carried into captivity: nor shall any of theirs, their princes, priests, wives, or children, escape. And so deserved shall their desolation appear, that none shall lament them. [The rendering of Fairbairn is: "violence is risen up for a rod of the wicked; there is no more of them (the wicked), nor of their store, nor of their anxiety, nor is there any beauty in them."] not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn: for wrath is upon all the multitude thereof.

13 For the seller shall not return to that which is sold, ^aalthough they were yet alive: for the vision is touching the whole multitude thereof, which shall not return; neither shall any strengthen himself ^bin ^cthe iniquity of his life.

14 They have blown the trumpet, even to make all ready: but none goeth to the battle: for my wrath is upon all the multitude thereof.

15 ^dThe sword is without, and the pestilence and the famine within: he that is in the field shall die by the sword; and he that is in the city, famine and pestilence shall devour him.

16 But ^ethey that escape of them shall escape, and shall be on the mountains like doves of the valleys, all of them mourning, every one for his iniquity.

17 All ^fhands shall be feeble, and all knees shall be weak ^gas water.

18 They shall also ^hgird themselves with sackcloth, and ⁱhorror shall cover them; and shame shall be upon all faces, and baldness upon all their heads.

19 They shall cast their silver in the streets, and their gold shall be ^jremoved: their ^ksilver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord: they shall not satisfy their souls, neither fill their bowels: ^lbecause it is ^mthe stumbling-block of their iniquity.

Verse 12. Let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn] Such is now the state of public affairs, that he who through want has been obliged to sell his inheritance, need not mourn on the account; as of this the enemy would soon have deprived him. And he who has bought it need not rejoice in his bargain, as he shall soon be stripped of his purchase, and either fall by the sword, or be glad to flee for his life.

Verse 13. For the seller shall not return] In the sale of all heritages among the Jews, it was always understood that the heritage must return to the family on the year of jubilee, which was every fiftieth year; but in this case the seller should not return to possess it, as it was not likely that he should be alive when the next jubilee should come; and if he were even to live till that time, he could not possess it, as he would then be in captivity.

Verse 14. They have blown the trumpet] Vain are all the efforts you make to collect and arm the people, and stand on your own defence; for all shall be dispirited, and none go to the battle.

Verse 15. The sword is without] War through all the country, and pestilence and famine within the city, shall destroy the whole, except a small remnant.

Verse 16. They shall be on the mountains like doves of the valleys] Rather, like mourning doves, haggayoth, chased from their dove-cotes, and separated from their mates.

Verse 19. They shall cast their silver in the streets] Their riches can be of no use; as in a time of famine there is no necessary of life to be purchased, and gold and silver cannot fill their bowels.

It is the stumbling-block of their iniquity] They loved riches; and placed in the possession of them their supreme happiness.

Verse 20. As for the beauty of his ornament] Their beautiful temple was their highest ornament, and God made it majestic by his presence. But they have even taken its riches to make their idols, which they have brought into the very courts of the Lord's house; and therefore God hath set it—the temple, from him—given it up to pillage.

Verse 22. The robbers shall enter into it] The Chaldeans shall not only destroy the city, but they shall enter the temple, deface it, plunder it, and burn it to the ground.

Verse 23. Make a chain] Point out the captivity; show them that it shall come.

Verse 24. The worst of the heathen] The Chaldeans; the most cruel and idolatrous of all nations.

Verse 25. Then shall they seek a vision] Previously to great national judgments, God restrains the influences of his Spirit. His word is not accompanied with the usualunction; and the wise men of the land, the senators and celebrated statesmen, devise foolish schemes; and thus, in endeavouring to avert it, they hasten on the national ruin.

CHAPTER VIII.

Here begins a section of prophecy extending to the twelfth chapter. In this chapter the prophet is carried in vision to Jerusalem, 1-4; and there shown the idolatries committed by the rulers of the Jews, even within the temple. In the beginning of this vision, by the noblest stretch of an inspired imagination, idolatry itself is personified, and made an idol; and the image is sublimely called, from the provocation it gave God, the IMAGE OF JEALOUSY, 5.

The prophet then proceeds to describe the three principal superstitions of this unhappy people: the Egyptian, 6-12, the Phœnician, 13, 14, and the Persian, 15, 16; giving the striking features of each, and concluding with a declaration of the heinousness of their sins in the sight of God, and the consequent greatness of their punishment, 17, 18.

AND it came to pass in the sixth year, in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I sat in mine house, and the elders of Judah sat before me, that the hand of the Lord God fell there upon me.

2 Then I beheld, and lo a likeness as the appearance of fire: from the appearance of his loins even downward, fire; and from his loins even upward, as the appearance of brightness, as the colour of amber.

3 And he put forth the form of an hand, and took me by a lock of mine head; and the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north; where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy.

4 And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I saw in the plain.

5 Then said he unto me, Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold northward at the gate of the altar this image of jealousy in the entry.

6 He said furthermore unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, that I should go far off from my sanctuary? but turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations.

7 And he brought me to the door of the court; and when I looked, behold a hole in the wall.

8 Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door.

9 And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here.

10 So I went in and saw; and behold every form

Verse 1. In the sixth year, in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month. This, according to Abp. Usher, was the sixth year of Ezekiel's captivity.

Verse 3. The image of jealousy. We do not know certainly of what form this image was, nor what god it represented. Some say it was the image of Baal, which was placed in the temple by Manasses; others, that it was the image of Mars; and others, that it was the image of Tammuz or Adonis. [Probably no particular idol is designated, but idol-worship in general, set up in rivalry to the worship of Jehovah, and hence "provoking to jealousy."]

Verse 7. A hole in the wall. This we find was not large enough to see what was doing within; and the prophet is directed to dig, and make it larger, verse 8. [But the whole is to be understood as pertaining to a vision.]

Verse 10. And saw—every form of creeping things. It is very likely that these images portrayed on the wall were the objects of Egyptian adoration; the oa, the ape, the dog, the crocodile, the ibis, the scarabæus or beetle, and various other things. It appears that these were privately worshipped by the sanhedrin or great Jewish council, consisting of seventy or seventy-two persons, six chosen out of every tribe, as representatives of the people.

Verse 11. Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan. Shaphan was a scribe, or what some call comptroller of the temple, in the of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, portrayed upon the wall round about.

11 And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel, and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan, with every man his censer in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up.

12 Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? for they say, the Lord seeth us not; the Lord hath forsaken the earth.

13 He said also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do.

14 Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the Lord's house which was toward the north; and, behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz.

15 Then said he unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these.

16 And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and, behold, at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the Lord, with their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east.

17 Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? for they have filled the land with violence, and have returned to provoke me to anger: and, lo, they put the branch to their nose.

18 Therefore will I also deal in fury: mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity; and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them.

days of Josiah; and Jaazaniah his son probably succeeded him in this office. He was at the head of this band of idolaters.

Verse 14. There sat women weeping for Tammuz. This was Adonis, fabled to have been a beautiful youth beloved by Venus, and killed by a wild boar in Mount Lebanon, whence springs the river Adonis, which was fabled to run blood at his festival in August. The women of Phœnicia, Assyria, and Judea, worshipped him as dead, with deep lamentation, and they prostituted themselves in honour of this idol.

Tammuz signifies hidden or obscure, and hence the worship of his image was in some secret place.

Verse 16. Five and twenty men. These most probably represented the twenty-four courses of the priests, with the high priest for the twenty-fifth. This was the Persian worship, as their turning their faces to the east plainly shows they were worshipping the rising sun.

Verse 17. They put the branch to their nose. This is supposed to mean some branch or branches, which they carried in succession in honour of the idol, and with which they covered their faces, or from which they inhaled a pleasant smell, the branches being odoriferous. [This was probably a proverbial expression, signifying contempt and scorn.]

CHAPTER IX.

The vision in this chapter seems intended to denote the general destruction of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, excepting a few pious individuals that were distressed at the abominations that were committed in the land; who, in order to be delivered from the general calamity, were MARKED, in allusion, perhaps, to the custom of eastern princes, who marked their servants in the forehead, or rather to the custom very frequent among the Pagan worshippers, of indelibly imprinting on different parts of their body the marks of their idols. To indicate, likewise, that God was soon to forsake the temple, the shechinah, or glorious symbol of his presence, is seen to remove from the inner sanctuary to the threshold or door of the temple, 1-7. The prophet intercedes for his people; but God, on account of the greatness of their sins, will not be entreated, 8-11.

HE cried also in mine ears with a loud voice, saying, Cause them that have charge over the city to draw near, even every man with his ^a destroying weapon in his hand.

2 And, behold, six men came from the way of the higher gate, ^b which lieth toward the north, and every man ^c a slaughter weapon in his hand; ^d and one man among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn ^e by his side: and they went in, and stood beside the brasen altar.

3 And ^f the glory of the God of Israel was gone up from the cherub, whereupon he was, to the threshold of the house. And he called to the man clothed with linen, which ^g had the writer's inkhorn by his side;

4 And the Lord said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and ^h set ⁱ a mark upon the foreheads of the men ^j that sigh and cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof.

5 And to the others he said in ^k mine hearing, Go ye after him through the city, and smite: ^l let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity:

6 ^m Slay ⁿ utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women: but ^o come not near any man upon whom is the mark; and ^p begin at my sanctuary. ^q Then they began at the ancient men which were before the house.

7 And he said unto them, Defile the house, and fill the courts with the slain: go ye forth. And they went forth, and slew in the city.

8 And it came to pass, while they were slaying them, and I was left, that I ^r fell upon my face, and cried, and said, ^s Ah Lord God! wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?

9 Then said he unto me, The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is exceeding great, and ^t the land is ^u full of blood, and the city full of ^v perverseness: for they say, ^w The Lord hath forsaken the earth, and ^x the Lord seeth not.

10 And as for me also, mine ^y eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity, ^z but ^{aa} I will recompense their way upon their head.

11 And, behold, the man clothed with linen, which ^{ab} had the inkhorn by his side, ^{ac} reported the matter, saying, I have done as thou hast commanded me.

Verse 1. Cause them that have charge over the city] These may represent the seven counsellors of the eastern monarchs, who always saw the king's face, and knew all the secrets of the government. One of them was that minister who had the office of reporting concerning criminals, who carried the book of death and the book of life into the presence of the king, where the names were entered of criminals who were destined to suffer, and of those who were either considered as innocent, or recommended to mercy; those of the former in the book of death, those of the latter in the book of life. This person with the inkhorn, might be termed, in our phrase, the recorder.

Verse 2. Stood beside the brasen altar.] To signify that the people against whom they had their commission were, for their crimes, to be sacrificed to the demands of divine justice.

Verse 3. And he called to the man] The person here who called was he who sat on the chariot of the divine glory, See chap. i. 26.

Verse 4. Set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh] The Hebrew words signify literally, thou shalt make a mark, or sign a sign, but give no intimation what that mark or sign was. It was intended here to be what the sprinkling of the blood of the paschal lamb on the lintels and door-ports of the Israelites was, namely, a notice to the destroying angel what house he should spare. As the whole of this matter only passed in vision, we are bound to neither letter, nor any other kind of figures. The symbolical action teaches us that God, in general judgments, will make a distinction between the innocent and the guilty, between the penitent and the hardened sinner.

Verse 6. Begin at my sanctuary.] Let those who have sinned against most mercy and most privileges, be the first victims of justice. Those who know their Lord's will, and do it not, shall be beaten with many stripes.

Verse 7. Defile the house.] A dreadful sentence. Let it be polluted, I will no more dwell in it; I now utterly forsake it.

Verse 8. Wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel, in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?] These destroyers had slain the seventy elders, the twenty-five adorers of the sun, and the women that mourned for Tammuz; and on the day of the destruction, he fell on his face, and began to make intercession.

Verse 9. For they say, The Lord hath forsaken the earth] "This land." He has no more place in Israel; he has quite abandoned it; he neither sees nor cares, and he can be no longer the object of worship to any man in Israel. This seems to be the meaning; and God highly resents it, because it was bringing him on a level with idols and provincial deities, who had, according to supposition, regency only in some one place.

Verse 10. Mine eye shall not spare] They say, the Lord seeth not: this is false; I have seen all their iniquities, and do see all their abominations; and I will bring deserved judgment upon them, and then that eye which now sees will neither pity nor spare.

Verse 11. I have done as thou hast commanded me.] Angels and men must all give account of their conduct to God; for although he is every where, and his eye sees all things, yet they must personally account for all that they have done. [In this vision Fairbairn sees the symbol of the New Testament doctrine that all judgment has been committed to the Son; the man with the inkhorn being the Angel of the Covenant, and the other six his attendant ministers.]

CHAPTER X.

The same august vision which appeared to the prophet at first, is repeated here; and coals of fire are scattered over the city to intimate that it was to be burned. The symbol of the Divine presence is likewise represented as removing farther and farther from the temple, to signify that God's protection was about to be withdrawn from it, 1-22. It may not be improper to remark, that whatever is particularly intended by the cherubim, wheels, firmament, throne, &c., described in this and the first chapter, the prophet several times informs us (chap. i. 28, iii. 25, viii. 4, x. 4, 18) that his vision was a manifestation or similitude of the GLORY of Jehovah; or in other words, consisted of a set of hieroglyphics by which this glory was in some measure represented. It is also worthy of observation, that the faces of the living creatures, of which we have an account in the fourth chapter of the Apocalypse, are precisely the same with those of Ezekiel's cherubim; and we may readily collect, as Mr. Mede remarks, the quarter of the heavens in which each cherub was situated in reference to the other three, from the consideration that as Ezekiel saw the vision proceeding from the NORTH (see chap. i. 4, 10), the human face of the cherubim was towards him, or the south; on his right hand, or the east, was the face of a lion; on his left hand, or the west, the face of an ox; and towards the north, the face of an eagle.

THEN I looked, and, behold, in the 'firmament that was above the head of the cherubims there appeared over them as it were a sapphire stone, as the appearance of the likeness of a throne.

2 ^a And he spake unto the man clothed with linen, and said, Go in between the wheels, even under the cherub, and fill ^c thine hand with ^d coals of fire from between the cherubims, and ^e scatter them over the city. And he went in my sight.

3 Now the cherubims stood on the right side of the house, when the man went in; and the cloud filled the inner court.

4 ^f Then the glory of the LORD ^g went up from the cherub, and stood over the threshold of the house; and ^h the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the LORD's glory.

5 And the 'sound of the cherubims' wings was heard even to the outer court, as ⁱ the voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh.

6 And it came to pass, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubims; then he went in, and stood beside the wheels.

7 And one cherub ^j stretched forth his hand from between the cherubims unto the fire that was between the cherubims, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen: who took it, and went out.

8 ^k And there appeared in the cherubims, the form of a man's hand under their wings.

9 ^l And when I looked, behold the four wheels by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub: and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a ^m beryl stone.

10 And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness, as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.

11 ⁿ When they went, they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked they followed it; they turned not as they went.

12 And their whole ^o body, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and ^p the wheels, were full of eyes round about, even the wheels that they four had.

13 As for the wheels, ^q it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel.

14 ^r And every one had four faces: the first face was the face of a cherub, and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle.

15 And the cherubims were lifted up. This is ^s the living creature that I saw by the river of Chebar.

16 ^t And when the cherubims went, the wheels went by them: and when the cherubims lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them.

17 ^u When they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: for the spirit ^v of the living creature was in them.

18 Then ^w the glory of the LORD ^x departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubims.

19 And ^y the cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when Verse 10. A wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.] See on chap. i. 16-18. It is however no matter of faith; and the reader may judge as he thinks proper. And perhaps from the whole of this vision and its difficulties, he will see the propriety of the council of rabbins ordering Rabbi Ananias three hundred barrels of oil to light his lamp during the time it would be necessary for him to employ in explaining this one vision.

Verse 12. As for the wheels, it was cried unto them—O wheel.] Never was there a more unfortunate and unmeaning translation. The word haggalgal, may signify, simply, the roller, or a chariot, or roll on, or the swift roller.

Verse 20. And I knew that they were the cherubims.] Cherub is singular; cherubim is plural. The s should be uniformly expunged.

CHAPTER XI.

This chapter denounces the judgments of God against those wicked persons who remained in Jerusalem, and made a mock of the types and predictions of the prophets, 1-13; compare ver. 3 with Jer. i. 13. God promises to favour those who were gone into captivity, and intimates their restoration from the Babylonish yoke, 14-21. Then the shechinah, or symbol of the Divine Presence, is represented forsaking the city, as in the foregoing chapter it did the temple, 22, 23; and the prophet returns in vision to the place from which he set out (chap. viii. 1, &c.), in order to communicate his instructions to his brethren of the captivity, 24, 25.

MOREOVER *the spirit lifted me up, and brought me unto ^bthe east gate of the LORD's house, which looketh eastward: and behold *at the door of the gate five and twenty men; among whom I saw Jaazaniah the son of Azur, and Pelatiah the son of Benaiah, princes of the people.

Verse 3. It is not near.] That is, the threatened invasion. This city is the caldron, and we be the flesh.] See the vision of the seething pot, Jer. i. 13. These infidels seem to say: "We will run all risks, we will abide in the city. Though it be the caldron, and we the flesh, yet we will share its fate: if it perish, we will perish with it."

And will give them an heart of flesh] One that is capable of receiving and retaining these impressions.

Verse 20. That they may walk in my statutes] The holiness of their lives shall prove the work of GÖD upon their hearts.

Verse 23. The glory of the LORD went up from the midst of the city] This vision is no mean proof of the long-suffering of GÖD. He did not abandon this people all at once; he departed by little and little.

CHAPTER XII.

The prophet proceeds, by a variety of types and parables, to convince those of the captivity that their brethren who were left behind to sustain the miseries of a siege and the insults of a conqueror, would be in a much worse condition than they who were already settled in a foreign land. In the beginning of this chapter he foretels the approaching captivity of Judah by action instead of words, 1-7. He predicts particularly the flight, capture, captivity, and sufferings of Zedekiah and his followers, 8-16, compared with Jer. lii. 11. He is to eat his food with trembling and signs of terror, as an emblem of the consternation of the Jews when surrounded by their enemies, 17-20; and then he answers the objections and by-words of scoffers and infidels, who either disbelieved his threatenings, or supposed the accomplishment of them very distant, 21-28. Josephus (Antiq. xi. 10) tells us that Zedekiah thought the prophecy of Ezekiel in the thirteenth verse inconsistent with that of Jeremiah (chap. xxxiv. 3), and resolved to believe neither. Both, however, were literally fulfilled; and the event convinced him that they were not irreconcilable. Thus, blinded by infidelity, sinners rush on to that destruction against which they are sufficiently warned.

THE word of the LORD also came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house, which have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not: for they are a rebellious house.

3 Therefore, thou son of man, prepare thee stuff for removing, and remove by day in their sight; and thou shalt remove from thy place to another place in their sight: it may be they will consider, though they be a rebellious house.

4 Then shalt thou bring forth thy stuff by day in their sight, as stuff for removing: and thou shalt go forth at even in their sight, as they that go forth into captivity.

5 Dig thou through the wall in their sight, and carry out thereby.

6 In their sight shalt thou bear it upon thy

Verse 2. Which have eyes to see, and see not] It is not want of grace that brings them to destruction. No man is lost because he had not sufficient grace to save him, but because he abused that grace.

* Ch. ii. 5.—Or, instruments.—Heb. as the goings forth of captivity. Heb. Dig for thee.

Verse 3. Prepare thee stuff for removing] Get carriages to transport thy goods to another place; signifying by this the captivity that was at hand.

Verse 5. Dig thou through the wall] This refers to the shoulders, and carry it forth in the twilight: thou shalt cover thy face, that thou see not the ground: for I have set thee for a sign unto the house of Israel.

7 And I did so as I was commanded: I brought forth my stuff by day, as stuff for captivity, and in the even I ^bdigged through the wall with mine hand; I brought it forth in the twilight, and I bare it upon my shoulder in their sight.

8 And in the morning came the word of the LORD unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, hath not the house of Israel, ^cthe rebellious house, said unto thee, ^d'What doest thou?'

10 Say thou unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; This ^e'burden concerneth the prince in Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that are among them.

11 Say, 'I am your sign: like as I have done, so shall it be done unto them: ^f'they ^g'shall remove and go into captivity.

12 And ^h'the prince that is among them shall bear upon his shoulder in the twilight, and shall go forth; they shall dig through the wall to carry out thereby: he shall cover his face, that he see not the ground with his eyes.

13 My ⁱ'net also will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare: and ^j'I will bring him to Babylon to the land of the Chaldeans; yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there.

14 And ^k'I will scatter toward every wind all that are about him to help him, and all his bands; and ^l'I will draw out the sword after them.

15 ^m'And they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall scatter them among the nations, and disperse them in the countries.

16 ⁿ'But I will leave ^oa few men of them from the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence; that they may declare all their abominations among the heathen whither they come; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

17 Moreover the word of the LORD came to me, saying, manner in which Zedekiah and his family would escape from the city. See Jer. xxxix. 2, 4, and 2 Kings xxv. 4.

Verse 6. Thou shalt cover thy face, that thou see not the ground] Referring to the blinding of Zedekiah. All the prophecies from this to the twentieth chapter are supposed to have been delivered in the sixth year of Zedekiah, five years before the taking of Jerusalem. How accurate the prediction! and how exactly fulfilled!

Verse 10. This burden] This prediction concerning the prince. By this I point out the capture, misery, and ruin of Zedekiah.

Verse 13. I will bring him to Babylon—yet shall he not see it] Because Nebuchadnezzar caused him to have his eyes put out at Riblah. To Babylon he was carried in his blind state, and there he died.

Verse 15. Eat thy bread with quaking] Thus signifying

18 Son of man, ^a'eat thy bread with quaking, and drink thy water with trembling and with carefulness;

19 And say unto the people of the land, Thus saith the Lord God of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and of the land of Israel; They shall eat their bread with carefulness, and drink their water with astonishment, that her land may ^b'be desolate from ^c'all that is therein, ^d'because of the violence of all them that dwell therein.

20 And the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, and the land shall be desolate; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

21 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

22 Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, ^e'The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth?'

23 Tell them therefore, Thus saith the Lord God; I will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel; but say unto them, ^f'The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision.

24 For ^g'there shall be no more any ^h'vain vision nor flattering divination within the house of Israel.

25 For I am the LORD: I will speak, and ⁱ'the word that I shall speak shall come to pass; it shall be no more prolonged: for in your days, O rebellious house, will I say the word, and will perform it, saith the Lord God.

26 Again the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

27 ^j'Son of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth is ^k'for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off.

28 ^l'Therefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; There shall none of my words be prolonged any more, but the word which I have spoken shall be done, saith the Lord God.

the siege, and the straits to which they should be reduced. See this explained, ver. 19.

Verse 22. The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth] These are the words of the infidels and scoffers, who, because vengeance was not speedily executed on an evil work, set their heart to do iniquity. See 2 Pet. iii. 4.

Verse 23. The days are at hand] Far from failing or being prolonged, time is posting on, and the destruction threatened is at the door.

Verse 25. In your days—will I say the word, and will perform it] Even these mockers shall live to see and feel this desolation.

Verse 28. There shall none of my words be prolonged any more] He had waited to be gracious; they abused his mercy; and at last the protracted wrath rushed upon them with irresistible force.

CHAPTER XIII.

This chapter denounces heavy judgments against the lying prophets who flattered the people, in the midst of their sin and danger, with false hopes of peace and security, 19. The work of these deceivers is beautifully compared to a frail and insufficient piece of building, which can never stand against the battering elements of heaven (the Chaldean forces) which God will commission against it, 10-16. In the remaining part of the chapter woes are denounced against false prophetesses who practised vain rites and divinations, with the view of promoting their own gain by deceiving the people, 17-23.

AND the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel that prophesy, and say thou unto ^a them ^b that prophesy out of their own ^c hearts, Hear ye the word of the Lord;

3 Thus saith the Lord God; Woe unto the foolish prophets, that ^d follow their own spirit, ^e and have seen nothing!

4 O Israel, thy prophets are ^f like the foxes in the deserts.

5 ^g Ye ^h have not gone up into the ⁱ gaps, neither ^j made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand in the battle in the day of the Lord.

6 ^k They have seen vanity and lying divination, saying, The Lord saith: and the Lord hath not sent them: and they have made ^l others to hope that they would confirm the word.

7 Have ye not seen a vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination, whereas ye say, The Lord saith it; albeit I have not spoken?

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies, therefore, behold, I ^m am against you, saith the Lord God.

9 And mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies: they shall not be in the ⁿ assembly of my people, ^o neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel, ^p neither shall they enter into the land of Israel; ^q and ye shall know that I ^r am the Lord God.

10 Because, even because they have seduced my people, saying, ^s Peace; and ^t there was no peace; and one built up ^u a wall, and, lo, others ^v daubed it with untempered mortar:

11 Say unto them which daub it with untempered mortar, that it shall fall: ^w there shall be an overflowing shower; and ye, O great hailstones, shall fall; and a stormy wind shall rend it.

12 Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you, Where is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it?

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; I will even rend it with a stormy wind in my fury; ^x and there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger, and great hailstones in ^y my fury to consume it.

14 So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered mortar, and bring it down to the ground, so that the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof; ^z and ye shall know that I ^{aa} am the Lord.

15 Thus will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall, and upon them that have daubed it with untempered mortar, and will say unto you, The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it;

16 ^{ab} To wit, the prophets of Israel which prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which ^{ac} see visions of peace for her, and ^{ad} there is no peace, saith the Lord God.

17 Likewise, thou son of man, ^{ae} set thy face against the daughters of thy people, ^{af} which prophesy out of their own heart; and prophesy thou against them,

18 And say, Thus saith the Lord God; Woe to the women that sew pillows to all ^{ag} arm holes, and make kerchiefs upon the head of every stature to hunt souls! Will ye ^{ah} hunt the souls of my people, and will ye save the souls alive ^{ai} that come unto you?

19 And will ye pollute me among my people? for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to my people that hear ^{aj} your lies?

20 Wherefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I ^{ak} am against your pillows, wherewith ye there hunt the souls ^{al} to make them fly, and I will tear them from your arms, and will let the souls go, ^{am} even the souls that ye hunt to make them fly.

21 Your kerchiefs also will I tear, and deliver my people out of your hand, and they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted; ^{an} and ye shall know that I ^{ao} am the Lord.

22 Because with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and ^{ap} strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, ^{aq} by ^{ar} promising him life:

23 Therefore ^{as} ye shall see no more vanity, nor divine divinations: for I will deliver my people out of your hand: ^{at} and ye shall know that I ^{au} am the Lord.

Verse 2. That prophesy out of their own hearts] Who are neither inspired nor sent by ME. Such prophets, ministers, preachers, and clergy have been a curse to the church and to the world for some thousands of years.

Verse 4. Thy prophets are like the foxes in the deserts.] These false prophets are represented as the foxes who, having got their prey by great subtlety, run to the desert to hide both themselves and it. [The reference seems rather to be to the savage nature of the foxes of the desert.]

Verse 5. Ye have not gone up into the gaps.] Ye have neither by prayers, example, nor advice, contributed any thing for the preservation of the place, or the salvation of the people's souls.

Verse 9. They shall not be in the assembly of my people] They shall not be reckoned in the genealogy of true Israelites that return from captivity; and they shall never have a possession in the land; they shall be exhereditated and expatriated.

Verse 10. One built up a wall] A true prophet is as a wall of defence to the people. These false prophets pretend to be a wall of defence; but their wall is bad, and their mortar is worse. What one false prophet says, another confirms; and this is like daubing over a bad wall with bad mortar, which prevents blemishes and weaknesses being discovered, though it has no tendency to strengthen the building.

Verse 11. There shall be an overflowing shower] That shall wash off this bad mortar; sweep away the ground on which the wall stands, and level it with the earth.

Verse 17. Set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophesy] That there were true prophetesses among the Jews is evident enough from such being mentioned in the sacred writings.

Verse 18. That sew pillows to all arm holes] The prophet's discourse seems to point out that state of softness and effeminacy to which the predictions of those false prophetesses allured the inhabitants of Jerusalem. A careless, voluptuous life is that which is here particularly reprehended. And make kerchiefs] Probably some kind of ornamental dress which rendered women more enticing, so that they could the more successfully hunt or inveigle souls (men) into the worship of their false gods.

Verse 21. Your kerchiefs] Nets, or amulets, as some think.

Verse 22. With lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad] Here is the ministry of these false prophetesses, and its effects. They told lies: they would speak, and they had no truth to tell; and therefore spoke falseties.

Verse 23. Ye shall see no more vanity] They pretended visions; but they were empty of reality.

Nor divine divinations] Where God is not, because of the iniquity of the people, the devil is, to strengthen and support that iniquity.

CHAPTER XIV.

Here God threatens those hypocrites who pretended to worship him, while they loved and practised idolatry, 1-11. He declares his irreversible purpose of punishing so guilty a nation, in behalf of which no intercession of the people of God shall be of any avail. The gross idolaters of Jerusalem and Judah shall be visited with God's four sore judgments, famine, 12-14; wild beasts, 15, 16; the sword, 17, 18; and pestilence, 19-21. A remnant shall be delivered from the wrath coming upon the whole land, 22, 23.

THEN came certain of the elders of Israel unto me, and sat before me.

2 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, these men have set up their idols in their heart, and put ^b the stumbling-block of their iniquity before their face: ^c should I be inquired of at all by them?

4 Therefore speak unto them, and say unto them, Thus saith the LORD God; Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet; I the LORD will answer him that cometh according to the multitude of his idols:

5 That I may take the house of Israel in their own heart, because they are all estranged from me through their idols.

6 Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the LORD God; Repent, and turn ^d yourselves from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your abominations.

7 For every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to a prophet to inquire of him concerning me; I the LORD will answer him by myself:

8 And ^e I will set my face against that man, and will make him a ^f sign and a proverb, and I will cut him off from the midst of my people; ^g and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

9 And if the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I the LORD ^h have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel.

10 And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity: the punishment of the prophet shall be even as the punishment of him that seeketh unto him;

11 That the house of Israel may ⁱ go no more astray from me, neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; ^j but that they may be my people, and I may be their God, saith the LORD God.

12 The word of the LORD came again to me, saying,

13 Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the ^k staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, and will cut off man and beast from it:

14 ^l Though these three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, they should deliver but their own souls ^m by their righteousness, saith the LORD God.

15 If I cause ⁿ noisome beasts to pass through the land, and they ^o spoil it, so that it be desolate, that no man may pass through because of the beasts:

Verse 8. These men have set up their idols in their hearts] Not only in their houses; in the streets; but they had them in their hearts. These were stumbling-blocks of iniquity; they fell over them, and broke the neck of their souls. And should God be inquired of by such miscreants as these?

Verse 4. According to the multitude of his idols] I will treat him as an idolater, as a flagrant idolater.

Verse 7. And cometh to a prophet] Generally supposed to mean a false prophet.

Verse 13. By trespassing grievously] Having been frequently warned, and having refused to leave their sin, and so filled up the measure of their iniquity.

Verse 23. I shall know that I have not done without cause] In God's justice there is no severity; in God's mercy there is no caprice. He alone doth all things well; for he is the Fountain of justice and mercy.

CHAPTER XV.

The Jewish nation, about to be destroyed by the Chaldeans, compared to a barren vine which is fit for nothing but to be cast into the fire, 1-8.

the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, What is the vine tree more than any tree, or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest?

3 Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon?

4 Behold, ^a it is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. ^b Is it meet for any work?

5 Behold, when it was whole, it was ^c meet for no work: how much less shall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned?

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; As the vine tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

7 And ^a I will see my face against them: ^a they shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them; ^b and ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I set my face against them.

8 And I will make the land desolate, because they have ^c committed a trespass, saith the Lord God.

^a John xv. 6.—^b Heb. Will it prosper?—^c Heb. made fit.—^d Lev. xvii. 10. Ch. xiv. 8.

Verse 2. What is the vine tree more than any tree] It is certain that the vine is esteemed only on account of its fruit. It would never be cultivated for the sake of its wood; it is really worthless but as it bears fruit. What is Israel? Good for nothing, but as God influenced them to bring forth fruit to his glory.

Verse 4. The fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned.] Judea is like a vine-branch thrown into the fire, which seizes on both the ends, and scorches the middle; so both the extremities of the land are wasted; and the middle, Jerusalem, is now threatened with a siege, and by and by will be totally destroyed.

Verse 6. Therefore thus saith the Lord] As surely as I have allotted such a vine branch, or vine branch so surely have I appointed the inhabitants of Jerusalem to be consumed.

^a Isa. xxiv. 18.—^b Ch. vi. 7. vii. 4. xl. 10. xx. 83. xlii. 44.—^c Heb. trespassed a trespass.

The design of this parable is to abate the pride of the Jews; to show them that, in their best estate, they had nothing but what they had received, and therefore deserved nothing; and now, having fallen from all righteousness, they can have no expectation of any thing but judgment unmixed with mercy.

Verse 7. They shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them] If they escape the sword, they shall perish by the famine; if they escape the famine, they shall be led away captives. To escape will be impossible.

Verse 8. They have committed a trespass] They have prevaricated; they are the worst of sinners, and shall have the heaviest of punishment.

CHAPTER XVI.

In this chapter the mercy of God to Jerusalem (or the Jewish church and nation) is set forth by the emblem of a person that should take up an exposed infant, bring her up with great tenderness, and afterwards marry her, 1-14. She is then upbraided with her monstrous ingratitude in departing from the worship of God, and polluting herself with the idolatries of the nations around her, under the figure of a woman that proves false to a tender and indulgent husband, 15-52. But, notwithstanding these her heinous provocations, God promises, after she should suffer due correction, to restore her again to his favour, 53-63. The mode of describing apostasy from the true religion to the worship of idols under the emblem of adultery (a figure very frequent in the sacred canon) is pursued with great force, and at considerable length, both in this and the twenty-third chapter; and is excellently calculated to excite in the church of God the highest detestation of all false worship.

AGAIN the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, * cause Jerusalem to know her abominations,

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem; Thy ^b birth ^c and thy nativity ^d is of the land of Canaan; ^e thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite.

4 And as for thy nativity, ^e in the day thou wast born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water ^f to supple thee; thou wast not salted at all, nor swaddled at all.

5 None eye pitied thee, to do any of these unto thee, to have compassion upon thee; but thou wast cast out in the open field, to the lothing of thy person, in the day that thou wast born.

6 And when I passed by thee, and saw thee ^g polluted in thine own blood, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live; yea, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live.

7 ^h I have ⁱ caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field, and thou hast increased and waxen great, and thou art come to ^j excellent ornaments: thy breasts are fashioned, and thine hair is grown, whereas thou wast naked and bare.

8 Now when I passed by thee, and looked upon thee, behold, thy time was the time of love; ^k and I spread my skirt over thee, and covered thy nakedness: yea, I swore unto thee, and entered into a covenant with thee, saith the Lord God, and ^l thou becamest mine.

9 Then washed I thee with water; yea, I thoroughly washed away thy ^m blood from thee, and I anointed thee with oil.

10 I clothed thee also with brodered work, and shod thee with badgers' skin, and I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk.

11 I decked thee also with ornaments, and I ⁿ put bracelets upon thy hands, ^o and a chain on thy neck.

12 And I put a jewel on thy ^p forehead, and earrings in thine ears, and a beautiful crown upon thine head.

13 Thus wast thou decked with gold and silver; and thy raiment was of fine linen, and silk, and brodered work; ^q thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil: and thou wast exceeding ^r beautiful, and thou didst prosper into a kingdom.

14 And ^s thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty: for it was perfect through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord God.

15 ^t But thou didst trust in thine own beauty, ^u and playedst the harlot because of thy renown, and pouredst out thy fornications on every one that passed by; his it was.

Verse 2. Cause Jerusalem to know her abominations] And such a revelation of impurity never was seen before or since. Surely the state of the Jews, before the Babylonish captivity, was the most profligate and corrupt of all the nations of the earth.

Verse 3. Thy birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan] It would dishonour Abraham to say that you sprung from him: ye are rather Canaanites than Israelites. The Canaanites were accursed; so are ye.

Thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite.] These tribes were the most famous, and probably the most corrupt, of all the Canaanites. So Isaiah calls the princes of Judah rulers of Sodom, chap. i. 10; and John the Baptist calls the Pharisees a generation or brood of vipers, Matt. iii. 7.

Verse 4. As for thy nativity, &c.] This verse refers to what is ordinarily done for every infant on its birth.

Verse 5. Thou wast cast out in the open field] This is an allusion to the custom of some heathen and barbarous nations, who exposed those children in the open fields to be devoured by wild beasts who had any kind of deformity, or whom they could not support.

Verse 6. I said—Live] I received the exposed child from death that awaited it, while in such a state as rendered it at once an object of horror, and also of compassion.

Verse 8. Was the time of love] Thou wast marriageable. I spread my skirt over thee] I espoused thee. This was one of their initiatory marriage ceremonies. See Ruth iii. 9. I entered into a covenant with thee] Married thee. Espousing preceded marriage.

Verse 10. I clothed thee also with brodered work] Cloth on which various figures, in various colours, were wrought by the needle.

With badgers' skin] See Exod. xxv. 5. The same kind of skin with which the tabernacle was covered.

I covered thee with silk.] Very probably the produce of the silk-worm.

Verse 12. I put a jewel on thy forehead] Al appech, upon thy nose. This is one of the most common ornaments among ladies in the East.

Verse 13. Thou didst prosper into a kingdom.] Here the figure explains itself: by this wretched infant, the low estate of the Jewish nation in its origin is pointed out; by the growing up of this child into woman's estate, the increase and multiplication of the people; by her being decked out and ornamented, her tabernacle service, and religious ordinances; by her betrothing and consequent marriage, the covenant which God made with the Jews; by her fornication and adulteries, their apostasy from God, and the establishment of idolatrous worship, with all its abominable rites; by her fornication and whoredoms with the Egyptians and Assyrians, the sinful alliances which the Jews made with those nations, and the incorporation of their idolatrous worship with that of Jehovah; by her lovers being brought against her, and stripping her naked, the delivery of the Jews into the hands of the Egyptians, Assyrians, and Chaldeans, who stripped them of all their excellencies, and at last carried them into captivity.

Verse 15. Thou didst trust in thine own beauty] Riches,

16 *And of thy garments thou didst take, and deckedst thy high places with divers colours, and playedst the harlot thereupon: the like things shall not come, neither shall it be so.

17 Thou hast also taken thy fair jewels of my gold and of my silver, which I had given thee, and madest to thyself images ^b of men and didst commit whoredom with them,

18 And tookest thy broidered garments, and coveredst them: and thou hast set mine oil and mine incense before them.

19 *My meat also which I gave thee, fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee, thou hast even set it before them for ^a a sweet savour: and thus it was, saith the Lord God.

20 *Moreover thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters, whom thou hast born unto me, and these hast thou sacrificed unto them ^c to be devoured. In this of thy whoredoms a small matter, 21 That thou hast slain my children, and delivered them to cause them to pass through the fire for them?

22 And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, ^b when thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted in thy blood.

23 And it came to pass after all thy wickedness, (woe, woe unto thee! saith the Lord God;)

24 That ^a thou hast also built unto thee an ¹ eminent place, and ^b hast made thee an high place in every street.

25 Thou hast built thy high place ¹ at every head of the way, and hast made thy beauty to be abhorred, and hast opened thy feet to every one that passed by, and multiplied thy whoredoms.

26 Thou hast also committed fornication with ^m the Egyptians thy neighbours, great of flesh; and hast increased thy whoredoms, to provoke me to anger.

27 Behold, therefore, I have stretched out my hand over thee, and have diminished thine ordinary food, and delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee, ⁿ the daughters of the Philistines, which are ashamed of thy lewd way.

28 *Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast unsatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet couldst not be satisfied.

29 Thou hast moreover multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan ^o unto Chaldea; and yet thou wast not satisfied herewith.

strength, alliances, &c.; never considering that all they possessed came from God: therefore it was his comeliness which he had put upon them. Witness their original abject state, and the degree of eminence to which they had arrived afterwards through the protecting power of God.

Verse 18. Hast set mine oil and mine incense before them.] It appears that they had made use of the holy vestments, and the different kinds of offerings which belonged to the Lord, to honour their idols.

Verse 21. To cause them to pass through the fire.] Among the Israelites this appears to have been used as a rite of consecration.

Verse 24. Thou hast also built unto thee an eminent place,

30 How weak is thine heart, saith the Lord God, seeing thou doest all these things, the work of an imperious whorish woman;

31 *In that ^a thou buildest thine eminent place in the head of every way, and makest thine high place in every street; and hast not been as an harlot, in that thou scornest hire;

32 But as a wife that committeth adultery, which taketh strangers instead of her husband!

33 They give gifts to all whores: but ^a thou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers, and ^b hirest them, that they may come unto thee on every side for thy whoredom.

34 And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms: and in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee, therefore thou art contrary.

35 Wherefore, O harlot, hear the word of the Lord:

36 Thus saith the Lord God; Because thy filthiness was poured out, and thy nakedness discovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers, and with all the idols of thy abominations, and by ^c the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them;

37 Behold, therefore ^a I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated; I will even gather them round about against thee, and will discover thy nakedness unto them, that they may see all thy nakedness.

38 And I will judge thee, ^a as ^b women that break wedlock and ^c shed blood are judged; and I will give thee blood in fury and jealousy.

39 And I will also give thee into their hand, and they shall throw down ^a thine eminent place, and shall break down thy high places: ^b they shall strip thee also of thy clothes, and shall take ^c thy fair jewels, and leave thee naked and bare.

40 ^a They shall also bring up a company against thee, ^b and they shall stone thee with stones, and thrust thee through with their swords.

41 And they shall ^a burn thine houses with fire, and ^b execute judgments upon thee in the sight of many women: and I will cause thee to ^c cease from playing the harlot, and thou also shalt give no hire any more.

42 So ^a will I make my fury toward thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry.

of thy youth, but hast fretted me in all these things; behold, therefore, * I also will recompense thy way upon thine head, saith the Lord God: and thou shalt not commit this lewdness above all thine abominations.

44 Behold, every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, As is the mother, so is her daughter.

45 Thou art thy mother's daughter, that lothed her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, which lothed their husbands and their children: ^b your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite.

46 And thine elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand: and ^c thy ^d younger sister, that dwelleth at thy right hand, is Sodom and her daughters.

47 Yet hast thou not walked after their ways, nor done after their abominations: but ^e as if that were a very little thing, ^f thou wast corrupted more than they in all thy ways.

48 As I live, saith the Lord God, ^g Sodom thy sister hath not done, she nor her daughters, as thou hast done, thou and thy daughters.

49 Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, ^h fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness, was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy.

50 And they were haughty, and ⁱ committed abomination before me: therefore ^j I took them away as I saw good.

51 Neither hath Samaria committed half of thy sins; but thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they, and ^k hast justified thy sisters in all thine abominations which thou hast done.

52 Thou also, which hast judged thy sisters, bear thine own shame for thy sins that thou hast committed more abominable than they: they are more righteous than thou: yea, ^l he thou confounded also,

Verse 43 Thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth] He who maintains not a proper recollection of past mercies is not likely to abide stedfast in the faith. Ingratitude to God is the commencement, if not the parent of many crimes.

Verse 44. As is the mother, so is her daughter.] As is the cause, so is the effect. As is the breeding, so is the practice. What is bred in the bone seldom comes out of the flesh. All such proverbs show the necessity of early holy precepts, supported by suitable example.

Verse 46. Thine elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left] Literally, Sodom could not be called the younger sister of Jerusalem, as it existed before Jerusalem had a name. In looking east from Jerusalem, Samaria was on the left, and Sodom on the right hand; that is, the first was on the north, the second on the south of Jerusalem.

Verse 49. This was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom] Sodom, in addition to her unnatural crime, is charged with pride, luxury, idleness, and uncharitableness; and these were sufficient to sink any city to the bottomless pit.

Verse 52. They are more righteous than thou] They are less guilty in the sight of God, for their crimes were not accompanied with so many aggravations. This phrase casts light on Luke xviii. 14: "This man went down to his house justified rather than the other."

and bear thy shame, in that thou hast justified thy sisters.

53 ¹ When I shall bring again their captivity, ² the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them.

54 That thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be confounded in all that thou hast done, in that thou art ^a a comfort unto them.

55 When thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate.

56 For thy sister Sodom was not ^b mentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy ^c pride.

57 Before thy wickedness was discovered, as at the time of thy ^d reproach of the daughters of ^e Syria, and all that are round about her, ^f the daughters of the Philistines, which ^g despise thee round about.

58 ^h Thou hast ⁱ borne thy lewdness and thine abominations, saith the Lord.

59 For thus saith the Lord God; I will even deal with thee as thou hast done, which hast ^j despised ^k the oath in breaking the covenant.

60 Nevertheless I will ^l remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee ^m an everlasting covenant.

61 Then ⁿ thou shalt remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger: and I will give them unto thee for ^o daughters, ^p but not by thy covenant.

62 ^q And I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord:

63 That thou mayest ^r remember, and be confounded, ^s and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame, when I am pacified toward thee for all that thou hast done, saith the Lord God.

60. I will remember my covenant] That is, the covenant I made with Abraham in the day of thy youth when in him thou didst begin to be a nation.

Verse 61. Thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger] The Gentiles, who were before the Jews were called, and after the Jews were cast off, are here termed the elder and younger sister. These were to be given to Jerusalem for daughters; the latter should be converted to God by the ministry of men who should spring out of the Jewish church.

But not by thy covenant.] This was the ancient covenant, the conditions of which they broke, and the blessings of which they forfeited; but by that new covenant, or the renewal to the Gentiles of that covenant that was made originally with Abraham while he was a Gentile, promising that in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed; that covenant which respected the incarnation of Christ, and was ratified by the blood of his cross.

Verse 63. When I am pacified toward thee] This intimates that the Jews shall certainly share in the blessings of the gospel covenant, and that they shall be restored to the favour and image of God. And when shall this be? Whenever they please. They may enjoy them now; but they still choose to shut their eyes against the light, and contradict and blaspheme.

CHAPTER XVII.

This chapter begins with a new allegory or parable, 1-10; to which an explanation is immediately subjoined, 11-21. In the remaining verses the prophet, by a beautiful metaphor, makes an easy and natural transition to the Messiah, and predicts the security, increasing prosperity, and ultimate universality of his kingdom, 22-24. From the beauty of its images, the elegance of its composition, the perspicuity of its language, the rich variety of its matter, and the easy transition from one part of the subject to another, this chapter forms one of the most beautiful and perfect pieces of its kind that can possibly be conceived in so small a compass; and then the unexpected change from objects that presented nothing to the view but gloom and horror, to a prospect of ineffable glory and beauty, has a most happy effect. Every lowering cloud is dispelled, and the fields again smile in the beams of midday. The traveller, who this moment trembled as he looked around for shelter, now proceeds on his way rejoicing.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel;

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord God; ^a A great eagle with great wings, long-winged, full of feathers, which had ^b divers colours, came unto Lebanon, and ^c took the highest branch of the cedar;

4 He cropped off the top of his young twigs, and carried it into a land of traffic: he set it in a city of merchants.

5 He took also of the seed of the land, and ^d planted it in ^e a fruitful field; he placed it by great waters, and set it ^f as a willow tree.

6 And it grew, and became a spreading vine ^g of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him: so it became a vine, and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs.

7 There was also another great eagle with great wings and many feathers: and, behold, ^h this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation.

Verse 2. Son of man, put forth a riddle] Chidah, from chad, to penetrate; not that which penetrates the mind, but which we must penetrate to find out the sense.

Verse 3. A great eagle] Nebuchadnezzar. See Jer. xlviii. 40; xlix. 22; Dan. vii. 4. And see here, ver. 12, where it is so applied.

Great wings] Extensive empire.

Long-winged] Rapid in his conquests.

Full of feathers] Having multitudes of subjects.

Divers colours] People of various nations.

Came unto Lebanon] Came against Judea.

The highest branch] King Jehoiachin he took captive to Babylon.

The cedar] The Jewish state and king.

Verse 4. The top of his young twigs] The princes of Judah.

A land of traffic] Chaldaea.

A city of merchants] Babylon, for which this city was the most celebrated of all the cities of the East. Its situation procured it innumerable advantages; its two rivers, the Tigris and Euphrates, and the Persian Gulf, gave it communication with the richest and the most distant nations.

Verse 5. The seed of the land] Zedekiah, brother of Jehoiachin.

Planted it in a fruitful field] Made him king of Judea in place of his brother.

Placed it by great waters] Put him under the protection of Babylon, situated on the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates.

And set it as a willow tree] Made him dependant on this city of great waters, as the willow is on humidity.

Verse 6. A spreading vine of low stature] The Jewish 8 It was planted in a good ¹ soil by great waters, that it might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine.

9 Say thou, Thus saith the Lord God; Shall it prosper? ² shall he not pull up the roots thereof, and cut off the fruit thereof, that it wither? it shall wither in all the leaves of her spring, even without great power, or many people to pluck it up by the roots thereof.

10 Yea, behold, being planted, shall it prosper? ³ shall it not utterly wither, when the east wind toucheth it? it shall wither in the furrows where it grew.

11 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Say now to ⁴ the rebellious house, Know ye not what these things mean? tell them, Behold, ⁵ the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, and led them with him to Babylon:

13 ⁶ And hath taken of the king's seed, and made a covenant with him, ⁷ and hath ⁸ taken an oath of him: he hath also taken the mighty of the land:

14 That the kingdom might be ⁹ base, that it

state having then no height of dominion, it must abide under the wings or branches of the Chaldean king.

Whose branches turned toward him, and the roots—under him] Zedekiah was wholly dependant on Nebuchadnezzar, both for his elevation to the throne, and his support on it.

Verse 7. Another great eagle] Pharaoh-hophra, or Apries, king of Egypt.

Did bend her roots] Looked to him for support in her intended rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 8. It was planted in a good soil] Though he depended on Babylon, he lived and reigned as Nebuchadnezzar's vicegerent in the land of Judea.

Verse 9. Shall it prosper?] Shall Zedekiah succeed in casting off the yoke of the king of Babylon, to whom he had sworn fealty?

Shall he not pull up the roots] Nebuchadnezzar will come and dethrone him.

And cut off the fruit] The children of Zedekiah.

The leaves] All the nobles; all shall perish with Zedekiah.

Verse 10. Shall—utterly wither] The regal government shall be no more restored. Zedekiah shall be the last king, and the monarchy shall finally terminate with him.

Verse 12. Know ye not what these things mean?] They are explained in this and the following verses.

Verse 14. That the kingdom might be base] Have no political consequence; and at last sink into a miserable government under Gedaliah.

Verse 15. Sending his ambassadors into Egypt] Zedekiah must have sent his ambassadors into Egypt between the sixth month of his sixth year, and the fifth month of his seventh year. Compare chap. viii. 1, with chap. xx. 1.

might not lift itself up, ^a but that by keeping of his covenant it might stand.

15 But ^b he rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, ^c that they might give him horses and much people. ^d Shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?

16 As I live, saith the Lord God, surely ^e in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king, whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die.

17 Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company make for him in the war, ^f by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons:

18 Seeing he despised the oath by breaking the covenant, when, lo, he had ^g given his hand, and hath done all these things, he shall not escape.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; As I live, surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head.

Verse 18. Seeing he despised the oath] This God particularly resents.

Verse 21. All his fugitives] All who attempted to escape with him, and all that ran to Egypt, &c., shall fall by the sword.

Verse 22. I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar] I will raise up another monarchy, which shall come in the line of David, namely, the Messiah; who shall appear as a tender plant, as to his incarnation; but he shall be high and eminent; his church, the royal city, the highest and purest ever seen on the face of the earth.

Verse 23. In the mountain of the height of Israel] He shall make his appearance at the temple, and found his church at Jerusalem.

20 And I will ¹ spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare, and I will bring him to Babylon, and ² will plead with him there for his trespass that he hath trespassed against me.

21 And ³ all his fugitives with all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they that remain shall be scattered toward all winds: and ye shall know that I the Lord have spoken it.

22 Thus saith the Lord God: I will also take of the highest ⁴ branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs ⁵ a tender one, and will ⁶ plant it upon a high mountain and eminent:

23 ⁷ In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it: and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and ⁸ under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell.

24 And all the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord ⁹ have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: ¹⁰ I the Lord have spoken and have done it.

Verse 24. All the trees of the field shall know] All the people of Israel and of Chaldea.

I the Lord have brought down the high tree] Have dethroned Jehoiachin.

Have exalted the low tree] Put Zedekiah, brother of Jehoiachin, in his place.

Have dried up the green tree] Zedekiah, who had numerous children, but who were all slain before his eyes at Riblah.

And have made the dry tree to flourish] Have raised up a rod out of the stem of Jesse, the family of David being then apparently dried up and extinct.

CHAPTER 1

The Jews, in Ezekiel's time, complained of God's dealing hardly with them in punishing them for the sins of their forefathers, 1, 2; their temporal calamities having been long threatened as the consequence of the national guilt (Jer. xv. 4, &c.); and, from the general complexion of this chapter, it appears that the Jews so interpreted the second commandment of the Decalogue and other passages of like import, as if the sins of the forefathers were visited upon the children, independently of the moral conduct of the latter, not only in this world, but in that which is to come. To remove every foundation for such an unworthy idea of the divine government, God assures them, with an oath, that he had no respect of persons, 3, 4; strongly intimating that the great mysteries in Providence (mysterious only on account of the limited capacity of man) are results of the most impartial administration of justice; and that this would be particularly manifested in the rewards and punishments of another life; when every ligament that at present connects societies and nations together shall be dissolved, and each person receive according to his work, and bear his own burden. This is illustrated by a variety of examples: such as that of a just or righteous man, 5-9; his wicked son, 10-13; and again the just son of this wicked person, 14-20. Then a wicked man repenting, and finding mercy, whose former wickedness shall be no impediment to his salvation, 21-23; and a righteous man revolting, and dying in his sins, whose former righteousness shall be of no avail, 24. The conduct of the Divine Providence is then vindicated, 25-29; and all persons, without any exception, most earnestly exhorted to repentance, 30, 31; because the Lord hath no pleasure in the death of the sinner, 32. As the whole of this chapter is taken up with the illustration of a doctrine nearly connected with the comfort of man, and the honour of the divine government, the prophet, with great propriety, lays aside his usual mode of figure and allegory, and treats his subject with the utmost plainness and perspicuity.

THE word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

2 What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying, The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge?

3 As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel.

4 Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die.

5 But if a man be just, and do that which is lawful and right,

6 And hath not eaten upon the mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, neither hath defiled his neighbour's wife, neither hath come near to a menstruous woman,

7 And hath not oppressed any, but hath restored to the debtor his pledge, and hath spoiled none by violence, hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment;

8 He that hath not given forth upon usury, neither hath taken any increase, that hath withdrawn his hand from iniquity, hath executed true judgment between man and man,

9 Hath walked in my statutes, and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly; he is just, he shall surely live, saith the Lord God.

10 If he beget a son that is a robber, a shedder of blood, and that doeth the like to any one of these things,

11 And that doeth not any of those duties, but even hath eaten upon the mountains, and defiled his neighbour's wife,

12 Hath oppressed the poor and needy, hath spoiled by violence, hath not restored the pledge, and hath lifted up his eyes to the idols, hath committed abomination, 13 Hath given forth upon usury, and hath taken increase: shall he then live? he shall not live: he hath done all these abominations; he shall surely die; his blood shall be upon him.

14 Now, lo, if he beget a son, that seeth all his father's sins which he hath done, and considereth, and doeth not such like,

15 That hath not eaten upon the mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, hath not defiled his neighbour's wife,

16 Neither hath oppressed any, hath not withholden the pledge, neither hath spoiled by violence, but hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment,

17 That hath taken off his hand from the poor, that hath not received usury nor increase, hath executed my judgments, hath walked in my statutes; he shall not die for the iniquity of his father, he shall surely live.

18 As for his father, because he cruelly oppressed, spoiled his brother by violence, and did that which is not good among his people, lo, even he shall die in his iniquity.

19 Yet say ye, Why? doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them, he shall surely live.

20 The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.

Verse 2. The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge? How far can the moral evil of the parent be extended to his offspring? And, are the faults and evil propensities of the parents, not only transferred to the children, but punished in them?

Verse 3. As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel. I will now, by this present declaration, settle this question for ever. And hence God has sworn to what follows. After this, who will dare to doubt the judgment pronounced?

Verse 4. All souls are mine. Equally so; I am the Father of the spirits of all flesh, and shall deal impartially with the whole.

The soul that sinneth, it shall die. None shall die for another's crimes; none shall be saved by another's righteousness.

Verse 5. If a man be just, and do that which is lawful and right. If he be just or holy within, and do what is according to law and equity. What is meant by this, is immediately specified.

Verse 6. Hath not given forth upon usury. Nasach signifies to bite; usury is properly so termed, because it bites into and devours the principal. Usury signifies, with us, exacting unlawful interest for money; and taking the advantage of a man's necessities to advance him cash on exorbitant profit. This bites the receiver in his property, and the lender in his salvation.

Verse 9. Hath walked in my statutes. Not only acknowledging them to be right, but acting according to them. Especially in every thing that relates to my worship, changing nothing, neglecting nothing.

And hath kept my judgments, to deal truly. Has attended to my divine direction, both with respect to things forbidden, and things commanded.

He is just. He is a righteous man; he has given to all their due; he has abstained from every appearance of evil, and done that which was lawful and right in the sight of God.

He shall surely live. He has lived to me, and he shall live with me.

Verse 10. If he beget a son. Who is the reverse of the above righteous character, according to the thirteen articles already specified and explained.

Verse 13. Shall he then live? Because his father was a righteous man, shall the father's holiness be imputed to him? No!

He shall surely die; his blood shall be upon him. He shall suffer for his own crimes.

Verse 14. Now, lo, if he beget a son, that seeth all his father's sins—and considereth. Lays to heart the evil of his father's life, and the dreadful consequences of a life of rebellion against God.

Verse 17. He shall not die for the iniquity of his father. He shall no more be affected by his father's crimes, than his father was benefited by his grandfather's righteousness.

Verse 21. But if the wicked will turn from all his sins. And afterwards walk according to the character of the righteous already specified; shall he find mercy, and be for ever saved? Yes.

Verse 22. All his transgressions. Shall be so completely forgiven by God's mercy, that they shall not be even mentioned to him; and if he live and die in this recovered state, he shall live with God to all eternity.

21 But *if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

22 *All his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not be mentioned unto him: in his righteousness that he hath done he shall live.

23 *Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God: and not that he should return from his ways, and live?

24 But *when the righteous turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to all the abominations that the wicked man doeth, shall he live? *All his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned: in his trespass that he hath trespassed, and in his sin that he hath sinned, in them shall he die.

25 Yet ye say, 'The way of the Lord is not equal. Hear now, O house of Israel; Is not my way equal? are not your ways unequal?

26 *When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die.

27 Again, *when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive.

28 Because he *considereth, and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

29 *Yet saith the house of Israel, The way of the Lord is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal?

30 *Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord God. *Repent; and turn *yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin.

31 *Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a *new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel?

32 For *I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn *yourselves, and live ye.

Verse 23. Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? No! that is foreign to him whose name is love, and whose nature is mercy. On the contrary, he "wills that he should return from his evil ways and live."

Verse 24. When the righteous turneth away from his righteousness Can a man who was once holy and pure, fall away so as to perish everlastingly? Yes. God himself informs us that a righteous man may not only fall foully, but fall finally.

Verse 30. Repent, and turn yourselves from all your transgressions There is still life; still a God that has no pleasure in the death of a sinner, one who is ever ready to give his Holy Spirit to all them that ask him; therefore, "repent and turn, so iniquity shall not be your ruin."

Verse 31. Cast away! With a holy violence, dash away every transgression and incentive to it.

Make you a new heart! Call upon God for it, and he will give it: for as sure as you earnestly call on God through Christ to save you, so surely you shall be saved; and the effect will so speedily follow, that God is pleased to attribute that in some sort to yourselves, which is done by his grace alone; because ye earnestly call upon him for it, come in the right way to receive it, and are determined never to rest till you have it.

For why will ye die? Every word is emphatic. Why—show God or man one reason. Will—obstinacy alone,—a determination not to be saved, or a voluntary listlessness about salvation,—can prevent you. Ye—children of so many mercies; ye, who are redeemed by the blood of Jesus Christ, ye, who have made many promises to give up yourselves to God; why will ye die? Die!—what is this? A separation from God and the glory of his power for ever! Die—forfeiting all the purposes for which your immortal souls were made! Die—to know what the worm is that never dieth, and what that fire is which is never quenched!

Verse 32. For I have no pleasure God repeats what he had so solemnly declared before. Can ye doubt his sincerity? his ability? his willingness? the efficacy of the blood of his covenant?

Though every man comes into the world with a fallen nature—a soul infected with sin, yet no man is damned on that account. He who refuses that grace which pardons sin and heals infected nature, who permits the evil principle to break out into transgression, and continues and dies in his iniquity and sin, and will not come unto Christ that he may have life; he, and he only, goes to perdition. Nor will the righteousness of a parent or relation help his sinful soul: no man can have more grace than is necessary to save himself; and none can have that, who does not receive it through Christ Jesus. It is the mercy of God in Christ which renders the salvation of a sinner possible; and it is that mercy alone which can heal the backslider.

CHAPTER XIX.

This chapter contains two beautiful examples of the parabolic kind of writing; the one lamenting the sad catastrophe of Jehoahaz and Jehoiakim, 1-9, and the other describing the desolation and captivity of the whole people, 10-14. In the first parable, the lioness is Jerusalem. The first of the young lions is Jehoahaz, deposed by the king of Egypt; and the second lion is Jehoiakim, whose rebellion drew on himself the vengeance of the king of Babylon. In the second parable the vine is the Jewish nation, which long prospered, its land being fertile, its princes powerful, and its people flourishing; but the judgments of God, in consequence of their guilt, had now destroyed a great part of the people, and doomed the rest to captivity.

MOREOVER take thou up a lamentation for the princes of Israel,

2 And say, What is thy mother? A lioness: she lay down among lions, she nourished her whelps among young lions.

3 And she brought up one of her whelps: it became a young lion, and it learned to catch the prey; it devoured men.

4 The nations also heard of him; he was taken in their pit, and they brought him with chains unto the land of Egypt.

5 Now when she saw that she had waited, and her hope was lost, then she took another of her whelps, and made him a young lion.

6 And he went up and down among the lions, he became a young lion, and learned to catch the prey, and devoured men.

7 And he knew their desolate palaces, and he laid waste their cities; and the land was desolate, and the fulness thereof, by the noise of his roaring.

8 Then the nations set against him on every Verse 1. Moreover take thou up a lamentation] Show the melancholy fate of the kings who proceeded from Josiah.

Verse 2. What is thy mother? A lioness] Judea may here be the mother; the lioness, Jerusalem. Her lying down among lions, her having confederacy with the neighbouring kings; for lion here means king.

Verse 3. She brought up one of her whelps] Jehoahaz, son of Josiah, whose father was conquered and slain by Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt.

It learned to catch the prey] His reign was a reign of oppression and cruelty. He made his subjects his prey, and devoured their substance.

Verse 4. The nations also heard of him] The king of Egypt, whose subjects were of divers nations, marched against Jerusalem, took Jehoahaz prisoner, and brought him to Egypt.

He was taken in their pit] Here is an allusion to those trap-pits digged in forests, lightly covered over with branches and turf.

Verse 5. When she saw that she had waited] Being very weak, the Jews found that they could not resist with any hope of success; so the king of Egypt was permitted to do as he pleased.

She took another of her whelps] Jehoiaikim.

And made him a young lion.] King of Judea.

Verse 6. And he went up and down among the lions] He became a perfect heathen, and made Judea as idolatrous as any of the surrounding nations. He reigned eleven years, a monster of iniquity, 2 Kings xxiii. 30, &c.

Verse 8. The nations set against him] The Chaldeans, Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites, and the king of Babylon—king of many nations.

He was taken] The city was taken by Nebuchadnezzar; and Jehoiaikim was taken prisoner, and sent in chains to Babylon.

Verse 9. That his voice should no more be heard] He continued in prison many years, till the reign of Evil-merodach, who set him at liberty, but never suffered him to return to the mountains of Israel.

Verse 10. Thy mother (Jerusalem) is like a vine in thy side from the provinces, and spread their net over him: he was taken in their pit.

9 And they put him in ward in chains, and brought him to the king of Babylon: they brought him into holds, that his voice should no more be heard upon the mountains of Israel.

10 Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood, planted by the waters: she was fruitful and full of branches by reason of many waters.

11 And she had strong rods for the sceptres of them that bare rule, and her stature was exalted among the thick branches, and she appeared in her height with the multitude of her branches.

12 But she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and the east wind dried up her fruit: her strong rods were broken and withered, the fire consumed them.

13 And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thirsty ground.

14 And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, which hath devoured her fruit, so that she hath no strong rod to be a sceptre to rule. This is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation.

blood] Of this expression I know not what to make. Some think the meaning is, "A vine planted by the waters to produce the blood of the grape." Calmet reads carnecha, thy vineyard, instead of bedanecha, in thy blood. Though this is rather an unusual construction, yet it seems the best emendation. Of the textual reading no sense can be made. There is a corruption somewhere. [The phrase denotes the earliest stage of existence. "When thou wast in very infancy."]

Full of branches] Many princes.

Verse 11. She had strong rods] Zedekiah, and his many sons.

Her stature was exalted] Zedekiah grew proud of his numerous offspring and prosperity; and although he copied the example of Jehoiaikim, yet he thought he might safely rebel against the king of Babylon.

Verse 12. But she was plucked up in fury] Jerusalem; taken after a violent and most destructive siege; Nebuchadnezzar being violently enraged against Zedekiah for breaking his oath to him.

Her strong rods were broken] The children of Zedekiah were slain before his eyes, and after that his own eyes pulled out; and he was laden with chains, and carried into Babylon.

Verse 13. And now she is planted in the wilderness] In the land of Chaldea, whither the people have been carried captives; and which, compared with their own land, was to them a dreary wilderness.

Verse 14. Fire is gone out] A vindictive and murderous disposition has taken hold—

Of a rod of her branches] Ishmael, son of Nethaniah who was of the blood-royal of Judah,—

Hath devoured her fruit] Hath assassinated Gedaliah, slain many people, and carried off others into the country of the Ammonites. But he was pursued by Jonathan, the son of Kareah, who slew many of his adherents, and delivered much of the people.

She hath no strong rod] None of the blood-royal of Judah left.

And shall be for a lamentation.] Even to the present day this, to a Jew, is a subject of mourning.

CHAPTER XX.

A deputation of the elders of Israel, as usual, in their distress, come to request Ezekiel to ask counsel of God, 1. In reply to this, God commands the prophet to put them in mind of their rebellion and idolatry: In Egypt, 2-9, in the wilderness, 10-27, and in Canaan, 28-32. Notwithstanding which the Lord most graciously mises to restore them to their own land, after they should be purged from their dross, 33-44. The five last verses of this chapter ought to begin the next, as they are connected with the subject of that chapter, being a prophecy against Jerusalem, which lay to the south of Chaldea, where the prophet then was, and which here and elsewhere is represented under the emblem of a forest doomed to be destroyed by fire, 45-49.

AND it came to pass in the seventh year, in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month, that certain of the elders of Israel came to inquire of the Lord, and sat before me.

2 Then came the word of the Lord unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Are ye come to inquire of me? As I live, saith the Lord God, I will not be inquired of by you.

4 Wilt thou judge them, son of man, wilt thou judge them? I cause them to know the abominations of their fathers:

5 And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; In the day when I chose Israel, and I lifted up mine hand unto the seed of the house of Jacob, and made myself known unto them in the land of Egypt, when I lifted up mine hand unto them, saying, I am the Lord your God;

6 In the day that I lifted up mine hand unto them, to bring them forth of the land of Egypt into a land that I had espied for them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands:

7 Then said I unto them, Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the Lord your God.

8 But they rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me: they did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt: then I said, I will pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt.

Verse 1. In the seventh year] Of the captivity of Jeconiah (see chap. viii. 1), and the seventh of the reign of Zedekiah. Certain of the elders of Israel] What these came to inquire about is not known.

Verse 3. I will not be inquired of by you.] I will not hear you. I will have nothing to do with you.

Verse 4. Wilt thou judge them] If thou wilt enter into any discussion with them, show them the abomination of their fathers.

Verse 5. I chose Israel] They did not choose me for their God, till I had chosen them to be my people.

I lifted up mine hand] Among the Jews the juror lifted up his right hand to heaven; which explains Ps. cxliv. 8: "Their right hand is a right hand of falsehood."

Verse 6. To bring them forth of the land of Egypt] When they had been long in a very disgraceful and oppressive bondage.

A land that I had espied for them] God represents himself as having gone over different countries in order to find a comfortable residence for these people, whom he considered as his children.

Flowing with milk and honey] These were the characteristics of a happy and fruitful country, producing, without intense labour, all the necessities and comforts of life. In the flourishing state of Judæa every mountain was cultivated as well as the valleys. Among the very rocks the vines grew luxuriantly.

9 But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, among whom they were, in whose sight I made myself known unto them, in bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt.

10 Wherefore I caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness.

11 And I gave them my statutes, and shewed them my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them.

12 Moreover also I gave them my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them.

13 But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness: they walked not in my statutes, and they despised my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; and my sabbaths they greatly polluted: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them in the wilderness, to consume them.

14 But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them out.

15 Yet also I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands;

16 Because they despised my judgments, and walked not in my statutes, but polluted my sabbaths: for their heart went after their idols.

17 Nevertheless mine eye spared them from destroying them, neither did I make an end of them in the wilderness.

18 But I said unto their children in the wilder-

Verse 7. Cast ye away—the abominations] Put away all your idols; those incentives to idolatry that ye have looked on with delight.

Verse 8. They did not—cast away] They continued attached to the idolatry of Egypt; so that, had I consulted my justice only, I should have consumed them even in Egypt itself.

Verse 10. I caused them to go forth] Though greatly oppressed and degraded, they were not willing to leave their house of bondage. I was obliged to force them away.

Verse 11. I gave them my statutes] Had they attended to these things, they should have lived by them. They would have been holy, healthy, and happy.

Verse 12. I gave them my sabbaths] The religious observance of the sabbath was the first statute or command of God to men. This institution was a sign between God and them, to keep them in remembrance of the creation of the world, of the rest that he designed them in Canaan, and of the eternal inheritance among the saints in light. Of these things the sabbath was a type and pledge.

Verse 13. But the house of Israel rebelled] They acted in the wilderness just as they had done in Egypt; and he spared them there for the same reason.

Verse 15. I lifted up my hand] Their provocations in the wilderness were so great, that I vowed never to bring them into the promised land.

Verse 18. But I said unto their children] These I chose ness, Walk ye not in the statutes of your fathers, neither observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols :

19 I am the LORD your God ; * walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them ;

20 ^b And hallow my sabbaths ; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the LORD your God.

21 Notwithstanding ^c the children rebelled against me : they walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, ^d which if a man do, he shall even live in them ; they polluted my sabbaths : then I said, * I would pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness.

22 ^e Nevertheless I withdrew mine hand, and ^f wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth.

23 I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, that ^g I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries ;

24 ^h Because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and ⁱ their eyes were after their fathers' idols.

25 Wherefore ^k I gave them also statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they should not live ;

26 And I polluted them in their own gifts, in that they caused to pass ^l through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they ^m might know that I am the LORD.

27 Therefore, son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God ; Yet in this your fathers have ⁿ blasphemed me, in that they have ^o committed a trespass against me.

28 For when I had brought them into the land, for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to them, then ^p they saw every high hill, and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation of their offering : there also they made their ^q sweet savour, and poured out there drink-offerings.

in their father's stead ; and to them I purposed to give the inheritance which their fathers by disobedience lost.

Verse 23. I withdrew mine hand] I had just lifted it up to crush them as in a moment ; for they also were idolatrous, and walked in the steps of their fathers.

Verse 25. I gave them also statutes that were not good] The simple meaning of this place and all such places is, that when they had rebelled against the Lord, despised his statutes, and polluted his sabbaths—in effect cast him off and given themselves wholly to their idols, then he abandoned them, and they abandoned themselves to the customs and ordinances of the heathen.

Verse 26. I polluted them in their own gifts] I permitted them to pollute themselves by the offerings which they made to their idols.

Verse 32. And that which cometh into your mind] Ye wish to be naturalized among idolaters, and make a part of such nations. But this shall not be at all ; you shall be preserved as a distinct people.

29 Then * I said unto them, What is the high place whereunto ye go ? And the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day.

30 Wherefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God ; Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers ? and commit ye whoredom after their abominations ?

31 For when ye offer ^a your gifts, when ye make your sons to ^b pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day : and ^c shall I be inquired of by you, O house of Israel ? As I live, saith the Lord God, I will not be inquired of by you.

32 And that ^d which cometh into your mind shall not be at all, that ye say, We will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone.

33 As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and ^e with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you :

34 And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out.

35 And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there ^f will I plead with you face to face.

36 ^g Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord God.

37 And I will cause you to ^h pass under the rod, and I will bring you into ⁱ the bond of the covenant :

38 And ^j I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me : I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and ^k they shall not enter into the land of Israel : ^l and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

39 As for you, O house of Israel, thus said the Lord God ; ^m Go ye, serve ye every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me : ⁿ but pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols.

40 For ^o in mine holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord God, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve me : there ^p will I accept them, and there will Verse 43. And there shall ye remember your ways] Ye shall be ashamed of your past conduct, and of your long opposition to the gospel of your salvation.

Verse 46. Set thy face toward the south] Towards Judæa, which lay south from Babylon, or Mesopotamia, where the prophet then dwelt.

The forest of the south field] The city of Jerusalem; as full of inhabitants as the forest is of trees.

Verse 47. I will kindle a fire] I will send war, “and it shall devour every green tree,” the most eminent and substantial of the inhabitants; and every dry tree, the lowest and meanest also.

47 And say to the forest of the south, Hear the word of the LORD; Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, ² I will kindle a fire in thee, and it shall devour ³ every green tree in thee, and every dry tree: the flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all fables ⁴ from the south to the north shall be burned therein.

The flaming flame shall not be quenched] The fierce ravages of Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans shall not be stopped till the whole land is ruined.

All fables from the south to the north shall be burned] From the one end of the land to the other there shall be nothing but fear, dismay, terror, and confusion, occasioned by the wide-wasting violence of the Chaldeans. Judæa lay in length from north to south.

Verse 48. All flesh] All the people shall see that this war is a judgment of the Lord.

It shall not be quenched.] Till the whole land shall be utterly ruined.

Verse 49. Ah Lord God!] O my God, consider my situation; who will believe what I shall say? They put the evil day far from them.

Doth he not speak parables?] “Is not he a maker of parables?” Is it not his custom to deal in enigmas? We are not obliged to fathom his meaning; and perhaps after all it does not refer to us, or will not be accomplished in our time, if it even respect the land.

CHAPTER 'XXI.

The prophet goes on to denounce the fate of Jerusalem and Judæa; using signs of vehement grief, to denote the greatness of the calamity, 2-7. He then changes the emblem to that of a sharp and bright sword, still denoting the same sad event, 8-17, and, becoming yet more explicit, he represents the king of Babylon, who was to be employed by God in this work, as setting out to take vengeance on both the Jews and the Ammonites, for joining with Egypt in a confederacy against him. He is described as standing at the parting of the roads leading to the respective capitals of the Jews and Ammonites; and doubting which to attack first, he commits the decision of the matter to his arts of divination, performed by mingling arrows inscribed with the names of the different nations or cities, and then marching against that whose name was written on the arrow first drawn from the quiver. In this case the name Jerusalem comes forward; and therefore he proceeds against it, 18-24. History itself could scarcely be more explicit than this prophecy. The profane prince Zedekiah is then declared to be given up by God, and his kingdom devoted to utter destruction, for that breach of oath of which the prophet foretels he should be guilty, 25-27. The remaining verses form a distinct prophecy relating to the destruction of the Ammonites, which was fulfilled about five years after the destruction of Jerusalem, 28-32.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 ^a Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, and ^b drop thy word toward the holy places, and prophesy against the land of Israel,

3 And say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I am against thee, and will draw forth my sword out of its sheath, and will cut off from thee ^c the righteous and the wicked.

4 Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my sword go forth out of his sheath against all flesh, ^d from the south to the north:

5 That all flesh may know that I the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath: it ^e shall not return any more.

6 ^f Sigh therefore, thou son of man, with the breaking of thy loins: and with bitterness sigh before their eyes.

7 And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For the tidings; because it cometh: and every heart shall melt, and ^g all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees ^h shall be weak as water: behold, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the LORD God.

8 Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the LORD; Say, ⁱ A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also furnished:

10 It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter; it is furnished that it may glitter: should we then make mirth? ^j it contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree.

11 And he hath given it to be furnished, that it may be handled: this sword is sharpened, and it is furnished, to give it into the hand of ^k the slayer.

12 Cry and howl, son of man: for it shall be upon my people, it shall be upon all the princes of Israel: ^l terrors by reason of the sword shall be upon my people: ^m smite therefore upon thy thigh.

13 ⁿ Because it is ^o a trial, and what if the sword condemn even the rod? ^p it shall be no more, saith the LORD God.

14 Thou, therefore, son of man, prophesy, and ^q smite thine ^r hands together, and let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain: it is the sword of the great men that are slain, which entereth into their ^s privy chambers.

15 I have set the ^t point of the sword against all their gates, that their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied: ah! ^u it is made bright, it is ^v wrapped up for the slaughter.

16 ^w Go thee one way or other, either on the right hand, ^x or on the left, whithersoever thy face is set.

17 I will also ^y smite mine hands together, and ^z I will cause my fury to rest: I the LORD have said it.

18 The word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

19 Also, thou son of man, appoint thee two ways, that the sword of the king of Babylon may come: both twain shall come forth out of one land: and choose thou a place, choose it at the head of the way to the city.

As every tree.] As all the stocks, kindreds, and nations, over which I have already given him commission. Can the rod of Israel be spared, when the trees of Assyria, Egypt, &c., have been cut down?

Verse 11. This sword is sharpened.] It is prepared for the slaughter, it is furnished.

Verse 13. Because it is a trial.] This will be a trial of strength and skill between the Chaldeans and the Jews; and a trial of faith and patience to the righteous.

And what if the sword (Nebuchadnezzar) condemn even the rod? Overthrow Zedekiah? It will do so; for the regal government of Judea shall be no more. Or, it is tried; that is, the sword. Nebuchadnezzar has already shown himself strong and skillful.

Verse 14. Let the sword be doubled the third time.] The sword has been doubled, and it shall come the third time. Nebuchadnezzar came against Judea thrice. 1. Against Jehoiaquim. 2. Against Jeconiah. 3. Against Zedekiah. The sword had already been doubled; it is to come now the third time, i.e., against Zedekiah.

Verse 15. Wrapped up.] It is not a blunt sword, it is carefully sharpened and preserved for the slaughter.

Verse 16. Go thee one way or other.] Thou shalt prosper, O sword, whithersoever thou turnest; against Ammon, or Judea, or Egypt.

Verse 19. Appoint thee two ways.] Set off from Babylon, and lay down two ways, either of which thou mayest take; that to the right, which leads to Jerusalem; or that to the left, which leads to Rabbath of the Ammonites, ver. 20. But why against the Ammonites? Because both they and the Moabites were united with Zedekiah against the Chaldeans (see Jer. xxvii. 3), though they afterwards fought against Judea, chap. xii. 6.

Verse 21. For the king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way.] He was in doubt which way he should first take; whether to humble the Ammonites by taking their metro-

Verse 2. Set thy face toward Jerusalem.] In this chapter the prophet sets before them, in the plainest language, what the foregoing metaphors meant, so that they could not complain of his parables?

Verse 3. Behold, I am against thee.] Dismal news! When God is against us, who can be for us?

The righteous and the wicked.] All shall be removed from thee. If God had permitted none to be carried off captive but the wicked, the case of these would be utterly hopeless, as there would be none to set a good example, to preach repentance, to reprove sin, or to show God's willingness to forgive sinners. But God, in his mercy, permitted many of the righteous to be carried off also, that the wicked might not be totally abandoned, or put beyond the reach of being saved. And how much was God's glory and the good of men promoted by this! To this we owe, under God, many of the Psalms, the whole of the book of Ezekiel, all the prophecies of Daniel, the bright example of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, the decrees passed in favour of the religion of the true God by Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Darius, &c.

Verse 4. From the south to the north.] The whole land shall be ravaged from one end to the other.

Verse 5. It shall not return any more.] That is, till all the work that I have designed for it is done. Nor did it; for Nebuchadnezzar never rested till he had subdued all the lands from the south to the north, from the Euphrates to the Nile.

Verse 6. Sigh—with the breaking of thy loins.] Let thy mourning for this sore calamity be like that of a woman in the pains of travail.

Verse 7. Wherefore sighest thou? The prophet was a sign unto them. His sighing and mourning showed them how they should act.

Verse 10. It contemneth the rod of my son.] "It," the sword of Nebuchadnezzar, "contemneth the rod," despises the power and influence of my son—Israel, the Jewish people: "Out of Egypt have I called my son."

20 Appoint a way, that the sword may come to * Rabbath of the Ammonites, and to Judah in Jerusalem the defended.

21 For the king of Babylon stood at the ^b parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination: he made his ^c arrows bright, he consulted with ^d images, he looked in the liver.

22 At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem, to appoint ^e captains, ^f to open the mouth in the slaughter, to ^g lift up the voice with shouting, ^h to appoint battering rams against the gates, to cast a mount, and to build a fort.

23 And it shall be unto them as a false divination in their sight, ⁱ to them that ^j have sworn oaths: but he will call to remembrance the iniquity, that they may be taken.

24 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand.

Verse 22. At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem] He had probably written on two arrows; one, Jerusalem; the other, Riblah; the third, left blank. He drew, and that on which Jerusalem was written came to his hand; in consequence of which he marched immediately against that city.

Verse 23. To them that have sworn oaths] To Zedekiah and his ministers, who had bound themselves by the oath of the Lord to be faithful to the Chaldeans, and to pay them the promised tribute. The oaths may refer, farther, to the alliances formed with the Egyptians, Ammonites, and others. They will not believe that Nebuchadnezzar shall succeed against them, while they expect the powerful assistance of the Egyptians.

Verse 25. And thou profane wicked prince of Israel] Zedekiah, called here profane, because he had broken his oath; and wicked, because of his opposition to God and his prophet.

Whose day is come] Who in a short time shalt be delivered into the hands of thy enemies.

Verse 26. Exalt him that is low] Give Gedaliah the government of Judea.

Abase him that is high] Depose Zedekiah—remove his diadem, and take off his crown.

26 Thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: ^m exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high.

27 ⁿ I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: ^o and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him.

28 And thou, son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God ^p concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach; even say thou, ^q The sword, the sword is drawn: for the slaughter it is furnished, to consume because of the glittering:

29 Whiles they ^r see vanity unto thee, whiles they divine a lie unto thee, to bring thee upon the necks of them that are slain, of the wicked, ^s whose day is come, when their iniquity shall have an end.

30 ^t Shall ^u I cause it to return into his sheath? ^v I will judge thee in the place where thou wast created, ^w in the land of thy nativity.

31 And I will ^x pour out mine indignation upon thee, I will ^y blow against thee in the fire of my wrath, and deliver thee into the hand of ^z brutish men, and skilful to destroy.

32 Thou shalt be for fuel to the fire; thy blood shall be in the midst of the land; ^{aa} thou shalt be no more remembered: for I the Lord have spoken it.

See the famous prophecy, Gen. xlix. 10, and Luke i. 32. The avah, which we translate overturn, is thrice repeated here; to point out, say the rabbins, the three conquests of Jerusalem, in which Jehoiakim, Jeconiah, and Zedekiah were overthrown.

Verse 28. Concerning the Ammonites] They had reproached and insulted Judea in its low estate, see chap. xxv. This prophecy against them was fulfilled about five years after the taking of Jerusalem. Jer. xxvii. xlviii. xlix.; Ezek. xxv.

Verse 30. I will judge thee] This seems to refer to Nebuchadnezzar, who, after his return from Jerusalem, became insane, and lived like a beast for seven years; but was afterwards restored, and acknowledged the Lord.

Verse 32. Thou shalt be no more remembered] The empire of the Chaldeans was destroyed, and the power transferred to the Persians; the Persian empire was destroyed, and given to the Greeks; the Grecian empire was destroyed, and given to the Mohammedans; and the destruction of the Mohammedans is at no great distance.

CHAPTER XXII

This chapter contains a recital of the sins of Jerusalem, 1-12; for which God threatens it with severe judgments, 13-16, in order to purify it from the dross, 17-22. And as the corruption is general, pervading prophets, priests, princes, and people; so, it is declared, shall be the punishment, 23-31.

MOREOVER the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Now, thou son of man, ^awilt thou judge, wilt thou judge ^cthe ^d'bloody city'? yea, thou shalt ^eshow her all her abominations.

3 Then say thou, Thus saith the Lord God; The city sheddeth blood in the midst of it, that her time may come, and maketh idols against herself to defile herself.

4 Thou art become guilty in thy blood that thou hast ^fshod, and hast defiled thyself in thine idols which thou hast made; and thou hast caused thy days to draw near, and art come ^geven unto thy years: ^htherefore have I made thee a reproach unto the heathen, and a mocking to all countries.

5 Those that be near, and those that be far from thee, shall mock thee, which art ⁱinfamous and much vexed.

6 Behold, ^jthe princes of Israel, every one were in thee to their ^kpower to shed blood.

7 In thee have they ^lset light by father and mother: in the midst of thee have they ^mdealt by ⁿoppression with the stranger: in thee have they vexed the fatherless and the widow.

8 Thou hast ^odespised mine holy things, and hast ^pprofaned my sabbaths.

9 In thee are ^qmen ^rthat carry tales to shed blood: ^sand in thee they eat upon the mountains: in the midst of thee they commit lewdness.

10 In thee have they ^tdiscovered their father's nakedness: in thee have they humbled her that was ^uset apart for pollution.

11 And ^vone hath committed abomination ^wwith his neighbour's wife; and ^xanother ^yhath ^zlowdly defiled his daughter-in-law: and another in thee hath humbled his ^{aa}sister, his father's daughter.

12 In thee ^{ab}have they taken gifts to shed blood; ^{ac}thou hast taken usury and increase, and thou hast greedily gained of thy neighbours by extortion, and ^{ad}hast forgotten me, saith the Lord God.

13 Behold, therefore, I have ^{ae}smitten mine hand at thy dishonest gain which thou hast made, and at thy blood which hath been in the midst of thee.

14 ^{af}"Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with thee? ^{ag}"I the LORD have spoken it, and will do it.

Verse 2. Wilt thou judge the bloody city? Pronounce the sentence of death against the murderers.

Show her all her abominations. And a most revolting and dreadful catalogue of these is in consequence exhibited.

Verse 3. Her time may come. Till now, it was my long-suffering; she has fulfilled her days—completed the time of her probation; has not mended, but is daily worse; therefore her judgment can linger no longer.

Verse 4. Thou art become guilty in thy blood. Thou art guilty of blood.

Verse 5. Those that be near. Both distant as well as neighbouring provinces consider thee the most abandoned of characters; and through thee many have been involved in distress and ruin.

Verse 6. Behold, the princes. Ye are a vile and murderous people, and your princes have been of the same character.

15 And ^{ah}"I will scatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and ^{ai}will consume thy filthiness out of thee.

16 And thou ^{aj}"shalt take thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen, and ^{ak}"and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

17 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, ^{al}the house of Israel is to me become dross: all they ^{am}are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are ^{an}even the ^{ao}dross of silver.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem.

20 ^{ap}As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you.

21 Yea, I will gather you, and ^{aq}blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.

22 As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof: and ye shall know that I the LORD have ^{ar}poured out my fury upon you.

23 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, say unto her, Thou ^{as}art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation.

25 ^{at}There is a conspiracy of her prophets in the midst thereof, like a roaring lion ravening the prey: they ^{au}have devoured souls: ^{av}"they have taken the treasure and precious things: they have made her many widows in the midst thereof.

26 ^{aw}"Her priests have ^{ax}violated my law, and have ^{ay}profaned mine holy things: they have put no ^{az}difference between the holy and profane, neither have they shewed ^{ba}difference between the unclean and the clean, and have hid their eyes from my sabbaths, and I am profaned among them.

27 ^{bb}Her princes in the midst thereof ^{bc}are like wolves ravening the prey, to shed blood, and to destroy souls, to get dishonest gain.

Verse 10. In thee have they discovered. They are guilty of the most abominable incest and unnatural lust.

Verse 16. Thou shalt know that I am the Lord. I shall so deal with and punish thee, that thou shalt be obliged to own the vindictive hand of a sin-avenging God.

Verse 18. The house of Israel is to me become dross. They are all like base metal—brass, tin, iron, and lead alloyed together with silver.

Verse 24. Thou art the land that is not cleansed] Thou art like a country where there is no rain, either to cleanse the garments, or fertilize the ground.

Verse 25. There is a conspiracy] The false prophets have united together to say and support the same things; and Verse 30. I sought for a man] I saw that there was a grievous breach made in the moral state and feeling of the people, and I sought for a man that would stand in the gap; that would faithfully exhort, reprove, and counsel, with all long-suffering and doctrine. But none was to be found!

CHAPTER XXIII.

The idolatries of Samaria and Jerusalem are represented in this chapter by the bad practices of two common harlots, for which God denounces severe judgments against them, 1-49. See the sixteenth chapter, where the same metaphor is enlarged upon as here, it being the prophet's view to excite the utmost detestation of the crime against which he inveighs.

THE word of the Lord came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, there were ^atwo women, the daughters of one mother:

3 And ^bthey committed whoredoms in Egypt; they committed whoredoms in ^ctheir youth: there were their breasts pressed, and there they bruised the teats of their virginity.

4 And the names of them were Aholah the elder, and Aholibah her sister: and ^dthey were mine, and they bare sons and daughters. Thus were their names; Samaria is ^eAholah, and Jerusalem ^fAholibah.

5 And Aholah played the harlot when she was mine; and she doted on her lovers, on ^gthe Assyrians her neighbours,

6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, horsemen riding upon horses.

7 Thus she ^hcommitted her whoredoms with them, with all them that were ⁱthe chosen men of Assyria, and with all on whom she doted; with all their idols she defiled herself.

8 Neither left she her whoredoms brought ^jfrom

Hos. viii. 9.—^h Heb. bestowed her whoredoms upon them.—ⁱ Heb. the choice of the children of Ashur.—

Verse 2. Son of man, there were two women] The kingdom of Judah, and the kingdom of Israel are called here, because of their consanguinity, two sisters. The elder, Samaria (for there was the seat of government for the kingdom of Israel), was called aholah, "a tent." The younger, Judah, was called aholibah, "my tent is in her," because the temple of God was in Jerusalem, the seat of the government of the kingdom of Judah.

Verse 5. And Aholah played the harlot] Without enter-

Egypt: for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her.

9 Wherefore I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the ^kAssyrians, upon whom she doted.

10 These ^ldiscovered her nakedness: they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword: and she became ^mfamous among women: for they had executed judgment upon her.

11 And ⁿwhen her sister Aholibah saw this, ^oshe was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she, and in her whoredoms ^pmore than her sister in her whoredoms.

12 She doted upon the ^qAssyrians her neighbours, ^rcaptains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men.

13 Then I saw that she was defiled, that they took both one way,

14 And that she increased her whoredoms: for when she saw men pourtrayed upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermillion,

15 Girded with girdles upon their loins, exceeding ing into detail here, or following the figures, they both became idolatrous, and received the impure rites of the Egyptians, Assyrians, and Chaldeans; of which connexion the prophet speaks here as he did in chap. xvi., which see.

Verse 6. Clothed with blue] The purple dye was highly valued among the ancients, and at first was only used by kings; at last it was used among the military, particularly by officers of high rank in the country.

Verse 23. Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa] These names have in dyed attire upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity :

16 ^a And ^b as soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them, and sent messengers unto them into Chaldea.

17 And the ^c Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom, and she was polluted with them, and ^d her mind was ^e alienated from them.

18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness: then ^f my mind was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister.

19 Yet she multiplied her whoredoms in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, ^g wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt.

10 For she doted upon their paramours, ^h whose flesh ⁱ is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue ^j is like the issue of horses.

21 Thus thou callest to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth.

22 Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord God; ^k Behold, I will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom thy mind is alienated, and I will bring them against thee on every side;

23 The Babylonians, and all the Chaldeans, ^l Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them: ^m all of them desirable young men, captains, and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horses.

24 And they shall come against thee with chariots, wagons, and wheels, and with an assembly of people, ⁿ which shall set against thee buckler and shield and helmet round about: and I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their judgments.

25 And I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall deal furiously with thee: they shall take away thy nose and thine ears; and thy remnant shall fall by the sword: they shall take thy sons and thy daughters; and thy residue shall be devoured by the fire.

26 ^o They also shall strip thee out of thy clothes, and take away thy ^p fair jewels.

27 Thus ^q will I make thy lewdness to cease from thee, and ^r thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt: so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more.

28 For thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will deliver thee into the hand of ^s them ^t whom thou hatest, into the hand of ^u them ^v from whom thy mind is alienated:

29 And they shall deal with thee hatefully, and shall take away all thy labour, and ^w shall leave thee naked and bare: and the nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

30 I will do these ^x things unto thee, because thou hast ^y gone a whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols.

31 Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give her ^z cup into thine hand.

32 Thus saith the Lord God; Thou shalt drink of thy sister's cup deep and large; ^{aa} thou shalt be laughed to scorn and had in derision; it containeth much.

33 Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and sorrow, with the cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria.

34 Thou shalt ^{ab} even drink it and suck it out, and thou shalt break the sherds thereof, and pluck off thine own breasts: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

35 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because thou ^{ac} hast forgotten me, and ^{ad} cast me behind thy back, therefore bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

36 The Lord said moreover unto me; Son of man, wilt thou ^{ae} judge ^{af} Aholah and Aholibah? yea, ^{ag} declare unto them their abominations;

37 That they have committed adultery, and ^{ah} blood ^{ai} is in their hands, and with their idols have they committed adultery, and have also caused their sons, ^{aj} whom they bare unto me, to pass for them through the fire, to devour them.

38 Moreover this they have done unto me: they have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and ^{ak} have profaned my sabbaths.

39 For when they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it; and, lo, ^{al} thus have they done in the midst of mine house.

40 And furthermore, that ye have sent for men ^{am} to come from far, ^{an} unto whom a messenger was sent; and, lo, they came; for whom thou didst ^{ao} wash thyself, ^{ap} paintedst thy eyes, and deckedst thyself with ornaments.

41 And satest upon a ^{aq} stately ^{ar} bed, and a table prepared before it, ^{as} whereupon thou hast set mine incense and mine oil.

Verse 41. And satest upon a stately bed] The bed here is in allusion to the sofas on which the ancients were accustomed to recline at their meals; or to the couches on which they place Asiatic brides, with incense pots and sweetmeats on a table before them.

Verse 42. And a voice of a multitude] This seems to be an account of an idolatrous festival, where a riotous multitude was assembled, and fellows of the baser sort, with bracelets on their arms and chaplets on their heads, performed the religious rites.

42 And a voice of a multitude being at ease was with her: and with the men ^a of the common sort were brought ^b Sabeans from the wilderness, which put bracelets upon their hands, and beautiful crowns upon their heads.

43 Then said I unto her that was old in adulteries, Will they now commit ^a whoredoms with her, and she with them?

44 Yet they went in unto her, as they go in unto a woman that playeth the harlot: so went they in unto Aholah and unto Aholibah, the lewd women.

45 And the righteous men, they shall ^a judge them after the manner of adulteresses, and after the manner of women that shed blood; because they

CHAPTER XXIV.

The prophet now informs those of the captivity of the very day on which Nebuchadnezzar was to lay siege to Jerusalem (compare Jer. lii. 4), and describes the fate of that city and its inhabitants by a very apt similitude, 1-14. As another sign of the greatness of those calamities, the prophet is forbidden to mourn for his wife, of whom he is to be deprived; intimating thereby that the sufferings of the Jews should be so astonishing as to surpass all expressions of grief; and that private sorrow, however affectionate and tender the object, ought to be absorbed in the public calamities, 15-18. The prophet, having further expressed his prediction in plain terms, intimates that he was to speak to them no more till they should have the news of these prophecies having been fulfilled, 19-27.

A GAIN in the ninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, the ^a word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, write thee the name of the day, even of this same day: the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem ^b this same day.

3 ^a And utter a parable unto the rebellious house, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; ^b Set on a pot, set it on, and also pour water into it:

4 Gather the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder; fill it with the choice bones.

5 Take the choice of the flock, and ^a burn also the bones under it, and make it boil well, and let them seethe the bones of it therein.

Verse 1. The ninth year] This prophecy was given in the ninth year of Zedekiah, about Thursday, the thirtieth of January, A.M. 3414.

Verse 3. Set on a pot] The pot was Jerusalem; the flesh, the inhabitants in general; every good piece, the thigh and the shoulder, king Zedekiah and his family; the bones, the soldiers; and the setting on the pot, the commencement of the siege. Under the same image of a boiling pot, Jeremiah had represented the siege of Jerusalem, chap. i. 13.

Verse 5. Make it boil well] Let it boil over, that its own scum may augment the fire, that the bones—the soldiers, may be seethed therein.

Verse 6. Let no lot fall upon it.] Pull out the flesh indiscriminately; let no piece be chosen for king or priest; thus 6 Wherefore thus saith the Lord God; Woe to 'the bloody city, to the pot whose scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! bring it out piece by piece; let no ^a lot fall upon it.

7 For her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; ^a she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;

8 That it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; ^a I have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

9 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; ^a Woe to the bloody city! I will even make the pile for fire great.

10 Heap on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and spice it well, and let the bones be burned.

showing that all should be involved in one indiscriminate ruin.

Verse 7. For her blood is in the midst of her] She gloried in her idol sacrifices; she offered them upon a rock, where the blood should remain evident; and she poured none upon the ground to cover it with dust, in horror of that moral evil that required the blood of an innocent creature to be shed, in order to the atonement of the offender's guilt. To "cover the blood of the victim," was a command of the law, Lev. xvii. 13, Deut. xii. 24.

Verse 8. That it might cause fury] This very blood shall be against them, as the blood of Abel was against Cain.

Verse 10. Heap on wood] Let the siege be severe, the carnage great, and the ruin and catastrophe complete.

11 Then set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot, and may burn, and that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed.

12 She hath wearied herself with lies, and her great scum went not forth out of her: her scum shall be in the fire.

13 In thy filthiness is lewdness; because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged, thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more, till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee.

14 I the LORD have spoken it: it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back; neither will I spare, neither will I repent; according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee, saith the Lord God.

15 Also the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

16 Son of man, behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke: yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears run down.

17 Forbear to cry, make no mourning for the dead, bind the tire of thine head upon thee, and put on thy shoes upon thy feet, and cover not thy lips, and eat not the bread of men.

18 So I spake unto the people in the morning: and at even my wife died; and I did in the morning as I was commanded.

19 And the people said unto me, Wilt thou not

Verse 13 In thy filthiness is lewdness] Zimmah, a word that denominates the worst kinds of impurity; adultery, incest, &c., and the purpose, wish, design, and ardent desire to do these things.

Verse 16. Behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes] Here is an intimation that the stroke he was to suffer was to be above all grief; that it would be so great as to prevent the relief of tears.

Neither shall thy tears run down.] For this is the case with the eyes in great calamities: in light misfortunes tears flow freely, but in heavy afflictions tears fly away, and betray the eyes.

Verse 17. Make no mourning] As a priest, he could make no public mourning, Lev. xxi. 1, &c.

Bind the tire of thine head] This seems to refer to the high priest's bonnet; or, perhaps, one worn by the ordinary priests: it might have been a black veil to cover the head.

tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so?

20 Then I answered them, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 21 Speak unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will profane my sanctuary, the excellency of your strength, the desire of your eyes, and that which your soul pitieth; and your sons and your daughters whom ye have left, shall fall by the sword.

22 And ye shall do as I have done: ye shall not cover your lips, nor eat the bread of men.

23 And your tires shall be upon your heads, and your shoes upon your feet: ye shall not mourn nor weep; but ye shall pine away for your iniquities, and mourn one toward another.

24 Thus Ezekiel is unto you a sign: according to all that he hath done shall ye do: and when this cometh, ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

25 Also, thou son of man, shall it not be in the day when I take from them their strength, the joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and that whereupon they set their minds, their sons and their daughters, 26 That he that escapeth in that day shall come unto thee, to cause thee to hear it with thine ears?

27 In that day shall thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped, and thou shalt speak, and be no more dumb: and thou shalt be a sign unto them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

Put on thy shoes upon thy feet] Walking barefoot was a sign of grief.

Cover not thy lips] Mourners covered the under part of the face, from the nose to the bottom of the chin.

Eat not the bread of men.] "The bread of miserable men," i. e., mourners; probably, the funeral banquet.

Verse 18. At even my wife died] The prophet's wife was a type of the city, which was to him exceedingly dear. The death of his wife represented the destruction of the city by the Chaldeans; see ver. 21, where the temple is represented to be the desire of his eyes, as his wife was, ver. 16.

Verse 19. Wilt thou not tell us] In the following verses he explains and applies the whole of what he had done and said.

Verse 27. In that day shall thy mouth be opened] And we find from chap. xxxiii. 21, that one did actually escape from the city, and informed the prophet and his brethren in captivity that the city was smitten.

CHAPTER XXV.

This chapter contains threatenings of the heavy judgments of God against the Ammonites, 1-7; Moabites, 8-11; Edomites, 12-14; and Philistines, 15-17; on account of their hatred to his people, and their insulting them in the time of their distress. These prophecies were fulfilled by the instrumentality of Nebuchadnezzar, about five years after the destruction of Jerusalem. The same events were predicted by several of the other prophets, as may be seen from the citation of parallel texts in the margin.

15 Thus saith the Lord God to Tyrus; Shall not the isles ^ashake at the sound of thy fall, when the wounded cry, when the slaughter is made in the midst of thee?

16 Then all the ^bprinces of the sea shall ^ccome down from their thrones, and lay away their robes, and put off their broidered garments: they shall clothe themselves with ^dtrembling; ^ethey shall sit upon the ground, and ^fshall tremble at every moment, and ^gbe astonished at thee.

17 And they shall take up a ^hlamentation for thee, and say to thee, How art thou destroyed, that wast inhabited ⁱof seafaring men, the renowned city which wast ^jstrong in the sea, she and her inhabitants, which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it!

Verse 14. Thou shalt be built no more] If this refer to Nebuchadnezzar's capture of the city, old Tyre must be intended: that was destroyed by him, and never rebuilt. But I doubt whether the whole of this prophecy do not refer to the taking of Tyre by Alexander, three hundred years after its capture by Nebuchadnezzar. Indeed it may include more recent conquests of this important city.

Verse 15. The isles shake at the sound of thy fall] Her ruin involved them all, and caused general wailing.

Verse 17. Wast strong in the sea] Alexander despaired

18 Now shall ^kthe isles tremble in the day of thy fall; yea, the isles that are in the sea, shall be troubled at thy departure.

19 For thus saith the Lord God; When I shall make thee a desolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited; when I shall bring up the deep upon thee, and great waters shall cover thee;

20 When I shall bring thee down ^lwith them that descend into the pit, with the people of old time, and shall set thee in the low parts of the earth, in ^mplaces desolate of old, with them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited; and I shall set glory ⁿin the land of the living; of being able to reduce it unless he could fill up that arm of the sea that ran between it and the mainland. And this work cost his army seven months of labour.

Verse 20. And I shall set glory in the land of the living] Judea so called, the land of the living God.

Verse 21. Yet shalt thou never be found again] This is literally true; there is not the smallest vestige of the ancient Tyre, that which was erected on the main land. Even the ground seems to have been washed away; and the new Tyre is in nearly a similar state.

CHAPTER XXVII.

This chapter may be considered as the second part of the prophecy concerning Tyre. The prophet pursues his subject in the manner of those ancient lamentations or funeral songs, in which the præfices or mourning women first recounted whatever was great or praiseworthy in the deceased, and then mourned his fall. Here the riches, glory, and extensive commerce of Tyre are enlarged upon, 1-25. Her downfall is then described in a beautiful allegory, executed in a few words, with astonishing brevity, propriety, and perspicuity, 26; upon which all the maritime and commercial world are represented as grieved and astonished at her fate, and greatly alarmed for their own, 27-36. Besides the view which this chapter gives of the conduct of Providence, and the example with which it furnishes the critic and man of taste of a very elegant and highly finished piece of composition, it likewise affords the antiquary a very curious and interesting account of the wealth and commerce of ancient times. And to the mind that looks for "a city that hath foundations," what a picture does the whole present of the mutability and inanity of all earthly things! Many of the places mentioned in ancient history have, like Tyre, long ago lost their political consequence; the geographical situation of others cannot be traced; they have sunk in the deep waters of oblivion; the east wind hath carried them away.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Now, thou son of man, ^atake up a lamentation for Tyrus;

3 And say unto Tyrus, ^bO thou that art situated at the entry of the sea, which art ^ca merchant of the people for many isles, Thus saith the Lord God; O Tyrus, thou hast said, ^dI am ^eof perfect beauty.

Verse 2. Take up a lamentation for Tyrus] This is a singular and curious chapter. It gives a very circumstantial account of the trade of Tyre with different parts of the world, and the different sorts of merchandise in which she trafficked. The places and the imports are as regularly entered here as they could have been in a European custom-house.

Verse 3. The entry of the sea] Tyre was a small island, or rather rock, in the sea, at a short distance from the main land. There was another Tyre on the main land; but they are both considered as one city.

4 ^fThy borders are in the ^g'midst of the seas, thy builders have perfected thy beauty.

5 They have ^hmade all thy ship boards of fir trees of ⁱSenir: they have taken ^jcedars from Lebanon to make masts for thee.

6 Of the oaks of Bashan have they made thine oars: ^kthe ^l'company of the Ashurites have made thy benches of ivory, brought out of ^m'the isles of Chittim.

Verse 4. Thy builders have perfected thy beauty] Under the allegory of a beautiful ship, the prophet, here and in the following verses, paints the glory of this ancient city.

Verse 5. Fir trees of Senir] Senir is a mountain which the Sidonians called Sirion, and the Hebrews Hermon, Deut. iii. 9. It was beyond Jordan, and extended from Libanus to the mountains of Gilead.

Verse 6. The company of the Ashurites] The word asherim is by several translated box-wood. The seats or benches being made of this wood inlaid with ivory. [Fair-

7 Fine linen with broidered work from Egypt was that which thou spreadest forth to be thy sail; *blue and purple from the isles of Elishah was that which covered thee.

8 The inhabitants of Zidon and Arvad were thy mariners: thy wise men, O Tyrus, that were in thee, were thy pilots.

9 The ancients of *Gebal and the wise men thereof were in thee thy 'calkers': all the ships of the sea with their mariners were in thee to occupy thy merchandise.
